THE ORD QUIZ.

WHAT MADE ORD GO DRY?

Ord Is Still on the See-Saw, and the Drys are Just Now on the Upper Turn

Following a very quiet campaign, wherein the drys kept claiming victory, the election Tuesday resulted in a very large majority for no-license.

The day was a beautiful one and a large vote was out. Both sides were well organized, the drys having, for the first time in years, any semblance of a real organization. By this means a full vote was gotten out and a lot of illegal voting prevented.

One element in the vote on the license question was the new manner of submitting it. This time at the bottom of the ballot were two lines "License" and "No-License." By simply making a cross after either one of these you could easily express your preference. Heretofore the proposed ordinance covering the question had to be printed on the ballot, which was always so worded that it was easy for voters to vote wrong, as many of them did. This clip, however, there was no chance for making an error on that score.

There was, however, opportunity for voters to miss the proposition altogether. Anyone voting a straight ballot by making one mark at the top, might easily suppose that that would include a vote on the proposition, but this was not the case. All such ballots were counted for the candidates, and not for the proposition.

How many missed out on this is not known, but there were not so many as might be supposed, for both sides were active in instructing their voters on this point.

The vote has not been canvassed and we may not give accurately the vote on the ticket, but on the license proposition the wards voted like this:

First ward 43 dry.
Second ward 13 dry.
Third ward 4 wet.

This makes a net dry majority of 52, the largest had in many a year.

Many causes are named by those who have ventured to express opinion. These are:

The determination on the part of a lot of our young men to vote the town dry, feeling that they could best get away from the drink habit by so doing. One prominent business man, who votes wet always, told us that he knew of at least ten young men who were in this class.

Lastly, a conviction on the part of our business men that the saloon costs the community too much in cash to pay to maintain it. These say that, with money tight as it has been for a few months, too much of the cash which should be used to pay for the necessities of life, has gone to the coffers of the breweries of Omaha and the east.

Mayor Carson finds himself with a wet council back of him and a no-license law to enforce. He wins his re-election by the very comfortable majority of 77, which is 129 above the license proposition. It is believed that he will try to enforce the laws against boot-legging and give the city a fair sample of what a dry town ought to be.

No-License	94	77	92	263	52
License	51	64	96	211
Carson	85	99	109	293	77

Leggett		75
Sershen			102		15
Moorman			87

The wets had no park board or school candidates.

The advisory vote on the city hall proposition was carried by a large majority, a great many people not voting.

Tomorrow night the next Brotherhood banquet will be held at the Methodist church. All men members of the church and its men friends are invited. Dr. Schreckengast will speak again, and that will be better than the supper. George Johnson, who is with the doctor on his trip around this section, phoned the writer last night from Arcadia assuring us that they will sure be here. They intend to drive over from Sargent so as to take no chances on the late trains.

J. W. Craig has sold a part of the Spaulding ranch, which he has owned for several years, to Joseph Kiolbosa of Tarnov, Neb. Mr. Craig will keep possession this year, and in the meantime will be making up his mind what he wants to do.

Fred Bell was a return passenger Saturday from a few days stay in Omaha and Lincoln.

Mrs. Earl Stacy and Mrs. Geo. Parkins and daughter were visiting in North Loup last Tuesday.

Bun Grimes of the Orcutt barber shop was entertaining his father from Clarks the latter part of last week.

S. B. Knutsen was up from St. Paul Monday night visiting his son, Lew, and looking after business matters in connection with the plant.

Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Taylor returned Monday evening to their home at Burwell. They have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. W. J. Taylor.

Madge Daniels came home from Omaha Tuesday where she had been to consult Dr. Gifford in regard to her eyes. She also visited in Lincoln.

Winnie Ward who has been staying at the John Collison home for a few days returned Thursday evening to her home at Gracie, by way of Burwell.

Last Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Helbig came up from North Loup and spent Sunday at the Wencel Misko home. The gentleman is a brother of Mrs. Misko.

Lelia Moorman was spending several days with her sister in Burwell. Her little niece has been much worse. During her absence Miss Shuman has been teaching in her room.

C. A. Randolph has sold his farm to Harvey Friend, who will have possession on April 15th. The sickness of his wife has made it seem advisable for Charlie to sell his fine little farm.

We are pleased to note that our gifted high school girl, Miss Louise Misko, won second place in the declamatory contest last week against several contestants. Grand Island won first place.

Stanley Cernik, who has been attending school at Creighton University, returned home yesterday noon well pleased with his year's work. He will now set about getting the necessary wherewithal to take him through another year.

C. W. Sterling, who has at several times helped this office out in a rush of work, came to town yesterday and is doing service in this print shop. He was on his way up to his Garfield county farm when we happened across him and inveigled him into the harness again.

Mrs. Parker Johnson and Grace Work drove over from Arcadia last Friday starting at four o'clock, but meeting with bad luck and not reaching here until near midnight. Upon the homeward trip Sunday they had better luck, telephoning back that they had reached Arcadia at 7:30.

Mrs. Otto Murschel left yesterday for Omaha for a few days stay with relatives. She was accompanied as far as Grand Island by Mrs. Gladys Thompson, who was returning to her home in Loup City. Mrs. Thompson has been spending several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thompson.

The Quiz wishes to drop a word for the new move made by the Clark Dray line. These folks propose to give their business a business office and adopt business methods. They have rented the old Bucket shop north of the Firkins building and there their teams will be found when not on a job. Miss Clark will be there in the office regularly to answer the phone, keep the books and keep things straight generally. We are sure that this will be a means of greatly increasing their business. There is no reason why a business as large as the dray business in Ord has grown to be should not be dignified by being put on a business basis.

The mail order catalogue which these columns promised to have turned out for the L. D. Bailey & Sons Department Store several weeks ago, did not get to the public till last Saturday. The reason was that, instead of being eight pages it grew to be twenty pages in size before that store could make a fair start at listing the things they had to offer in competition with the big mail order houses. The purpose of the book is to show folks that they can get more for their money right here in Ord than they can get in any of the eastern cities. Prices and complete descriptions are given, so you will know just what you are getting and you are invited to compare the goods and prices with any catalogue you may have in the house. The book is tersely and clearly written, profusely illustrated and of course is nicely printed. 3000 books were sent out, and there were barely enough to fill the immediate demand. The Baileys expect to follow this with another edition in a few weeks.

STRICKEN WITH PARALSIS

Last Saturday afternoon Mrs. B. F. Hallock, wife of our popular high school janitor, suffered a stroke of paralysis.

She had been feeling well that day and went to the school building to help in the work there so that her husband could get time to do some work about the home which she wished done. She was busy at this for some time and he finally went to the room where she was working to get her to go home and found her sitting in one of the seats with her face unnaturally flushed and evidently not in her normal health. He inquired of her if she was sick and she assured him that she was not, but readily consented to go home when he asked her to do so.

She made her way all right but stopped first at the Fuson place and was again stopped by Mrs. Dumond, who noticed that she was not well. But she proceeded home, where she has been confined since.

She is 65 years of age and of course there is danger of another stroke.

If she is able to do so in a few days she will go to Burwell to be with her sons for a while for a rest.

Mr. Hallock says that the young folks in school, when they learned of his misfortune, have aided him much in his work so that he could be more with his stricken wife, a kindness that he greatly appreciates.

Ella Bradt came home Monday evening for a two weeks stay with Ord people. She and Mrs. Pierson and Emma Wimberly spent a day in Kearney owing to the fact that they could not find a train coming this way. Ella is going to make her home in Riverdale with her sister, Mrs. Jess Baird.

The Methodist bible school will have special Easter music next Sunday in remembrance of our risen Lord. Enyone who does not attend elsewhere is cordially invited to worship with us at 10:00 a. m. Evet Smith, Superintendent.

Mrs. A. Noble of Grand Island was in Ord Thursday. Her husband had gone to a hospital and she was going to Burwell to stay with her son and family for a few weeks. Her son was down to meet her.

Mrs. Ed. Munn came home from Lincoln Thursday, where she has been since last week assisting in caring for her mother, who is ill. She reparts her mother as improved.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Mitchell of Scotia came up to Ord Friday and visited until the first of the week with the A. T. Barber family.

Monday morning Dick Nelson went to Wahoo. His work keeps him away from home a great deal.

D. L. Williams was attending to business in Burwell the latter part of last week.

H. M. Davis was in Greeley and Hastings the latter part of last week.

Geo. Parkins went down to North Loup yesterday.

John Collison was in Burwell Friday, coming home Saturday morning.

Anna Bartunek went down to Wolbach Saturday morning to spend the day with relatives.

Mrs. Mickelwait and son Earl went up to Burwell Saturday and spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Craig.

Mrs. Walter Levenick and little son were down from Burwell the latter part of last week, visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Koupal.

Editor Parsons of the Burwell Tribune was in the city Monday to get his primary ballots set on our linotype. The ballot this year is something fierce.

Harvey Sowers, a son of Mrs. Mary Sowers, came home last week from Milford where he has been for the last year. Saturday he went down to Wolbach and may make that his home for the present.

W. B. Keown has the brick on the lot for the new store building south of Milfords'. He has moved the old house back on the lot and has purchased several more feet from the Chas. Schwaner lot right west of his own lot.

The loss of the bridge at North Loup will be a severe blow to the finances of the county. This structure went out Friday, being broken down by the ice pack. No doubt the county will at once set to work to have a new one put in its place, and doubtless it will be of steel.

ON OUR THIRTY-FIRST YEAR

Thirty years ago this week the first issue of the Ord Quiz was printed in a little room not more than half the size of our present editorial room. In this little room at the rear of a law office the meager printing plant we then had was stored and worked. The same old boy is still at the helm and expects to be till he is called to where they have no need of newspapers.

TEACHER GOT THE GOOSE

A week ago Friday a large flock of geese settled down in the field near the Spring Creek school house and went to feeding and resting and haying a good time in general. Of course the pupils were interested in the sight and the teacher was not wholly indifferent to the spectacle. The temptation grew too strong for one sportsman among the boys and one of them, Raymond McLain, proposed to the teacher, Mrs. Harvey Potter, that if she would permit him to run home for his gun he would bag one of the birds for her. Of course Mrs. Potter is opposed to taking a bribe, but she thought that it would be a wise move to have the birds scared away so the school could get to work again and she gave the consent to the young nimrod. Away went Raymond and in a little while his old trusty gun brought down a fine bird. True to his word he turned the beauty over to his teacher, who took it proudly home. She is our next-door neighbor but she never offered us a wishbone.

BREEZES FROM THE WEST

Ord Quiz,

Dear Sir: Let me inform the public that I am very sure that I can not win only with two nominations. I mean socialist and prohibition (socialist have to write my name of course), if I also do not get the democratic nomination for which I have paid legal five for filing. Republican would be also useful by writing my name same as socialist, but I know it would not be any use for me to file as such as long as I know that Mr. W. G. Rood wish to fight that part with Mr. W. L. McNutt himself. But it would be better for me to get beat at the primary than to have Mr. W. G. Rood beat me on election day in November, because Mr. D. E. Mather and the ring bosses after they wake up to find out they got badly beaten they can afford to stand the beating better than I can. But I can not see the point why the saloons are more afraid of me and Mr. Rood than they are of Mr. Mather or Mr. McNutt. Still I believe Mr. Mather to be nice temperance man.

But if I am elected next November for the house of Representative of this 56th district my platform in my announcement holds good. Saloons are more afraid of that women suffrage than the pure food law because they think that if women have a right to vote that they will vote for pure clear water, and their children be better fed and clothed and some of the saloons could not buy so many farms. I have lost plenty on account of saloons, but start right better late than never. I am getting old but hope God will spare me for nother 50 years for me to accomplish something good for mankind.

Yours truly,
JOHN CEPLECHA,
Old soldier U. S. A.

The U. P. will probably be late the balance of the week owing to the bad condition of the railroad track out from Omaha. There are about forty miles that has to be traveled with a great deal of care, and especially that portion that runs from Rogers to Valley.

Superintendent Jones came home from Aurora Thursday evening. He was accompanied by Mrs. Myra Purviance, sister of Mrs. Jones, whose home is in California, but who has been spending the winter in Nebraska. She is now on her way home.

C. E. Weaver and wife are visiting at the F. W. Weaver home. Their home is in Wisconsin, but they have been spending some time in Denver this winter. The visiting gentleman is a brother of our own Mr. Weaver.

D. M. Rathbun has been making considerable improvements on the town property which he lately purchased from Emmet Collins.

Kate Studey of North Loup, an old friend of Mrs. Jay Hamilton, was spending Sunday in Ord.

Bert Barnes was a Friday morning passenger for Arcadia.

Frank Crow went to St. Paul this morning.

Mrs. M. J. Shoemaker accompanied Mr. Shoemaker to Grand Island Saturday.

A. Fuss and daughters Margaret and Wenda came home from Grand Island Saturday evening.

I. Hoffmaster came up from Greeley Saturday and stayed with Ord relatives until Tuesday morning.

Jim Turek tore a hole in his hand last week. The injury was received from a rusty nail. As a consequence he had a bad case of blood poisoning.

Mildred Staple was not nearly so well last Friday, but was better the first of the week. It would seem that she is having more than her share of sickness.

Lelia Moorman came down from Burwell Tuesday where she has been assisting in the care of a sick niece. She has resumed her work in the school room.

Anna Tappan started from here Friday morning on a W. C. T. U. tour through the county. She expected to visit every union in the county going first to Arcadia.

The Loyal Kensington Club met last Friday with Mrs. R. L. Staple. This is a number of Loyal neighbors who meet once a month for a social time. Light refreshments are always served.

Mrs. L. E. Gusner and daughter came down from Burwell Tuesday morning where they have been visiting for a couple of weeks. Their home is in Cotesfield where they went the next day.

Tuesday morning Mrs. E. L. Johnson and Mrs. C. E. Kullbom went to Omaha where they each have sisters living and afaer spending a day with each will come home tomorrow night.

Mrs. C. H. Payton and daughter were in Ord Tuesday. Their home is in Burwell but they were moving to Cotesfield, the husband and father having preceded them with the household goods.

Saturday night was Fred Bell's last evening in the skating rink. Monday he turned the keys over to Chas. Davis who will have charge of the rink for the next year. We expect Mr. Davis to do pretty well at the business. We understand he will have a dance hall in connection with the rink.

Tom Jones went to Winner, S. D., where he will open shop in the land business. He has an office close to the postoffice and will be pleased to meet his Valley county friends, if any come that way. He will also be pleased to look after any business that folks down this way may have to be done in that section of country.

Mrs. Geo. Siler came home Monday noon from Burke, S. D., where she had been called several weeks ago to see Mrs. Ed. Siler who at that time was not expected to live. The sick lady, we are pleased to note, is much better now. Mrs. Siler had bad luck, as a great many passengers do now days, having to lay over on account of the bad condition of the railroads.

Theron Beehrle followed the snow plow down to Omaha last week with three cars of cattle and two of hogs, striking a good market. This closes up his fat stuff for the season. Soon after his return he went over to Trim's place and bought fifteen of his Duroc-Jerseys, all that he had to sell. This adds very much to the stock of fine registered hogs owned by Mr. Beeherle.

Mrs. S. Honnold went to Grand Island Tuesday morning where she was to meet Arthur who was passing through the Island. She thought quite likely she would go on to Lincoln for a few days. Later on in summer she expects to go to Oklahoma for a few months and stay with her daughter, Mrs. Evet Cromwell and family. Mrs. Honnold has decided to leave Ord as soon as she can dispose of her property. Arthur and Irving are both living in Denver and she has other relatives there so very likely she will make that her home.

How near, and yet how far? One man who had just come to town a few weeks ago presented his strange countenance at the voting place and asked for a ticket. Of course he was challenged, and asked whether he was a voter and when he came to town. His reply was prompt and to the point, "On January 5," he said. The judges told him that he could not vote and he went away. Not long afterward he came back and declared that he had made a mistake that he came to Ord on January 3, feeling sure that he had got his date at a safe distance back this time. But the stranger forgot that February had only 29 days and this still put him one day short of a ballot. He did not come back to make any more corrections. It is always a safe bet to name what ticket such fellows vote.

THREE BRIDGES BADLY DAMAGED

The Spring Breaking up of the River Ice Cost Valley County a Pretty Sum

The fears expressed in these umns a few weeks ago about the sa ty of our bridges when the i should go out, have been fully rea ized.

Fortunately the heavy coating snow that covered the country h to melt slowly, most of the wa ing into the ground. But for a by the middle of last week the wa was coming down the Loup rivers flood style bearing great volumns ice, and owing to the ice gorges, wa was out of the banks in sever places.

The crest of the flood was Thursday and Friday. At that tim the four spans of the Arcadia bridge three of the North Loup bridge an and three of the Sumter bridge went out. Also the small bridge some distance east of the Burlington river bridge at Ord.

The Arcadia bridge was built 18 years ago and was of steel construct ion. The thing that made its destru tion sure was the series of unde trusses sustaining the spans. The when the water rose, were caught the ice and rubbish and nothing c save the structure.

The people of Sumter were o watching for their bridge and one span out they caught it by of barbed wire and held part to the shore. The rest of the b parts of the bridge was taken stream about two miles.

They went at once to work to ge the parts back so that the rebuilding could be pushed as fast as possible.

A special meeting of the county board was called for yesterday an the preliminary arrangements wer made for the rebuilding of the brok en structures. A temporary bridge will be put in at Arcadia, for till this is done practically no travel can be had between the southwest corner of the county and Arcadia. Later a good steel bridge will be put in to replace the old one.

Likewise temporary repairs wi put on the North Loup b Greeley county will be asked to join in its construction, which that county should have done when the bridge was first built. It is claimed that that county can be compelled to join the construction of the bridge.

The Sumter bridge, which is least damaged of all the bridges, be permanently repaired by lo bridge men.

By liberal use of dynamite Su ervisor Fogt kept the Elyria riv bridge from going out. This is thing to be put down to his credit.

The break in the Burlington lin put a stop to traffic pretty effectually though it was possible to get the passengers and mail over on foot.

Agent Kullbom was wide awak when the condition of the little bridg was reported to him Thursday night. The train men reported it in bad condition when they crossed. Kullbom then took the matter up with the headquarters with the result that, when the train reached Burwell they were ordered to run back to Horace at once. This put the passenger train on the other side and left the freight here. So that by running to the wrecked bridge from both sides the passenger and mail service was not wholly stopped.

But bad as our losses are they are little compared with the losses elsewhere. The east part of the state was inundated worse than ever before in the history of the state. And the Missouri and Mississippi rivers are but of their banks on the way south.

Down in Howard county it is reported that all the river bridges are out and the county is facing a bridge loss of $100,000.

Our total loss in Valley county will probably not exceed $15,000.

We were pleased to meet our old friend, Charles Spencer, Tuesday morning. He had made a run up to Ord for a few hours between trains, Charlie has been on a farm near Scotia for some time and is doing well. Last year his corn went 40 bushels to the acre, being in the lucky belt where the rains fell, as well as being a good farmer.

The Commercial Club did not meet Monday night, folks being too much concerned in the election to follow the next day. Secretary Perryman asks us to announce that there will be a meeting next Monday night to transact the business that should have been done last Monday night.

Lawyer H. N. Mattley had office rooms in the Funck building recently burned in Lincoln. He writes that he escaped with a loss of only about $50. He is now occupying room 421 in the Bankers Life Building.

ALL OVER NEBRASKA.

Chickens Were Poisoned.

Custer County.—E. H. Purcell of Broken Bow has just experienced something new in the line of poultry troubles and it was rather startling one, too. He has kept a flock of 110 pullets over winter. They were healthy young hens of a superior breed and had just arrived at the laying stage. On opening the poultry house door in the morning Mr. Purcell was amazed to find his flock piled up over the floor, the greater part of them dead and others in a dying condition. It is believed they were poisoned.

Transfer of Meeting Place.

Otoe County.—The Executive Committee of the Nebraska State Travelers Protective Association has transferred its annual convention from Nebraska City to Omaha. This change was brought about because the Nebraska City people were so unfortunate as to lose one of their best hotels by fire recently, and the citizens of that thriving little city thought it would be impossible to care for the visitors with the limited accomodations. Omaha was asked to take the conventions and gladly agreed to do so.

Feathered Finery Burned.

Dodge County.—A mass of feathered finery that adorned the head of Mrs. Uhler of Hooper went up in smoke at Union station in Fremont when sparks from a switch engine descended in a shower upon it. The first inkling Mrs. Uhler had that her headgear was afire was a warning shout from a baggage man. A scream, a hurried snatch and the hat was lying on the platform where the flames leisurely finished consuming all but the frame.

Misbranded Vinegar Seized.

Dodge County.—United States Food and Drug Inspector Evans and Deputy United States Marshal Haze swooped down on the wholesale grocery establishment of May Bros. in Fremont and seized a carload of vinegar alleged to be misbranded and adulterated. Analysis showed it to be a mixture of acetic acid and other chemicals.

Farm Home Burned.

Saunders County.—Fire, the origin of which is supposed to be from a defective flue, destroyed the farm home of Ernest W. Clark, ten miles northwest of Ashland. Loss is about $1,800 on the house and $300 on the household effects, only a small part of which were saved.

Tramps Will Go Hungry.

York County.—Hereafter all tramps will probably receive a pretty cool reception when they visit York if the ruling of the board of supervisors is carried. The board will refuse to pay in the future for any free lunch handed out.

Nebraskan Saw Maine Buried.

Wayne County.—John Cherry, a Winside boy on board the cruiser Birmingham, was present at the "burial" of the battleship Maine.

Ministers Form Organization.

Parrish, manager of the publicity bureau of the Commercial club. The reports as compiled by C. W. Preparing the Eggs for Easter

HOME-MADE Easter eggs frequently fail in effect because they are not properly prepared.

Look over each egg carefully to see that it is not cracked or all work is wasted, then wash off with warm water to remove soil. Put aside such eggs as are to be boiled hard and colored and in a separate mound put those with most perfect surface for painting or other decorations. Make very sure there is no mixing, as a broken raw egg is not pleasing.

Colored eggs can be made any tint with special dyes, or if these are unobtainable cheap ribbon can be boiled in a little water and the boiled egg submerged in it until the right tone is acquired.

The old-fashioned calico egg will be pleasing to this generation of youngsters. Tie each egg in a piece of cheap figured chintz of high color and it will leave its design on the egg when put in boiling water.

If you have nothing else for coloring boil the egg after tying up in the red skins of onions.

Quaint designs can be boiled into the egg by tracing figures on the shell of the raw egg with a hard tallow candle to make a white surface, then color the rest of the egg in dyed water.

When eggs are to be painted for place cards or caricatures, they need more careful treatment. Wipe the washed egg in powdered pumice to remove gloss of shell and make painting take better.

The blowing must be carefully done or the shell will crack. Prick both ends with a coarse needle. The hole should be just large enough to permit the contents being expelled. Too large an opening is disfiguring, besides making a crack more probable.

Put the egg to the mouth and blow gently at first, then hard and steadily until nothing more comes. Rinse with warm water and blow out several times again. Dry carefully so all water will run out.

To paint the egg trace the outlines with a hard pencil, then color with good water colors, as they dry most quickly. If the egg is to be filled with candy one hole may be made big enough to hold tiny candied drops. When the shell is filled paste the hole with thin paper.

Any one can paint some sort of face on an egg shell, and if further decorations in the way of hat, hair, or stock are added great delight will be given.

A girl with artistic ability can make fascinating place cards from egg shells in the forms of rabbits, owls, pigs, cupid heads, old ladies, or gay belles. These are pasted to flat cards on which a name or Easter greeting is written in gilt letters.

When the egg represents an entire figure the feet are painted on the card; when only the head, it can be set on a short tube to represent a neck, and this can be draped with stock or collar.

Use a good glue in pasting the eggs to the card, as paste or mucilage will not hold well.

Great fun for an Easter party is to supply the blank cards, blown egg shells, scissors, paints, and colored papers and set the guests to evolving their own egg ornaments. Prizes can be offered for the most successful.

EASTER STYLES ON THE RESERVATION.

Madam Bucket-of-Water, wife of Big Chief Standon-His-Head, has imported from Paris her spring costume, consisting of a hand-made coffee sack and a tube of ultra-marine blue from one of the leading studios.

Miss Sun-in-Her-Eyes, the bewitching daughter of Hog Bristle Pete, appeared in a new riding habit Tuesday. It is made of a blanket from a Pullman car, tied at the waist with barbwire.

Miss Moonlight-on-the-Mountain is wearing a fetching headdress composed of the tail feathers of the chicken that was mysteriously lost by one of the palefaces last week.

The modistes are getting in their spring stocks of paint. Economical women are buying it by the gallon, but those who wish variety of costume are taking several pint cans of different colors.

Among our young men much interest is manifested in the new dancing coat, consisting of a priming color of yellow ocher, over which is applied two coats of oxide of iron, with trimmings of Nile green.

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

Odd, Va.:—"I am enjoying better health than I have for 20 years, and I believe I can safely say now that I am a well woman. I was reared on a farm and had all kinds of heavy work to do which caused the troubles that came on me later. For five years during the Change of Life I was not able to lift a pail of water. I had hemorrhages which would last for weeks and I was not able to sit up in bed. I suffered a great deal with my back and was so nervous I could scarcely sleep at night, and I did not do any housework for three years.

Todd has been in the habit of running a newspaper so long that he can't break away. In an unguarded moment he sold his Tribune, and that was the mistake of his life. He could not buy the paper back so the next best thing was to start another paper in Burwell. Not many towns of the size and importance of Burwell has less than two papers, so a second publication was bound to come anyway, and Todd might as well be the lucky man as anyone. Todd is a good newspaper writer. If he only had robust health he would be right at the top of the list in the newspaper field. Good luck to him.

NO MAN'S LAND A ROMANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the urderer and kills himself. Coast bees free, but Blackstock has married therine Thaxter and fled. Coast purses a yacht and while sailing sees a thrown from a distant boat. He res the fellow who is named Appleyard. arrive at a lonely island, known as Man's Land. Coast starts out to ex the place and comes upon some de buildings. He discovers a man Upon going further and approach house he sees Katherine Thaxter, xplains that her husband, under the of Black, has bought the island, blind, a wireless operator and has ion there. Coast informs her that usband murdered Van Tuyl.

CHAPTER X.

ast had not taken two-score paces g the path to the shore before the was again darkened by a sudden heavy thickening of the mists. t brightening glow, which a little s back he had hailed with hope as mise of early clearing, was in an tant wiped away. So deep became gloom (to his fancy, as if the fog d been sprayed to saturation with myriad infinitestimal atoms of ink) at though it was now high morning found it hard to see the ground beeath his feet.

Then came the deluge. The heavens pened and drenched the earth with a ush of rain literally torrential. In twinkling soaked to the skin, Coast sped for breath and bent his head a downpour which whipped him th a million cruel stinging lashes.

Perforce at pause for fear of losing s way, almost beaten thoughtless, cking any shelter to fly to, he deved forlorn comfort of a sort from e very violence of the squall, which pplied its own assurance that it d not endure long. And briefly proved itself: heralded by gradu- lightening, the heavier clouds assed off; the initial fury exhausted itself.

For some distance the path led him a wandering way; but this he did not resent, any more than he really resented his soaking, which seemed but an inconsiderable annoyance to a mind preoccupied. His being was altogether obsessed and the process of his thoughts clouded by intense solicitude and pity for Katherine—coupled with doubts as to the wisdom of his course.

Was he justified in leaving her, gh she begged and commanded He felt his understanding har- by the pro and con of the ques- like a ball in volley between two kets. How could he leave her so? else could he do? She rejected, ed, dismissed him definitely, appeal. She needed him—or dy to whom she might turn for and protection. Blackstock t to be trusted: yet she loved , as she protested, she were in some strange fashion pass- oast's comprehension, had he ght to step between her and her ess, whatever the circum- s? If, as was the case, Black- had murdered a man in a mo- of uncontrollable rage, had any right to leave the woman at mercy of a temper which might y moment resume the complex- homicidal mania? was, in the summing up, con- s of no choice of action: he could go his ways. She desired it, and ough his duty (he saw clearly) was to denounce Blackstock to the nearest authority, secure his arrest and imprisonment . . . he could not.

Thus in wretched communion with his heart, he came almost unawares a second time to the deserted fishing village, was abruptly conscious of shapes of buildings looming through the mists and driving rain on either hand. And with this recognition recurred the memory of the blind dog and the murdered man.

It was scant consolation that he no longer heard the howling of the dog. Perhaps it had abandoned its dead, perhaps he need no longer fear to meet the blank misery of those uncanny, sightless eyes, perhaps. . . .

Even as he warmed that hope, without warning something more cold and moist than his own flesh touched his hand. He jerked away with an uncontrollable shudder and a smothered exclamation of horror, only to realize that the animal had stolen up behind him and thrust its muzzle into his palm. He bent over and petted the dripping head, soothing the dog with muttered words for a moment or two. It snuggled close to him, whining, shivering.

"Poor boy!" he said gently. "So now, so, old fellow. . . ." Then, surprised: "Hello!" he exclaimed. "What's this?"

Beneath his hand the dog had stiffened suddenly, and now stood tense and bristling, a deep and angry growl rumbling in its throat.

Simultaneously, from some indeterminate point, he heard the sound of a man's voice, the words indistinguishable, accompanied by a grating noise like that made by metal encountering stone.

"Hello, hello!" he said softly, knitting his brows, as he stared down the roadway, in the direction that he must go, the direction from which the sounds seemed to come.

He could see nothing save vague shadows, formless, dim. . . .

A monotonous iteration of muffled sounds forced itself upon Coast's attention; a thud, a scraping noise, a soft plop; repeated endlessly. He strained his eyes against the veiling mists, se ning to discern a knot of hadows the road. The sounds continued, to be interrupted, presently by high-pitched accents, apparently lifted in expostulation; but the intonation was foreign and the words unintelligible.

Then a voice said roughly: "Shut up and get on, will you? D'you want to keep me standing here all day?"

A grunt responded and the noises recommenced.

Coast gulped; his temples throbbed and there was a feeling of constriction in his throat. The voice had been Blackstock's. Coast now understood what was towards: they were digging a grave for the dead man.

Quite mechanically he turned aside and moved toward the row of houses on his right; they stood upon the edge of a shelving bank, he found, guessing the beach lay at the foot of this declivity. He descended ten feet or so, and, the dog at heel, skulked along in the rear of the buildings until he came to one which he judged to be about opposite the group of shadows. Then climbing again he entered the structure by its rear doorway—which owned no door.

Opening on the roadway were two windows, with broken and empty sashes, and a doorway with vacant hinges. Coast approached one of the windows. The dog, blundering helplessly about for a time, at length found the door and stopped astride the sill, sniffing the air, ears pricked forward, body vibrant with the behemence of its growls.

Blackstock stood some feet from the body, his feet well apart, his heavy shoulders inclined slightly forward, his hands clasped behind him. He was clothed in shining, shapeless black oilskins; the drooping brim of a sou'wester hid all his face save a red patch of cheek.

Near the dead man, two Chinamen toiled with spades, waist-deep in a trench. Their bodies, clothed in thin, saturated blue jackets, bent and recovered with nearly automatic precision as they delved and cast up the loam. Behind them a little mound of fresh-turned earth grew rapidly.

To one side a third Chinaman stood in attitude of imperturbable attention, apparently overseeing the job. He was a large man, largely builded: taller than Blackstock by at least three inches, with disproportionately long arms, large hands and feet. In that drearily illusive light he seemed a giant. His face, to Occidental eyes, was a yellow mask, brutally modeled but quite devoid of expression.

Presently he uttered a single word in Chinese, and the labor came to an end. He turned to Blackstock.

"All ready," he said brusquely, in clear English.

Blackstock inclined his head, as if doubtful. "How deep?" he asked.

"Four feet."

Blackstock appeared to reflect briefly. "Six would be better," he said. "However . . . kick him in and get him covered as quick as you can."

"All right," returned the Chinaman stolidly.

The pitiless brutality of the proceeding, together with the sickening thump of the body falling into the trench, affected Coast momentarily with a sort of vertigo, with something closely resembling nausea, and wrung from him an involuntary cry of horror. "Good God!" he said aloud—how loudly he soon realised.

Barely had the words been spoken when Blackstock, as if galvanized, whirled in Coast's direction. "Who's that?" he demanded sharply, his features darkly distorted with apprehension. "Who spoke?"

His fingers tore nervously at the fastening of his oilskin coat; he jerked it open and plunged one hand into a side pocket, as if seeking a weapon.

In surprise the tall Chinaman turned toward him. "Who spoke?" he iterated, as if he had failed to catch that cry which had unmistakably reached ears that seemed attuned to almost preternatural acuteness. "I heard nothing. . . ."

Quickly his gaze quested past Blackstock, raking their surroundings, and for an instant Coast could have sworn rested on his face, indefinite blur though it must have seemed viewed through the window at that remove. He fancied that the man's small black eyes narrowed, and he held his breath, fearing he was discovered and wondering whether or not to make a break for it by way of the back door. Then, to his unspeakable relief, the Chinaman's glance traveled on and again paused.

"It must have been the dog," he said, his precise English oddly asserting with his foreign intonation.

For the first time Coast became aware that the animal had left the doorway. A slight shift of position enabled him to discover it standing at pause halfway between the building and the group round the grave.

"The dog? No!" Blackstock ejaculated nervously. "Dogs don't speak—"

"It must have been the dog," the Chinaman repeated. "It is there—"

"Where?" Blackstock moved uneasily, seeming to sense a menace in the very proximity of the animal. "Keep it away from me, d'you hear? Don't let it come near me. Kick it off—kill the damn' brute if it comes this way!" His tones flatted strangely, as if he were in truth mortally afraid of the animal. "It hates me," he said in a mumble—"hates me!"

"Let me have your pistol," the Chinaman put in "I think it means to attack us. Give me the pistol and I will drive it off."

As if to confirm the wisdom of this suggestion as well as Blackstock's fears, the dog at that instant interjected a sonorous and savage growl—which changed to a sharp yelp as a bit of rock, flung with surprising accuracy by one of the grave-diggers, landed on its sides. Confused and in pain—for the blow must have been a shrewd one—the blind animal swerved, scuttled off, disappeared.

At the same time Coast was aware that some object passed from Blackstock's hand to the Chinaman's. A second later a little tongue of reddish flame licked out from the mouth of a revolver held by the latter, and Coast heard its vicious bark coincident with a smart thud as the bullet lodged in a beam immediately behind him.

It might have been poor markmanship or fair; the Chinaman might have aimed at the dog.

TWIST THAT MADE THE ROPE

In March of Labor-Saving Invention Rope-Making Machine Was Last on List.

There is nothing more prosaic than a rope, or that enters into a greater number of homely occupations; and yet in the march of labor-saving invention, a rope-making machine was one of the last on the list. So long, indeed, did rope-making remain one of the manual arts that the name of the place where the work was done has become ingrained in popular speech; and the rope factory, though in no way meriting the appellation, is still known in some quarters as the "rope-walk."

Formerly it was considered a fact worthy of note that the government rope-walk at Boston could turn out a rope 1,020 feet long.

A young workman in a rope-walk saw that the twist should be applied to the rope instead of the strands, if machinery was to take the place of the hand in rope-making, and he realized fame and fortune from the conception. His opportunity came with the proposition to grapple for the broken ends of the Atlantic submarine cable in the sixties.

A rope fully 12,000 feet long was required for the grappling, but the task of making one of this unheard-of length could not be undertaken seriously by any rope-maker then in the business.

At this juncture John Good came forward with a proposition to build machinery from his own designs and make a rope in one piece as long as was wanted.

The offer seemed a bold one, but was accepted. The machinery was built, the rope made, the break in the cable found and repaired, and telegraphic communication between the old world and the new established.

The Easter Festival

By Lena M. McCauley

"THE world itself keeps Easter Day," begins an old carol in recognition that Easter is a festival of spring. While the Christian faith accepts it as a movable feast depending on the time of the Paschal moon, it is always within the period when nature is awaking from winter to a renewal of life. Each day the sun rises earlier, its warmth drawing the frost from the ground. As if by magic the dull fields are veiled in tender green and the flowers bud in the sheltered places.

In the first days of human history the cave man rubbed dry sticks together to steal fire from the sun. When the spring melted the ice of winter, he bowed more profoundly to the great luminary in the sky as it appeared in the east, and later when he built his altars he renewed the fires when the sun turned northward.

The word Easter is from the Saxon "Eostre," the name of the goddess of spring. "Eoster" lived in the east with the rising sun. She was the most gentle of all the deities of the pagan world. As she tripped across the meadows the grass came out, the flowers blossomed, the ice was broken in the brooks, and the streams sang merrily. All the earth rejoiced, for the fairer seasons of the year were at hand.

Significant of Resurrection.

Each year Eostre was born again significant of the resurrection from the dead of the Christian faith. The young plants awoke to life from dry seeds, the chicks from the eggs, and everywhere in nature the springtide under the spell or Eostre became lovely after the winter's sleep.

The Romans adopted the Saxon Eostre as their goddess Aurora. When the Christian fathers were naming the feasts of the church it was a wise thought that brought the old nature worship and the Easter resurrection into harmony.

The Emperor Constantine, at the beginning of the fourth century, resolved to fix the time of Easter that it should not conflict with the Jewish Passover. To prevent disputes, he made the rules which were accepted at the Council of Nice in 325 A. D. The twenty-first day of March was known as the Vernal Equinox, the next full moon was the moon of Nisan, or the Jewish Passover, and the Lord's Day following was Easter Day. But if the full moon happened on a Sunday, Easter Day was the Sunday after that.

Old Easter customs, while differing widely according to religions and localities, had some things in common. The Easter flower has always been sacred to altars. Today we speak of the Easter lily, meaning the St. Joseph lily, and in other parts of the world the daffodil, or the narcissus, or the calla lily may be regarded as the Easter lily. The Easter egg is generally treasured and the Easter candle is a sacred fire, the egg pertaining to the resurrection of life, and the fire to eternal life.

The return of the sun at the vernal equinox was an occasion for rejoicing among the pagans in general, especially the wandering tribes who studied the skies, the Druids, and wild northern peoples. The fire worshipers of Persia, living on the high arid plateaux at this season, rose more reverently with the dawn and spread their rugs to kneel in adoration awaiting the token in the east of the source of light and life. The Easter eggs as symbols of the gods of good and evil, Ormuzd and Adriman, were popular in Persia and gayly colored. They were exchanged as gifts, even solemn dignitaries carrying them about in their voluminous robes and presenting them to friends.

Easter Symbols Universal.

The colored Easter eggs, as gay as the Easter flowers in the fields, are universal. In Russia and in Paris, and in fact today in all large cities of the world, imitation eggs are made of confectionery, and jewelers go so far as to make eggs of gold and silver and to set them with gems for the Easter trade.

In Madrid, Easter lambs, the symbol of innocence, are sold in the markets, and both in England and on the continent there are cakes peculiar to the season, a special kind of tansy cake to remind of the bitter and sweet of the crucifixion night, being of ancient origin.

The Christian church introduced the most beautiful celebrations of all. Easter is the inspiring feast of the year and its celebration means a renewal of faith. Even in remote parts of the world, where priests and their little flocks assemble, the Easter lights burn on the altars and faithful congregations sing Easter carols with joy.

The most solemn celebration of all is that held in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem. Pilgrims assemble from every corner of Christendom, and ascend the Via Dolorosa chanting prayers. Many attend the feet-washing ceremonies, and throngs haste to the church where devotion keeps them waiting from Good Friday until Saturday afternoon, when the Patriarch with unlighted torch enters the gloom of the sepulcher.

They watch with bated breath for his return. No light flickers in the darkness, then suddenly a blaze flames up, the torch is on fire and with a shout of thanksgiving the multitude breaks into singing a glorious hymn of thanksgiving. Those nearest the altar eagerly snatch fire from the torch, candle after candle is lighted until every taper in the church is burning. The worshipers rise, the gloom is dispelled, and they go forth into the gray of the morning greeting one another, "Christ is arisen!" meeting the reply, "He is arisen indeed!"

Ceremonies at Rome.

The festal ceremonies at Rome are most splendid. The Pope officiates at mass on that day and St. Peter's is filled with cardinals, prelates, and dignitaries from all parts of the world. The day is ushered in by firing cannon from the Castle of St. Angelo. The magnificent basilica is richly decorated, altars are newly ornamented, the lights around St. Peter's tomb are burning, and the Pope is seated in his chair of state in vestments ablaze with gold.

The pronouncing of the papal benediction, with indulgence and absolution, above the vast concourse of people, is an imposing ceremony. Thousands of visitors, kept in order by soldiers, surround St. Peter's. Comparatively few can get inside the church but all hope for a share in the blessing of the Easter festival, the great festival of joy.

Beautiful Easter Carols.

Easter carols are sung in all Christian lands. Some of the most beautiful are those from the Tyrol, where singers go from house to house. Spain gives way to joy in fetes, and gifts are made to the Virgin, who is adorned with her best robes and jewels at this time. Russians enjoy a gift tree, like our Christmas tree, while jeweled Easter eggs are exchanged in the imperial household.

The Easter carol of the Christian church is sacred history and nature worship together. One of the favorites begins:

"Let the merry church-bells ring,
  Hence with tears and siging,
Frost and cold have fled with spring,
  Life hath conquered dying;
Flowers are smiling, fields are gay,
  Sunny is the weather,
With our rising Lord today,
  All things rise together."

Another carol is "The Strife Is O'er, the Battle Done," while many have the refrain of "Alleluia." Wherever there are chimes of bells they are rung joyously in celebration.

There is a mystery about the origin of the Easter rabbit of Germany. Egg-hunting in the forest, where grown people have hidden the colored eggs, is as popular as egg-rolling is on the White House grounds in Washington. In some places doves are liberated at Easter, and it is quite general to fill Easter baskets with flowers, or cakes, and to make visits to renew good will among friends.

A great deal of beautiful music has been written for the Easter services, which have become elaborate occasions in the churches. Many carols that are sung have been handed down by tradition and repeated from father to son. They frequently tell the New Testament story of the first Christian Easter morning when Christ rose from the tomb, and gave all human beings faith in immortality.

Not All Is Revealed.

The Christian life has a strange blending of humility and pride, which gives to it a deceptive character, for the world does not know the strength of those men who humble themselves and abhor their own powers and crucify their wills, for the world does not see the reverse side of this experience. It sees the crucifixion, it does not see the Resurrection.—The British Congregationalist.

HELD HILL FIVE WEEKS

MEMORIAL COMMEMORATES BRAVE ACT OF PIONEER.

Prominent among the rocky, mesa-like hills that surround Denver, is a rugged, gray point, within the outskirts of the town, known as "Simpson's Rest." Recently there was erected on this hill a monument commemorating the brave fight put up at this spot by John Simpson, one of the earliest settlers of Colorado, against a war party of Utes and Cheyennes in 1855. The Indian fighter and his wife are buried on top of the hill.

The Utes and Cheyennes made the foothills and the plains adjoining the Rockies their hunting ground, but they rarely gave trouble to settlers. Consequently, one May morning in 1855, when Simpson's children, Bob and Nora, aged 15 and 13, were making their way to a small stream near their home, they were surprised to see a large party of Indians riding toward them at a terrific pace, shaking their lances and uttering blood-thirsty cries. At the same time they heard a cry from the direction of the cabin, and saw their father running toward them with his rifle in his hand.

Simpson had just returned from an expedition. He had heard that the Cheyennes and Utes had gone on the warpath, and he had hastened home just in time to rescue his family. Seeing the trapper, the Indians hesitated, for Simpson's fame as a shot had spread throughout the frontier, and the redskins knew that several among them would meet death if they persisted in their attempt to capture the children.

Two burros were packed with provisions, a keg of water and all the ammunition the trapper possessed. Driving the burros ahead of them the members of the little family set out from the house. Simpson covered the Indians with his rifle when they approached too near, and the family was unmolested. The hill which appealed to the trapper as a good place for defense was accessible only by a single narrow, rocky path, up which one must climb today in reaching the summit of "Simpson's Rest." The summit of the hill is flat, about half an acre in extent and surrounded by a high rocky wall. It would be impossible to storm such a natural fortress except by over-powering the defenders at the narrow defile which served as an entrance.

The Indians saw that it was hopeless to attempt to storm the natural fortress, so they surrounded the hill and began a siege in the endeavor to "starve out" the defenders. The siege has no parallel in the history of the west. For five weeks the plucky pioneer and his family held their fortress. They killed their burrors when provisions ran low. Fortunately, there had been heavy rains, and depressions in the rocks at the top of the hill were filled with water, giving an ample supply. At the end of the fifth week, when hope was nearly abandoned, the Indians suddenly brought in their ponies and rode away with shrill cries. A troop of cavalry from Fort Lyon, 150 miles distant, which had been sent out to render aid to any settlers who might have escaped the marauding Indians, soon came in view, and Simpson and his family were rescued.

Woman's Chances.

The plan of the Brooklyn priest who suggests a fine of $100 for every young man who reaches his twenty-fifth birthday unmarried, and a legal requirement that every unmarried woman must propose at least three times each leap year, recalls an interesting table which was once compiled.

Reckoning a woman's entire chance of marrying at 100, the table purports to give her varying chances at different times of life. For example, between the ages of 15 and 20 her chance is 14½ per cent. Between 20 and 25 it jumps to 52 per cent. falling between 25 and 30 to 18, and to 15 per cent. between 30 anl 35. After 40 it is only 2 per cent., and after 60 she has only one chance in 1,000.

The priest thinks that "training, tradition and the natural bashfulness of the American girl" keep her from speaking first. Undoubtedly they do, and it is to be hoped they will continue so to do. "Natural bashfulness," as the father calls it, will go farther and faster in getting a good husband than any amount of cultivated boldness.

Argument Imminent.

"'Twuz dis-uh-way, sah," explained mal-treated Brother Wack. "I was p'roozin' 'long, wropped in puffound medication, when Brudder Tump hopped out from uh-hint de lumbah yahd, and clumb me. Slapped me down, de gen'leman did, jammed muh head in de ground, rid me 'round de locality like a blind boss, and hommered me like I was de big bass drum in a cullud band, all de time callin' me all de scan'als and detrimentals he could lay his tongue to, and axin' me how 'bout dem dar two dollahs I borried off'm him six mont's ago, or some sich foolishness as dat. 'Uh-loogy yuh, sah!' says I soon's I could 'numerate muh words. 'Loogy yuh! If yo' don't stop dis, yo' gwine to stir up a ahgymunt wid me purt' soon—sho's yo' bawn, yo' is!'"—Women's Home Companion.

Far West in East.

It is a curious but almost unnoticed fact that San Francisco is three degrees of longitude east of the geographical center of that portion of the United States located in North America. San Francisco is closer to the extreme eastern portion of the coast of Maine than it is to the extreme western portion of the United States. It is about 7,000 miles from New York to the nearest Asiatic port; it is only twelve miles from the western end of the United States to the continent of Asia, for the western line of the United States must be measured north and south at the extreme western portion of Alaska.

NEW LAND OPENED

Irrigated by the Government Big Horn Basin

The Government will open for entry 6300 acres of choice irrigated farm land at Powell, Wyoming, on April 22nd, 1912, on the ten payment plan without interest.

The Government now allows graduated payments, requiring only a small part of the total, during the first five years; thereby giving the settler a chance to improve his farm before paying very much of the water charge.

A NEW FOLDER telling all about this opening and containing a map of the Shoshone Project, showing lands filed on and lands to be opened on April 22nd, will be sent free upon request. Don't fail to get this.

FORD GOING 300 A DAY

Big Detroit Concern Running Ahead of Its 75,000 Production Schedule

DEALERS SEND FOR CARS

Trains Can't Haul Autos Away Fast Enough to Suit Agents

Ford dealers within a radius of 300 miles of Detroit, frantic at the inability to get cars on account of the congestion in freight traffic, last week adopted the plan of sending drivers to the Ford Company plant at Detroit, and getting cars to drive back to their respective cities. The Toledo dealer sent 50 men on one occasion, and a caravan of Ford cars immediately started back to the town on the Maumee.

Despite the congestion of freight cars, the Ford Motor Company reached the high water mark in automobile shipments for 1912 last week, when 300 model T's left the Ford shipping docks in one day. The following day the same number of Fords were shipped.

Those big shipments were 50 cars above the average needed to round out the total of 75,000 Ford cars for 1912.

On account of being unable to get freight cars just when they wanted them, the Ford Company is 3,800 cars behind its orders. However, it is expected that from this time on, the great shipments of Ford cars will go on uninterrupted.

Commercial Manager N. A. Hawkins, of the Ford Motor Co., who has just returned from a two weeks trip through the East, brought orders with him for the immediate shipment of 3,200 Model T cars.

Mr. Hawkins found things jingling in the automobile business in New York, Pennsylvania and New England, and was unusually optimistic about the 1912 season.

"There is no doubt," said Mr. Hawkins, "that our production of 75,000 cars will be sold by June 1st."

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. On that date it is expected that Methodist pastors and laymen will begin signing themselves and securing all possible subscriptions from other friends of christian subscription. Dr. Weeks, assisted by Drs. Hoge and O'Neill, performed a very rare operation last Friday upon Mrs. Max Stanner, delivering her of a fine girl baby, and mother and child are both doing well. This operation is known as the Cesarean Section, and while it is occasionally performed in this country, it is very seldom indeed that the mother and child are both saved as in this instance. Dr. Weekes' surgical ability is becoming more and more unquestioned all the time, and he is receiving not only great compliments from those at home, but also from eminent surgeons elsewhere. He is deserving of great praise for his excellent judgment in diagnosing and in his skillful use of the knife when necessary.—Scotia Register.

The Burwell Tribune says that the Livingston hotel property sold at public sale at the court house last week under an execution issued out of the district court at sheriff's sale. Under the hammer the property brought $2710 and as there was a further lien against the premises of something like $640, the property stands the purchasers at $3,350. The property was purchased jointly by Ed. Cram and T. H. Doran. An objection has been filed to the confirmation of the sale on the grounds that the appraisers fixed the amount of the property's value too low and this will be settled of course at the term of district court next month.

WEDDED AT CEDAR LAWN

Mr. Glenn A. Carson and Miss Lulu Ferne Hather Are Joined in Marriage

Miss Lulu Ferne, youngest daughter, fair and lovely, of the household of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hather, and Mr. Glenn Arlie Carson, eldest son of the W. H. Carson family, were joined in marriage at Cedar Lawn, the home of the bride's parents, 6:00 o'clock last evening.

Elaborate preparations had been made for this happy event. The beautiful country home, just out of town, was arrayed in finest fettle and a load of chairs brought out to seat the expected guests. Everything was in perfect readiness for the occasion—blushing bride, anxious groom, fond parents, black-robed minister, expectant guests, everything except the—the license! But then you must not blame Glenn. This was the first time he was ever married, and it did not take long for the auto to bring him over to town and procure the necessary permit for his honor.

When Miss Roxy Auble began playing the wedding march the bride and groom, unattended, appeared before the officiating clergyman, Rev. P. A. Davies of the Presbyterian church, and the beautiful and impressive agony was soon over. The young lovers were pronounced man and wife by the minister and the many relatives and scores of friends, who constitute the company of witnesses, were hearty in their congratulations.

The bride was reared in this community and is esteemed by all. The groom has proved his worth by an upright life and particularly by the services he has rendered the Hather establishment during the past year or so, where he has been employed. During the sickness of Mr. Hather the responsibility of the place has rested chiefly on him.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Carson start in life with the best wishes of a community of friends.

The presents were particularly remarkable, and all useful to the happy pair in their new home. They are the owners of a fine little farm in Springdale, where they will be at home after May 1st.

Here is wishing them happiness and prosperity.

There was a big dinner out at the Gene Stacy home on Easter Sunday. Unbeknownst to the old folks Miss Flavia sent out invitations to a group of relatives not stating in words who wished the guests to come or where they were to have their dinner. This information was supplied by a kodak picture of Mr. and Mrs. Stacy, the former attired in his overalls, pasted at the top of the invitation. As the guests all knew that no better place could be found for a big dinner than at Stacy's all were there on time for the meal, which was at one o'clock in the afternoon. These were the guests: Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Stacy, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stacy, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Milford Stacy, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Potter and the Misses Margie and Alice Zell Johnson.

Now if you suppose by looking at Gene
His wife is to blame for his being so lean,
That only will prove, which I'm telling the same,
That women get blamed when they are not to blame.
Gene looks like a spare rib rigged out in large clothes,
But that is no reason for you to suppose
His wife cannot cook. Gene raises fat steers
And his wife, as a cook, has mighty few peers.
If ever she bids you to come there and dine
Go right along, brother. The meal will be fine.

THE FERRY BOAT

On last Saturday evening a small ferry boat had been built and the first trial to cross the river was attempted, with Wm. Hagimaster and Dave Hively as pilots, the boat went quite well until it got out into mid-stream, where the current was too strong and made it dip water, the boat immediately filled with water, at which moment Mr. Hively jumped for the cable and made for the shore. Mr. Hagimister stayed with the boat, up to his knees in water, trying to fetch it back to the shore, but his work was in vain and the water was so cold so he too swung onto the cable and came to the shore.

It was a good deal more sport to stand back on the bank and watch than being out in that boat we presume, but it seemed as though some one had to do it. On Wednesday the ferry boat was moved below the bridge where the water was smoother and now it is the town sport to go down and cross on the boat.—Arcadia Champion.

Rev. J. Scherbacher of North Loup has been elected presiding elder of the Evangelical church and will be stationed at Hastings, with his domain covering a large part of Nebraska and some of Colorado. He is a very capable man and North Loup will lose a good family when he moves away.

Chas. Rawles came home from Grand Island Saturday.

Dr. Vinnedge returned from Bartlett and other points last Monday.

D. R. Brennemum of Burwell was in Ord Tuesday. He was going to Grand Island for a few days.

Mrs. L. Buchanan has been confined to her bed for several days with inflammatory rhenmatism.

M. A. DeCamp and wife are here on a visit at the W. A. Anderson home. Mrs. DeCamp and W. A. Anderson are sister and brother.

Mrs. Gusta Link and her daughters Amelia and Matilda of Duff, were in Ord yesterday. They were going up to Burwell to spend a few days with friends.

H. C. Hansen of Wolbach, was in the company of Will Gruber with whom he had been doing some business transaction. He returned to his home Tuesday.

Everett Stancliff was visiting Mr. and Mrs. O. Cromwell and other relatives and friends this week. He came up Saturday evening returning to Lincoln Tuesday.

One week from tomorrow is the primary election. Get a sample ballot early and look it over. You cannot do it in the time allowed by law for you to occupy a voting booth.

Sargent decided by a vote of nearly two to one to have nothing to do with saloons this year. Comstock, by about the same majority, decided that it wanted to give the dram shop license to sell pizen.

Mr. and Mrs. John Romine started Tuesday morning for their new home in the west. They shipped their car of household goods to Vancouver. They were accompanied by their three children. Mrs. Romine has promised that we shall hear from her.

Frank Currie came to town Tuesday noon. He was not here on political errands, but as a witness in one of the suits pending in court. He remained only over night. Mr. Curry is one of the prominent Taft leaders in the state and sure of the election of Taft in November. Of course he has no doubt of Taft's nomination.

Lou Aldridge and wife are here from their New Mexico home. Mr. Aldridge wes formerly a resident of Garfield county but pretty well known in these parts. He is now farming in the Pacos valley of New Mexico and of course is hollering for that portion of the earth. They arrived Monday night and will wander about these old haunts for several days.

Yesterday the brick layers went to work in earnest on the Methodist church. All winter they have been hung up on this job, but they promise to push things from now on. A few of the light colored brick were laid Tuesday afternoon just to see how they will look. Don't you think that the combination of colors—red, granite and cream—will make a pleasing effect?

J. W. Beams, who has been in the hospital in Omaha for several weeks, is still there under the specialist's care for treatment for his troublesome eye. There seems to be no immediate prospect for his being cured, and his wife fears greatly that the eye will be lost. During his absence, which includes the worst storms of the winter, she has had the responsibility of the farm, with all the chores, as well as the care of two small children. As spring's work has now commenced and her husband cannot come home for a while, and cannot work for some time after his return, she wishes to hire a reliable farm hand.

Mrs. A. M. Robbins returned home Tuesday noon from Linsborg, Kansas, where Floyd is one of the instructors on the piano. She had gone there to attend a great musical feast in this most musical of western cities. Several of the greatest of American singers were there and the best of the local talent was in evidence. She tells wonderful tales of the music of this little city. It is a city of wealthy and well-to-do people, all musically inclined. Even the little tots sing and play musical instruments like professionals. One remarkable number of the great program was a chorus of 200 little folks lead by Prof. Rosenburg, whom Ord folks will remember, who is a leader of great proficiency. Mrs. Robbins was so busy while there that she did not even write a postal card home while she was gone and her folks had begun to get uneasy about her.

Springtime was never so welcome to the people of the United States as it is this spring. It has been the longest and severest winter that all the country has ever experienced. Snow has been on the ground most of the time and the cold has been intense with barely a let-up during the whole five months of it. To add to the horrors of it has been the scarcity of feed for stock, which has made the lot of farmer a very serious one this winter. But spring is here and will probably come along with a rush, now that the coming has been so long delayed. Anyway the grass has come forward, after the grip of winter let go, with remarkable celerity. Let 'er come. We are all ready to say good bye to winter.

Dell Chapman died at the home of his only sister at Hornell, N. Y., a week ago last Monday. Wednesday he was taken to his mother's home at Greenwood and buried in the Greenwood cemetery. He was confined to the house but two weeks before his death.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Post and family went to Omaha Tuesday for a few days visit. Mr. Post does not take many vacations but sticks pretty close to the bakery department in Drapers restaurant. The building of a new bake oven lets him loose for a few days.

Art Hall came down from Burwell Tuesday morning.

J. L. Speece went to Shubert Tuesday morning where he will look after his orchard.

Mrs. Ward VanWie and Norris went to Polk Tuesday. Lloyd had gone down the day before.

Sterling Manchester of North Loup was visiting at the S. J. W. Brown home over Sunday. He has been attending school in Lincoln.

After May 1st there will be no saloons in Valley county for at least a year, and in Custer county there will be but two—Comstock and Callaway.

Court was to commence operations Monday right after dinner, but the freight did not get to town till late in the afternoon. So everything stopped of course till then.

J. S. Wheeler had a touch of pneumonia last week, but he was lucky in getting it checked before it got a real hold on him. He was able to be down to Ord Monday of this week.

The Ord Automobile Company have lately received a car load of Buick automobiles. M. McBeth and Mr. Hansen were over from Greeley last Sunday and Mr. McBeth purchased one of the new cars.

The next Valley County Bible School Association meeting will be held at Elyria commencing Monday, April 29th, and will last two days and evenings. Capable persons are in charge of the program and you may look for a good one.

Do you doubt that the earth has been well soaked by the snows and rains of this winter? In digging the Keown basement the diggers found the earth damp down to the bottom of the basement, except, of course, where the old house stood. This is a fair sample of land and shows that the earth starts off this spring in better shape than it has been for many a yaer. Bumper crops this year, we tell you.

Sunday was the first real automobile day in Ord for about five months. With the coming of winter last November the autos were put to sleep and nothing could coax them out during the long snowy winter till Sunday. The only real exception to the rule was Peterson's little old Reo, which has been doing stunts through snow and mud and over frozen bumps much of the time this winter delivering and receiving the clothes for the laundry. This machine kept going even when the roads were so bad that it had to take it on low gear to get along at all, but it got somewhere somehow.

CORNELL BUYS CREAMERY BUILDING

The Quiz has been aware for some time of the fact that Cass Cornell has had his eye on the old Beatrice Creamery building in Lincoln as a place to house the big supply business of which the Cornells are now the chief owners. The building in question is the large structure which you have seen standing just south of the B. & M. depot at Lincoln. It is just suited to the requirements of the business being situated where the firm could have advantage of loading and unloading their wares directly on and off the cars. This will effect a saving in drayage of thousands of dollars a year, besides being quicker and more handy.

We are pleased to note in the Star that the deal is closed and the Cornells will soon have their business transferred to the new location. Of course some changes and improvements will be necessary before this can be effected. Here is what the Star has to say:

The former Beatrice Creamery company building at Eighth and P streets was sold to J. Cass Cornell of the Cooper & Cole Bros. company Wednesday morning for $65,000. Deeds to the property have not passed as yet, but the transaction has been completed.

Mr. Cornell recently became president of the Cooper & Cole Bros. company, plumbing supply jobbers. The new building will be used for the growing business of the plumbing supply house.

Cooper & Cole Bros. have been compelled by rapidly growing business to seek larger quarters, and the fact that the creamery building was the only thing in the city built heavily enough to carry their stock and with the further idea on mind that it was the only thing available possessing the advantage of trackage, it was deemed advisable to take the property over immediately in order that they might have the benefit of it just as quickly as possible.

Mr. Cornell, purchaser of the property, comes from Ord, Neb., where he has been engaged in the hardware and implement business and has recently removed to Lincoln, where he will make his permanent home.

Cooper & Cole Bros. are engaged in the wholesale plumbing and seating business, their present location being 219-21-23 South Tenth street. They are the successors to the old firm whom they bought out a year ago. The object in securing larger and more commodious quarters is to increase the stock very largely and to place them in position to take care of a territory somewhat larger than that which the old firm was working.

GOOD ROADS THE THEME

The Ord Commercial Club Puts its Shoulder to the Project of Making Good Roads

Good roads was the principal theme discussed by the Ord Commercial Club Monday night.

The first gun was fired along this line when Geo. A. Parkins brought up the question of the manner of dragging the city streets. He made the point that the practice has been to have the dragging done too late, whereas it should be done while the streets are still in the putty stage.

The discussion which followed showed that O. S. Smith had the right idea but that as the city furnished a team to aid in this work, they would not let the work be done till the streets were somewhat dried off.

The sentiment prevailed at the club to try to influence the powers that be to get them to wake up and have the dragging done after each rain in the proper time.

A report from the special committee on the Haskell Creek road was to the effect that the sentiment of the farmers up that way had changed somewhat. The idea of putting the road on the section line has been abandoned, but instead it is proposed to have the road run around to the east of the big hill through the Nels Jorgensen and Neilsen places. The latter is perfectly willing that the road run through his place so as to avoid the big hill, and Mr. Jorgensen, the report is, is not now opposing the project very strenuously. This committee was continued.

Dr. Billings moved that the Club appropriate $200 a year for five years for the purpose of having a mile of road worked under the supervision of a government road expert, as an object lesson in the art of road building, and that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to have charge. After some discussion the motion was changed to make the committee a permanent one on Good Roads and they were empowered to see what funds could be solicited for the general purpose of making good roads in all directions from Ord, The chair appointed Dr. Billings, Frank Vopat and A. J. Firkins as such committee.

There was a very enthusiastic discussion of this question and practical unanimity displayed in the movement.

Other minor things were done at the meeting. A few bills were allowed, the committee on merger of the telephones was discharged and a committee appointed to work with the base ball boys. This committee is E. P. Clements, Dr. Taylor and P. C. Peryman.

Another thing of some importance taken up was that of a rest room. After some discussion as to what might be done a committee, consisting of Williams, Haskell and Bailey were appointed to see what could be done about the rest room proposition for the accommodation of ladies and children. The question is recognized as an important one and will be dealt with accordingly.

The value of the King drag in making poor roads good is being appreciated by many of our farmers. And some of them are willing, for the general good, to contribute to the good roads cause by running the drag over the roads in their vicinity after each shower. One of these is our progressive farmer, Fred Albers. Do you know of other farmers who are doing this? If so let us know. We want to give credit to every one who will help in this or other ways to make the public roads the best possible.

The Methodist Brotherhood of North Loup are enjoying a series of banquets, which are partaken of in the basement of the church. These affairs are very profitable to the men by reason of the good things to eat, the speeches that are made and the sociability engendered. And the Aid society comes in for its share of profit by reason of the small fee charged for the supper. Good things all around.

Mr. Ernest Foster and Miss Sylvia Wetzel, both of Greeley county, were married at the M. E. parsonage by pastor A. L. Umpleby, on March 28th. This notice is a little late, but we are glad to give it and wish the couple much joy in their married life. They will make their home in Greeley county.

Charles A. McMasters of Twin Falls Idaho, came to town Tuesday evening on a business mission, and of course incidentally stopping long enough to say a word or two with relatives. He was the guest of E. M. and J. R. Williams and Mrs. Mortensen while here.

Bert Cushing came up from Grand Island Saturday. He was accompanied by a fellow student of the Baptist college, O. M. Phelps. They will visit here for several days.

W. Seger came home from Grand Island last evening.

J. H. Capron went to Omaha this morning to look after business matters.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Squires left this morning from Seward to their new home in California.

Mrs. Florine Maxon of North Loup died of cancer last Wednesday and the remains were laid to rest last Friday.

P. H. Hoffman, a brother of Mrs. John Johnson and who lately accompanied her here from Iowa, left Tuesday for Akron, Ohio.

F. E. Sanders and family of Burwell, were in Ord Tuesday. They were going to Grand Island to attend to business matters and to visit Mrs. Sanders' parents.

E. S. Bair returned from Filmore county Tuesday, where he had been to attend his father's funeral. He was accompanied by P. Percell, who lives in the same county.

C. Bradley of Wolbach and Mr. Vandecar of York came up to Ord Tuesday evening to look over business affairs with Dick Bradley, who is associated with the company in the real estate business.

Master Paul Bartunek and his violin furnished sweet music at the Methodist Sunday school last Sunday morning. He was of course accompanied by his sister who is very skillful on the piano. Their music was greatly appreciated.

F. R. Frick was a passenger yesterday morning to Follston, Ind., where he will spend several days with his father and sister and other relatives. During his absence T. J. Hansen, a regular relief man, will have charge of the U. P. depot.

This morning Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stacy finished their visit in Ord and started on their return trip to California. They expect to stop for a few days at other places on the way. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stacy accompanied them as far as Lincoln where they will stay for a few days.

Wesley Baker, son of Mrs. Alfred Baker, had his arm broken in two places while playing with some school mates a few days ago. This family have more than their share of trouble, one of the older daughters is still carrying her arm in a sling. The family are poor and the mother goes out to work.

Glen J. Potter and Miss Mable Readle were married at the home of the bride's parents on Saturday noon, April 6th. The parents and immediate relatives of the couple were in attendance. One of the sisters of the bride played the wedding march. A. L. Umpleby, pastor of the Methodist church was the officiating minister. This couple has grown to manhood and womanhood in this community and are held in high esteem by a large circle of friends who wish them great happiness and success in their married life. They will make their home on a farm in Mira Valley.

The old bake oven of the Draper bakery has caved in and a new one was necessary. Hence George Winter and a force of assistants are at work. The old structure has been torn down and from the material and such other material as shall be required a larger and better one is being constructed. The new oven will be located just back of the store on the same lot, instead of on the other side of the alley. This will be a great improvement, but it will take about three weeks for the oven to be built and ready for operation. Meanwhile those who depend on the bakery for bread will have to eat Grand Island bread, and they will not be long in noticing the difference between the bread Draper's force makes and imported product.

The building boom is on in Ord. Work is just getting under way again on the big church building, which was stopped by the Arctic weather we have had this winter. The basement is dug for the new Keown building south of the postoffice. Monday the work of excavating for the big Bailey & Detweiler building was commenced and a lot of teams are hauling out the earth and depositing it where it will do the most good. The Newbecker garage is being completed. Material is on the ground for the commencement of the Frank Stewart pump and windmill building just this side of the Warwick blacksmith shop. Tenents in the old building on the west side between Baileys' and Siler's are deserting for that place is to be cleaned out soon and a fine building inserted on the premises. Then there is the probability of a large building on the corner north of the Dworak building, and of course a lot of residence buildings are projected. There will be no stagnation of affairs in Ord this year, if present prospects continue.

ORD'S JUNIOR SHORT COURSE

Chance for Our Boys and Girls to Learn Practical Things of Lasting Benefit

Next Monday begins the great event in the school doings of the year. Commencing Monday and lasting all week the Junior Short Course will be had. It is not a book course, but a time of practical talks and real demonstrations about thing that will concern the boys and girls of Valley county all the rest of their lives.

All school children or others are welcome.

Read the following paragraphs through; so you will see what you may have at this course and what you should bring and do:

The boys will need the following: 1 note book, 1 pencil, 5c worth of ½ inch 3 strand rope, 1 pocket knife, 5 ears of corn.

The lantern lecture will include views taken by H. J. Gramlich in England, Scotland, Belgium, France, Holland, and on Jersey and Guernsey Islands. These show agriculture and stock in these various countries, also the native people both in country and towns.

The boys' short course will meet from nine to twelve each morning and one-thirty to four o'clock each afternoon, same hours as girls classes.

The work will all be practical and of use to any boy who lives on a farm or expects to live on one. Among the things which will be given are the following:

Stock judging. This will include work with beef and dairy cattle, draft and road horses and hogs. Several farms will be visited to study the live stock, providing conditions will permit this.

The score cards for different classes of animals will be explained and samples of each furnished to students.

Besides the judging of horses some time will be given to rules for telling ages.

The breeds of stock. Common breeds and how to tell them will form one lesson. The points of each will be discussed and specimens of as many as possible will be secured.

What Common Feeds are Composed of. A large feeding case will be used showing substances in a pound of corn, alfalfa, oats, and other farm feeds.

Rope work. This will receive considerable attention. Each boy will need five cents worth of one-fourth inch rope. Various kinds of handy knots will be made, including the bowline, the doubletree, the turkey track, the flemish, and numerous others, all of which are of constant use to a person on the farm.

Splicing rope is something every boy should be able to do. Braiding back the end of a halter rope is another feat easily learned. Rope halters will be made one afternoon.

The work with corn will include judging, seed selecting, testing and such things which boys should be able to do, especially if they are going to enter any of the contests for prizes.

Other kinds of work will be taken up and given some time.

There will be something going on constantly throughout the week so that boys should plan on missing nothing between Monday noon and Friday evening.

Cooking and Sewing

Cereals, vegetables, meats, breads, and desserts will be studied in turn this week at the Boys' and Girls' Short Course. Lessons in measurements, combining recipes, using the oven, food values and many other things connected with the economical cooking and serving of three meals a day will be studied.

The girls will need to bring scissors, 60 white thread, needles, pins, and a thimble. We will start the sewing by learning and reviewing the different stitches, then make use of the stitches in making hand bags and aprons.

Copies of all recipes used and many others will be furnished each girl.

Bring some sort of a small note book and pencil with you to all the classes.

The work will all be practical and is a help to any girl who is from twelve to twenty years of age.

ANNOUNCEMENT

I have filed for the republican nomination for representative and shall appreciate your support at the election on April 19th. If nominated I shall make an earnest effort to be elected and if elected I shall give this district faithful and honest service.

W. G. ROOD.

County Assessor

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the nomination for County Assessor, subject to the will of the Republican party.

A. W. TAYLOR.

Next Monday Custer county will dedicate its new court house. We presume Editor Parks will be chairman of the occasion.

Woodrow Wilson, who was placed on the populist primary ballot, has asked that his name be stricken off. He could not stand the assaults of the east if he allowed the populists to support him, and of course he is a candidate for the east.

Roosevelt carried Illinois by 111,000 majority over Taft in the primary election Tuesday. This means that Taft cannot have the nomination on the first ballot, and more than likely in the end the La Follette delegates will come to Roosevelt. It looks now that there will be something doing at the republican national convention.

It would be a great pleasure for the Quiz man to cast a vote for W. G. Rood of the North Loup Loyalist for representative of Valley county. Rood is a man against whom you could say nothing, for he is all right. He is one of the bright newspaper men of Nebraska, and is capable of looking after legislative matters. If Rood gets the nomination the Quiz will be delighted to boost him all along till election day.

THE BUSY JEWELER

By Chas. Misko

What other thing could make for the present awakening of business and prosperity, following a series of poor crops, but the expectation of the people that the republican party will be continued in the discharge of the national affairs? The public expect that Taft will be renominated and elected. If they did not there would be no awakening of prosperity right after the effects of a poor crop year and a remarkable winter. The people have faith in the republican party as a business maker, no matter what else they may say.

Most republicans in and around Ord and pretty generally over Valley county will cast their votes on the 19th for W. L. McNutt for representative. Mac is one of those men who has his head working, who does not talk till he has something to say, who is not afraid to do his duty in all public matters and you know where you can find him on any subject. He is not one of those "How-are-you-Bill" fellows with a slap on the shoulder, but he is the kind who will deliver the goods in the legislature if anyone will. We have had too many of those "good fellows" down at the state house, and voters are beginning to shy clear of them.

Hitchcock, whom the republicans of Nebraska elected to the United States senate, was at the time of his election a professed progressive. Secure in his seat he has become a reactionary of the rankest type and wishes to go to the democratic national convention as a delegate at large where he will seek the nomination of Harmon, the man whom the interests want, as democratic nominee for president. We and all true republicans tried then to show the voters what sort of man Hitchcock was, but the voters would not believe it. The voters will have opportunity at the Primary election one week from tomorrow to say whether they want any more of Hitchcock. He and Bryan are contesting for the position of delegates at large.

A slip comes to us in the mail with no one's name attached thereto advising farmers not to use a stallion or jack which has not been inspected by the state board. We have a good guess as to whom the slip comes from for it is mailed at Lincoln. But if the writer of the item is averse to putting his name to the copious advise for the farmer surely these colums will not father the advice by printing it. And what does the farmer care about the certificate. Every farmer knows more about the stallions and jacks of his vicinity than the whole brood of state inspectors could find out for $5 per or in any other way. You cannot tell a farmer anything worth knowing about his neigbor's stallion. He knows whether he is sick or a poor breeder and what kind of colts he gets. So we shall not give them any advise as to what horses to shy clear of. They don't need the advise and if we should give them any it would be to pay no attention at all to the $5 certificates.

Years ago when Bartley was state treasurer the World-Herald was just about swamped. Hitchcock borrowed money of the state treasurer to tide the paper over. This was proved beyond preadventure, but the state voted to send the man who had profited by Bartley's defalcation to the United States senate. Another thing that helped Hitchcock in those days was the intimate relations between him and W. J. Bryan, the latter being then in heyday of his popularity. Because Bryan was with the World-Herald enough prestige came to the sheet to tide it over to success by the aid of the use of the state funds. Now that the World-Herald is established and its owner in the United States senate Hitchcock has broken with Bryan. Hitchcock did nothing to keep his friend, State Treasurer Bartley, out of the penitentiary, and is doing nothing now to aid Bryan in his distress. Of the two his treatment of Bartley is the worse, for Bryan can defend himself, but both these things show what sort of man Hitchcock is.

A strange thing has happened in politics this spring. The coming of Roosevelt into the campaign has worked wonders in making the nomination of Taft sure and certain. Men who were talking against Taft are now for him since Roosevelt threw his hat into the ring. Just how the candidacy of Roosevelt could make this change is not figured out even by the wise ones, but it did it just the same.

W. S. Waite of Loup City is the right man for all republicans to vote for for commissioner of public lands and buildings. For 23 years he has lived in this section and has proved himself to be a reliable man in all particulars. Mr. Waite deserves and merits your vote at the primary election for this office not only because he is a near-by citizen, but because he will be a credit to the party and to the state if given a place on the ticket.

The Quiz force are going to vote strong for W. G. Taylor of Central City for the republican nomination for railway commissioner. Mr. Taylor is one of those clean, conscientious men who may be relied upon to do the right thing in this very responsible position. As member of the last senate he showed his good qualities, which are vouched for by republicans and democrats alike. No place is of greater concern to the people of Nebraska than railway commissioner. This official will have much to do in dealing with the railway questions and Taylor will be sure to do the fair thing. He is not a railway fighter, but will not be giving them any edge over the common herd in any deal that comes up. Ask J. A. Ollis or any other member of the late legislature what sort of a man Taylor is.

Cast your vote for Victor Rosewater for National committeeman.

DR. ROBBINS IN CHINKAING

Chinkaing, China, March 9, 1912.

My dear mama:-

At last I am in Chinkaing. It seems so good to live outside a trunk. Just think it has taken me four months to reach this place.

Everything is quiet in this part of the country and the mission work is running as before.

Chinkiang is a city of about 500,000 people living in a mass of small houses. No house is larger than two story—most one story. These are huddled together, no yards, just streets, which are simply paths—two horses could not pass through. People generally go one abreast.

Of course the foreigners live in a settlement by themselves. These are foreign officials and business men. The missionaries live in their missions, just outside of the city.

All Chinese cities and villages are built in valleys. The missions are built on the hills. Our mission is built on a hill just outside of the city. We look down upon the city and its such a pretty view, because beyond the city we see the Yankse river, and back in the distance are the mountains.

Dr. Mary Taft is busy getting the grounds ready for the new hospital. She is employing 10s famine men to word for her.

There are thousands and thousands of these poor people about here. Originally they live in the interior but on account of drouth and floods they were forced down the river.

I wish we could employ more than one hundred. It seems so few when one sees so many hungry people around.

All the famine money sent here is being used to the best advantage. Lots of the money is used in repairing these poor people's lands, as buildings, dams, etc. They have these famine people to do the work. Then there are stations where they feed as many as 40,000 families per day. Where they can they let them work for their money because from experience they find it to be the best method.

These people live in little mud huts. When the clear days come I will take some views. Its the cloudy and rainy season now.

You read about being in tatters, well these poor people are certainly in tatters.

There are beggars everywhere about here. Its dangerous to give them any money or anything if you are alone on the road, because of the great numbers of beggars. One of the men missionaries threw some pennies to some beggars on the road and in one minute hundreds and hundreds crowded about him and tore most of his clothes off. They would probably have killed him if help had not come.

One of our school (Chinese) girls threw some of her old clothes to some of the beggars and in a short time thousands collected about the place demanding clothes. Everything given these people must be given the famine relief committee. They give at certain times of the day under a guard of soldiers.

One can't have any conception what this is like. Chinkiang alone has some 40,000 famine people. It seems a sin for me to eat three meals per day and be so comfartable. But there is such good work being done at this mission. Miss Carncross is at the head of a large school located in the missions. Miss Newby is the evangelist and has several thrifty day schools located right down among the mass of people. Dr. Mary Taft has her hospital building in the mission, and she is certainly busy. In all these places the bible is taught, and the one end is never lost view of—Christian China.

The medical works leads to the day school and this to our mission school.

I see how very necessary it is for me to get this language, so I am digging very hard at it.

Next Sunday at Sunday school I will begin teaching a class of Chinese girls that understand a little English. This will help me in Chinese and help them in their English.

This afternoon I visited one of Miss Newby's Sunday schools in the city. Just very poor children attend it. They were so interested in the lesson and the songs. The only requirements in these Sunday schools is to have head combs and faces washed. One little girl that especially interested me wa sa ttiile girl with bound feet. She had to take care of her infant [illegible]nda another small brother so she could attend.

These missionaries are kept so busy in their work they haven't time to evangelize these poor famine women and children. Chinkiang certainly needs more workers, and especially evangelists.

I am so glad I am to get the Quiz. It ought to be sent to me here, which will cost more.

Lots of love,

EMMA.

PLEA FOR ECONOMY

TELLS CONGRESS HOW GREAT SAVING CAN BE MADE.

MEXICO TO GET THE BENEFIT

De La Barra's Return Will Be an Aid to Political Situation—Big Mail Train Leaves Omaha.

Washington—President Taft Thursday sent to congress his second message of the present year on economy and efficiency in the government service. He recommended the passage of legislation designed to save more than $11,000,000 annually to the people of the United States. Probably his two most striking proposals were that the local government offices in the treasury, postoffice, justice, interior and commerce and labor departments be placed in the classified service and that the revenue cutter service be consolidated with the lighthouse service in the department of commerce and labor.

By the first change the president says congress could effect a saving of at least $10,000,000 annually and although in this message he gave no figures for the consolidation of the two services of the sea, in a previous message on the same subject early in the year, he predicted economies that would total about $1,000,000 yearly.

De La Barra Returns to Mexico.

Mexico City.—No other event holds as much of speculative interest in the Mexican political situation as the arrival here of Francisco Leon de la Barra after an absence of four and one-half months. All sorts of predictions as to his future part in national affairs are being made, according to the light which the maker views the local situation, but in the main there are expectations that Senor de la Barra's influence will be of benefit.

Carried 250 Tons of Mail.

Omaha.—What Superintendent Masten declares to be the biggest mail train in the history of the service was the one that pulled out of the Union station Tuesday afternoon for the west. It was Union Pacific No. 9, and was a three-days' shipment all in one. The train went in two sections, the first leaving at 2:46 and the second five minutes later. It was estimated that the seventeen mail cars made up the two sections carried 250 tons of mail.

STATE CAPITAL LINCOLN CHAT.

Has Been In Legislative Service.

Fourteen of the twenty-seven aspirants for congress in this state have at various times in their past political careers served in the legislature of the state. The list of those who are desirous of going to higher and better fields contains the following names of one-time state lawmakers. W. A. Selleck, C. M. Skiles, W. A. Prince and Jess Gandy of the 1911 session; P. A. Caldwell of the 1907 session; Ben Baker of 1905, H. H. Baldridge of 1903 session, W. F. Stoeker of 1909 session, W. J. Graham Taylor Says It's Awful.

Denouncing the Nebraska state penitentiary as one of the worst institutions of its kind he has ever visited, Graham Taylor of Chicago, a national figure in prison reform, in an address at Lincoln, censured the public for laxity in the conduct of the institution.

"Condemned men in solitary cells are fighting flies there by the millions," said the speaker. "Circulation of pure air is impossible and convicts are subjected to conditions which, if the same were true in a lodging house, it would be instantly closed by the board of health.

"Aggravated by what the convicts say was not a square deal under the administration of the former warden, is it a wonder that these prisoners grew desperate?" he asked. The speaker did not refer to the governor's attitude toward prison reform.

Maggi Will Not Be Deputy Warden.

The fact that E. G. Maggi of the state prison board of pardons started east and will visit several penitentiaries is supposed to have given rise to the rumor that he is going into training as deputy warden of the penitentiary. "There is not a word of truth in it," said Governor Aldrich. "I have never given Mr. Maggi a thought. He will not be appointed deputy warden by me, and if I should offer it to him he would not take it, because he is making more money on the board than the state can pay him as warden. I do not know who the deputy will be because I have not given the matter consideration."

Can't Keep the Dog.

Commandant Hilyard of the Milford Home for Soldiers does not believe in kicking the dog around, but he has issued an ultimatum to a member of the home that he must not keep a dog in his room on the second floor. The old soldier and his wife, who own the animal, both resent this ruling and make the counter-charge that Commandant Hilyard himself keeps a dog. The commandant says he does not keep his Eskimo dog in the house and the dog of the old soldier must go or the soldier and his wife must pack up and remove.

Players Awarded N's.

Seven Cornhusker basketball tossers were awarded the honor "N" at a meeting of the Nebraska athletic board at the state university Wednesday night. The following are the names of the players: Captain Frank, Carrier, Stryker, Hiltner, Haskell, Nagl and Underwood.

Henry Stehr, who was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced from Madison county to serve from one to ten years in the penitentiary, has appealed his case to the supreme court. Stehr's step-child, three and one-half years old, died from exposure in January, 1911. It was alleged that Stehr whipped the child with a strap bearing a buckle, and forced the boy to spend the night during a blizzard in the woodshed without fire or bed clothing.

The two hundred and fifty prisoners at the penitentiary who have not been at work since the trouble following the escape of three convicts a couple of weeks ago were given exercise in the prison yard Thursday morning.

The German-Russian Family society of Lincoln has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The object of the society, according to the articles, is to pay death benefits to members and to provide literary, social, musical and dramatic entertainment for members.

The library of the state university now contains more than 100,000 volumes, that number having been catalogued during vacation week, when new books were being received.

Chief Game Warden Henry V. Miller has received many letters from hunters asking him to extend the open season for duck hunting. The winter season kept the birds back and there is likely to be little or no hunting before April 5, when the open season closes. Mr. Miller announces that he has no power to extend the season, and that he must enforce the law as he finds it.

Nebraska fruit is to be especially protected by the United States weather bureau, according to an announcement by Observer G. A. Loveland of the Lincoln office. Jack Frost is to be watched carefully by the government bureau and is to be given no opportunity to catch the fruit grower unaware. Whenever a cold wave seems imminent the weather bureau will issue an emergency warning to all fruit growers, especially to those who are equipped with heaters for protecting their orchards. The task will be more frequent and liberal than ever before

THE LEVEE GOES OUT

HIGH WATER INUNDATES CITY OF CAIRO, ILLINOIS.

FOOD SUPPLY IS RUNNING LOW

Thousands of Acres of Farming Lands Covered by Water—River Still Rising—Timely Warnings Reduce Fatalities.

Cairo, Ill.—The Mobile & Ohio levee in the drainage district broke early Thursday morning, inundating Urbandale and Future City, manufacturing suburbs of this city.

The Mobile & Ohio levee is on the northwest end of Cairo, protecting what is known as the drainage district. The section is given over principally to truck gardens, though there are several factories in the vicinity. Between 150 and 200 houses are said to be in the path of the flood. No lives were lost.

Nearly every able bodied man in Cairo with 1,500 imported laborers are struggling along the seven miles of levee, fighting to prevent the flood engulfing the city.

Situation Still Menacing.

St. Louis.—Area affected by the flood, caused by an almost unprecedented volume of water in the Mississippi river, was not extended a great deal Wednesday, but the situation at the deluged centers continued to become more menacing. Two more levee breaks were reported near Chester, Ill., where 30,000 acres of farming land was inundated.

Twelve hours of sunshine and a slight check in the river's rise combined to give the general situation a more optimistic outlook in the opinion of government engineers, who said that if the stage at Memphis does not go over forty-five feet the government levees will hold.

The weather forecast at Memphis, however, urges managers of railroads entering that city from the west to warn inhabitants of those districts to move to higher ground immediately.

The number of lives lost has been brought to seven when the death of three railroad men near Fulton, Ky., was reported, and two more were drowned near Clarksville, Tenn., Wednesday morning. The latter drove off the road into overflow water of the Red river. That the loss of life has not been greater has been due to the warnings given lowland dwellers of the coming high water. Hickman is the worst sufferer. Two thousand inhabitants of the town have been augmented by the arrival of 1,000 refugees from Doren, Mo. The food supply at Hickman will last but three more days. No trains have been run in or out of the town for several days and foods and tents en route there still are held up by washouts. Unless aid comes soon many will go hungry.

At Columbus, Ky., which was the first town to be inundated, the situation is grave. Residents are leaving rapidly and there is much suffering in outlying districts. The damage in that vicinity is estimated at $100,000.

Damage at Memphis is conservatively estimated at $250,000. About 200 persons have been driven from their homes. The gas plant was put out of commission and this adds to the distress.

Reports from New Madrid, Mo., are meager. The town is flooded, but no loss of life is reported. The damage is not known.

The seriousness of the situation is not limited to river towns. Small tributaries have overflowed their banks and it is estimated that fully 300,000 acres of farm lands in Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Arkansas and Mississippi are flooded, and probably 9,000 more are untilled because of fear that the levees protecting them may break.

Valleys Are Miniature Seas.

Omaha, Neb.—The Platte and Elkhorn valleys are miniature seas and all eastern Nebraska is flooded. A special carload of boats was sent to Waterloo and Valley at the urgent request of Banker Waldron of the former city, who telephoned to this city saying that unless boats were sent at once, loss of life would result.

Many Families Homeless.

Albert Lea, Minn.—A large portion of the new dam which the city is building here at the lower end of Fountain lake, broke Saturday and about one-third of the city is under water.

No Loss of Life Known.

So far as is known, no lives have been lost in the five day flood, the worst in the history of the state. Many have suffered through exposure, however, and the property loss cannot yet be even estimated.

Marooned Party Rescued.

David City, Neb.—Two parties, including thirty men and several women, were rescued Saturday from the Burlington bridge and embankment south of Schuyler, where they had been marooned since Thursday. Twenty men and three women who were caught on the bridge when an embankment at the north and a span at the south were swept away, reached David City after having been exposed on the bridge, threatened by the raging water, for two days and one night.

Four Feet In Ten Hours.

Yutan, Neb.—The Platte river rose four feet in ten hours opposite Yutan. Beginning at 9 a. m. the level rose steadily, until at 7 p. m. it stood two and one-half feet above the high water mark of Friday night, when all records since 1881 were broken. At 10 p. m. the water had fallen six inches. During the night the water fell eighteen inches. It stood still for a few hours and then began to rise. The cause of the rise is not known here. It is impossible to get within two miles of the channel.

THE FLOOD SITUATION.

An aggregate loss of ten millions of dollars is the careful estimate placed on the flood damage in eastern Nebraska.

The Platte river counties are practically cut off from all communication as a result of washouts of wagon and railroad bridges.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of live stock has been swept away.

The streets of Springfield, Waterloo, Elkhorn and Valley were converted into raging torrents.

Farmers and their families were caught totally unprepared and forced to seek hasty refuge in haymows and trees. Assistance was impossible and much suffering from cold and exposure resulted.

Many Marooned In Trees.

Waterloo, Neb.—Marooned in trees by the rapidly flowing and ice filled waters of the Platte river, many families in Waterloo are experiencing the pangs of hunger, with but little hope for release from their novel prisons. A lake of water, formed by the juncture of the Platte and Elkhorn rivers just a short distance southeast of the city, ranging in depth from five to eight feet, and extending from bluff to bluff, a distance of eight miles, is sweeping away farm houses and causing thousands of dollars' loss.

Fire started in the lumber yard at Waterloo, and burning rapidly, had communicated with the grain elevator. Both buildings were completely destroyed, attempts to fight the fire being futile because of the swiftly flowing water. The fire started when water entered the lumber yard and reached the bin of unslaked lime.

In the main streets of Waterloo, the water is flowing five feet deep and the stores have suffered hundreds of dollars' loss. In the residence district families were caught totally unprepared by the rapidly rising waters of the Platte, and before household goods could be transferred to the second stories, the water had entered the homes. Caught like rats, the families were compelled to seek shelter on roofs, in trees and in second story buildings without food or clothing.

Appeal to Governor Hadley.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Governor Hadley has received a telegraphic appeal from the mayor of New Madrid and from Representative Conrad for state help for the flood sufferers in that county. The governor at once wired State Senator Oliver of Prescott county, colonel of the regiment, Missouri national guard, to go to the flood district and ascertain what aid the state can give. The national guard can furnish tents for those who have been driven from their homes and the governor says he will call out the national guard if it is evident the state troops can be of service to the people.

Food Supply Short at Hickman.

Hickman, Ky.—Hope of relief with resumption of train service is buoying up the people of Hickman. The food supply is running low.

One passenger train ventured within eight miles of Hickman, where the express matter, including 4,000 loaves of bread, was transferred to wagons and brought into the city. Only peaks of cottages in the submerged part of town are showing above water. Merchants moved what they could of their goods to the hilltop and opened improvised stores.

State Aid for Bridges.

Lincoln.—State Engineer Price is expecting many applications to come into his office after the present floods on the Platte, Elkhorn and Loup rivers, asking state aid in the construction of bridges over the streams at several points. The Cronin bill, passed at the last session of the state legislature, provides for the state shouldering half of the expenses of constructing new bridges or repairing old bridges over all streams over 175 feet in width.

Fremont. — Eight spans of the Northwestern Lincoln line bridge are out and many miles of Union Pacific track between Fremont and Columbus and Fremont and Valley will have to be replaced. Great activity prevails in local railroad yards, where material for repairs is being assembled.

Long Ways to Omaha.

Lincoln.—Burlington trains ran 200 miles Sunday in order to make the fifty-five mile trip between Omaha and Lincoln. The Oreapolis line was out of commission on account of washouts, and it was necessary to route through trains to Napier, Mo., across the river to Hulo, Neb., and thence to Lincoln on the Kansas City-Billings line. This resulted in delays of nearly five hours in each instance.

Two Hundred Homes Flooded.

Norfolk, Neb.—Boats are still being used in the business streets of Norfolk. There is a slight improvement in the situation, the Norfolk river having fallen four inches. Two hundred families have been driven from their houses by the water.

Quarter Million Loss.

Hammond, Ind.—An ice gorge forced a big gap in the Grant William dyke in the Kankakee river and a torrent of water swept through, inundating the country surrounding Shelby and Schneider. The financial loss will reach a quarter of a million dollars. The submerged land, consisting of many miles of the most valuable farm land in Indiana, joins the town of Schneider on the Chicago, Indiana & Southern railway. Reports from Schneider indicate the water is slowly flooding the town.

Tracks Are Under Water.

South Bend, Neb. — For the first time in the history of this section the Platte river water has overflowed the Burlington tracks. The tracks were under six inches of water at one time. The high level was reached at 11 p. m. and the water stood stationary until noon. It then receded, falling eighteen inches in the next five hours. Nearly 400 feet of the Rock Island track near here is washed out. The piles of the birdge have been damaged, but it is not believed that the injury to the main bridge is serious.

GAS TAR

Plenty of it at the Gas Plant at 15 cents a gallon in lots of 5 gallons or more. 20 cents a gallon for smaller lots. Gas tar will keep the mites from your hen house, make your posts last three times as long as they would without it, kill dandelions, keep the weeds from growing in unused spots, and a lot of other things. Every farmer should keep an open barrel of it. Put a dozen or so posts in and let them soak as long as you want, then throw them out and put in others. A good post set in your fence is worth 30c without tar and at least 90 cents if properly tarred, and the tar has cost you a trifle for each post. Here is a chance to save money and labor, by preserving your posts.

Farm work is coming on all in a heap this spring. Usually by this time the manure would be hauled out, the potatoes planted and lots of spring plowing done and oats sowed. Not so this year. It will all come on at once this spring. And our farmers are now hopping to it.

Chi-Namel Demonstration

AT THE CHI-NAMEL STORE

-ON-

APRIL 19-20

We have the sales agency for the line of all-purpose varnish, which is so far ahead of any varnish that has ever been sold in this community, that we particularly desire an early opportunity to show its good points to some member of every household in our business district.

What we want you to know about this wonderful varnish is something that cannot be told; but we can show you in a very few minutes that you get more for your money every time by using Chi-Namel Varnish for floors, woodwork, furniture, or anything about the house on which varnish is used.

This varnish is furnished in the natural color and also in a full variety of colors. It can be hammered and boiled and otherwise abused without showing any signs of abuse. Any amateur can apply it to large surfaces and get just as smooth a finish as a professional finisher—no laps, no brush marks, no blotches to make a patchy appearance.

You will thank us for this invitation after you have come to know all about it.

Other features we want to show you are the Chi-Namel Ready-to-Use Graining Process, by which you can cover all blemishes in your old floors and make them any color you wish, and also produce the grain of oak or other woods.

Old carpets can be made into rugs and a new hardwood border will take the place of the ugly flooring at a cost of but 2c per square foot.

We will gladly explain these features at our store if you will give us the opportunity.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

TEACHING A CALF TO DRINK

Did you ever teach a calf to drink? If you never did you have missed a lot of fun. We have been having a devilofatime teaching our spring crop of calves (one head) to absorb lacteral fluid from a pail instead of the receptacle made and provided by nature for such purpose. Ever since Adam and Eve got into trouble and were driven out of Eden, the human family has been hunting for trouble, and they sure found it when they invented the only original way of raising calves by hand. Well, we decided to raise the calf "by hand" so we hunted up an experienced hand at the business and asked him how to proceed. He said the best way was to put about one gallon of milk in a pail (more or less, according to the size of the calf and its appetite), get some one to hold the pail, take the calf by the ears and get a-straddle of its neck, then place your front finger in the calf's mouth and shove its head into the pail, and the calf would do the rest. And it did too. As the calf is a big, healthy one and is possessed of wonderful appetite our wife put a gallon or more of milk into a pail and went along to the barn to help feed the calf. Our wife is a great admirer of calves. We followed instructions, got the calf by the ears, straddled its neck, shoved one front finged down its throat, and rammed its head into the pail, and the calf commenced to absorb the milk, and from the way it twisted around and switched its tail it enjoyed the repast greatly. Everything proceeded admirably until the calf had soaked up about half the milk, when it very suddenly came to the conclusion that it wasn't getting exercise enough out of that method of feeding, and delivered a bunt with its head and nose that would have been a credit to any pugilist, humped up its back and started for somewhere, the Lord only knows where, we didn't and don't believe the calf did. Our wife got most of the remaining milk spilled over her clothes and was mad. Not being a very good rider the calf dumped us off into the dirt, and we got mad, picked up a board and tried to impress the fact upon the calf's mind that it didn't require strenuous exercise to digest milk, and even if it did, it should take the exercise just before or directly after, but not at meal time, then our wife got mad again, and said we ought to be ashamed of ourself for hurting a little calf and threatened to get a divorce. Oh, yes, you have missed a lot of fun if you never tried to raise a calf "by hand."—Comstock News.

Mrs. John Koupal came home from Burwell Saturday where she had been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Levenick for a few days.

Saturday morning Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ramsey, Sr., left again for Dampsey, Idaho, where they will spend the summer months. Mr. Ramsey's health is so much better there is the reason of their going.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. E. M. Covell of Omaha and Mrs. Anna Tappan of North Loup came up to Ord, going on to Burwell in the evening, where they were expecting to hold a W. C. T. U. meeting.

Rev. Windbigler of Aberdeen, S. D., was in Ord the latter part of last week. He was planning on accepting a call to the Christian church at this place if he suits the congregation and they suit him. He returned to his ohme Friday.

The following ladies were guests of the Ord Presbyterian ladies last Friday: Mesdames. Delashmutt, Doran, Craig, Cram, Bunnell, Mitchell, Irwin, Weber, Britt and McGrew. They were all Burwell ladies and went home on the freight in the evening.

Frank Stara and wife, who have lately returned from a ten weeks visit in Oklahoma, think they like Valley county the best. Frank says he was not well while down there although Geo. Eret, at whose home they were visiting, thinks it is the very place for his health. He said it seemed almost like home when they reached Lincoln, where the very first day they run across dozens of Ord people.

ESTABLISHED APRIL 6, 1882 | ORD, VALLEY COUNTY, NEBRASKA, THURSDAY, APRIL 18, 1912 | VOL. 31, NO. 3

VOTE AT NOON TOMORROW

Some Things You Should Look Out For at the Primary Election Tomorrow

Neb. State Historical Society

Tomorrow is primary election day. The polls open at noon and remain open till 9:00 p. m.

The ballot is a long one and unless you make up your mind how to vote before getting into the booth you will have trouble in figuring it out.

One thing that will bother you will be the proposed amendments. There are five of them. We think you ought to vote for the first and fourth and against the second, third and fifth. The most important one is the fourth, which will do away with elections one every other year, saving this county about $1500 a year in expenses and at the same time doing away with the termoil incident to half of the elections we now have. The agony would be all over with and we would have one year of peace.

Another thing that will bother you is the electors and delegates. If you are for Roosevelt make a mark opposite his name near the top of the ballot, and of course vote for Beveridge for vice-president. Then vote for the following:

Presidential Electors at large
W. J. Broatch
I. A. Reneaw
Presidential Electors—6th District
E. P. Clements
Delegates at Large
J. J. McCarthy
Don J. Love
Nathan Merriam
H. E. Sackett
Delegates—6th District
J. P. Gibbons
W. H. Reynolds

Never mind the alternates.

Vote for Governor Aldrich and any one else you please on the rest of the ticket and still be a Roosevelt man.

If you are for Taft vote for him at the top of the ballot and for the men named other than those given above.

In any case vote for Norris Brown, for United States Senator.

ALEXANDER LAVERTY HAS FIRE

A dispatch to the Lincoln papers from Ashland, under date of April 15, says that three big barns and a number of out-buildings together with stock, hay and grain, were destroyed by fire on the big stock ranch owned by Alexander Laverty four miles north of that city. The fire started at 7 o'elock Sunday evening and was not extinguished until late Monday morning. The loss is estimated at $15,000, only $3,00 of which is covered by insurance.

The conflagration could be seen for many miles up and down the Platte river valley and soon attracted a large crowd of farmers who were helpless spectators of the fire. No facilities existed on the ranch for fighting the flames and the Ashland fire department was unable to render any assistance.

The ranch is located on the Sioux City line of the Burlington, four miles north of Ashland. It is owned by Alexander Laverty, mayor of Ashland and for two terms state senator from the Saunders—Sarpy district. All of the buildings which were destroyed stood within a stone's throw of the railroad track. The residence was not harmed.

With the buildings seven head of horses, twenty hogs, several cows and calves, 125 chickens, several sets of harness, forty tons of hay, some alfalfa and small grains, farm implements and tools were consumed.

FIRM CHANGES HANDS

Our readers may observe in the columns of the Quiz this week the notice of dissolution of the partnership of the firm of Pearce & Doyle, which has just taken place in fact, and the announcement of the co-partnership of H. A. Pearce and L. D. Milliken, who now assume the business.

This change has been making for a few weeks since Mr. Milliken came, but not till now had it been completed so as to make public announcement. The reasons back of the change are that Mr. Doyle, who is not a merchant by experience, decided that he would prefer to hold his job with the railroad company, and that Mr. Milliken, who is an experienced young business man, wished to get into just such a line as this is.

The new member of the firm comes with the highest recommendations and will doubtless be a very strong asset to the firm.

You may look for business to be moving right along now in the house of Pearce & Milliken.

Dr. McGinnis returned to Grand Island by rail last Saturday. He had expected to take his car down this trip but was afraid of the weather and said he would wait until the next trip.

Mrs. W. H. McGrew, mother of Clayt McGrew, came down from Burwell Friday and visited her son and family for several days.

Mrs. Irvin Thelin returned to North Loup on the freight Monday evening.

Father Kroupa and Ches Chinn returned to Ord from Omaha last Saturday.

Geo. D. Olson who lives near Ord, came home Monday from a few days visit at Denver, Colo.

Mrs. E. W. Freeman was up from rth Loup for several days last week ing at the Transit home.

s. Harry Harris came home from y the latter part of the week, w she had been spending a few da th her parents.

Mrs. Fred Harris arrived last evening and will spend a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Dick Flynn and family. The Harris family are living at Burlingham, Kan.

Irvin Thelin came up from North Loup by the auto route last Saturday. His wife and baby came up by rail. They had not been up for some time owing to the bad weather.

Gertrude Horton came up from Scotia Friday and Saturday morning went on to her home at Greeley. She is teaching at the former place. While in Ord she was the guest of Eva Wright.

Mrs. Mudge of Hordsville, a sister of Mrs. John Beemes and who has been here on a two weeks visit, went to her home this morning. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Bennett, who will make her home there for a while.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Aldridge of Roswell, New Mexico, who have been visiting here and in Burwell left Monday for Ansley where they will continue their visit for a few days before going to their own home. Mr. Aldridge is a brother of Mrs. Ed. Munn.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Anderson have moved to Schuyler. The latter stopped in Grand Island for several days with her grandfather, who was very sick. Mrs. Axel Lindhartsen was also down there with the sick man. She came home the first of the week.

D. M. Rathbun had just finished the improvements on his town property and had gone back to Springdale when Bailey & Detweiler went after him and persuaded him to come back to town and oversee the digging of the basement of their new store building.

While in the west Mrs. E. M. Williams tells us that one day she received a call from Mrs. Ernest Mitchell. She says that for a number of years Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell had lived in Florence, Colo., but had left there and were going to seek a new location.

The house formerly owned by Fred Bell, but lately sold to John Wentworth, is being moved this week. The Bell family are still occupying it, and they have been living in the street. We understand that the Bell family will occupy the house known as the Stone boarding house.

Mrs. Mary Menzel has purchased from Chas. Schwaner the property east of the Unitarian church and now occupied by the Huff family. This necessitates the Huff family finding a new place to live in. Mrs. Menzel will not move until June as she expects to repair the house.

Sheriff Sutton took Anton Kasal to the asylum at Hastings last Saturday morning. He had been judged a fit subject for that place. For a long time he has been troubled with gatherings in his head which have effected his brain. He does not look like he was long for this world.

The Ord Chapter of the P. E. O. met on Monday night at the home of the president, Mrs. Haldeman. After the regular business meeting, the new member, Miss Shuman, was initiated into the order. The guests were then invited into the dining-room to partake of the banquet awaiting them. It is needless to say that all had a good time, and went home with a pleasant impression of the event.

A string of Mira Valley farmers coming to town yesterday with produce met one of their neighbors, who had been in town for a couple of days, going home with a load of wheat. The neighbor was none the better off for his stay in the city and, as he was accompanied by his son with another team, it is probable that the son had come to town to bring him home. Anyway in making a turn in the road where the Farmers' telephone posts come close to the road, the man drove over the brace, smashing it and the post and tying up the lines in a pretty mess. That in doing this the farmer came near upsetting is shown by the fact that some of his wheat was spilled out. Of course the farmers of the neighborhood were insensed over the accident to their line, as they had a right to be.

GOV. ALDRICH SPEAKS HERE

The G. A. R. boys sure had a great meeting Tuesday night.

They had planned a meeting of the sort, expecting to charge a small admission fee, but the governor would not speak under those conditions, so they concluded to go ahead anyway and give the public the benefit of the event.

Large plans were made and a fine program prepared and the day was set and the public invited.

The governor came in on the B. & M. at about 6:30 and there was a great gathering of people there to greet him. This is one of the commendable things about Ord folks. When men of prominence come to town they are willing to show them proper respect and let them know that this is no sleepy burg. The band was also out and saluted him with music.

Several autos were in waiting and the governor was taken in one of them at the head of the procession, being accompanied by the mayor and theriff and one or two other local men.

The school children were there in large numbers and lined the road from the depot in double ranks, for a considerable way down the street.

The distinguished visitor was taken a little way around the city, and finally dropped at Hotel Ord, where the band played a few more fine selections in his honor.

The meeting was held at the Opera House, which was packed to the doors with a very fine audience of our people.

As curtain risers a fine musical and reading program was given, all of the best of our local talent.

The governor was then introduced and delivered a patriotic and practical speech, which was listened to with great attention by the housefull of folks.

The governor gave a bit of recent political history of Nebraska, and pointed out just where, in his opinion the trend was right and where it was wrong.

Naturally this brought up the recent disasters in the penitentiary, which he handled in an excellent and convincing manner.

He showed how progressive Nebraska is in most things—in educational and legislative things—but that we were for all that long way behind in the management of our penal and remedial institutions.

He called attention to the fact that our penitentiary has been built for 30 or 40 years, and nothing of modern improvement made since that time. That we pay such pitiably small wages that it is impossible to get strong, able bodied guards. That the guns in use are the same that Governor Thayer had bought many years ago, and when tested since the recent disasters, only three of them would shoot.

He said that many blamed him for this, when in fact he had no authority to remedy the evils of this sort, that being wholly the work of the legislature. Furthermore no one could have had any inkling of the impending outbreak. Things were there just as they had been for three decades. Nothing was apparent to indicate the plot of the desperate characters, and no one could have had any inkling of it.

There was no general riot as is proved by the fact that four feeble unarmed guards put all the prisoners back into their cells without difficulty, after the four desperate men had shot their way to freedom.

He said that after the terrible tragedy which resulted in the death of several lives, he took things into his own hands, exceeding his authority, but believed he should do so, by raising the pay of the guards to such a figure that good, clean, temperate men could be had for the places, and firing all the cripples that were there when the disaster came.

Governor Aldrich made a strong point against the system of putting old desperate characters in along with the young men who were there for a first offense. The system compelled cruelty for the latter and made it practically impossible for these young men to come out anything but worse than when they went in. To remedy this evil he recommends in intermediate prison, wherein all young criminals and those in for a first offense should be placed, and there such liberties and help surrounded them that might make for their betterment. This would make it possible to deal with the hardened criminals for whom there is no redemption according to their merits and the necessities of each individual case.

The governor was much pleased with the reception he received at Ord. He said to the writer in the morning that he had come expecting to make a speech principally to the old soldiers, but when he saw that great audience composed of men, women and children, he decided to make them a patriotic speech off hand covering the patriotic subjects that would do the hearers most good.

Commander A. W. Taylor was in charge, and the members of the local post occupied seats on the rostrum back of the speaker.

There is no question that the governor made a favorable impression upon the minds of our people in this his first visit to Ord.

He returned to Lincoln Wednesday morning.

A letter from P. T. Hughes, who moved to Illinois last fall, tells us that the wheat in that section is looking very poor, and that much of it will be replanted to oats or corn. He has changed his address to 861 Edgehill Road, Jacksonville, Ill.

The fire alarm came near being turned in at half past nine last Monday evening. A quantity of paper caught fire in the back end of Johnsons Drug Store and for a few minutes there was considerable excitement in those parts. Somebody called to central to turn in the fire alarm. They did their best but could find nobody in the business places near the fire bell. While they were still trying the fire was extinguished by people who were at the store.

The removal of the old Fred Bell residence takes away one of the land marks of the city. This was one of the early buildings of the city. The upright was first built of cedar logs. When Mr. Robbins bought the place he covered the logs with boards and put on porches and other improvements. Later he built the east part. While the Robbinses lived there it was about as common of access as a wayside inn. Everybody called and most of them didn't knock. Of late years it had fallen into decay and now that it is gone no one will have many regrets.

That was a mean trick that Will Shunkwiler played on his employers, the electric light folks. Without giving any warning William pulled out of town last Friday. Neighbors had noticed the removal of the chicken house and other property, but no suspicions were aroused that they were planning to skip the town. Earlier in the week the family left, claiming to go to St. Paul on a visit. Friday William himself went leaving no notice of his going. At St. Paul the senior Knutsen saw him and asked about his going and he said he was going right back on the passenger. Of this Mr. Lew Knutsen knew nothing and it was not till the lights ought to have gone on that he discovered that his electrician had "flew the coop." It so happened that Victor Conklin of Omaha was here on a visit with his sister, the school teacher, and he was prevailed upon to take the place. He is an experienced man and is doubtless a reliable one. The occasion of this cowardly departure of Mr. Shunkwiler was a desire to elude his numerous creditors.

WHAT THE PARTY "OWES TO TAFT"

Not a few excellent gentlemen in the President's following confess themselves dubious about the result of the election next fall if he should be nominated, but they say the Republicans "owe it to Taft" to put him at the head of their ticket. Then the ticket can go down if it must, in November, and the party debt will be paid.

Putting aside, for the present, the vital question whether the President has rendered his party any such service as this argument implies, avoiding the inquiry whether he has not hurt its prospects and sapped its strength enormously, and taking the ground of his own admirers, what is it which they wish to give him? Is it a real reward for the work they credit him with doing, or it only an empty shell, something worse than nothing, in fact?

What possible benefit could come to Mr. Taft from a nomination followed by a losing campaign and defeat at the polls? What could that bring him except humiliation? Would it not fix his place in history as a President who brought his party down in one term from overwhelming power to weakness and loss of authority?

Then the adverse judgment passed upon him would be that of the country, not of a party. Then he could in no way escape the consequences of defeat. It would be impossible to find comfort in the claim which his admirers can make if he is refused a nomination at Chicago, that men active in politics misjudged him but the people would have approved his record and called for four years more of his services if they had been given an opportunity to do so.

Of all illogical positions taken in politics this year the least reasonable is that of the Taft Republicans who say that he ought to be renominated, even though sure to be beaten at the polls next fall. The Republican party owes no man any such sacrifice of its own interests and opportunities for usefulness. And no such nomination leading to defeat and humiliation, could pay a real debt for good service to the party or the country.—Cleveland Leader.

MURDERED IN OLD MEXICO

Full Particulars of the Murder of a Former Valley County Man By Mexicans

Last week this paper made brief mention of the murder in Mexico of William Waite, but at that time no particulars could be had. Now a fuller account comes to us from a letter writen by a sister-in-law of the dead man, Mrs. Wilber Waite, of Loup City, daughter of Alonzo Sutton.

The letter goes so fully into the details, and is written so clearly and intelligently that we asked Mr. Sutton for the letter and he kindly turned it over to us. It is dated at Loup City on Monday, April 15th, and the part relating to the sad affair is as follows:

"We received the telegram Saturday about one o'clock from Mr. Coate that Will was killed Thursday night, April 4th, but he knew nothing of the details but was starting for there. Saturday night we received a letter written just after the message was sent saying that he had telegraphed the American consul at Salina Cruz and had also written him. Today we received a second letter giving the particulars.

"Will had been to Mr. True's (the friend who came to the states with him last summer) that day (Thursday, April 4th). Reached home in the afternoon and the man who works for him was about the place with him until dark, when he went home and to bed as it grows dark quickly down there. His house is about two blocks from Will's. Next morning about seven o'clock the little girl went up to wash up the dishes and came back and reported that he wasn't there. They sent her again after a while and she came back with the news that there hadn't been any fire in the stove, so her father was alarmed and went and called and called, and finally searched and found his body about twenty steps from the house with his hands tied in front of him and a knife wound in the left side. His pockets were turned inside out, his watch gone and his money box in the house emptied. Mr. Coate didn't get there until nine o'clock Friday night and they were holding an inquest then. Mr. True and a Mr. Tulle were there and a magistrate, clerk and doctor from San Juan. The burial was at San Juan, but Mr. Coate did not go as he had almost taken his life in his hands to go there and his wife would be so uneasy about him. Until recently he says it has been quiet in those parts but now the country is full of bandits. His theory is that the murder was done by men from Tisawan, the village where Will hires his help. It was a fiesta (holiday with Catholics) that day and he thinks three fellows have stolen out in the afternoon and hidden until night as they found footprints of three men on the sands by the creek and the crushed bank where they had evidently been concealing themselves. The doors of the house were all open and a lamp and book were on the table where he had been reading. He had not yet retired.

"Mr. Coate advised the arrest of three fellows but he says the trouble with Mexico today is the lack of the officials fulfilling their duty. He and Will were the oldest settlers down there and very warm friends. Said he was there the Friday before and urged Will to come over to their place and stay as it wasn't safe for him to be there alone, but he replied that he didn't feel uneasy yet. Wilber had written urging him to get out and received the answer to his letter the same day we heard of his death. Said he was planning to leave soon for Guatemaula but first wanted to get all the little corners grassed so when it was safe to come back he'd be ready to make a little more of the necessary evil.

"President Taft had told Americans to make an inventory of their effects when they had to leave and leave it with the nearest consul and they'd not lose anything. I presume he was waiting for word to go when the U. S. intervened. Mr. Coate had taken the inventory with him the week before to mail with his."

The dead man lived for many years on Hayes Creek, in Valley county, and later moved to Loup City. He left there a few years ago and was in business in Chicago, finally going to Old Mexico, where he has accumulated a considerable wealth. He was a bachelor. The news of his terrible taking off is a great sadness to many friends in this section.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Archie Bradt and children got started on their trip to the new home in South Dakota. Nellie left the same morning as she has a farm up that way also.

Mrs. Hattie Clason came down from Burwell yesterday bringing her little three year old son to Dr. Miller, who performed an operation on his nose. The little fellow was able to go home again in the evening.

C. L. and J. R. Barnhart came up from North Loup Tuesday, returning yesterday.

Geo. Duckly, the father of Mrs. John Sershen, returned Tuesday to his home in Colorado.

Dagmar Enevoldsen came up from North Loup Saturday and was a guest at the Otto Johnson home.

Enid Conklyn and Katherine Shapper, two of our Ord school teachers, were spending Saturday in St. Paul.

Olga Malottke, who has been sewing in Ord for some time, went down to her home at North Loup yesterday to spend the day.

J. D. Tedro was down town a-foot last Saturday for the first time for many moons. He is getting considerable better, which is good news to his many friends.

The foundation is laid for Frank Stewart's new pump and windmill house. If anyone needs and deserves a good place for business it is hard-working Frank Stewart.

The first of the week Mrs. Shoemaker was entertaining her friend, Mrs. Nellie Dolan and son of Columbus. They went home Tuesday morning and Mrs. Shoemaker accompanied them as far as Grand Island.

A letter from Wercel Drobny, who has been living near Holly, Colo., for several years, tells us that he was to move last week to Chico, California. This is a surprise to us, and we are wondering if he has sold out in Colorado.

Last Monday the John Collison family moved from the Frank Howard house to their own new home northeast of the Methodist church. The Frank Howard family will move down from Burwell and occupy their own home.

Harry Bartley lost a valuable colt in a strange way last Monday. The animal attempted to jump the picket fence. It failed to clear the barricade and one of the pointed boards pierced its lungs in such a manner as to cause a rupture. It died in about an hour.

The machine for mixing cement was put on the Keown job Monday, which does the stunt in fine shape. It is simple and keeps everybody on the job humping. There is no chance for a man to loaf around waiting for someone else to make a motion. Will Moses also has one of these machines.

Art Hall and Pat Crowe were in Burwell last week, according to the Tribune, evidently with their eyes on the prospect for getting a saloon license. Burwell is welcome to them Voting saloon licenses means an invitation to just such men to come to town, and voting licenses out is a bid for them to go.

Wilmore Gray stopped us long enough Monday last to remark speaking of the farmers who have been harrowing the public roads after rains, that J. A. Ollis, Jr., has been doing that on the roads of his vicinity, and that the good effects are very apparent. Who else has been doing this much for the public good?

The new church is slowly climbing toward heaven. But there is still only a small force at work. The Fourth of July will be here pretty soon, but the building will be a long way from completion when that glad day comes. The winter, which was such that no work could be done in the buildng line, is responsible for the belated condition of the building.

W. J. Hather tells us that in setting some posts to an unusual depth of the Springdale 80 he found frost down at about the 4 foot level. Above that the ground was wet and all thawed out, but at the frozen point the ground was as dry as a bone. This is a peculiar circumstances, for usually the frost comes upward as the thawing process goes on at the surface.

Last week Wednesday at the home of the bride's mother in Polk, occurred the wedding of Lloyd VanWie and Emma Carpenter. After the ceremony and the wedding dinner the happy couple left for Ord. They were accompanied by Mrs. Ward VanWie and Norris, mother and brother of the groom, who had gone down to attend the wedding. They reached Ord Saturday and the bride and groom went out to the Ward VanWie farm in Springdale where everything had been prepared for the bride's coming, and where Ward had been keeping the fire going for three days waiting for their return. We know but little of the bride but if appearance goes for anything she will certainly be a worthy helpmeet and we bid her welcome to our midst. Lloyd has lived among us all his life and we have nothing but words of praise for him.

ENJOYING THE SHORT COURSE

Ord's Ninth Graders and the Students From the Country Schools Are Having Big Time

Monday the boys and girls from the country came rolling into the city and all went at once to the office of County Superintendent Shuman for registration, so as to be in line for the benefits of the Junior Short Course, which is being pulled off at the Ord high school this week.

Miss Shuman had all things well organized for the event and things have moved along finely all the week. The program, as he had it printed in the Quiz last week, has been carried out pretty faithfully.

Instructors Prof. H. J. Gramlich and the Misses Gertrude Rowan and Mabel Daniels of the domestic science department of the state university were promptly on hand and have been here all the week.

They are capital hands at their work and are making it very interesting and instructive for the pupils.

About 75 boys and about 50 girls are registered and everyone of them will declare that they are having a fine time and learning things that they want to know.

The boys are being instructed in stock judging and other farm things of practical use and the girls in domestic science and sewing, and even the older women, who are there, declare that they are learning things that they did not know in these arts.

The lecture on domestic science, by Miss Rowan, the reading by Miss Daniels, and the lecture on European agriculture by Prof. Gramlich last night were all fine.

There is a good program for tonight and tomorrow, as published in the Quiz last week. In addition to the items published there will be the following things: Mrs. Kullbom will sing tonight and the High School Glee Club will sing.

Tomorrow morning at 9:30 the Eighth Grade Orchestra will give a musical exhibition, and these little folks are doing fine.

Tomorrow night the H. S. Glee Club will sing again.

For the rest of the program see the Quiz of last week.

If you have not been attending these programs, you better go.

ORD MAN BUYS HOTEL

On Monday of this week, the St. Elmo again changed hands, W. F. Mason selling the same to Ernie Milburn, who comes over from Ord to go into the hotel business here. In an interview with Mr. Milburn, he states that it is his intention to build up, remodel and renovate the house from foundation to garret, putting on a new roof, placing in larger and up-to-date windows, lay new floors, replaster, paint inside and out, put in lavatories, steam heat, and do all necessary to make the St. Elmo what it should be for a town of Loup City's pretensions, up-to-date in every particular. This will be good news to our people, as a first-class hotel is one of the really needful things for the city. Mr. Milburn has had much experience in the hotel business and we opine will make the St. Elmo to blossom out in pretensious appearance and comfortable interior, with the cuisine of the very best. The people of our city have been promised new hotels, and the remodeling of the present hotel, so often and failed as often, that it has to a more or less extent began to think the old status of things in hotel life might go on for ever, and now that Mr. Milburn has taken possession, and with the aggressiveness he is known to have, interest has again been sharpened and belief is being formed that all we have sought, wished and prayed for may come to pass.—Loup City Northwestern.

Voters tomorrow will be called upon to name the various party tickets. Among this list of candidates will be the office of state senator.. There is no opposition to J. A. Ollis for the democratic nomination. But the republicans have two names on the primary ballot from which to choose. These are W. S. Mattley of Ansley and A. S. Moon of Taylor. Of course Valley county ought to give its vote solidly for Mattley. He is a former citizen of this valley, living here about all his life. He is also a thoroughly reliable man and progressive in his ideas. Let's give Mattley a good vote tomorrow.

Our friends, the enemy, are saying that the Quiz has changed fronts in its preference for republican nomination for president. This is not so. We say now, as we have said all along, that we would like to see Taft president again, that he has made a good president, done nothing to arouse the ire of the people and would be a safe man at the head of the government for another term. But we do not believe there would be any reasonable certainty of electing him if nominated. For that reason we prefer the nomination of Roosevelt, both because the latter meets our ideals better than Taft and would be more likely to be elected. We believe that Taft stands the best show of being nominated, and have said so, but have not abandoned Roosevelt. It is reasonable and possible to favor one without taking a meatax to the other.

GREATEST MARINE DISASTER

The loss of the Titanic, the greatest of modern passenger steamers on its first trip, Monday morning, seems to have proved to be the greatest of marine disasters in all history of peaceful times. The ship was the finest boat afloat, and was equipped with all the modern improvements and inventions known to ship building. While off the coast of New Foundland it struck an iceberg, and thereby received its death blow.

The wireless operator at once went to sending frantic messages to all the world around asking for help. These messages kept up for a while and then were stopped altogether, no doubt from the sinking or hopeless condition of the ship.

The boat kept afloat for about four hours, its last messages stating that it was making for shore under its own steam, but when the ships coming to its rescue reached the scene at daylight the ship was gone. Its boats, however, were all found and the eight hundred odd passengers, mostly women and children, were saved. No sign otherwise could be seen of the great ship. It must have gone down with more than 1200 souls into two miles of ocean debths.

The interest in the County Sunday School Convention indicates that there will be a large proportion of the schools represented. But to get the best results, every school however remote, should have one or more delegates present. Remember that this is the time when you can secure expert help in the solution of many problems. The State Workers assigned to this Convention, Miss Margaret E. Brown, Elememtary Superintendent, will be prepared to render all the assistance desired. All pastors, superintendents, teachers and others officially connected with the Sunday school, who are interested in knowing more about the Twentieth Century Sunday Schoool, Graded Lessons, Organized Class Work, The 'Teen' Age, and many other phases of the work, should plan to be present. Plenty of time will be given to ask questions of the state worker. Do not forget the time, April 29th and 30th, nor the place, Elyria.

Marriage licenses were issued the 15th to Adolph Stobbe and Clara J. Heyden, and to John William Dobberstein and Emilie Bremer. We are not informed yet as to the date of the marriage.

"Are you for genuine popular government or for government 'of the people, by the bosses, for the interests?'

"Are you for the nomination of a president by the people as in Illinois, or by the bosses as in New York, or by theft as in Kentucky?

"Do you believe that human rights are superior to property rights?

"Ask yourself these questions, and you will know whether or not you will stand with Theodore Roosevelt; and if you do stand with him, vote for him next Friday at the primaries."

Tuesday an argument as to the merits of the Ford automobile, or some other insufficient reason, induced Charlie Siler to make an unprovoked assault upon George Newbecker. He struck George in the face and considerably disfigured that placid countenance. George is not the kind of a citizen to fight, so he went to the county judge and asked for the arrest of Mr. Siler. The latter came in and owned up that he had done the deed and expressed himself as willing to take his medicine. The judge thought that $12 would do the thing, including the trimmings, and the sum was paid and the men walked out peaceably.

E. W. BLACK COMING

We are pleased to announce to the people of Ord and vicinity that that very remarkable man, E. W. Black of North Loup, will give an entertainment at the Methodist church next week Wednesday evening. Mr. Black has never polished himself by "rubbing agin a college" but he has become a scientist of no small note. His writings have repeatedly found place in scientific papers of the highest class. In addition to that he is something of an artist and you know, if you know him at all, that he is droll and entertaining in all he does. He will give an illustrated lecture, part of it humorous and of a lighter nature and part of it dealing with historical, geological, and other fields of research, which common folks do not know much about. We are sure the lecture will be an enjoyable and profitable one.

He comes under the auspices of the Methodist Ladies and they invite you to come. Admission only 25 cents.

The Journal's linotype operator, George Loring, jumped the town last week without paying his board bill. In the interest of good government Mr. Seger, the one most concerned, went to Grand Island and induced the recreant printer to come back and go to work. George had not been at the machine very long till his conduct was such that he was summarily fired by Mr. Davis. Then he was pulled and sent to jail for ten days, having obtained the credit at the Seger shop by claiming that he had money coming to him from Mr. Davis. But this was bad for the Journal shop, as they were depending on him to operate the machine, so when Governor Aldrich was in town Davis asked that the man be turned loose to work and the governor told the authorities to let him go if he would work and if Davis would turn the money earned over to the boarding boss. This arrangement worked and so far all is going well. George is earning the money and Davis is holding it for the man who furnished the printer with good board.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

This is pretty early for lightning and this cold weather would seem to argue against and danger of that kind. But last Friday a son of Mr. Jorgensen, living a few miles northwest of North Loup, was struck by lightning while discing in the field. The mother saw the stroke hit her son and declares that he was thrown several feet in the air by the force of it. The team ran away and came to the house but the farmer let them go and ran to the relief of his son. The young man was apparently dead, but doctors were called and they found him still living. Not till Saturday morning did he regain consciousness. His clothes were burned and so was the flesh on his chest and back, showing that he had come pretty close to the fluid. We understand that one of the North Loup doctors thinks the young man will not live, but the other is more hopeful.

PLANT TREES

Governor Aldrich has issued the folloring Arbor day proclamation:

"The returnof spring reminds us that a holiday of special interest to Nebraska is approaching and citizens of the state should see to it that the day should be fittingly observed.

"April 22nd has been designated by law as Arbor day, and the fact that the founder was a distinguished citizen of this state gives the occasion added significance.

"Therefore, I, Chester H. Aldrich, governor of the state of Nebraska, in accordance with the usual suctom and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, do hereby proclaim that April 22 be observed throughout the state as Arbor day. and I suggest that it should be made an occasion of special observance in all schools and that the people of the state generally engage in the planting of trees, shrubs and vines and such other undertakings as shall be fitting with teh general character of the occasion."

NEW ARCADIA BRIDGE

The temporary bridge upon which work was begun last Friday, was being crossed with wagon and team at about 4 o'clock Tuesday. This is record time and about six days earlier than the contractor himself expected.

The bridge however is of all wood structure, being built for temporary use only. It is a good strong one and is a credit to local authorities, especially Mr. Pickett, the contractor, who within six days designing the pile-driver and with competent help built the bridge.

Arcadia is safe for a bridge now until the ice season next year in case we are unable to get a bridge before, but it is hoped we will have a new bridge before that time.—Arcadia Champion.

FACKLER, the Grocer

We told you last week that paper bag cooking had come to stay. Why? Because food cooked in these bags is improved in flavor, all the food values, natural juice and savoriness is retained. It takes less time to cook the food, saves 20 per cent in fuel bill. It saves washing greasy pans and kettles, there are no odors of cooking in the house. You save on the meat bill, three pounds of roast comes out three pounds and not two pounds and some ounces, as when cooked in the old way. All good reasons for using paper bags in cooking.

Use Crisco and be rid of offensive grease odors, and have better and more easily digestible foods.

Fancy large home grown potatoes $2.00 per bushel.

GAS TAR

Plenty of it at the Gas Plant at 15 cents a gallon in lots of 5 gallons or more. 20 cents a gallon for smaller lots. Gas tar will keep the mites from your hen house, make your posts last three times as long as they would without it, kill dandelions, keep the weeds from growing in unused spots, and a lot of other things. Every farmer should keep an open barrel of it. Put a dozen or so posts in and let them soak as long as you want, then throw them out and put in others. A good post set in your fence is worth 30c without tar and at least 90 cents if properly tarred, and the tar has cost you a trifle for each post. Here is a chance to save money and labor, by preserving your posts.

The announcement has been made from Burlington headquarters that the line from Thermopolis, Wyo., and Kearney, Neb., will be built, work commencing at once, and will be completed in two yars. Robert Wallace of Amherst, was acquitted by a vote of four to three by the supreme court on the charge of hog stealing. The lower courts found him guilty, but the higher court held that the hog stealing statute and the indetermintie law was valid, and did not believe the hogs were taken by Wallace with the intention of stealing.

Harrison Merrill of Ansley, aged 74 years, while fishing in Muddy Creek, got into a soft spring nearly waist deep and did not have strength to get one. He will recover.

Burwell never fails to vote for saloon licenses, but the town is dry now, sure enough for a few days. This is due to a discrepancy in the dates of the expired licenses and the new law fixing May 1st as the municipal year. Rather than pay for another license for the 10 days the saloons preferred to close up and see what would come of a few days of sobriety.

The Chautauqua System idea is a plan of extending the Chautauqua so that it may be enjoyed by the great masses of people. It was originated by Mr. Chas. F. Horner, Manager of the Redpath-Horner Chautauquas, and has been carried out most successfully by him.

The Chautauqua institution was founded about forty years ago by Bishop Vincent of the Methodist church, at Chautauqua Lake, New York. The Chautauqua at this place is known as the "Mother" Chautauqua.

Buy a Gasoline Engine You Can Depend Upon

TWO engines may look equally good, may even work equally well for a time. In the end one proves satisfactory, the other becomes a nuisance. Why?

Thorough testing takes time and costs money. It means careful adjustment under trying conditions. It is an expensive process, but a necessary one if the finished engine is to be dependable.

I H C Gasoline Engines Are Thoroughly Tested

No engine leaves the factory until it has proved itself thoroughly dependable. That is reason enough for buying an I H C engine. It is a good buy because it is dependable—it is dependable because it is thoroughly tested. If you want engine satisfaction for years to come go to the local dealer and buy an I H C gasoline engine. It is the safe way and by far the cheapest in the long run.

INJUNCTION MADE PERMANENT

While in Ord last week holding court for a few hours Judge Hanna handed down two decisions of some public interest. One was the Haskell-Cornell injunction case. This was a case where Haskell enjoined the Cornells from completing and maintaining their show window out in the street. The temporary injunction had been granted by the county court and the trial proper was had in district court last fall. Soon after hearing the case Judge Hanna was called to California and it was not till last week that he was able to come to Ord to hand in his decision. He held that Haskell, being specially damaged by the window, had a right to commence the action for injunction. Claude A. Davis was attorney for the plaintiff.

The judge also handed down a decision denying the application for a new trial in the Bard case.

Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McMullen and Dr. and Mrs. Smith of Burwell came in on the Union Pacific from an eight weeks visit to the far west. They of course spent considerable time with Mr. and Mrs. D. A. McCord. They met a number of former Ord people including Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Coffin, Mrs. Ed. Coffin and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Stover. The latter will be back to Ord in a few days. On their return trip the party stopped at Columbus and Schuyler visiting with relatives. Mrs. McMullen said that while at Cheyenne there was a fierce snow storm and that sheep were dying by the hundreds, owing to the fact that the storm had struck them shortly after they had been shorn.

Now that farmers are pretty well settled for the year the Independent Telephone Company is issuing a new directory, of which they stand in great need. The book has been linotyped at the Quiz office this week and will be out as soon as the advertisements are received.

Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Barnes came up to Ord, the former from the soldiers home in Grand Island and the latter from Benson near Omaha. They could not stay longer than Monday.

ORD LADY ON THE TITANIC

There may have been several former Ord folks on the ill-fated Titanic, but we know now of one at least. This was Miss Marie Young, daughter of Mrs. S. A. Young, formerly a milliner in Ord. When Roosevelt was in the White House Miss Young was a member of the family as tutor to the children, and since has been a prominent society lady of Washington. The following from the United Press indicates the name of Miss Young, and will be of special interest to our readers:

New York, April 19.—"Archie" Butt died a hero's death in the sinking of the Titanic. Knee deep in the icy wash that swept over the bridge of the Titanic, the last view survivors caught of President Taft's aide was his soldierly figure erect beside a fellow soldier—Col. John Jacob Astor.

"The rescued on the Carpathia said that Major Butt, Colonel Astor and Howard Case were the conspicuous heroes of the world's greatest sea disaster. It was Major Butt who lined up the panic stricken women, met the frenzy of despair with the cool, calm judgment of the soldier, and was swept into the valley of the shadow of death, unafraid. His last good-bye was smilingly to Marie Young, formerly a music teacher to the Roosevelt children. Miss Young had frequently met Major Butt at the White House. She was on the last boat to leave the stricken Titanic.

"'Major Butt escorted me to a seat in the boat,' said Miss Young. 'He helped me find a space, and helped me arrange my clothing. He stood erect and smiled and said, 'Good-bye.' Then he stepped back on the deck, already awash. As we rowed away, I looked back and the last I saw of him he was smiling and waving his hands to me.'"

Supervisor Carson and County Attorney Davis went to Greeley Monday to confer with the Greeley county board as to their helping us build the North Loup bridge. Only two of the three county commissioners of that county were present but it was agreed that they would take the subject up with the full board and doubtless would pay one-fourth the cost of the bridge. They claimed that the bridge was in reality a damage to them, on account of its drawing trade from their territory to North Loup, but in view of the way the law reads, they feel like offering to settle, if they can, on this basis. It is not sure that our board will accept this settlement, but it will be brought up to our board when the Greeley folks decide on just what they will do and put it in due form.

Sundays have been rather unfavorable for Rev. Rush in his work on the Ord circuit. If we have any bad days it is pretty sure to include Sundays. On account of the storms he has missed a number of days services, so he made an attempt Sunday to have preaching at Vinton, driving out there through the rain, but the weather was so bad there were not enough there for services, so the Sunday school lesson was studied and the minister returned.

Last Saturday A. R. Fox returned from a trip to Omaha with a shipment of steers. He got an even 10 cents for his steers, and would have got 15 cents more or even better than that had he got to town in the morning. His car was not received till after noon and so had a poor chance but he got a good price just the same. He bought fifty young cattle while on the market, which were received Friday at his place near Olean.

R. Harvey of Lincoln, the old-time surveyor who surveyed in this section and much other of the early government domain, came to town Monday to locate the exact line of the Ord State Bank lot on the west side of the square so that, when the new building goes up they will know that they are on their own premises. He did the stunt Tuesday.

W. H. Braden came home Thursday evening from Creston, Iowa, where he had been for a few days on business matters. He says that they were enjoying a real blizzard there when he left.

G. W. Welsh of Horace was in Ord the latter part of the week. He was visiting his son Charley. Monday he went to Lincoln where he said he would stay this summer.

Mrs. S. L. Fisher, a sister of Dick Nelson, and her son Floyd, came up from Greeley Monday returning to their home in North Loup Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Ulm came down from Burwell Saturday morning and went out to Mira Valley to visit their daughter, Mrs. Ben Madison.

James Wisda, Sr., went to Lexington Friday morning. He expected to visit in several other places before coming back to Ord.

Mary Davis went home to North Loup Monday after spending a few days with her brother, H. M. Davis, and family.

Ella Bradt returned to Riverdale Tuesday morning and will stay for a while with her sister, Mrs. Jess Baird.

Isabel, Alice and Edmund Brown returned to North Loup Saturday. They had been up attending the agricultural and domestic science session and visiting their friend, Thelma Crow.

The Christian ladies are well pleased with the outcome of their dinner and bazaar last Friday afternoon. Their chicken pie gave out or they could have served a great many more. They took in more than $100.

Owing to the scarcity of corn the elevators have had to ship in shelled corn. The Barstow elevator had a car come in Friday. We counted eight wagons waiting for their turn to get some of it. The corn was selled at 80 cents a bushel.

Geo. Dennis has purchased land in Florida and expects to move down there. He will not give up the mail route however until October and will leave for the sunny south about the 1st of November. His daughter, Mrs. J. O'Conner will accompany him.

Mr. and Mrs. Dalrymple came up Tuesday evening from the Soldiers' Home in Grand Island. They had a thirty days furlough and were going up to Burwell to spend it with the lady's children. People around Ord will best remember Mrs. Dalrymple as Mrs. Vesper who lived here several years ago.

M. B. Goodenow returned from his visit to Tennessee yesterday noon. He has been wandering around in those parts and in Iowa for several weeks. The purpose of his visit to Tennessee was to visit his old battle fields of that section and to attend a reunion of the Hornet Brigade, which was held there. A pretty good attendance was there and a very enjoyable time had by these old soldiers.

Mrs. Edna Norton was able to come to Ord yesterday by taking two days for it. She came to Elyria Tuesday and the next day to Ord. She has been very sick for nearly a month, but is now on the way to recovery. Her parents will see that she is cared for and given the needed rest and they look forward to gain in strength right along now. Luckily she has had cool weather for the sick spell, or she could not have stood the ordeal.

Not for some time has there been such a building boom on in Ord as at the present time. The bulling operations in the country are not what they would have been had it not been for the late spring and the fearful roads. Plenty of farm buildings are planned and will go up as soon as the farmers can get to them. But now they will have to wait the planting of the spring crops. But you may figure that there is a boom on all over Valley county.

Surveyor Harvey made a very careful measurement of the Ord State Bank lot on the west side of the square to ascertain why the rear end thereof is less than the front. The measurement showed that the discrepancy was 2 feet and 2 inches, and the owners wished to know who was at fault. The measurements by Mr. Harvey showed that both the Bailey and Siler buildings had fudged on this vacant lot, one about as much as the other. Now it will be in order to begin measurements to see who else is to blame. The Bailey and Siler buildings may be of proper width at the rear. In that case the fudging may be somewhere else. We do not think that any settlement of the matter has been effected, but it looks as though a settlement is in order. We have tried to make the bank folks believe that it would be a great advertisement for them to build on the lot as it is, for they could then call it the "Flatiron" building.

Every boy has to have a notion some time in his youthful career to run away. Tuesday two of our lads tried that stunt. They are George Auble and Harold Tedro, of the John Auble and Jud Tedro families. They probably did not intend to skip, when they started, but after getting a-going they just kept going. They asked Mr. Batie for the use of his horse to ride around and set out intending to play hookey. The horses head was turned toward North Loup and to that city they went. After feeding the beast and looking at the sights of the town they concluded, late in the afternoon, to come back home, the thought of shelter and protection for the night appealing to them when they remembered the empty condition of their pocket books. They got back as far as Leon Clements's place when darkness came on and they asked for shelter for the night, and of course these good people would not send them on the way. After the boys found themselves in the strange home Harold thought it would be the proper thing for them to let their mothers know where they were and so asked their hostess to telephone, which she did, thereby greatly relieving the anxiety of the parents. The boys got home yesterday morning all right.

MOVING FOR GOOD ROADS

No Abatement in the Work for Good Roads—Money is Being Raised Much Work Done

The good roads committe of the Commercial Club took a look over the road leading from the Hamilton ranch to town. It was thought that a great improvement could be made in the road by circling around further to the east, but this was exploded on examination. But the committee found that by going down the other south road a short way and then cutting through to the south-east a very good road could be had, cutting out several of the big hills and the cost of the road would be comparatively little. This is one of the very important roads leading to Ord and the committee feels very much elated over the prospect of making a great improvement in this thoroughfare, thus giving a large scope of territory better access to Ord.

Another important move in the good roads line was the investigation yesterday of the Haskell Creek road by a special committee of the Commercial Club. The point on this road that has been a stunner is the mile or so over the Jorgensen and Hansen hills. The road in times past used to run over the Jorgensen land east of the hill, which is the natural place for the road and makes a very good one by putting in a few small bridges and culverts. But this did not look good to Mr. Jorgensen. He does not want the road to run over his farm, especially in front of his house. The committee looked over the whole territory. They went east past the Jorgensen house, past the small bridge and then turned north across the Jorgensen and Neilsen farms. This would require a lot of hill cutting and several bridges. Then they tried to get around the big hills by going to the west, but there is no pass up that way without going over the great "hogback" somewhere, so they gave up that idea. They next viewed the route by going just west of the Jorgensen house, along by his alfalfa field. This makes an ideal road. After going north some distance a choice of two ways is open. One is to cross the creek and come out by the Nielsen house and follow their private road to the main road just north of the Henry Hansen house. Or to turn west after passing the Jorgensen house some distance, cut across his alfalfa field and hug the east side of the Hansen hill coming into the old road part way down the north slope of the hill east of his grove. This latter course will avoid all bridges and will be work that can be done easily by snaking off the side of the hill. This will be the shortest road, the best one and the cheapest one on account of there being no bridges required to make it a go.

This will damage Mr. Jorgensen some as will any road that cuts over his land, but it is impracticable to make a good road without cutting his farm in two. Of course he will have to be adequately paid for the damage, but we think he will not be obstinate in his opposition to the needs of the general public.

With these two roads made good there is one other greatly needing the attention of the public. This is the road leading to town from the west. That wide scope of hills is a fright. To avoid them farmers from the west must travel about four miles out of the way by going around to the south. That a good road may be had through these hills is not questioned, but it will cost some money. Without doubt this road will be by far the costliest of the three great roads, which the city must look after building. The committee has not yet viewed this territory but that a good way through may be found is unquestioned, the only question being the cost.

Ord is waking up to the needs of having something done to better the roads leading to town, and there will be no rest till it is done. The city is ready to help any move looking to the betterment of the roads over which our patrons must travel in coming to town.

One of the things likely to be done to further this move is to purchase a good road machine, one of the elevator type, which will be put to work to aid in the building of these roads.

How fine the winter wheat looks, is the common comment by all people of this section when they get out into the country. But this cannot be said of that crop in the South Platte country and in the eastern part of the state. There wheat is about gone. Some day people will learn that the best part of Nebraska is the North Platte country and the best part of that, all things considered, is the vicinity of the Loup rivers.

Frank Simmons of Omaha was in Ord between trains last Saturday. He had been up to Burwell where he used to be in business. He is well acquainted with old Ord folks, and is a relative of Bert and Lydia Taylor.

Thursday evening Mrs. H. D. Layman came up from Grand Island to spend a few hours with her brother, Geo. Dennis. Friday morning she went to Horace for the day. Mrs. Layman will soon move from Grand Island to Oregon.

Neligh, the litle son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Rolofson came near losing a finger yesterday afternoon. The perents drove to town with him as soon as possible and placed him under the doctor's care and they are in hopes that the finger can be saved. The acident happened with the washing machine. The little fellow putting his finger in the cogs while the machine was in use. The family live 14 miles north of Ord.

Dr. Miller was greatly delighted to receive from his brother, who lives in the interior of Mexico, a letter mailed the last of last week. For three weeks there had been no mail out of that section, and it had been two months since he had heard from him. Naturally the doctor was uneasy about him as that is in the very heart of the insurrection. The brother writes that a reign of anarthy is on there and no semblance of order is maintained.

Monday night three toughs came to town over the U. P. and went over to the B. & M. depot and boldly announced their business to Mr. Kullbom, one of them being a young woman and the other two men. They went ed to know what the prospects for business were in town and they were promptly advised to get out. In addition Mr. Kullbom at once phoned for the marshal and the trio were taken in. They seemed to have no money and not being of a desirable appearance and being able to give no account of themselves they were put in the bastile for the night. Marshal VanTuyl and Sheriff Sutton making the arrest. The outfit claimed that they wanted to go to Burwell, the woman claiming that she had a sister there, but this part of the story is not believed. The next morning the men were given their breakfast and sent out of town with their noses pointed toward Burwell. The woman was kept in the lock-up till time for the evening train to Burwell, when she was escorted to the depot and a ticket to Burwell provided. We called Editor Parsons up this morning and he declared that the bunch would be promptly sent back to Ord, with orders to keep out of town.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Last Saturday was the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. John Wozab. These good folks had no notion of making any fuss about it, but the young folks did not look at it in that way. Unbeknown to the aged couple a big affair was planned at the Bohemian hall. Friends of the family old and young were invited and plenty of good things provided for refreshments. Then the principals were brought down to take a prominent part in the doings.

The evening was spent in feasting, visiting, music and some dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Wozab were married in Manotowoc county, Wis., where they lived for a few years. Forty-five years ago they moved to Saline county, Nebraska, then a very new place, where they lived till coming to Ord not so many years ago.

We surely wish these people many years of life and happiness yet.

Last night E. W. Black of North Loup gave his entertainment at the Methodist church. Mr. Black is an old timer in these parts and opened his entertainment with a number of humorous sketches and some historical ones, pertaining to this vicinity, the faithfulness of which was at once recognized by the old residenters. The most pleasing of these was his view of the old North Loup bridge at Ord. After some time in this lighter vein, wherein he drew his pictures before our eyes, he went to the real part of his lecture showing views, which he had drawn at his leisure, of various fosil relics which he had himself discovered in various parts of the west. Mr. Black was in the government service in the west for years and, always of an inquiring mind, he made persistent research for evidence of the great antiquity of this part of the earth, and it is evident that he has succeeded well. His lecture was both interesting and instructive.

It was intensely dark the night of the Hather-Carson wedding and the Strong young people tell of a narrow escape they had while returning home. While near the D. M. Rathbun place the buggy was upset, throwing Hazel down the embankment, over and over she went, not being able to stop herself until she reached the bottom. Her brother Marion followed, but did not fall so far. The horse not being able to hold the buggy, both went down the hill. There were parties both in front and back of them and the calls for help brought plenty of assistance. It is a wonder that there were not some serious results from the accident.

Dick Tatlow and Miss Winnie Ward were married at Horace Monday, Rev. H. H. Berry officiating. On the evening train they came up to Elyria to get the personal effects of the bride. Mr. Tatlow is the son of our James Tatlow and is now running a barber shop at Wolbach, where their home will be. The bride is one of the daughters of W. W. Ward of Gracie, but living till lately on his farm near Elyria.

Mrs. Fred Steinwart went up to Burwell Tuesday evening to spend a few days with her brother and family. Fred went down to North Loup last Friday and Helen said she was going Saturday and that they would make their home there again. They have been living in Ord this winter.

Arthur Capron and Della Billings came up from North Loup Monday evening. They had gone down on the freight expecting to be joined by the other members of the Reed orchestra and furnish music for a dance, but the hard rain spoiled their plan.

Mrs. Lester Norton has been dangerously ill for several weeks and Friday night her parents received word that she was much worse, to come at once. We undrestand she was improving again the first of the week.

Mrs. Mary Dutton returned to Dutton, Wyo., Friday. For several days she had been staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Carpenter. Otto Dutton of Burwell accompanied her as far as Grand Island.

Some Ord parties shipped a fine badger last Tuesday to Bert Boquet and a Mr. Drake of Omaha. These gentlemen were up here hunting last fall and expressed a desire for one of be shipped to them.

Mrs. Jess Horton and Pearl Roberson returned to Grand Island Saturday. They had been the guests at the Clark Lamberton home for a few weeks.

Mrs. Clark Lamberton entertained a company of ladies last Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Jess Horton and Pearl Roberson.

Evelyn Westburg came up from North Loup Thursday evening and visited until Monday with her friend, Jessie Purcell.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Howard came down from Burwell Monday morning and have resumed their residence here.

CLOSING UP SCHOOL DOINGS

With Good Items on the Program Much Interest is Taken in the Meeting

The Valley County Teachers' Association opened last Thursday evening with a splendid attendance. The music by the Glee Club girls was splendid and much appreciated. The vocal solo by Mrs. Kullbom was another delightful feature of the program. Rev. Umpleby gave an address on the social service of the school which was both entertaining and instructive. We need more of such talks.

Friday morning's program was very good. The Eighth Grade Orchestra did themselves proud on that occasion and we predict that they will be the orchestra if they keep up their practice.

The papers on various subjects by Alexander Brown, Miss Moorman and Miss Troupe were worthy a place on any state association program.

The talk given by W. J. Taylor was very practical and instructive and we hope the teachers will make use of both it and the eye testing charts he distributed.

Miss Eveland's talk on "Busy Work" for primary grades was full of useful hints and showed she had her subject well in hand.

The afternoon program being given over to the short course people, consisted of a rope tying contest by the boys. A prize of a necktie was offered. This contest created quite a good deal of amusement for the boys as well as the assembled teachers and friends.

The talk by Mr. Gramlich which followed the rope tying contest was of a most practical nature and will make farming and stock raising appear of more importance to our boys and girls.

Miss Rowan then gave a talk on home making and keeping which raised it above the common idea of home drudgery.

The evening program was a fitting climax to the entire week's work. A half hour concert was given by the High School Orchestra. We certainly are proud of our high school orchestra. The music equals any given by a high priced company.

The first part of the program consisted of musical numbers by local talent. A piano solo by Miss Troupe, a cornet solo by Paul Robinson, a vocal solo by Miss Conger and a quartet by the Presbyterian quartet, all were splendid and if one may judge appreciation by applause, they were well appreciated.

President Clemmons of Fremont College gave a most excellent address on "Opportunity." This talk was one of the very best ever given in Ord as it was filled with ideas for the growth of ideals and inculcated aspirations for nobler living. After listening to such an impressive talk one could not help but feel there was yet something in life for which to live.

DELAYED AGAIN

W. P. Thorp returned from a business mission to Lincoln Tuesday evening. He tells us that he had quite a talk over the power proposition with Ira Reasoner Tuesday morning and that Ira is just as enthusiastic as ever over the proposition. The starting of the work on the proposed dam has been delayed on account of the contractors refusal to guarantee the work without making a more thorough investigation of the foundation on which it is to rest and a delay in making such an investigation has brought about by reason of the contractors figuring on the job being in the bridge building business and the numerous bridges going out in different sections of the country at this time required the attention of their expert elsewhere. Material for the construction of a coffer-dam has already been shipped and either Mr. Beardsley or Mr. Reasoner will be here Friday when the contractor's engineer is expected to show up and a thorough investigation of the foundation made.—Burwell Tribune.

We are pleased to announce that there will be services at the Baptist church next Sunday morning and evening, by Rev. Fred Berry of Lincoln. This is not the Rev. Berry who used to preach here, but the two Berrys were old school mates.

Next Monday at 8:00 o'clock p. m. the saloon business will close in Ord for a year at least. If Mayor Carson sees that the dry law is enforced he will be good enough mayor for us all. Will he be able to do it?

George Larkins, a nephew of Mrs. Geo. Seiver, was up from North Loup Friday. He was accompanied by Floyd Hutchins, Marshall Romine and Paul Jones.

Mrs. A. C. Domon and Mrs. E. G. Walker went down to North Loup Tuesday to spend the day.

The democrats did all they could to carry the republican vote for La Follette, but they could not cut her.

Though M. L. Fries failed in his quest for the republican nomination for lieutenant-governor he got a vote in Valley county that ought to please him.

The primaries are over and the candidates for the numerous nominations are now silent. But do not think that that means that there will be no more of the hot stuff the candidates are putting up for votes. The number of fighters is now greatly reduced, but the fight goes on, though in smaller circles. Keep it up, boys.

The next time a new ship reports making her maiden trip in record or unusual time the people of the world will shudder at the possibilities of disaster escaped. Had the Titanic not been trying to make a record for its first run there would not have been the awful loss of life and property that resulted for that speed.

We are glad of the opportunity to boost W. G. Rood for the election to the house of representatives. He has the republican nomination and deserves the election. Like all wide-awake newspaper men he is well posted on public questions and has his firm convictions as to what ought to be done. He will be some representative if elected, which he surely should be.

The success of Roosevelt in the states where primary elections are held has made it apparent to the people who make political prophecies, that Roosevelt is now in a fair way to get the republican nomination. At any rate it is pretty sure that Taft cannot be nominated and about certain that he cannot be elected if nominated. On the other hand the nomination of Roosevelt or a dark horse would mean success.

What was the property loss by reason of the loss of the Titanic? The ship was valued at $10,000,000. No doubt the personal effects of the passengers on board was another million. The cargo may have easily been worth two millions. All this, to say nothing of the appalling loss of life, was a loss that with ordinary and reasonable care could have been avoided. This spirit of "getting there" with no regard for safety is altogether too costly to be encouraged.

The candidates for the position of representative from this district are Rood of North Loup and Mather of Arcadia. Arcadia people have been very loyal to North Loup in all political ambitions of the latter, and now we shall see whether they will be loyal against a candidate near their own town. They sure ought to be. If Arcadia assists a man to the nomination the only honorable thing to do is to see him through to the end of the road. Give Rood a good vote, Arcadia, and you will not suffer for it in the end.

Whereas it used to be practically impossible to amend the constitution of the state of Nebraska under the old law, it is now the easiest thing to do so. In order to further the interests of some who wanted a way of disposing of the constitution it was finally proposed that a law be passed permitting political parties to put any proposed amendment into their ticket. Once on the ticket then every straight ballot is counted for the amendment, and it takes only a majority of all the votes cast on that subject to put the proposed amendment on the ballot. Whereas under the old law it took a majority of all the ballots cast at an election to carry an amendment, which means about 125,000 votes, now about 10,000 votes will place it on the ballot of the dominant party, which practically means its adoption. It is much easier now to carry an amendment, good or bad, than it is to elect a good man to office. This is wholly wrong. The constitution means practically nothing from now on.

The Champion says that Arcadia had last week not exactly a "Tempest in a teapot," but a fire in a water bucket. The fire department was out promptly, but it proved to be only a practice run, for the fire was out when the boys got there.

According to Dunn's Review all leading farm products developed conspicuous strength, last week, together with a decided broadening of speculative strength. The Review says: "A bullish interpretation was placed on the government wheat report and prices advanced sharply, notwithstanding that it is too early to determine the exact condition of the plant. Western receipts of wheat this week were 1,795,711 bushels against 1,699,277 last year, while exports from all ports of the United States, flour included, of 1,714,361 bushels, compared with 1,591,363 in 1911. After an early decline, corn rose abruptly in sympathy with the costlier cereal and a good cash demand. Arrivals at primary markets this week were 1,450,126 bushels as against 1,984,921 a year ago, and Atlantic coast shipments of 320,238 bushels compared with 1,033,573 in 1911."

The murder of American citizens and the destruction of their property by the bandits and rebels of Old Mexico has called forth a very strong demand from the American government that this work stop. But this kind of work will not stop. The government of Mexico is too weak to control the rebels, much less to look after the smaller matters of the work of bandits. So it looks that the United States will have to step in and say what shall be what down there. If it comes to that we may find the government on our hands. This would not be a very desirable thing, but it would be better than the present situation and would not be so serious as might be supposed. Let those cowardly Greasers know that there is a strong hand over them and all will be well. The reason life and property are not safe now is the fact that the Greasers know that there is not a powerful government in control.

The fate of faithful public servants in Nebraska of late years points out to honest men what they must do if they want to hold their jobs. It seems to be the purpose of Nebraska voters to reward dishonesty and punish faithfulness. The best legislature Nebraska ever had was that of six years ago. But the people turned the republicans out and have been cursed by two disreputable ones since. Two years ago we shelved Senator Burkett, a man who had made an impeachable record for Nebraska, and put in his place a democrat who had profited by and aided in the looting of the Nebraska state treasury. Now we propose to turn out of the senate Senator Brown, who has made a record equal to Burkett's, and to put in his place another man in no sense his superior or possibly a democrat who may be infinitely his inferior. Do the voters of Nebraska purpose to force upon the minds of honest republicans the conviction that honesty in high places is not wanted?

A thing that is greatly to be regretted is the defeat of Senator Norris Brown at the primary election last Friday. From the day that Mr. Brown began public work in Nebraska to the present moment he has been a faithful worker and true to his trust. His unusual ability as a speaker, his clear thinking, his honesty of purpose and his persistent work have made him a power in the senate. Nebraska is many thousands of dollars ahead in the one item of railroad taxes at this moment on account of the good work he did as attorney general, to say nothing of the permanency of the benefit and the establishment of the rule that the railroads are subject to state control in at least the matter of taxes. In the senate Mr. Brown has been as true as steel to the interests of the state and had climbed up to a more commanding position in that body, which would simply mean that Nebraska's influence therein is so much more increased. But here we come along and throw this advantage all away and decide upon another man, not one whit better than Brown and propose to send him to the senate in Brown's stead where the new man must go to the foot of the class. And we did this too after seeing the folly of our similar act a few years ago when we turned Burkett down and sent in his place a democrat who had been mixed up in all sorts of deals to the detriment of the state. The only redeeming feature of this defeat of Brown is that it is a case of unfortunate circumstances and not directly a discredit to Senator Brown. Had not the Roosevelt boom struck the state Brown would undoubtedly have been retained.

THE GREED FOR GOAL

Before the Titanic started on her first and last voyage it was well known that the northern steamer route was unusually beset by icebergs. But that route was the short one. It would not do for the new biggest boat ever built to be six days crossing when the second biggest crossed in five. To reach the goal a day sooner the risk was taken—and the goal was never reached.

The fate of the Titanic is the commonest of the failures in human life. The passion for getting somewhere anyhow strews the earth with wrecks, mechanical, physical, spiritual. It has given us eighteen hour trains from Chicago to New York which break the strongest rails and jump the smoothest tracks. It gives wealth or fame to physical wrecks of forty-five years, long past the possibility of enjoying anything. Weston walks from San Francisco to New York, arriving with nothing but blistered feet and an empty record. He never saw the Rockies, or the prairies, or the rivers. A man can't see such things while walking five miles an hour.

Greed for goal is responsible for more wasted lives than the greed for gold. We live as if born to circumnavigate the globe in forty days. We start afoot for the office, so bent on being there we overlook the spring morning. We miss the birds and get no sooner to the office. The farmer plows all day, the thougnt of getting done by night abolishes all enjoyment of the fine art of plowing well on a fine day. The young man studies, not in the delight of new knowledge, but in view of tomorrow's diploma, and next day's professional or business success. We live everywhere but here; every time but now; everyhow but as the task of the moment demands. And since there is no living but now, here, and as the present circumstances permit, most of us hardly live at all. We never are but always to be living.

What is the deadliest enemy of the human soul? Greed, say some. Appetite, say others. We submit whether Satan, if he owned up, would not rank hurry as his best friend.—State Journel.

"TOLL FOR THE BRAVE"

We read in the dispatches that the chimes of Old Trinity, of St. Patrick's and the Cathedral of St. John the Divine tolled in unison Sunday in New York City, a requiem for the Titanic's heroic dead; that bowed by a common grief, men and women of every religion and creed assembled in the places of worship, where memorial services were conducted, to join in paying tribute to men who died fearlessly that the women and children on board the sinking ship might live.

It is fitting that we should "Toll for the brave, the brave that are no more." The heroism of men and women of all stations in life shows heroism to be found in all classes of humankind. Heroism is not premadiated, but intuitive—an impulse when confronted with great danger, arousing the individual to deeps of valor unconscious of his or her welfare. That men and women alike meet death bravely, or go down into the shadow of the Valley of Death that others might live, is a beautiful characteristic of human life. In this disaster at sea that has plunged the world into mourning, this point in heroism is brought out bold and true. Here we find the scholar and the peasant, the rich and the poor standing side by side helping the weak, and noble heroic women refusing to be saved that they might remain with their husbands even unto death. And what is more touching, more pathetic and more heroic than the strains of music "Nearer My God to Thee," that floated over the face of the deep as the Titanic took her final plunge.

But this awful marine disaster has staggered the world. It brings forcibly to us a fact that man is not master of the elements, and that the Almighty holds the sea in the hallow of Him hand.—St. Paul Republican.

Damning With False Praise.

William Dean Howells, the author, was talking about a criticism that praised him almost fulsomely.

"I don't quite like such indiscriminate praise," he said. "Such praise does a man more harm than good. It is like the enthusiastic policeman's remark about the genial new mayor.

"'Oh, he's a fine feller,' the policeman said. 'Why, it don't matter who ye are, he'll get drunk with ye.'"

FOR AN AFTERNOON AT PLAY

Mrs. Oldway Made Up Both as to Mind and Costume to Enjoy Little Driversion.

It was on one of those rare occasions when Mrs. Oldway tore herself away from her domestic duties to seek amusement in the neighboring town, and, dressed in her best, she stood on the roadside, waiting for a trolley car to take her to the moving picture show.

"Are you going alone, Mrs. Oldway?" some one asked.

"I presume I am," she replied with the additional elegance and condescension of manner which she always put on with her best gown. "My daughter Eleanor has the supper dishes to wash, and it is hardly impossible that she can complete her task in time to take the car with me. But I never repine at loneliness, and these moving picture shows get one's mind so excited that one can't hardly help thinking of anything else. Last time I attended one there was quite a crowd, for it was bargain day in Rockville, and the country people had come to town to advantage themselves of the opportunity to purchase cheaply I had to stand through the entire performance. But I never minded I find these little driversions greatly relieve the monopoly——" Here the trolley car arrived and whisked Mrs. Oldway off to her "little driversion."

We Want You To See Our Finish

By that we don't mean funeral obsequies, but our superior quality of nigh-grade lumber, which is absolutely essential in any building where beauty and durability are desired. It's the stuff used for base, casing, cornices, and all sorts of interior work; and to insure the best results should be of the proper color and grain, according to the uses to which it is applied. Our finish in Yellow Pine, White Pine and Spruce (or any other you might care to mention) was selected with due regard to its milling and drying, and we are anxious to show it to you and point its advantages—natural color and grain—which cannot be secured in lumber purchased haphazardly from Tom, Dick, or Harry. A look won't cost you a cent, but it may add dollars to the value of the new home. Come in. We show you before you buy.

"A FAKE"

Some people have been heard to say when a high school play is mentioned to them. They have grown to feel that when they pay to see a home talent play it is simply a donation, therefore we want to say just a word about the play at the opera house next Friday night to be given by the Junior Class of the High School.

The play "Barbara Frietchie" was originally produced by Julia Marlowe and her company in New York. It is an historical play of the Civil War, the scenes being laid in Maryland.

This play is not a silly wild west farce such as is usually put on by home talent, but a tragedy different from any play ever produced by in Ord by a traveling organization or local troupe. The cast of characters is one of the best ever seen in a local production and have worked long and hard in preparing the play.

You know them all—you have seen some of them on the stage before.

To those who kick about the price we can only say—this play isn't like other plays. It's BETTER. No expense has been spared to procure costumes and scenery. Special scenery has been procured and will be used for this occasion. It is true that most home talent companies charge 35c—they put on 35c plays. You would gladly give 50c to see a traveling "fake"—be as willing to help the class. You won't be disappointed. So don't forget the time, place and name.

Last Sunday a child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Witt. Two days lates Dr. Shepard aws called out again to see the young mother and found her down good and hard with diphtheria. This was a serious proposition—a woman in her condition to come down good and hard with one of the worst of diseases. Besides that there was the babe only two days old by its mother's side, sure to have the disease too. He knew that antitoxin would be the thing for the woman, but giving it to a new born babe was another thing, and the doctor would not do it. But the next day he got his nerve and administered the dose too to the little one, and so far all is well. The mother is improving and the child has shown no symptoms of the disease yet, and no evil effects from the antitoxin. The mother is a daughter of the Hans P. Hansen family living on the G. T. Hather place.

L. R. Kerr, the energetic foreman on the several Pesha jobs in Ord, drove a nail into his knee the first of the week, and has been laid up since. He was stiffening the board with his knee while driving a nail and the steel came through sooner tha nhe figured, entering his flesh just above the kneepan. He is able to hobble about again today, so will doubtless be well before a great while. He cannot well be spared on these jobs just now.

The other day in helping unload some of the trees for the Park Mr. Mutter slipped off the edge of the car opening and fell to the dray, striking on one of the dray stakes. He received the force of the concussion in his breast and some of his ribs came near breaking under the strain. But they seem to have stood the ordeal. He is pretty lame from the effects, just the same.

There is plenty doing out in Bussell Pard these days. Two thousand trees have been bought for the place and are being set. The trees are all of the high class and if that does not look pretty good in a few years we shall miss our guess. The work is being thoroughly done and as the season is favorable all of them, or nearly all, ought to grow. It is the prettiest bunch of trees you ever saw, all the trees being fine ones. They came from the Crete Nurseries.

Judge's Severe Comment.

Sir Matthew Begbie, chief justice of British Columbia, once had before him a man charged with having killed another man with a sand-bag. The evidence was conclusive, and the judge charged the jury accordingly, but a verdict of "Not Guilty" was promptly brought in. The judge was astonished. "Gentlemen of the jury," he said, "this is your verdict, not mine. On your conscience the disgrace will rest. Many repetitions of such conduct as yours will make trial by jury a horrible farce, and the city of Victoria a nest of crime. Go! I have nothing more to say to you." And then, turning to the prisoner: "You are discharged. Go and sandbag some of those jurymen; they deserve it."

FATALITIES IN STORM

SOUTHERN AND CENTRAL ILLINOIS PAY TRIBUTE.

MANY ARE HOMELESS AND LOST

Flood Stricken South Sends Out Pleas for Aid—Killed and Injured in Illinois Tornado—Porto Rico Wants In.

Chicago.—Thirty-two persons are known to be dead, half a score are so severely injured they may die and a hundred and fifty others are hurt as a result of two tornadoes which swept over southern Illinois in one instance and across northern Illinois into Indiana in the other late Sunday evening.

Twelve were killed at Bush, Ill.; five at Willisville, names not obtainable; three at Boddick, Ill., and nine at Morocco, Ind.

Others may be found beneath the wreckage of what was Bush, every building being demolished. Forty injured from this town alone were brought into Murphysboro, where the storm severely injured three.

Flood Victims Appeal for Aid.

New Orleans.—Harassassed on all sides by the mighty Mississippi river, which at the present time inundates twelve prosperous villages in Mississippi near Greenville, and handicapped by the lack of money and facilities with which to battle the water which is sweeping over their homes, the people of Greenville have sent out countless messages to every available source calling for aid. A message received here says that at least 20,000 are homeless and that many lives have been lost. Some estimates place the number of dead at 200.

Want Territorial Government.

Washington.—Porto Rico is anxious to become a full-fledged member of the union and to be represented by a star in the American flag. The leaders of the Porto Rico people understand that it is out of the question to realize this ambition immediately, but they insist their island is now ready for territorial government and a committee headed by Eugenelo Benitz, representing its progressive citizens, has just reached Washington with a memorial addressed to President Taft, the president of the senate and the speaker of the house of representatives, urging that congress shall at least define the position and intentions of the federal government with reference to this one of its insular possessions.

To Rescue of Americans.

Tucson, Ariz.—Nelson Rhoades, jr., head of several sugar refineries in Sinola, has wired from Guayamas to his agents here that he had chartered a ship and was rushing to the rescue of thirty Americans whom he believed to be in imminent danger in the sugar factory town of Bavolatot, state of Sinola. Rhoades stated that the revolutionists had captured Culican, the capital. He declared that American residents were poorly armed and were about to take refuge on a nearby island. His vessel will pick up foreigners at every port.

Caspar Blackburn for Annapolis.

Washington.—Representative Lobeck says that Paul F. Maxwell, whom he appointed to Annapolis, had decided not to enter the examinations and that the first alternate, Caspar K. Blackburn of Omaha, is now at Annapolis to prepare for the place. Blackburn is the son of Thomas W. Blackburn of Omaha, and has been attending school in New Hampshire.

Lincoln.—Charles Morley, the only survivor of the trio of criminals who killed three Nebraska penitentiary officials in a sensational break from prison last month, was not an entire novice in the art of breaking jail. According to information received here from Knoxville, Mo., where Morley lived in youth, he escaped from prison there several years ago, while under indictment for robbery.

Memorial for Stead.

New York.—Hundreds of delegates to the men and religion congress, who were to have listened to an address by William T. Stead, the English journalist, lost in the Titanic disaster, Friday joined in memorial services for Mr. Stead at Carnegie hall. William Jennings Bryan, who was the principal speaker, paid a tribute to the distinguished journalist, who was deeply interested in the success of the movement.

New York.—A week has passed since the Titanic, the greatest marine achievement in the history of the world, sank in midocean. Much of the story is still untold, and many a day will pass before the world will fully realize or comprehend the significance of a disaster which must rank in many respects as the most stupendous in modern history.

The number of dead probably will never be exactly determined, inasmuch as the complete passenger list went down with the doomed vessel. The number of survivors is fixed at 705 by the report of Captain Rostron of the Carpathia. The White Star line officials believe the death list to total approximately 1,635.

St. Johns, N. F.—Sixty-four bodies have been recovered by the cable steamer Mackay-Bennett, which has been searching the vicinity of the Titanic disaster, according to a report received.

It is said a number of bodies which were recovered were sunk again, as they were without identification marks. The names of those identified could not be obtained through the Cape Race wireless station.

The sixty-four bodies recovered are regarded as identifiable, according to the report. Those that were sunk were presumably in a condition making their preservation impossible.

Money Pouring In.

When the books of Mayor Gaynor's relief fund were closed for the day, $71,877.75 had been acknowledged. The women's relief committee announced that its fund amounted to about $25,000 tonight. Kuhn Loeb & Co. forwarded to the Red Cross $5,300, which had been subscribed during the day.

Requiems for Dead.

New York.—Chimes of Old Trinity, of St. Patrick's and of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine tolled in unison Sunday a requiem for the Titanic's heroic dead. Bowed by a common grief, men and women of every religion and creed assembled in the places of worship, where memorial services were conducted, to join in paying tribute to men who died fearlessly that the women and children on board the sinking ship might live.

"Nearer My God to Thee," the strains of which were heard by the survivors as the Titanic took her final plunge, was sung in all churches of the city. There were prayers from the pulpits for the survivors and the relatives and friends of the dead, while in Catholic churches requiem masses were sung for the repose of the souls of those who went down.

At Trinity church the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, the rector, spoke of the lessons taught by the world's greatest marine disaster and the greatness of character shown by those who perished. He paid tribute to the loyal devotion of the women passengrs who remained with their husbands "even unto death."

A Useless Tragedy.

At the church of the Incarnation, where memorial services were held, the Rev. Howard C. Robbins, the rector, spoke of the pity of that "grievous tragedy so uselessly brought about."

Some of the survivors of the Titanic were at the Madison avenue Reformed church, where the pastor, the Rev. Dr. William Carter, chose as his text: "Psalm 93, 3-4, The floods have lifted up their voice; the floods have lifted their waves; the Lord is mightier than the noise of many waters; yea, than the mighty waves of the sea."

Dr. Carter in part said:

"The irony of it all was that the very bulk of the Titanic, which the builders said could weather any gale, withstand any shock and was absolutely unsinkable, was the very thing that sent her more quickly to her doom."

Were Former Nebraskans.

Fremont, Neb.—J. B. Thayer of Boston, whose name appears in the lists of passengers aboard the ill-fated Titanic, was president of the old Standard Cattle company that at one time bought up thousands of acres of Dodge county land around Ames, Neb., and raised cattle for a while, later building the Leavitt sugar factory. Mr. and Mrs. Thayer and their son were returning from Europe on the Titanic. The names of Mrs. Thayer and the son appear in the list of the passengers saved.

Mourn In England.

London.—Sunday was observed as a day of mourning throughout the kingdom. Every place of worship from cathedral to the smallest hillside chapel, held special services. In each "Nearer, My God, to Thee" was sung. Eloquent tributes were paid by eminent preachers to the captain and crew of the Titanic and the notable victims of the disaster. In many cases the offertories were devoted to the relief funds which now aggregrate more than $500,000.

For Emil Brandeis.

Omaha, Neb.—Memorial services were held Sunday afternoon in memory of Emil Brandeis, a prominent Omaha merchant, who with many others, lost his life when the ill-fated Titanic went to the bottom of the Atlantic ocean a week ago. The ser vice, consisting of sacred songs and words of praise and regret by many of Mr. Brandeis' friends, was held in the Brandeis theater, the stage of which was covered with flowers. United States Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska was among the speakers.

Declares Victims Murdered.

New York.—"Fifteen hundred people were not drowned on the Titanic; fifteen hundred people were murdered, cruelly and foully murdered—that's the story, the true story of this awful wreck, I shall tell the world the second I am able."

These were the words of Mrs. Henry B. Harris, widow of the millionaire theatrical producer. Mrs. Harris spoke these words between sobs as she lay in her flower filled apartments that look out over Central park, and into the very windows where Mrs. John Jacob Astor, another freshly-made widow, is also living over and over again those wild hours in the ice-strewn Atlantic.

"No one has begun to tell the whole truth about the wreck of the Titanic," Mrs. Harris sobbed. "I shall appear before the senate investigation committee and tell what I know. It will wake the world at last to the real horror of the disaster.

"I was the last woman to leave the deck of that ship. I was put into a collapsible boat along with two other women and scores of the crew, women and children—and our husbands —were torn from us so the men of the crew could go along.

"But I am glad I waited, I had a few extra minutes with my husband—and I learned why that boat went to her grave—I learned of the carelessness with which she was handled, which amounts to murder—plain, cold blooded murder.

"We were standing at the side of Major Butt. We had been helping him putting people into the boats. Major was the real leader in all that rescue work. He made the men stand back and help the women and children in. But he was never rough as was said. He was authoritative in the most courteous manner. He was surely one of God's noblemen.

No Trace of Fear.

"As I was lowered into the boat after I had bid my husband the last good-bye I watched the major as he stood by Mr. Harris. He was motionless without a trace of fear in his eyes. Just ten minutes later I watched the waves sweep over them—my husband and the major—as they both stood at attention like the heroes that they were.

"Major Butt never fired a shot as has been said; he acted the part of the greatest hero, the hero who is as tender as his soul is brave."

Mrs. Harris declared that she knows the truth about the sinking of the Titanic as perhaps do one else knows it.

Tribute of Rabbi Hirsch.

New York.—At the Free synagogue in Carnegie hall Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch of Chicago paid tribute to the heroism of the Jews who lost their lives.

"It will be a long time," he added, "before the world will forget the quiet and manly heroism of Isidore Strauss and the wifely devotion of Mrs. Strauss, who refused to be saved without him."

Sent Truth When Learned.

London.—Captain Haddock of the White Star line steamer Olympic on arriving at Plymouth Saturdal morning from New York denied that the Olympic sent out a wireless report to the effect that the Allan liner Virginian was towing the Titanic and that all of the latter's passengers were safe. The passengers of the Olympic, which is a companion ship of the ill-fated Titanic, subscribed $7,000 to the relief fund for the survivors.

Washington.—In St. Paul's Episcopal church, where he had been a worshiper, service in commemoration of Major Archibald Butt and the other victims of the Titanic disaster were held Sunday. President Taft attended these services, which were the first of similar commemorations in churches throughout the city.

Engineer John Adams of Ottumwa, Ia., was buried under his engine in twenty-eight feet of water in Cone's lake, near Muscatine, and his fireman, John Moriarty, was fatally injured.

Sheriff Roberts of Tecumseh has obtained a requisition on the governor of Florida for the return of E. E. Hesse, charged with murdering his wife and step-daughter, Pauneta, at Tecumseh in 1910. Hesse is reported to be at St. Petersburg, Fla., across the bay from Tampa. He is supposed to be in custody.

New Orleans.—Every woman in New Orleans who wears a hat pin protruding more than one inch from the crown of her hat will be subject to arrest, according to an ordinance passed in the city council.

ALL OVER NEBRASKA.

Forestry In Nebraska.

The work at the Forest Service nursery at Halsey, Nebraska, has been delayed some two or three weeks longer than usual by the great fall of snow during the early part of March.

The free distribution of trees to the homesteader in the Kinkaid district includes the counties of Holt, Wheeler, Greeley, Custer, Lincoln, Hayes, Hitchcock and all counties west of these. The act familiarly known as the Kinkaid Act of 1911, provided that trees be furnished to each applicant from the Halsey nursery, under rules made by the Secretary of Agriculture. Tree planting is popular with the settlers in the sandhills, and there were more applicants than expected, about 600 having signed the agreement necessary to secure free trees. Since there are only 50,000 transplants of Jack Pine (Pinus divaricata) and Western Yellow Pine (Pinus ponderosa) for distribution this year, it has been impossible to furnish the full quota of 500 to each one, as was desired by the Forest Service, and the number has, therefore, been cut down to about 90 trees.

It may be considered by many of the homesteaders who receive this small number of trees, that they are not worth the trouble to plant. The matter of planting these 90 trees should be looked at in the light of furnishing experience, and the settler himself will be glad in the future that he experimented with only a few trees. The mistakes which he makes this year will be avoided in the future. It is hoped that the number of trees that may be distributed in 1913 and later will be from 300 to 500 for each applicant. The settler, then, should be able to plant his trees better, and obtain a higher degree of success.

Jack Pine and Western Yellow Pine are very slow-growing. The former, in the plantations at Halsey, has attained a height of two inches in the first year, six inches in the second year, and sixteen inches at the end of the fifth year. Western Yellow Pine at the end of six years, has made an average height of eight inches, at the end of eight years twenty-seven inches.

The important consideration in planting trees in western Nebraska are: That the trees should be in good condition at the time of planting; that they should be planted before growth has started; that they should be cultivated frequently; that they should be protected from fire by proper guards, and that cattle should be kept out of the plantations.

Information on tree planting and on special problems which come up in connection with each settler's plantation may be had by applying to the Forest Supervisor of the Nebraska National Forest, at Halsey, Nebraska.

Ray is an old time cow puncher over 50 years of age, and has been employed as a stock detective. He is in the jail in Rushville.

New Mayor of Nebraska City.

Nebraska City.—Dr. J. D. Houston, James A. Richardson and Robert E. Hawley, the newly elected commissioners have taken over the affairs of the city and will look after them in the future in place of the mayor and council as in the past, this city, being under a commission form of government. Dr. Houston was elected mayor, and James A. Richardson, vice mayor, while R. E. Hawley will look after the streets and alleys of the city. Each one has his work laid out.

Encampment at Beatrice.

Gage County.—The local veterans of the Spanish-American war are completing their plans for the state encampment in Beatrice April 25 and 26.

Land Washed Away.

Otoe County.—J. H. Resique, who owned a section of land on the Missouri river bottom at Barney, some eight miles below Nebraska City, is minus the same because the Missouri river has carried away every foot of that land, and is now busy cutting away the lands of his neighbors. Great damage has been done by the high water at that point this spring, and the loss has been great in the matter of farming land that was rich and brought yearly crops. Some of farmers have lost all their land.

PREPARING FOR THE WEDDING

But the Old Shoe, Fixed Up for the Occasion, Was Not Intended for the Bridal Pair.

There was to be a wedding in the vicinity. Many of the mountaineers would be there.

Early in the morning of the nuptial day Bud Hightower was noticed filling an old No. 12 shoe with slugs and nails and plaster of paris.

"Wot you doin', Bud?" drawled Sim Beesley.

Sim chuckled.

"I reckon."

"Goin' to throw it at th' bridegroom, maybe?"

"Goin' to throw it at him, maybe, but it ain't going to hit him. It's goin' to break th' face of Snipe Tolliver, an' do it accidental, too. I been layin' f'r that theer Snipe f'r a right smart spell."

A Believer.

Gifford Pinchot, at his brother's house, in Park avenue, New York, listened quizzically to a political story that was being submitted to him for verification by a political reporter.

When the reporter finished his narrative Mr. Pinchot laughed and said:

"I'll reply to that as the old Italian peasant replied to the statement that his fellow-countryman loved birds too well ever to eat them:

"'Well, I don't mind believing that myself,' the old man said, 'but there's a good many who wouldn't.'"

How Aggravating.

Brown—I saw a man drop twenty stories the other day, and it was a caution the way he swore.

Greene—Swore after dropping twenty stories?

Brown—Yes. They were in a magazine he had just bought, and he dropped it in the mud.—Judge.

What She Wanted.

Before the fire on Christmas Eve, two old maids were planning for the holiday.

"Sister Mallie," said the younger, "would a long stocking hold all you want for a Christmas gift?"

"No, Elvira," said the older, "but a pair of socks would."

Supreme Faith.

"What was the cause of your liberality?"

"I knew she'd never have the nerve to try to cash it."

When an old man dies and his relatives say that he is better off the chances are that he is.

COFFEE HURTS One In Three.

It is difficult to make people believe that coffee is a poison to at least one person out of every three, but people are slowly finding it out, although thousands of them suffer terribly before they discover the fact.

A New York hotel man says: "Each time after drinking coffee I became restless, nervous and excited, so that I was unable to sit five minutes in one place, was also inclined to vomit and suffer from loss of sleep, which got worse and worse.

"A lady said that perhaps coffee was the cause of my trouble, and suggested that I try Postum. I laughed at the thought that coffee hurt me, but she insisted so hard that I finally had some Postum made. I have been using it in place of coffee ever since, for I noticed that all my former nervousness and irritation disappeared. I began to sleep perfectly, and the Postum tasted as good or better than the old coffee, so what was the use of sticking to a beverage that was injuring me?

"One day on an excursion up the country I remarked to a young lady friend on her greatly improved appearance. She explained that some time before she had quit using coffee and taken to Postum. She had gained a number of pounds and her former palpitation of the heart, humming in the ears, trembling of the hands and legs and other disagreeable feelings had disappeared. She recommended me to quit coffee and take Postum and was very much surprised to find that I had already made the change.

"She said her brother had also received great benefits from leaving off coffee and taking on Postum." "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

A writer was describing a forthcoming work of his. He spoke most enthusiastically of the progress he had made on it.

The idea, he said, was clear in his mind—clear as crystal. All the situations were sketched out, everything that was to happen in each chapter decided upon. Why, even the titles of the chapters were written!

Just as he was riding astride the high-water mark of his enthusiasm one of those clammy, literal friends that all men have suddenly remarked:

"I see. You have everything about that novel completed except the writing and the selling of it."

She Outstayed Her Welcome

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Young Gail Irving stirred his coffee and looked across the table at his pretty little wife.

"Married three months, and this is almost the first Sunday we have had to ourselves," he declared. "Nice to be alone, isn't it, dear?"

Violet flushed uncomfortably and avoided her husband's loving glance. "It is lovely to be alone, Gail, but I'm afraid you are going to be very much disappointed"— She paused significantly.

Gail frowned. "Well, who is it this time? Has my Uncle Frederick announced that he will not enjoy his Sunday dinner unless he eats it with us, or has your Aunt Hannah decided to shed the light of her presence on us for another fortnight?"

"Neither one, Gail. Don't be so unkind. I can hardly tell you, for, although you have never met her, you have taken such a dislike to her very name"—

"Not Annabelle!" ejaculated Gail.

Violet nodded defiantly. "I don't think you ought to speak of my cousin in that manner. I am sorry if I have ever said anything about her that you could misunderstand, for really Annabelle Drage is a very sweet girl and so clever! Why, Gail, I am such a stupid little thing I am sure you will be ashamed of me when compared to such a brilliant person as Annabelle."

Mr. Irving nodded. "Very likely," he said ironically. "When is she coming?"

"She says," opening the sheets and rustling them nervously, "that it will be more convenient for her to arrive on the 1:10 train and—er—that as it is your day at home she assumes that you will meet her."

"I'll be there," said Mr. Irving, with a grim smile.

"I thought I would give her the large front room," said Mrs. Irving. "Annabelle is so fond of colonial furniture, and the little white bedroom is too tiny. It will not hold half the books she will bring, I dare say"—

"How long will she stay?" put in her husband feebly.

"I don't know—a month perhaps. Now, Gail, please don't look so horrified. I am sure you will enjoy Annabelle, and when she leaves you will miss her as much as I shall. You are so much more clever than I am that I know you will find my cousin congenial. I shall stay in the kitchen with Nora and cook the most fascinating things while you and Annabelle read Shakespeare and Tennyson and talk learnedly about all those things. Won't that be perfectly lovely?" Violet beamed at him over white hands clasped under her rounded chin.

"Great! Fine! Only, you see, darling, I don't care for Shakespeare, and I've never remembered a line of Tennyson except that one, 'In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.' I read that when I first met you, and, of course"— The remainder of this conversation had no reference to the coming of Annabelle Drage.

At 1 o'clock Mr. Irving walked slowly—nay, reluctantly—to the little suburban railway station to meet the unwelcome guest. He had heard so much about his wife's Chicago cousin that he was quite prepared to believe that her coming to his little home would revolutionize his new happiness.

"Anything but a highbrow!" he lamented. "I can stand any sort of girl except the one that sets up to be a—a—who is it?—ah, yes, a Portia. By Jove, her mere proximity is influencing me! I'm talking about one of Shakespeare's women," he smiled bitterly as he paced the station platform.

"We're going to have very bad weather," commented Irving gloomily—"rain, hail, snow; outlook very gloomy. I think it's going to be a hard winter."

The roar of the approaching train drowned any response the agent might have cared to make. Gail Irving went to the coach from which a solitary woman was descending; was conscious that an avalanche of trunks and bags were being hurled from the baggage car behind him and as the train creaked into motion again found himself staring at a rather good looking young woman, carelessly attired, who gazed back at him with frank inquiry in her bright dark eyes.

"Violet's husband, I am sure," she said cordially, holding out a gloved hand.

"Yes, I'm Violet's husband," repeated Gail with parrotlike precision. "That's my only mark of identity," he added coolly. "I am pleased to welcome Mrs. Irving's cousin. Hope you had a pleasant journey. I'll take your trunk check and have it sent up to the house."

"Here they are," and Miss Drage thrust a sheaf of checks toward him, "seven in all."

"Seven!" echoed Gail helplessly, staring toward the platform where the avalanche of trunks had become a mountain. "Ah, of course. I'll have them sent to the house. You don't mind walking the distance; it's only a quarter of a mile."

"I should prefer to walk if it were ten miles," said Annabelle easily. "Hurry up, please; it's cold on this platform."

"I beg your pardon," uttered Gail hopelessly as he turned away.

During the short walk to the low roofed cozy home the Irvings had built Miss Drage uttered not a word. Gail did not break into the reverie that seemed to envelop her. She walked with a free, mannish stride that was very obnoxious to Violet's husband. He liked little, soft, feminine women with bronze brown hair and dark blue eyes. Annabelle Drage was tall and thin, with an almost too erect carriage.

Violet welcomed her with nervous pleasure, while Gail escaped to the little room they had dignified by the name of library and which was his own especial retreat. During the invasion of relatives it was the only haven of refuge for both of the young home makers.

Now Gail tossed off his outer garments and looked at the cozy little fire his wife had kindled on the hearth. "Bless her sweet heart!" he murmured, somewhat mollified. "If it's any pleasure to her to have that walking owl here I'll try to be decent to her."

At the noon dinner Violet presided, rosily beautiful, timidly diffident in the presence of the guest. Miss Drage greeted her host with an abstracted smile.

Before the end of the meal he was discussing the Persian poets with such fluency that his little wife was filled to bursting with pride.

That was the beginning of Violet's unhappiness, for every night after dinner found Annabelle accompanying Gail to the library, where they discussed art and literature and the sciences until poor little Violet, sitting mutely by with her embroidery frame, grew vaguely jealous of the cousin who was monopolizing her husband's attention. The whole order of the little home was changed to accord with the leisurely habits of Miss Drage, who regarded her cousin with tolerant contempt. Once or twice she had openly laughed at Violet's confessed ignorance of some well known fact. Gail had winced, but what had almost broken the heart of his bride was the fact that he made no effort to take her part. True it was that his smile was coldly polite, but he had smiled—and she was his wife.

Violet was wretchedly trying to make up her mind to run away and thus rid her husband of such a stupid little helpmate. Every day she told herself that if Gail had met Annabelle first he would have married the brilliant college girl instead of her cousin. If she went away perhaps Gail could get a divorce.

One morning after Gail had caught his train for town Violet and her cousin were lingering over the late breakfast necessitated by Miss Drage's luxurious habits. Violet had passed a sleepless night and looked miserable. Gail had kissed her carelessly in farewell, and she had scarcely had a word with him since the previous morning. Annabelle had played to him all the evening—played the pieces that Violet usually played—while he accompanied her with the violin. The cousins ate the meal in silence.

Nora entered with a telegram for Miss Drage. Annabelle tore it open and read it with a frown gathering on her dark forehead.

"I am called home at once. I must pack my things, and you may send them after me," she said abruptly, rising from the table.

A half hour later she had left the house, and her room was a chaos of packed and corded trunks and bags. Violet danced delightedly through the hall and suddenly paused with a scared smile on her face.

What if Annabelle had gone to join Gail! Suppose the telegram had been from him! She flew up the stairs into Annabelle's room and searched the waste paper basket feverishly.

A handful of yellow scraps was her reward, and she carried them down to the library and spent an hour in piecing them together. When she had pasted the torn message into its original form she sat and stared at the words, a growing horror in her eyes:

Miss Annabelle Drage, Suburbanville, N. Y.:
If you have never had smallpox leave the house at once. Am coming down.
GAIL IRVING.

Her husband coming down with smallpox and she would not have known save for this telegram to her cousin! Violet's face dropped on her arms, but was lifted eagerly as her husband's step sounded in the hall, and instantly he was in the room and her head was on his shoulder.

"Oh, you poor, poor thing!" she cried. "You must go to bed at once, Gail, and I will send for Dr. Blake. No one shall nurse you but me, and—why, what are you laughing at?"

"My dearest," said Gail solemnly, "I knew nothing save the smallpox would scare a selfish person like your cousin Annabelle, and yet I didn't say I had it, you know—just reread the message. Well, I've come down—after you! Pack your trunk and let us run down to Atlantic City for a few days and recover from Annabelle's visitation."

"I was sure you were attracted by her cleverness," lamented Violet, "and I believed you were ashamed of me because I am so simple and domestic and"—

"That's why I married you," remarked Gail loftily. "I admire that sort of women. Had enough of Annabelle, or shall we send for her to come back?"

"Oh, I forgot—I must telephone for the man to come after her trunks!" said Violet, and so Gail had his answer.

GAS TAR

Plenty of it at the Gas Plant at 15 cents a gallon in lots of 5 gallons or more. 20 cents a gallon for smaller lots. Gas tar will keep the mites from your hen house, make your posts last three times as long as they would without it, kill dandelions, keep the weeds from growing in unused spots, and a lot of other things. Every farmer should keep an open barrel of it. Put a dozen or so posts in and let them soak as long as you want, then throw them out and put in others. A good post set in your fence is worth 30c without tar and at least 90 cents if properly tarred, and the tar has cost you a trifle for each post. Here is a chance to save money and labor, by preserving your posts.

Frank Crane Thinks the "Standing Minority Report" Necessary to Keep Mankind Honest.

Doubtless each of us knows someone in his circle of acquaintances who is intellectually contrary. Such a one delights to take on every occasion the opposite side.

If he is in a religious community he will take his stand firmly for atheism; if he is among scoffers he will argue just as valiantly for the church. He is a standing minority report. He is a crooked stick that will not lie in the woodpile. Like Goethe's devil he is the spirit who constantly denies.

This class of persons is a steady, normal crop in the field of humanity. We would not get along without them. They keep the kettle of things stirred, which otherwise would settle and spoil. These are they that keep the course of social life pure as a running stream and prevent it from becoming like a green, stagnant pool.

They supply ginger for political campaigns. They are the party out of power. They are the watchdogs of progress. Without them religion would harden into a cruel tyranny of superstition, falsehoods would be crystallized in power and ancient fraud live forever. They harass mankind into being honest.—Frank Crane.

Buy a Gasoline Engine You Can Depend Upon

TWO engines may look equally good, may even work equally well for a time. In the end one proves satisfactory, the other becomes a nuisance. Why?

Thorough testing takes time and costs money. It means careful adjustment under trying conditions. It is an expensive process, but a necessary one if the finished engine is to be dependable.

I H C Gasoline Engines Are Thoroughly Tested

No engine leaves the factory until it has proved itself thoroughly dependable. That is reason enough for buying an I H C engine. It is a good buy because it is dependable—it is dependable because it is thoroughly tested. If you want engine satisfaction for years to come go to the local dealer and buy an I H C gasoline engine. It is the safe way and by far the cheapest in the long run.
