There is not due to the excessive cost of elections, according to City Clerk Nelle Wolters, but to the excessive apathy of local voters in a municipal campaign that developed only two contests.

Wonder who's the Champion Wick-Trimmer

SAW a picture of a fellow that won a hand mowing contest in New Hampshire. He swung a scythe over a plot 20 x 50 feet in 4 minutes and 19 seconds. And he didn't even wilt his white collar.

Wonder how many lanterns he could clean, trim and fill in an hour. That's an old-fashioned pastime, too. I'm willing to bet him one thing, anyhow. I'll bet he can't light up his house, barn, garage, chicken house, corn crib and barnyard with lanterns as quick as he could do it with Delco-Light. And even if he could light up the whole place that way, he'd be scared every minute the place'd go up in smoke.

L. J. AUBLE

Just phone or drop me a card and I'll bring Delco-Light to your home for a night demonstration!

MEAT DEPARTMENT

What U. S. inspected meat, such as we sell, means to you:

During the first two weeks in February there were killed something over 50,000 hogs in Omaha, of which 13.18 per cent were tagged because of disease and of the total 8.53 per cent were tagged because of tuberculosis. There were retained—which were condemned as inedible or passed for sterilization—18 of one per cent. In addition to the whole carcasses, 4.17 per cent of the livers were condemned, 2.32 per cent of the hearts and 2.32 per cent of the casing sets were condemned.

On cattle there were killed around 12,000, of which 2.62 per cent were retained for disease, and 30 of one per cent were condemned or sterilized, most of these being condemned. Tuberculosis was a very small part of the disease, representing only .43 of the total cattle, or about 44 cattle. There was condemned, in addition to the carcasses, 2 per cent of the heads, 2 per cent of the tongues, 1.85 per cent of the hearts, 10.13 per cent of the livers, 4.09 per cent of the paunches and 2.23 per cent of the casing sets. This will give you some idea of the disease infection.

We sell nothing but United States inspected meats, corn-fed baby beef and young, lean, tender pork. WHO INSPECTS AND PASSES THE MEAT YOU HAVE BEEN BUYING ELSEWHERE?

Baptist Church Notes.

With the revival of the Baptist work in Ord, considerable interest is being shown and the Baptist people are looking forward with a good deal of happiness to the opportunity now offered them to engage in their own services and church work under competent and interesting leadership.

Though there was no time for great preparations for Easter, yet Easter services were very fittingly observed and were much enjoyed by all present. The pastor's morning theme was "The Empty Tomb" and that of the evening "The Light of the World." A special musical number in the form of a duet rendered by Mrs. Joe Rowbal and Mrs. Beachy was enjoyed at the morning service.

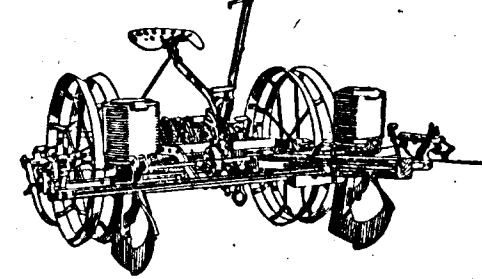

We wish to extend a cordial invitation to all Baptists of the community and all others having no church home here to attend our services. Services will be held regularly each Sunday as follows: Sunday school—10 a.m.; morning worship—11 a.m.; evening service—7:30 p.m.

Bad Weather Stops Training.

Winter weather last Sunday robbed several baseball teams in Valley county from getting a workout. Numerous community and country teams had planned on getting their initial practice upon Sunday afternoon but the weather was too cold. Joint called their practice off as did the other teams. Unless the weather gets warmer this week none of the community county teams will be able to get down to training.

Bigger Yields Easier Cultivating because of more Accurate Planting

THE CASE Corn Planter does an exceptionally fine job of planting as either a check-rower or drill. It has developed accuracy of drop and check to the point where the desired number of kernels are dropped in each hill and the checking is so perfect that cultivation is a simple, routine job a boy can do.

Many time-saving features have been incorporated such as automatic markers and automatic wire release, instant change from check to drill, foot drop for planting ends of rows and corners of field, change of seed plates without emptying the box.

The Case Planter is unusually simple in construction and easy to adjust—it has over 90 less parts than many planters. The frame is light but because of extra good bracing, it's very strong.

Built in two types—(1) Combination check-rower and drill, (2) Drill only. See this great planter. Come in when you can—you'll like our service.

Two Reasons and One Proof

In both tread and carcass—the two main parts of a tire—we can demonstrate that Goodyears are superior:

1—PALM TEST

2—CORD TEST

THE ORD QUIZ

Ord, Valley County, Nebraska.

H. D. LEGGETT - PUBLISHER
E. C. LEGGETT - EDITOR

Entered at the Postoffice at Ord, Nebraska, as Second Class Mail Matter Under Act of March 3, 1919.

Subscription Price $2.50.

This paper is represented for general advertising by The Nebraska Press Association.

Some of the Reasons.

SINCE what I said last week in M.O.C. about going onto a cash in advance basis of subscription for the Quiz I have had several ask for more particulars. One man came in who has never taken the paper and being assured that his paper would positively be stopped without any effort on his part when the time was up, he added his name to the list for a year. A farmer from the southwest part of the county wrote in to congratulate me on the decision and said it was the only way to run a paper. Another man from near Elvira came in to have me order the Bee-News which had expired and was promptly stopped. He said he had to miss a day but admitted that he had been notified and said had the paper kept coming he didn't know how long he would have neglected sending in his renewal. Manifestly daily papers could not long keep going if they sold the paper on time and lost a considerable amount, as they would.

I have found in the past that the largest loss from sending the Quiz after the time paid for expired, was from the single wrapper list. People moving to a distant town or state and who had been taking the paper, had it sent to them at the new home. After a time they lost interest in the old home community and gradually came to feel, when they owed ten or fifteen dollars, that it was rather an imposition on them to be asked to pay. The result is several thousand dollars that is total lost. Other publishers tell me they have had the same experience. I cannot afford to stand that loss so the great majority of subscribers who would pay, have to lose the favor of having credit extended on their Quiz because the small per cent are not fair with the publisher.

Distant subscribers are of no benefit to local advertisers and just this week I have taken off the list a number of them because they were behind on subscriptions and paid no attention to statements. I have tried to be fair and shall do so in the future. I send a statement telling all when their time expires and in close a postage prepaid envelope so they can either renew or write me at my expense and ask to have the paper stopped when their time is out. I feel that I am entitled to that courtesy and that it is no discount on my part to take their name off the list if they do not write.

So if you want the Quiz be sure and pay the subscription in advance. Daily papers collect in advance and neither you or I take a chance when it is done that way. Past experience proves that I take a big chance with the other method and that is why I am going to change to cash in advance.

Just when I had visions of asking Evert Smith to get the little old garden plowed so I could start planting onions and frost proof cabbage and things for greens it up and snows. I haven't heard from Charley Watson direct but rumor says he has his garden all planted and is urging his Missus to get down there as it is about time to start tending it. I would hate to have Charley get ahead of me in gardening.

I like a fellow who likes his home town and stands up for it and Nels Nielsen of Sutherland, Neb., suits me in that regard. Nels sold out his farming business west of Ord some months ago and engaged in the meat business with a brother-in-law at Sutherland. Since then he has acquired the whole business. In writing the other day to renew his Quiz subscription for another year, he has a lot to say about what a fine town he lives in and how much he enjoys his business.

He has been at Chadron since he left Ord several years ago and his athletic teams in all lines of sport have been unusually successful each year. Noyes' high school basketball team in this year won their conference title in the western part of the state, going through the conference season without one single defeat. It is expected that Noyes will again return to Chadron next year.

The Back Forty

By J. A. KOVANDA

A NEW interest in barley production is making itself manifest within the realm of agronomy. An excellent grain feed for livestock and poultry, the nearest substitute for corn, and the nearest equal to corn in nutritive value, barley is well worthy of this re-newed popularity, the like of which it has not experienced since biblical times when it was man's chief food.

On the basis of hull-free grain barley is the highest yielding spring grain that may be grown in the state. Through the country in general it produces more pounds to the acre than any other important cereal except corn.

When corn is selling at 85 cents, a feeder may buy barley to advantage at 65 cents per bushel. Many of California's blue-ribbon show steers have gone to the block without knowing the taste of corn, barley being the basic grain feed on the Pacific coast.

Barley may well replace oats when the latter are planted from the standpoint of using them in rotations. Barley makes a better nurse crop, and produces more pounds of feed per acre, altho oats may yield more bushels. Barley is planted at the same time, at the same rate, and in much the same manner as oats. The two are occasionally grown together for the production of mixed grain feed, using a medium late variety of barley, and an early variety of oats.

The objection to growing barley because it is so disagreeable to harvest, has been overcome by new varieties that have been developed in the last few years by the experiment station. Three years ago the Nebraska station announced that smooth bearded barleys were available. Comfort and Velvet barleys were so named because they are not disagreeable to handle. In fact they are nicer to handle than wheat, for the beards have no barbs or hooks on them. The new varieties have another advantage in that they are high producers, yielding much more per acre than the common barleys.

At present several local farmers desiring these improved varieties are faced with the problem of securing seed. The nearest available is at Valentine, and less than a dozen farmers in the state have field inspected Velvet barley seed for sale, according to the published certified seed list of the Nebraska Crop Growers' association. Fred, Minnesota 184, and Common Six-Row yielders are three fairly good varieties that may also be grown to advantage in this region.

It is probable that the first farmer getting either Comfort or Velvet barley started in the county will make some money selling his first crop or two at a premium for seedling purposes.

Home Management

Winter and Spring Salads.

Innumerable salads may be made by using gelatin as a basis, especially in winter and early spring. During these months the fresh fruits and vegetables are not plentiful so the house wife must make use of her canned goods.

Salads form an important part in the daily menu. They supply water, mineral nutrients, acids, bulk and flavor to the diet. The many combinations of fruits and vegetables afford variations in suit every taste. Wholesome and appetizing salads may be made by the addition of diced fruit, diced vegetables or both to gelatin. Gelatin salads may be served either with or without mayonnaise.

A wholesome salad may be made by filling halves of canned pears with cottage cheese sprinkled with paprika and served with a French dressing. Another appetizing salad may be made by adding chopped nuts, raisins and apples to ground raw carrots. This salad is attractive served with a cooked salad dressing on a lettuce leaf.

Good Lighting.

Esther Zukoski, Marie Kosmata. Lighting a home is a great problem for most every one so we will now consider the lighting of the different rooms.

As you approach a home the first thing you see is the front side of the house and also the front porch. Since the porch is the first thing that greets you, therefore you should have it lighted properly. The steps should always be lighted well for they are very dangerous and also people dislike to feel their way up and down steps. Urns, or a simple but distinctive fixture which is suitable for out of doors should be used.

No, you enter the vestibule or hall. This does not have to be lighted very well because there is seldom anything in it which would require a brighter light. The fixture which may be used for this may be a lantern.

We pass on to the hall. There is usually a mirror in this hall and wall brackets furnish good light for mirrors.

Next we come into the living room. The lights at night should give added charm. A living room should be suited to quiet occasions and also to a time when there is a joyous crowd. A central light is not very good for a living room because it forms too much of a glare which you are trying to avoid and it also reduces the size of the room. Portable lamps are the most efficient methods of lighting a living room. Wall brackets make a room distinctive and interesting if they are well shaded. Warm tints should always be used in lamps.

The dining room is usually more formal than any other room in the house. The lighting is really a matter of individual taste, some prefer the dome light and others the candlebra. Either is suitable if they are not glaring.

The kitchen light must be particularly good for it is here the housewife does most of her work. The artificial lighting should, in the kitchen, be placed so that it will light up the whole room but there should also be smaller lamps which throw their light directly upon where most of the work is done at night.

In the bedroom, a central light also gives the most satisfaction but smaller lights should also be used so that they could throw their light directly on the vanity or where ever desired.

The bathroom, if small, does not need any strong light. A few wall brackets are suitable. The mirror may be lighted by two wall brackets placed on either side or one above the mirror.

Most of the new fixtures are made of a combination of gold and silver palychrome, also wrought iron is used. These may be used in most homes of today and they are very attractive. Copper, cast iron and galvanized iron are used also, but they are not as attractive as the others.

The wiring of a house is very important and a great deal of time must be given to it. In wiring everyone should consider means of attaining good illumination, labor saving devices and lighting for decorative purposes.

Our meat is priced economically but first and foremost we desire to make it known that the quality is high and the utmost in sanitation and cleanliness can be found at our market.

PECENKA & PERLINSKI

A little foresight will mean a finer garden

THERE is a surprise when you first taste the melting sweetness of Ferry's sweet corn. It is not ordinary sweet corn by any means. Nor is a plump, red, smooth-skinned Ferry tomato like an ordinary tomato. Nor are the Ferry's Seeds that grow these like ordinary seeds.

Remember that when you buy Ferry's purebred Seeds, you buy inherited quality. Quality is bred into the seeds. A careful up-breeding of vegetables and flowers has been going on in the Ferry trial gardens for 51 years. This means that the Ferry's Seeds you can plant today came from parent plants and grandparent plants that were themselves purebred. Sixty thousand tests are made annually in the Ferry gardens for germination. Thousands of other trials are made for size, form, color, resistance to disease. So far as is humanly possible, we determine that every crop will meet the Ferry standards.

Ferry's Seeds are easy for amateurs to make grow well, and are naturally the choice of professional gardeners. They are fresh for planting now, at the "store around the corner." No packet of Ferry's Seeds is ever carried over by the dealer for sale the second season. Send for the Ferry's Seed Annual. It is more than a catalog. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Dept. H, Detroit, Michigan.

Your garden will have its best possible start with Ferry's purebred Seeds.

Letter of Condolence.
The following letter of condolence was received recently by M. L. Fries from Senator Norris:

United States Senate
Washington, D. C.
March 18, 1929

My Dear Friend:
I have received your recent letter, containing the very sad news of Cora's death. It shocks me more than I can say. It came so unexpectedly and like a lightning flash out of a clear sky, it held me for an instant dumfounded.

Cora was one of my friends who, it seemed to me, made me better for having known her. She always had the greatest respect for her from the time we were all classmates at school. Her modest and retiring disposition, and yet able and penetrating mind always impressed me with her virtues and her worth. And while I am shocked at her departure, I am likewise moved to tears in sympathy with you. Certainly, she was a wonderful helpmate, a wonderful companion, and I know how terribly lonely and disconsolate you must be.

I wish I might say something or do something, which would help alleviate the pangs of sorrow which I know you must suffer. To me, when sorrow overtakes, it is always a great sorrow to know that the sympathy of warm and loving friends, and to you, my old schoolmate, my friend of many years, I want to extend that sympathy and affection which I hope will help you to bear the burden that now overshadows your life. In the way of, of course, which all of us must eventually travel, and we can best be true to her memory by trying to do good, while we still linger here for others who are less fortunate than we. With a hope of true friendship and almost sympathy, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) G. W. NORRIS.

The U. B. Aid society did very well Saturday afternoon with their bazaar and bake sale in Anderson's store. About $30 was taken in.

for a 13 PLATE GRANT Battery

Truly a sensational price for a 13 plate battery of real quality—one that will render real service, and one which should greatly outlast its guarantee.

It is made and sold on a very low margin of profit—contains the same high-grade plates that are found in the heavy duty 1928.

Grant Batteries have been on the market for ten years, and thousands are being sold each week, with the result that the "cheaper" batteries made by the "cheap" makers are not to be confused with the "cheaper" batteries made "to sell at a price."

Meats—

Poor Meats are about the poorest things on Earth..

Poor meats cost the dealer less than good meats, but often he buys the poor meat and sells it at the price of the best and the consumer loses both in quality and price.

The Best Meats

That is the only kind we sell. We pay a little more money for it. We have to. But we ask you to pay no more. We sell the best for no more than others get for the lower grades.

Local achievement program of the Springdale club was well attended Friday evening at the Springdale school house. The ladies had asked Bud Auble to furnish lights and music for the evening, both of which were done very kindly and successfully. A number of selections were played by the Auble orchestra and the two little Auble girls sang for the crowd. Glen Auble lead the community singing which was enjoyed by everyone. Edna Smolik sang at the evening was enjoyed by a school program under the direction of Miss Inez Eberhart. There were several recitations, readings, songs by the school and a two character dialogue. Lloyd Zikmund, Richard Cook and Vera Smith sang at the school. The stunt put on by the club was a womanless wedding in which a number of the men of the community took part; of course it is needless to say that the effect of the last was especially humorous. After the program a caterer's supper of scalloped potatoes, sandwiches, pickles, cake, fruit salad and coffee was served by the club ladies.

Necessary Blanks Issued To Valley County Tax Assessor

NEW STATE TAX LAW REQUIRES THAT TAX PAYERS LIST PERSONAL PROPERTY AND INTANGIBLES ON SEPARATE SCHEDULES

THE INTANGIBLE SCHEDULE MUST BE FILED WHETHER TAXPAYER HAS INTANGIBLE PROPERTY OR NOT

A SWORN RETURN MUST BE MADE BEFORE LAST MONDAY IN MAY—LAW PROVIDES PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY

This advertisement, explaining the new law as carefully as it can be done, has been authorized published in all Valley county newspapers by the county board so that all taxpayers of the county may be fully posted on the law and so that none of them will be caused trouble by failure to comply with the provisions of the law.

All Nebraska taxpayers must this year make out two different schedules of assessment, one listing his physical property, and the other whatever intangibles he may own, for purposes of taxation. The two returns will be separate sheets of paper, instead of being combined in one as formerly.

If no intangible property is owned, the schedules must nevertheless be made out showing that fact. Under the new law which became effective Saturday when signed by Governor Weaver, the intangible return goes direct to the county assessor, while the regular schedule is given to the precinct assessor as heretofore. Precinct officials will have nothing to do with administering the tangible tax law, that duty being placed directly upon county assessors.

State Tax Commissioner Scott, who will have in charge the general supervision of assessing and taxing intangibles, has had blank forms printed as the new act requires and was mailing them out Saturday evening to county assessor. 3,500 such schedules have been received by E. C. Weller, Valley county assessor and are now being mailed all taxpayers of record. The new law specifically provides that the responsibility of securing these blanks rests with the taxpayer, and if any taxpayer does not receive one of these blanks they are required to call for same at the office of the county assessor not later than the last Monday in May and to file their return on intangibles as of April 1. Whether you have any intangible property or not this return must be filed. With the schedules came the following instructions:

- Outline of Requirements.
- "To the county assessor:
 - "1—Every taxpayer in the county must file this return.
 - "2—Failure to do so is punishable by fine or imprisonment.
 - "3—This return is not a public record.
 - "4—Information contained on this return must not be disclosed.
 - "5—This return is subject to inspection by the state tax commissioner or his duly authorized agent at any time.
 - "6—No precinct assessor shall advise or aid in making this return.
 - "7—This return may be made separately or jointly by husband or wife.
 - "To the taxpayer:
 - "1—Write your name and address plainly.
 - "2—Read questions one to three carefully.
 - "3—If your answer to either of these questions is 'yes' enter the amounts on lines provided on this schedule. After doing this carry totals to lines nine and ten and multiply by rates shown on these lines. Your total tax will be the sum of lines nine and ten.

"4—Sign your name and swear to the oath provided on the schedule before the county assessor, a notary public or other officer having a seal.

"5—File this schedule with the county assessor on or before the last Monday in May."

What Schedule Will Show.
Herewith is the form provided for reporting intangible property to the county assessor:

Valley Track Meet on April 11 Card

The Loup Valley high school track and field meet scheduled originally for April 5 has been postponed until April 11 to accommodate St. Paul who would be unable to compete if the meet was run off on the original date because most of the members of the track team will be in Chicago on that date. All of the players on the state champ team are members of the St. Paul track team so it would be quite unfair not to allow them to compete in the valley meet.

The meet now scheduled for next Thursday, April 11, promises to be a huge success. In all probability six teams will compete in the meet. They are North Loup, Scotia, Burwell, Arcadia, St. Paul and Ord. Trophies are to be awarded to the winning team, individual champion and half mile relay winner. The meet is being run off under the direction of Coach Rex Reed with the assistance of alumni of Ord high and members of the "O" club in Ord high.

St. Paul, led by E. Davis, Shively, K. Davis, Swallow, and Lynch, are the heavy favorites to capture the valley meet since such an impressive showing was made by these athletes in the annual St. Paul high school inter-class meet staged last week. Most of the St. Paul marks surpassed the Ord inter-class records. However the St. Paul track was in fine condition for the meet while Ord's was in poor shape for any meet. Shively ran the hundred yards in 10.2 in the St. Paul class meet and the two-twenty in 24 seconds to indicate that he will be the heavy favorite to cop the sprint honors.

Little is known of the strength of Arcadia although it is to be expected that they will have some point winners from among their entries. They ought to be particularly strong in the track events. This is the second year that track work has been given in the Arcadia schools.

North Loup, who won the meet last year, will be quite weak this year it is expected since Schaffner and Fuller, two mainstays on the championship team, are graduated. Hill, Paddock and Jeffries are expected to make a bid for place honors.

Coach Rolly's Scotia team is another valley team that is hampered this year by a loss of material through graduation last spring. Sauter, all-around athlete, graduated last spring. However, McIntyre, Badousek and Kelly will be strong in their favorite events.

Few men are reporting for track at Burwell high school this fall but those who are reporting seem to show considerable promise. Bud Hoyt is expected to put in a serious bid for high and low hurdle honors at the valley meet. He placed in the high last year. Coach Zorn has four other men who are strong in the field events. Thompson is one of Zorn's most outstanding men who is reporting for track at that school.

Coach Rex Reed will place a fairly well balanced team on the field for team honors and ought to give the Panek team from St. Paul a good race for the team championship. Reed is particularly strong in the middle distances, half-mile, mile, and four-forty. Carkoske ought to make a formidable showing in the sprints and hurdles. Adams, Hackett, and Peterson are slated to score points in the field events for Coach Reed.

It is to be hoped that Ord track fans will turn out and help make their meet a success. Last year the weather was a hindrance but if the weather man has a nice day next Thursday local fans will probably flock to the Ord fairgrounds to see the valley meet.

Junior Legion Baseball Team Starts Practice

Prospects for a winning Junior American Legion baseball team in Ord this year appear to be quite dark since most of the members of the sub-district championship team of last year are too old to compete in Legion ball this year. Practice started last week at the fairgrounds diamond under the direction of George Round, Jr. Twenty boys answered the first call but it is expected that about that many more will report this week.

Since most of the members of last year's team are not eligible to compete this year a complete new team will have to be organized and put into the field. Chatfield and Strong, last year's regular pitchers, will be unable to compete so new pitchers will have to be developed. Among those who show considerable promise of making the Ord team are McGinnis, Benda, Kelm, Cetak, Lashmet, Boquet, Finch Klein Urban, Whiteford, Slote and Strong.

Expect Ord Track Records to Fall

John Round holds the largest number of Ord high school track and field records, according to Coach Rex Reed. Round holds three individually and holds two others jointly with other men. Reed says that he expects most of the standing records in the different events to be broken this year by his track and field men.

The following records are the marks at which the Redmen will shoot this year:

100 yard dash—James Bell '27 and Syl Carkoske '28. Time 11 seconds.

220 yard dash—Syl Carkoske '28. Time 24.7 seconds.

440 yard dash—Vernie Anderson '27. Time 56.2 seconds.

880 yard run—James Bremer '28. Time 2 minutes 13 seconds.

1 mile run—Al Perlinski '28. Time 5 minutes 10 seconds.

120 yard hurdles—LeRoy Lashmet '27. Time 19.1 seconds.

60 yard high hurdles—John Round '28. Time 8.3 seconds.

220 yard low hurdles—LeRoy Lashmet '27 and John Round '27. Time 23.6 seconds.

110 low hurdles—Syl Carkoske '28. Time 13.6 seconds.

High jump—Everett Lukesh '28. Height 5 feet 6 inches.

Broad jump—John Round '28 and Chester Weekes '28. Distance 18 feet 5 inches.

Pole vault—Kenneth Hughes '28. Height 9 feet 8 inches.

Shot—Floyd Dye '28. Distance 40 feet.

Discus—John Round '28. Distance 99 feet 6 inches.

Javelin—John Round '28. Distance 140 feet 1 inch.

needed to start the season about May 1 with four teams competing. If Ord is to have such a league this summer it might be well that steps be taken right away to perfect the organization so that the schedule might start as soon as the weather permits. Other towns are organizing and Ord ought to do the same.

The city basketball league with 47 members was a huge success throughout the season and the twilight league might be formed upon the same basis this year. A meeting of all enthusiasts will probably be held next week to determine whether there is enough interest to warrant organizing such a league.

PUSSYFOOT'S SPORTLOG

HELEN EBY, teacher in the Ord schools, has organized a high school and grade school tennis club during the past week and promises to have the two tennis courts at the South school in shape to play on within the next week. Miss Eby is very enthusiastic over the organization of the tennis club of which Albert Moorman is president and believes that the club membership will grow as soon as the season actually opens.

Martin, alias . . . "Commodore" Perry, Wiegard seems to be getting into condition for the coming year. He goes down to the park club links and plays a round or so. He says that he is not going to be the dub in the coming two-ball foursome that the Ord golf club is staging. That is, unless he draws a poor partner. The club membership is great. Dan don't drink too much Peaberry coffee he ought to be quite a golfer this summer.

The Burwell Wrangler club's high school track and field meet this year promises to be one of the biggest of its kind in this section of the state. Last year thirty teams competed but it is expected that more teams will enter this year. Without much doubt the meet will be a huge success. According to Kenneth Reed, who is in charge of the meet, there is a possibility that Lamson and Trumble, two University of Nebraska hurdle stars, will be secured to run an exhibition race at the meet. Such would be a good advertisement for the Wrangler's meet and would certainly draw a larger crowd of spectators to the meet. Coach Reed expects to enter his Ord high team in the meet.

It is the hope of the sport editor of the Quiz that a number of Ord ball players will be used in the semi-pro team which is to be organized here this summer under the management of Floyd Megrue of Scotia. There are three or four young ball players in Ord who are quite capable of playing on the team if they are given a little experience and would be certain to develop as much as any Scotia lad or old head. We cannot expect to have any ball players from Ord upon our teams in the future if we don't give them a chance to develop in faster company. There was a young man's ball club operating in Ord last year playing independent ball which had several members who showed quite a bit of promise of developing into good ball players if they were given a chance.

The Ord athletic officials made a smart move when they postponed the Loup Valley high school track and field meet until April 11, thus allowing St. Paul a chance to compete. If the meet had been on the 5th as originally scheduled Coach Panek would have been unable to bring a team to Ord. Now he will be able to do so and it will probably be a team which will be quite capable of scoring quite a number of points. In fact, they will be the heavy favorites to win the meet unless the unexpected happens.

It might be of interest to Quiz sport readers to know that even in track St. Paul believes in starting their school children out young. They have a meet for the youngsters as well as the high school lads. They have a young boy, Neil Davis a brother of Keith Davis, who is but 12 years old. Young Neil is going out for track and seems to be specializing in high jumping. Already Neil jumps 4 feet and shows great promise of developing into a wonderful high jumper by the time he is in high school. I wonder if there is any boy 12 years old in Ord who can jump 4 feet. Let's hear about him if there is.

Andersen Looks Good.

Vernie Andersen appears to be the most promising ball player who is turning out for initial baseball practices of the Round's Irish Potato club. Andersen seems to be the sensation of the dozen or so members trying out for places on the team and again this year is going to be a sweet baseball player. He plays in the outfield.

Schaffner Expected to Be Peru Track Star

Harold Schaffner, former all-around North Loup high school athlete, promises to be one of the mainstays upon the Peru Normal track and field team this season. Schaffner is expected to run the hurdles and vault for Coach Graf's team this spring. The Peru team has engaged in no meets as yet but has been in training for about two months.

Schaffner is well known in Ord for his track ability. He scored heavily in the first annual Loup Valley high school meet staged here last year. Keith Davis, of St. Paul, however, beat him out by a small margin for individual honors. Schaffner was probably the greatest all-around athlete to ever graduate from North Loup high, winning letters in track, baseball, football and basketball. He lettered upon the championship Peru Normal football team last fall.

St. Paul Cagers to National Meet

Coach Pat Panek's St. Paul high school state championship basketball team is in Chicago this week competing in the national high school basketball tournament staged under the supervision of the University of Chicago. The St. Paul team was to play Tuesday against the Naugatuck, Conn., high school team. If they won their first game they were to play in the second round yesterday afternoon.

Last year the St. Paul team competed in the national meet but were eliminated during the first round. They later played in a consolation round only to lose out, also.

Nine men and Coach Panek made the trip to Chicago and are due to return next Sunday or Monday.

Beran Looks to Be Class of Tracksters

Coach Rex Reed has put his Ord high track and field team through strenuous paces during the past week in preparation for the annual Loup Valley meet to be held here April 12. Tryouts have been held in most events for the coming meet and it is considered likely that Reed will enter three men in most events, both on the track and in the field.

Syl Carkoske still shows the way in the short sprints but he has failed to show enough speed to place him very high in the Loup Valley meet. Lashmet seems to be the pick of the quarter millers and appears to be a comer on a good track. Without doubt Lumir Beran will place high in the valley meet if his time during the tryouts can be taken as an indication of his ability. Beran appears to be the most promising track man that Reed has this year and surely ought to develop before the season is very far along.

Adams ought to break into the scoring in the field events, being exceptionally strong in the discus and javelin. In Jay Hackett Coach Reed has a very promising broad jumper and one who is going to get some good distance before he takes part in very many high school meets. Hackett jumped well over seventeen feet in the inter-class meet and is slated to go over eighteen and a half feet before the season closes. Other men who undoubtedly will show up well in the valley meet for Ord include Peterson and Rowbal.

Robinson Is Officer of Baseball League

The central Nebraska baseball league will again be in operation this year after a meeting of all those interested was held in St. Paul last week. At the meet Dan Webster of St. Paul was elected president, Paul Robinson of North Loup vice president, and Otto Nelson of St. Paul secretary. All of the officers are enthusiastic baseball boosters and it is expected that the league will be a success again this year as it was last.

Many North Loup fans attended the meeting at St. Paul and were enthusiastic over the organization for the coming year. Ashton, Wolbach, Elba, St. Paul, Palmer and North Loup will comprise the league this year. Scotia, which was a member last year, has dropped out and Palmer replaced them.

It is not known yet as to the exact time that the league schedule will start.

Twilight League May Be Organized Here

Loup City is to have a twilight baseball league this year according to announcements made in the Loup City papers last week. It is plan-

Joint Items

Charlie Hather was in this neighborhood delivering gas and oil on Tuesday. Will Witte purchased a riding plow from John Pishna last week. J. L. Abernethy and family, Leon McMindes and family and T Asimus were Grand Island visitors Saturday. John Pishna and Agnes Sprengle were married at Cowles, Nebr. on Wednesday March 27. The young people left Ericson Tuesday afternoon intending to be married either enroute or at the home of Miss Sprengle's relatives at Cowles. Mr. Pishna is a well known young man of this vicinity and Miss Sprengle has taught in the school in the Doran district on the Dry Cedar for the past two years and is so well liked that the school board has prevailed on her to complete the term. The happy couple will make their home on the Doran ranch the coming year at least and Mr. Pishna will work for Harry Doran, the new owner, in capacity of manager of the ranch, as the ranch is only a short distance from the school house. Mrs. Pishna can easily attend to her school duties until the end of this term and have quite a little time to attend to home making besides. We join with their many friends in wishing them success and happiness in their new venture. About seven o'clock last Tuesday evening Ralph Hanson, who occupies the C. A. Dye farm, discovered that his barn was on fire, evidently the fire, the origin of which is unknown, started in the hay mow as the upper part of the structure was in flames when discovered. The neighbors were notified immediately and in twenty or thirty minutes a large crowd of willing workers were on hand but all that could be done was to protect the other near-by buildings and this was successfully accomplished. The barn, a large building with a large hay mow and a lean-to sixteen feet wide on both north and south sides was a total loss. Mr. Dye carried one thousand dollars insurance on the building with the Capron agency. A manure spreader, which Mr. Hanson had been using that day was loaded and standing close to the barn was practically ruined. Mr. Hanson managed to get 3 sets of harness out before they burned but he lost about six tons of hay, all halters, forks, etc., probably about $100 in all with no insurance. The building was free of live stock when the blaze started. The Abernethy and McMindes families were in Ericson on Friday evening. Louis Bowers has been helping Bill McMindes with his work the past few days. Corn picking is over for this spring at least, except for Dan Pishna, who still has corn in the field. Leona Holden spent all of last week with her sister Mrs. M. A. Bodyfield. F. O. Holden was in Ericson on business Saturday afternoon. John Miller and J. L. Abernethy have been quite busy the past week picking up the down corn that was left by the mechanical picker. They say it was a back-breaking job but quite remunerative. Dick Holden delivered a load of corn to M. A. Bodyfield on Thursday. The Misses Jensen were pleasant callers at the Holden home Friday evening after school. Ralph Hunter trucked a load of horses and mules from the McMindes ranch to Ord Friday afternoon. The H. A. club met with Mrs. A. L. McMindes Friday to make plans for the Achievement Day program. Mrs. C. A. Dye delivered a choice lot of eggs to Mrs. O. Hurlbert for custom hatching last week. Mrs. J. A. Bodyfield has been quite ill with the flu and at present is not much improved. Elmer Hildebrand of Rosevale is quite sick at this writing and we understand that he is threatened with pneumonia. Leon McMindes purchased a load of corn from Dan Pishna. C. A. Dye butchered last week and Mrs. Dye has been quite busy making sausage and canning and otherwise caring for the meat. We are told that Gerald was quite interested in the job. The heavy wind on last Thursday tore up the windmill on the R. W. Holden farm so badly that it is practically beyond repair. The warm weather the past week has reached some more of the frozen water pipes and in several instances are broken so badly that they had to be replaced. There are still some frozen yet. Those that thawed the past few days were covered to a depth of four feet. Ralph Hanson planted his spuds on Good Friday. Ed Jensen is quite busy discing his land for spring crops. Mrs. Will Witte has a nice bunch of baby chicks. These are the only ones in this community so far this spring. Daniel Pishna purchased a Ford roadster last week. John Zabloudil has been quite busy the past week hauling hay from the Will Witte farm. Helen Holden was unable to attend school on Thursday and Friday on account of sickness. Arvin Dye and Louis Bowers brought a bunch of horses from Ericson to the McMindes ranch on Sunday. Ralph Hanson and wife and F. O. Holden and family were Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hanson. Daniel Pishna and Leona Holden spent Sunday evening at the home of Mr. Pishna's parents, near Burwell. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hanson of Springdale enjoyed a short visit last week with Mrs. Hanson's brother, F. C. Shellhart of Honolulu. Mr. Shellhart is superintendent of the Universal Motor Company of that city. Ed Zabloudil has rented the York farm northwest of Rosevale for the coming year and has also leased the Cook land adjoining it and will farm both places. Mrs. Glenna Bower received word from her sister, Mrs. Howard Freed saying there was a baby arrived at their home on March 24. Mother and babe are doing nicely. This makes three boys and one girl in this family. Mrs. Freed will be remembered by her Davis Creek friends as Gale Grant. She taught school here two years before her marriage. Sand Flats News (By Alfred Babka) Easter Sunday dawned quite stormy which continued throughout the day and by night the entire landscape wore a thick mantle of new fallen snow so that visiting was quite below normal for the day. A number of young people from this community attended the Easter dance at Ord Monday evening. Art Mensing is constructing a large granary and corn crib. Lukesh brothers, carpenters of Ord are doing the job. Leon McMindes of Joint was in this neighborhood on business Friday. General farm work is in full swing on the Sand Flats. Plowing and discing is the order of the day while nearly all oats sowing will be finished this week. Joe Risan accompanied Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Every spring when the ice leaves the Cedar river and the weather turns warm great hordes of suckers that wintered in lake Ericson start coming up the river to spawn and this spring is no exception. Some wonderful catches were made during the warm days of the past week just south of Ericson where they move about lazily on the gravel beds. The fish are being caught by the snagging method and offer the early fisherman some real thrills. The average weight of those captured is from two to five pounds each and while not protected by the law are taken in large numbers it is not unusual to see a fisherman string from two to three dozen of these fish in a day when the run is good. P. church Saturday night in honor of the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bowen. Mr. J. E. Bowen of Plainfield, Wis., and Miss Evelyn R. Hall of Belle Center, Wis., were united in matrimony at Plainfield on Feb. 2, 1879, the Rev. R. E. Parks officiating. Miss Hall had been a teacher in the home schools until the time of her marriage and Mr. Bowen was engaged in the lumber business until the fall of '79 when the lure of the west sent out a call to the more venturesome and together they slowly wended their way in a covered wagon toward the rolling prairies of Nebraska. The years have always found them ready and earnest workers in every cause helpful in the building of their neighborhood. Mr. Bowen was active and successful in the organizing of a new school district near Ord, Neb., where they first settled and was one of the directors for about 12 years. He was postmaster at Elvira and received his second commission at that place in this branch of government service. They lived at North Loup a few years where they managed the Arlington hotel, later moving to Ord where Mr. Bowen was for many years a prominent employe of the Standard Oil company, until they again decided to cast their lot as pioneers and came to Colorado where they located near Bristol and have made their home in this vicinity for twenty-two years. For the past three years Mr. Bowen has been employed by the Continental Oil company at Bristol and they have formed a lasting affection for "Sunny Colorado" and the many friends they have made while here. Four children were born to this union, F. P. Bowen, of Sargent, Neb., Mrs. W. M. Alvord, of Eldorado Springs, Mo., Minnie Helen, who died in infancy and Mrs. B. E. Sterrett, of Bristol. Mrs. Alvord has been spending the winter with her people and the son came for a few years at this time, thus completing the immediate family circle to enjoy together the golden wedding anniversary. There are four grandchildren of two of whom were present—Dr. R. Evelyn Alvord, of Butler, Mo., and Master Lloyd Bowen not being able to be here at this time. Several gold coins were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Bowen through contributions by admiring friends. There were also other personal gifts.—Bristol (Colo.) Herald. Easter Cantata Given. North Loup, April 1.—(Special)—A beautiful Easter cantata, entitled "Our Living Lord," was exceedingly well rendered under the direction of Mrs. Elenora Murphy at the Methodist church Sunday night. Schwabauer, Roy Hudson, and Sterling Manchester, Basses, Everett Petty, Erman Barnhart, John Gray, and Donald Fisher. Christian Church Notes.

Next Sunday morning special emphasis will be placed upon the Bible study program of the church in the morning and in order to lend inspiration and encouragement to this vital part of our work, an effort will be made to have just as large attendance in the Bible school in the morning from 9:45 to 11 and then, follow this session with the church service at the regular hour with particular emphasis placed upon "The Word of God and Its Place in the Program of the Church." We are especially anxious to have a very large attendance of adults in the various classes of this department in our Bible school and then have them all remain for church hour of worship. The young people are always welcome to all of these services. Their contribution to the evening program on last Sunday as they help out in the chorus, was appreciated by all.

Those who may be ready for baptism can notify the pastor and he will be glad to arrange for a service of this kind on next Sunday after the morning hour of worship, or on any other date suitable to the candidate. We are having additions by confession and baptism about every week, and we hope that this interest in the soul-saving side of the church work will continue as this is the chief reason for all of our efforts in kingdom building. We change the hour of the evening services beginning with the first Sunday in April. The Christian Endeavor will hold its services 7 to 8 and the church services from 7:30 to 8:30 and 8:30 to 9:30. Interest in Christian Endeavor program on Sunday evening seems to be increasing. An effort will be made to make the church services in the evening always profitable and worthwhile by use of good song service and inspirational messages. Come out next Sunday to all of these programs.

GOOD PROGRAM ARRANGED FOR ACHIEVEMENT DAY

Many Clubs Participating in Program Planned for April 18th.

Carl C. Dale, county extension agent, is very enthusiastic over the prospects for a large attendance at the annual women club achievement day program to be held in the Ord high school auditorium on Thursday, April 18. Dale says that the program which is printed below is the best that an achievement day has had to offer in Valley county for many years.

This year there were nineteen clubs in Valley county taking extension work under the direct supervision of Miss Judge. These nineteen clubs were from all parts of the county and once a month Miss Judge came to Ord and North Loup and held leaders training schools for delegates from each club in the county.

It is hoped by Agent Dale that many towns as well as county people will be in attendance at the achievement day program and get a glimpse of what extension work is doing for women's clubs in Valley county.

Hunter's storage garage has been laid and work on the building itself is starting; the J. C. Penney company has a new yellow sign over their store on the west side of the square; Andersen's grocery and market has built a cashier's cage in the center of their floor; the Ord hotel has a new sign painted by George Owen; work started Monday on Miss Sophie McBeth's addition to her store building, which was occupied by the Curley Beauty Parlor until bought by Miss McBeth a few weeks ago.

District Legion Tourey May Be Held in Ord

There is a possibility that Ord may be one of the centers of the district American Legion baseball tournament early in July if plans of the local post work out to perfection. Members of the Legion post are behind the movement to land the tournament for Ord with a territory of seven surrounding counties from which to pick teams for play in the tourey. Last year the closest tournament was at Kearney, which is seventy-five miles from Ord, thus making the traveling distance and the expense too great while if the present district could be formed at Ord all towns would be within a radius of forty-five miles.

ORD SLUGGERS BEAT ARCADIA BY 14-13 COUNT

Ord Hurler Is Hero of Game; Fans 13, Hits Safely Four Times.

In a typical early season baseball game Round's Irish Potato ball club defeated Arcadia here Sunday by a 14 to 13 count. The game was played upon the fairgrounds diamond in Ord. As in most pre-season games both teams did not display exceptional baseball except at intervals.

The Ord team lead throughout the major portion of the game but Arcadia put over a heavy rally in the first of the seventh to hold an 11 to 9 lead at the end of that inning. Hits by Holmes, Kenfield, Allshouse, Owens and Milburn played big factors in the Arcadia rally. Ord came to bat in their last half of the ninth trailing by one score. Al Furtak, lead off with a two-base blow and brother Ed played the hero act by getting a nice single, scoring Al the closing run. V. Andersen played to the outfield and Furtak scored the winning run on the play.

Sargent, Blessing and V. Andersen played well along with Furtak for the Round's team. Beeghly caught a nice game behind the bat. Allshouse, Owens and Milburn played well with the losing Arcadia team.

The banquet served by the New Cafe consisted of fruit cocktail, baked ham, au gratin potatoes, string beans, vegetable salad, jelly rolls, pickles, coffee and cake. Entertainment in the lodge rooms upstairs and it was about 7:20 o'clock when the banquet was served.

Masons were present from Ericson, Scotia, Bartlett and other towns in this vicinity. After the banquet an informal time was enjoyed with inspection of the building and conversation in the lodge's lounge rooms. Taking care of the crowd before and after the banquet always has been difficult for the Masonic lodge before with the new temple this matter becomes easy.

Thirty-two Golfers Compete in Tourey

"Our first two-ball foursome for members and non-members had a most successful one," said H. G. Frey, president of the Ord golf club, today. Frey was very enthusiastic over the outcome of the tournament in which thirty-two non-club members and regular members competed. Those on the winning side were presented with a golf ball by the club.

The two-ball foursome was the first tournament staged by the Ord golf club this season but many more are planned for future dates. As a result of the tournament Sunday non-golfers have signified their intentions of joining the club at a future date. The object of the tournament was to attempt to increase interest in golf in Ord for the coming summer months.

Junior Legion Team Is Looking Better

More than thirty-five boys have been turning out for Junior American Legion baseball games during the past week according to George Round, Jr., and Carl C. Dale who are behind the movement to sponsor a team for the local legion post in Ord. Dale is the post athletic officer. Added material has been of such value to warrant a promising season for the local lads.

Among those who are trying out for places on the team and who show considerable promise are Klein, McGinnis, Boquet, Lashmet, Cushing, Whitford, Keep, Cetak, Finch, Severson, Rowbal, Demund, Hughes, and Hather.

SPRING IS HERE! BUSINESS MEN URGE CLEAN-UP

Spring is here. Nature is proving it by opening the buds on the trees, greening the grass, and putting things in order generally. The balmy air, the many bird songs, everything is telling the world the seasons have changed.

As always, the housewife and the gardener are not far behind. The grasses spring, heavy bedding on the lawns, and the spring cleaning of the wind, ladders propped up against the outside windows of the second story may be washed. These are the ways the housekeeper indicates that she thinks spring has come. And evening and morning finds many men raking the lawn, burning leaves, spading garden paths, or sowing grass seed.

All this activity, this bustle and preparation show that man has but forgotten nature, and is renewing, in small ways, the things which which he comes in contact. This is the time of year you should have your lawn rolled, and new seed and fertilizer put on it. Now is the time to begin flower beds, garden, and to make those changes in your property. . . . the time to tear down the litter and shed you do not want. . . . the time to build that new garage, to add that sleeping porch for summer comfort. . . . the time to buy new screens.

With all these things in mind, the Quiz advertising staff has this week in cooperation with the merchants prepared a number of ads reminding you of the duties this time of year brings. Local stocks await your inspection and selection; local merchants your command. Follow the trend of the season. . . . clean up, paint up, fix up, spade up, rake and plant! The increased beauty and value and comfort of your home will repay you again and again.

Old Settler Dies. Tyler Elliot, an old settler of Sphagdale and father of Mrs. Betty Clark, died at St. Joseph, Mo., on March 22 at the age of 88 years. He had been very active until the last few months. After he became ill he was cared for by his daughter, Betty. Her daughter, Lyla, from Custer, S. D., was there to attend the funeral.

Mrs. J. M. Schuyler was in Ord for a short time Saturday, coming from her home in Omaha, where she was on the way to attend to visit her daughter, Mrs. Archie Coombs.

SHOE FLINGERS MEET FRIDAY, ORGANIZE CLUB

Round Named Temporary Chairman, Baker Secretary; Hope for Forty Members.

Fifteen local horseshoe pitching enthusiasts meeting at an organization meeting held at the county agent's office last Friday evening. Temporary organization was perfected at the meeting and plans were laid for a successful horseshoe year in Ord.

Round named temporary chairman of the meeting and Clyde Baker secretary. Those present believe that there are many more pitchers in Ord and vicinity who would be willing to join the club and that it was inadvisable to elect permanent officers at the meeting. Round as chairman of the meeting committee, with Tony Grabowski and Bill Blaha as members, and Chas. Hather chairman of the rules and regulations committee, with Frank Glover and Harry Wolf as members. These two committees are to give their report back to the body this week when prospective club members meet again to perfect the organization.

It appears as though more interest in horseshoe pitching than ever will be worked up in Ord if the club is organized on a sound basis as those who are behind the movement are confident it will. In all probability, the club grounds will be west of the Checkerboard filling station and a pair of courts may be set in at the park for Sunday playing.

If present plans work out the Quiz will sponsor a tournament at the Valley county fair in Ord next August to determine the county champion to send to Lincoln to participate in the state horseshoe tournament.

North Loup, Apr. 8. (Special)—At the village election on April 2, 101 votes were cast, resulting in the election to the village board of H. C. Sample, A. D. Moulton and J. A. Barber, the last two succeeding themselves. Out of the total of votes cast, Mr. Barber received 97, Mr. Moulton 72, and Mr. Sample 63. In the election of members of the school board Maude Shepard received 55 votes, which was the largest number cast for any one member. Sterling Manchester and H. C. Sample were elected for the three year term, with Roy Cox running Mr. Manchester a close second. The 58 votes which Mr. Sample received, put him on the school board as well as on the village board.

Dale Advises Against Treating Seed Corn

"Valley county farmers will not be ahead by treating their seed corn," Carl C. Dale, county extension agent, told the Quiz yesterday. Dale's statement upon the experiments made by specialists at the agricultural college during the past years. The agent said that the mercuric compounds which are sold all over the country as a positive seed treatment are of no value to farmers in this county.

Recent tests made on the John Gilmore farm near Valley, Neb., indicate that Nebraska seed corn as selected by the good Nebraska farmer does not need treatment with the various mercuric compounds. Seed corn was taken on the planter boxes of six eastern Nebraska farmers, and from the agricultural college at Lincoln. Half of each sample was treated, the other half was not. Each lot was planted with the same planter, the same day, and in duplicate plots on rods.

Clements Families Buy New Homes

Two officials bought homes last week when Judge E. P. Clements and his son Postmaster Edwin P. Clements Jr. bought the C. J. Mortensen corner in southwest Ord where Judge Clements is now living. Already the Judge has the new house he will build on the corner lot just north of the Mortensen house, staked out and digging of the basement will be done as rapidly as possible. Postmaster Clements is to occupy the Mortensen house as soon as the Judge gets his home ready for occupancy. Judge Clements plans on having his home the last word in convenience and comfort when completed and Postmaster Clements will make extensive alterations and improvements in his home when he gets possession.

Farmers Will Receive Free Trees This Week

Valley county farmers who put in their applications last week for government forest trees which are distributed by the extension service through County Agent Dale's office here are to receive their trees the latter part of the week or the fore part of next. The trees are grown at the federal forest reserve at Halsey, Neb., and shipped to Lincoln where they are repacked and shipped out all over the state. Seventy Valley county farmers put in their applications last winter for the trees.

The pine seedlings are three year olds and about a foot high. The broad leaf kinds are one year old and from 18 to 24 inches high. These sizes are considered the best age to stand shipping and transplanting in a windbreak or woodlot. All trees come packed in bundles of 100 each.

Only thirty farmers received the trees last year as compared to seventy this year, according to Agent Dale.

ORD-BURWELL HIGHWAY WILL FOLLOW TRACKS

Alvin Blessing Tells Rotarians New Road Will Be Built, Graveled This Year.

Monday noon several members of the Rotary club were absent for one reason or another. President Van DeCar was absent to attend the funeral of a relative and Vice President C. A. Bowers presided. James Milford introduced his guest, Curtis Gudmundsen, who is scout master of a Boy Scout troop being sponsored by the club and he briefly told of the progress the boys, under his management, are making.

Dr. C. W. Weekes was the speaker of the day and talked on "the municipal hospital as it relates to the economic life of the community." He started out by saying that the day finally comes to all persons when there is a break in health. In developing his talk he brought out the thought which we all know when we stop to think, namely that the diseases to which we are heir develop mostly between the ages of 40 and 60 years. He also brought out the fact that a great change had come about in the practice of his profession in recent years in that now the tendency is to forestall disease or prevent it while formerly no thought was given until it developed and then an effort was made to cure it.

A scientific article read recently stated that new methods of blood tests would show for instance the presence of certain prevalent diseases, such as diabetic trouble as much as three years before trace of the trouble could be found in the urine. This shows that some at least of the diseases which cause great havoc among middle aged people really come on very slowly to begin with. Asked about this matter, Dr. Weekes said that it was the fact. "In the course of his talk Monday he made the statement that after the age of 40 men and women would have to rule by saving money for themselves by having a thorough physical examination yearly by a competent physician. "Instead of waiting for disease to appear we are actively preventing its appearance," said the doctor. "In other words we are changing our mode of attack from a negative defense to a positive offense."

In this connection he said a good word for the work which has been done the last year or two in the Ord schools, having the children carefully examined and reporting any trouble found to the parents. The result has been that little or no attention was paid to these reports by parents, but had they heeded the advance tip some serious illness would no doubt have been averted.

Following Dr. Weekes, Alvin Blessing was asked to report regarding road work planned for this season. Mr. Blessing is on the road committee of both the Rotary club and the Community Service club. He stated that both state and federal men were in Ord the past week and went over the road between Ord and Burwell and that before leaving they told him they plan to build a road between the two towns, starting at the Burlington track where the Burlington depot formerly stood and following the west side of the track all the way to Burwell and that they expected to build the road and get it graveled this year. They also told him that the road between the two towns, starting at the Burlington track where the Burlington depot formerly stood and following the west side of the track all the way to Burwell and that before leaving they told him they plan to build a road between the two towns, starting at the Burlington track where the Burlington depot formerly stood and following the west side of the track all the way to Burwell and that they expected to build the road and get it graveled this year.

JIM MISKO is a good head to tell a story and he seems to get more kick out of Scotch stories than others. Here is his latest one. Jim says a Scotch farmer felt his own well. His wife heard his cries for help and ran out and looked down the well and saw Sandy treading water to keep afloat. She encouraged him to keep on top of the water and said she would call the hired man from the field. Sandy yelled back asking the wife what she told him. It was 20 minutes to 12 and he said, "Don't call him yet, I will swim around here till noon."

I have a pretty good story on the editor of the Quiz, who easily holds the belt for snoring. Abe Lincoln was passing the Quiz office the other night (don't know why he was out so late) but he heard what he says was a terrible racket. He thought some patient at the Ord hospital was having a bad turn, then located the sound as coming from the north corner of the Quiz building. That establishes the fact as to who was doing the snoring. Abe says he always contended that Henry Geweke could keep the snoring bell against all contenders but he now thinks Henry will have to surrender it.

"I am might glad you are going to do it," said Andrew Nelson of near Elyria last Saturday, referring to our plan of going to a cash in advance policy on the Quiz. Mr. Nelson said that his daily paper stopped when the time was out and he didn't know of any good reason why his weekly shouldn't do the same. I had a nice visit with John Mason who lives southwest of Ord on the Arcadia road, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Mason was in the Quiz office to pay his subscription; he marked as he came in that he had better be paying his Quiz subscription while he thought of it as his time would soon be out, and he didn't want to be without the paper which he had taken for many years. He said he never could understand why country weekly papers didn't like the daily papers did, stop when the time paid for was out and he said he was glad the Quiz was adopting that business-like policy.

Ord Twombly was in the office the other day to pay up his subscription and said he wished he would adopt a cash-in advance policy like the daily papers did. This was just before we announced the new policy but after it had been decided upon and his encouragement was timely. I have talked this matter over with probably 20 men and business men in the past couple of weeks and so far everyone has endorsed the plan. Most of them have said that they had not been able to understand why such a policy had not been adopted before. C. W. Beoba of Garfield county, one of them and he said, personally he always regarded it as a sort of imposition when a paper continued to come after the time it had been paid for was up. I told him that I had always felt that I was doing the subscribers a favor and he said he couldn't see it that way and he was glad to see the change in policy.

Anyhow it is not long till June 1 and I hope every Quiz subscriber will see to it that his subscription is paid in advance before that date or will make arrangements to have further credit extended. I find by a count that our list could not be materially reduced because there is a small per cent who are now or will be in arrears June 1 but I want everyone who wants the paper to have it. I don't want to seem to crowd it onto anyone who don't want it. We are all the time making plans to make the Quiz better and I believe it is of interest to every Valley county resident. I don't want to take your name off the list. If you want the paper it will save you missing a copy or two and save you considerable work if you pay up before the name comes off.

Drove out to the garden Sunday to get a pair of horseradish and parsnips and was surprised to find the ground about ready to be plowed and before this is read it will be ready for planting and before this week is gone will be partly planted if weather conditions remain serene. The creek looks enticing and I can see worms and the old fishing rod all ready and there is no reason why the Missus and I can't get at the garden work now.

The buses got in the transportation game a few years ago and have continued to encroach on the business of the railroads until now the railroads are preparing to strike in self defense by putting on competing bus lines. Looks like they might get into a merry scrap over the carrying of passengers pretty soon.

"They" say that Sheriff Round and deputy, (or whatever position he holds) Fardeus got a tip that a keg of whiskey was hidden in the north part of the county and to come quick. They did. But it was found that the hard liquor was a couple of miles over in Garfield county. Having heard rumors that Garfield county liquor law enforcement machinery was out of commission the Valley county sleuths brought the liquid dynamite to Ord and taking a sample for evidence dumped the balance in the sewer. Then it was found that instead of hard liquor that had been captured, it was only a keg of innocent unfermented grape juice, which must be unsealed and sugar added to make it alcoholic and intoxicating. But "they" is so uncertain I hesitate to believe the wild yarn. I give those two officials credit of knowing hard liquor at the first smell or taste or however they examined it. Still it is just as well not to leave the "makers" parked around loose if we want some real stuff for the 4th.

ANNUAL LOUP VALLEY TRACK MEET TODAY

Stars from Eight Schools Will Perform on Fair Grounds This Afternoon.

The second annual Loup Valley high school track and field meet is being staged on the fairgrounds track in Ord this afternoon starting at 1:30. Eight teams are entered in the competition and it promises to be one of the most successful meets ever held in Ord if the weather is at all favorable. The meet is being awarded the team champion, relay winner and individual champion. Ribbons will be awarded those who place in the various events.

The Arcadia and North Loup high schools are playing ball at 4 o'clock as an added attraction. It is expected numerous followers of both teams from the two towns will be present to see their team win. North Loup is the favorite to win the game.

The Loup Valley meet was sanctioned by the Nebraska State High School association last week through its secretary, Walter I. Black, according to Coach Reed who is directing the meet. The meet is being sponsored by the "O" club of Ord high.

Coach Reed is hoping that Ord track and field fans will turn out in numbers to help make the meet a financial success. All Loup Valley records are expected to be broken and not for some time has there been such an array of track and field stars coming to perform in the Loup Valley meet here today. Fans will get a glimpse of the members of the championship St. Paul basketball team in action since all are mainstays on the St. Paul high school track team. It will pay local fans to keep their eye on Everett and Keith Davis throughout the meet as well as other stars from other schools.

Those who are entered in the meet include St. Paul, Burwell, North Loup, Loup City, Scotia, Arcadia Dannebrog and Ord.

The meet starts promptly at 1:30 p.m. at the Valley county fairgrounds.

St. Paul High Loses in National Tournament

Coach Pat Panek's St. Paul high school basketball team, state high champions this year, were defeated in the first round of play in the national basketball tournament at Chicago last week by the champions from Connecticut. The St. Paul team, according to reports, put up a great exhibition of offensive basketball but did not have a very good defense. This is the second year that the championship St. Paul team has attended the national tourney only to lose out in the opening round.

The St. Paul team, after being beat in the first round, went into the consolation tourney and on their first game from Miles City, Wyo., and at the time were one of the favorites to go through the tourney of consolation. However, Cicero, Ill., defeated them in the second round 39 to 28.

ORD TRACK ATHLETES LOOK GOOD IN TRYOUTS

LOOK GOOD IN TRYOUTS track athletes held their try-outs for the Loup Valley track meet last week and apparently are going to make a strong bid for championship honors this year.

As was to be expected Lumir Beran was easily the star of the try-outs and is an unusually promising prospect. In the mile try-outs Beran paced it in 5 minutes and 1 second without extending himself to any limit, according to Reed. Such time is remarkable for so early in the season and hence Beran ought to be able to crack ten to fifteen seconds off that mark before the season closes. In the half mile Beran also placed first with a time of 2 minutes 13 seconds. He was also without competition in this event, although Chatfield, another one of Reed's coming track stars, placed second with a time of 2 minutes and 30 seconds.

Syl Carkoski won the 440 tryout without any competition, Lashmet not being able to run, with a time of 57.2. It is in this event that Coach Reed expects to score high this afternoon since Lashmet and Carkoske are both exceptional quarter milers. Carkoske and Hackett won the hurdle races but not in exceptional time. Adams threw the discus 98 feet, high jumped 5 feet 3 inches, and put the shot 40 feet to win these events. Hackett broad jumped 17 feet 5 inches to win this event from Carkoske who was fairly close second.

been busy during the past week putting the two tennis courts at the grade school in condition for playing and it was expected that they would start this week. It is probable that only members of the club who are in good standing will be allowed to play on the courts. There is probably more tennis enthusiasm in the Ord schools now than ever before due to the efforts of the girls physical director, Miss Eby, and numerous tennis tournaments probably will be held throughout the remainder of the school year.

PUSSYFOOT'S SPORTLOG

CARL C. DALE, county extension agent, has a dog by the name of "Buckshot" that takes the prize for getting choice meat. Soon after the Andersen grocery added their meat department Buckshot sauntered in the back door one morning early and thereupon stole a choice ham from a hook in the back room. After getting the meat the dog went to the courthouse lawn where he started to eat his prize. Marshall Covert came along and threatened to shoot the dog until he was told by Verlie Andersen that he belonged to Dale and had peacefully taken the meat from the store. Dale unhesitatingly declares that his dog knows good meat when he sees it.

Among the most enthusiastic horseshoe pitchers in Ord is Joe Klat. He was present at the initial horseshoe pitching club meeting held last week and was "red hot" about the possibility of the organization of such a club in Ord. Joe says that in Burwell they have a club with forty members and certainly there ought to be enough men in and around Ord who would be mighty willing to join the club to make it a success in every way. Joe himself, isn't so bad when it comes to pitching horseshoes and he takes the best of them on when he is "right" and that is quite often. He thinks that a county tournament this fall at the fair would be a wonderful thing for pitchers all over Valley county.

It is the hope of the Quiz sports editor that all track fans in Ord will turn out this afternoon to help make the second annual Loup Valley high school track and field meet a huge success. Eight teams are entered and fans will get a chance to see some of the best track men in the state in action. St. Paul is doped to win but it is predicted that they will not defeat Ord by ten points for Rex Reed has some men who are going to surprise fans this afternoon. In Toman, Coach Pat Panek, of St. Paul, has one of the top notch high jumpers in state high school track circles. Toman jumped 5 feet 3 inches in the inter-class meet at St. Paul two weeks ago and is slated for big things this year. Other athletes from St. Paul who are extraordinarily good are Keith Davis, Everett Davis, Lynch and Shively. One will see some mighty fine sprint races between representatives from the eight schools with Shively of St. Paul favored to cog both events, the 100 yard dash and the 220 yard dash, since he ran both in exceptional time in the St. Paul inter-class meet.

ter-class meet. However, Carkoske of Ord and Wagner of Burwell will give him a mighty close race and Carkoske might beat him out. In every event the competition ought to be close, both on the field and track. You can help to make the meet a success by being present. There are a plenty of prizes to be won between North Loup and Arcadia so be there!

It looks as though Loup City is going to have a successful twilight league this year since they have already four teams lined up for play during the season with about forty fellows anxious to get started. They plan to start their schedule about May 1.

Junior American Legion baseball will be on a boom in Ord this summer if a district tournament can be secured to be held in this city. If the tourney is held here there would be about ten or twelve teams compete for honors to go to the state meet at Omaha later on. A tournament here would be a big advertisement for Ord as a better basis in future years. Every community organization ought to be behind the movement strongly and cooperate in every way possible to secure the tournament for our city. According to schedule the thing would be staged during the fore part of July.

Some day Don, Bill, and Jack Tunnell, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Tunnell of Ord, are going to be live-wire Ord high school athletes. The boys are just living and dreaming of the days when they can be out on the football field, the basketball court, and track performing for Ord high. They have a set of standards at their home and at present are working hard on different field events. They have track races, too, and without doubt if these lads continue to work as they are now they will be premier Ord high athletes within the next few years.

Many Farmers Are Planting Barley

"More Valley county farmers are planting barley this year for the first time than ever before because of the fact that the new varieties, the velvet and comfort, are such an improvement over the old type barley which used to be planted and that barley has such a greater feeding value per acre than oats," Carl C. Dale, county extension agent, told the Quiz today.

The agent said that farmers in this county are coming to realize the fact that the development of the two new varieties, comfort and velvet, is a big improvement over the old types. However, the agent does not recommend either the comfort or the velvet for this county now since there has been no experiment as yet in any part of the county, with but one exception.

This year the Nebraska Crop Growers' association certified 9,000 bushels of comfort and velvet barley but this supply has been exhausted already through the steady demand for the new seed. Ordinarily there are 400,000 acres of Nebraska land devoted to growing barley but since the development of the new varieties without hooks on the beards farmers have taken to growing this crop in greater acreage than ever before.

Barley ordinarily will yield from one-third to one-half more feed value per acre than oats, Dale stated. The superior yield over oats and greater feeding value of the new varieties as well as the absence of the hooks on the beard are given as the reasons why the new types are meeting with favor among Valley county farmers.

Mrs. Neldore—Professor Allegro called at our house yesterday, and my daughter played the piano for him. He just raved over her playing. Mrs. Naylor—How rude! Why couldn't he conceal his feelings the way the rest of us do?—Pathfinder.

A good method of applying is to have someone stand in the wagon and spray each shovel full of oats as it is scooped from the bin into the wagon. Two strokes of the sprayer are usually sufficient for each scoop full of grain. After the oats have been sprayed and loaded into the wagon the grain should be covered with a blanket of canvas for about six hours. The oats are then ready to plant.

It is also a good idea to spray the drill box and wagon box before putting any oats in. If the seed is to be sacked, the sacks should also be dipped in a solution.

Oats smuts destroy a hundred million bushels in the United States annually. They are prevalent all over the state, and probably do thousands of dollars worth of damage each year here in Valley county. Their presence is not easy to detect; farmers have been known to lose a fourth of their crop, and still insist that they had no smut.

When an oats seed sprouts the smut spore or seed does likewise. It sends a tiny tube into the oats seedling and develops within the plant. When the oats head fills out, the smut takes complete possession, and instead of having grain fit for food the oat head is simply a foul mass of black spores.

Hot formaldehyde is used to ward off such potato diseases as scab, scurf, and black-leg, which cause an annual loss of about 28 per cent of the country's potato crop.

Potatoes are soaked for two or three minutes in a solution of one pint formaldehyde to fifteen gallons of water, heated to a temperature of from 118 to 125 degrees.

This method requires so much equipment and preparation that it scarcely pays the farmer planting 4 or 5 bushels of potatoes to bother with it. A small lot may be treated

The Back Forty

By J. A. KOVANDA

THE ARRIVAL of early crop planting time brings up the problem of treating seed. Oats and potatoes are both likely to be benefited by treatment before planting.

The "dry" treatment for oats smut is efficient and easy to apply. Simply take equal parts of formaldehyde and water and spray on the oats with a small hand spray such as may be purchased for a few cents to put school-fly on cattle.

A good method of applying is to have someone stand in the wagon and spray each shovel full of oats as it is scooped from the bin into the wagon. Two strokes of the sprayer are usually sufficient for each scoop full of grain. After the oats have been sprayed and loaded into the wagon the grain should be covered with a blanket of canvas for about six hours. The oats are then ready to plant.

It is also a good idea to spray the drill box and wagon box before putting any oats in. If the seed is to be sacked, the sacks should also be dipped in a solution.

Oats smuts destroy a hundred million bushels in the United States annually. They are prevalent all over the state, and probably do thousands of dollars worth of damage each year here in Valley county. Their presence is not easy to detect; farmers have been known to lose a fourth of their crop, and still insist that they had no smut.

They had been practicing for many months for this exhibition and were skillful in their use of Indian clubs, wads and dumbbells. Basketball and clubs were brought into use in a number of exciting games and races, and their well executed Irish lilt and oiden dance were most interesting. The girls are enthusiastic about their work in physical training, and doubtless another year will find even more who will want to take it up.

Goodyear Tires Set New Sales Record

"Probably the best possible evidence of the wide popularity of Goodyear tires and other products was given in the 1928 statement of earnings just made and which shows that the Goodyear company set a new record in sales volume," according to a local Goodyear dealer.

"The report showed an increase in total unit sales of tires of 32 percent over 1927 and sales amounted to $250,769,209, an increase of $28,590,669 over the previous year, notwithstanding the lower selling prices prevailing in 1928 and large losses incurred by the industry generally due to the drastic drop in crude rubber during the first half of the year."

"This unusual record," according to Blaha brothers, "is, in the last analysis, a tribute of faith in Goodyear products by the motoring public of America and the world. It proves that more people prefer Goodyear tires than any other kind."

They call attention to the fact, brought out in the company's report to stockholders, that tire prices are now lower than ever before in the history of the industry, being 50 percent below 1914 and 1919-20 prices, while mileages have steadily increased.

IS A place to enjoy. And nothing adds to the enjoyment of the whole family like a few pieces of new furniture thoughtfully chosen.

Perhaps its a new pair of springs for the bed in the children's room. Perhaps it is a more convenient smoking stand to place beside father's favorite chair... or the easy chair itself.

Maybe it is a breakfast set of table and chairs you've been needing for a good while. Maybe it is only a new teakettle, a bright red one. Perhaps it is a new range, shiny and competent looking, promising many good things to eat in the future.

Possibly it is a new living room suite, now that the children are big enough so that the furniture has a chance. Maybe it is a new picture or mirror... Whatever it is, we have it.

Miss Ida Gartside, who was injured in an automobile accident last week is improving slowly. Miss Gartside received a cut on the head and a severe hip injury when the car which she was driving turned over twice on the highway one mile east of Arcadia last Thursday. After being passed by other cars she lost control of her car and the quick application of the brakes was probably the cause of the trouble. The car was badly wrecked in the accident but Ida's many friends are glad to know that her injuries are not thought to be serious. She is recovering rapidly.

Give these energetic seeds a chance in your garden

ENERGETIC seeds take no more digging, or raking, or caring for in a garden, than seeds that are not so full of the spirit to live. But think of the difference at harvest time! The energetic seeds withstand disease better — grow better and stronger — produce more vigorously and more abundantly.

The Ferry's Seeds that you can buy today at the "store around the corner" are surprisingly energetic. What is more, they are fresh. What is most important, they are purebred! These Ferry's Seeds came from plants that measured up to the Ferry standard in size, color, flavor, productivity — plants that have handed their inheritance on. They are pedigreed seeds! — in the strict sense you mean when you say a race-horse is pedigreed. Their parents, grandparents, great grandparents — all were of fine true stock, without an inferior strain. Doesn't this mean something to your garden? Send for the Ferry's Seed Annual to plan what you want. Remember that Ferry makes thousands of tests a year to determine the truthness of every seed you now can spill into your hand from a bright Ferry packet. Garden facts in the Annual make it far more than a catalog. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Dept. H, Detroit, Michigan.

Around The World And A Year in China

By FRARY RHEA COLLISON

I had quite a conference with my Chinese tailor this evening. After some time I gleaned from his excited talk that when he cashed a check of mine for $2.50 he had received $2. I think he believed that I had not paid him in full, or else he was trying to work me for an extra fifty cents. He finally believed that I had written the check for the full amount of $2.50 when I showed him my returned check. He then told me he did not know who had taken the money, whether it was the "e-go ren" (no one seemed to know what he meant by that) or the "check" man, but that some one had—and illustrated this remark with a gesture of pocketing the money. It was not funny to him, but the conversation was very funny with such a mixture of poor English and very, very poor Chinese.

After a wonderful, hot bath in the Soochow bath, which was really a huge rock, and after retiring, I felt ashamed of myself to be enjoying such complete bodily comfort. How was it in the dark, damp and narrow "by" street? How clean, how blissful and how luxurious it all seemed here in Nanking.

January 13, 1923.

A Full Day and Night

WE HAD lived in anticipation of a hike on Saturday for a week. What a satisfaction it was to get out of doors; it is not only a feasting of the eyes, but also a feasting of something like an insistent demand from within.

This was to be more than a pleasure trip, for it was high time that we were about the business of having our passports fixed up for the return-home journey.

Our favorite matchay transported us and our launches to the American consulate, where we were ushered into a room of torrid temperature. Here the young, unmarried and interesting vice consul put up with our passport business. I had made a dreadful mistake! I had donned my new knickers that the tailor had made for me and had just delivered the night before. The girls all agreed that the tailor had made them altogether too large and especially baggy in the seat—so much so that they were absolutely funny. Therefore, I could not remove my coat and sweater in this overheated room. Furthermore, I was encumbered with heavy "long ones" and woolen bloomers. The stove was roaring and the room was so hot that it seemed that the girls were unusually long in writing out their applications, but they were comfortable, having thrown back their wraps and were literally basking in the sunshine of the vice consul's smile. In truth they were very witty, very charming, and exceedingly deliberate. I thought I would expire before we made our "get away."

We matchayed to Hsiagwan gate, grabbed our bundles of sandwiches, dismissed the matchay and climbed up to the top of the wall, which encircles most of the city in a twenty-one mile circumference.

This is a pretty piece of the wall. On one side, just below us, was the canal, and on beyond the Yangtze. We watched the sampans, with large white sails, float fairy-like and leisurely down the river.

One of the most interesting observations to me was the custom of the dirt diggers. They were eflacing a hill within the walls of Nanking and were taking away the dirt. However, here and there they were leaving funny, tall projections of the hill which were topped with a bit of grass. They looked like strange formations of rock, such as those found in the Garden of the Gods in Colorado. The girls explained that the Chinese believe that they must leave these projections until their work is safely completed, in order to appease the earth goddess who looks down from above, and because of these projections she cannot see that the earth has been disturbed. After their work is completed it is safe to remove them.

I was surprised to see that Nanking had within its walls so many truck gardens, large open places and many hills which were covered with bamboo and fir trees. The wall curves in and out, affording an ever changing view. We came at length to a place on the wall where pedestrians were not permitted to pass. We were told by the guards that a "secret" was hidden there. All foreigners knew that "the secret" was a cannon.

Consequently, we slipped down the hill into Nanking, and also into a forest of bamboo. It was great sport to bend the bamboo down and let them whip back into their places. A nice secluded spot was found under some fir trees where there was sufficient sunshine to make our lingering there comfortable. Secluded? No sooner had our lunch been unpacked than we had an audience—watchful and curious.

Gulingon is a famous old monastery in Nanking, and the word Gulingon means "old wood," deriving its name from the wooded hill upon which it is located. Gulingon was the real "goal" of our hike. In the early afternoon we found ourselves sauntering up the long walk to the monastery which is flanked with lilac bushes. We found the place especially clean, but built like other monasteries with the same Buddha and Goddess of Mercy and the many disciples of the Buddha in the courtyard. The priests gathered around and wanted us to take their pictures, which we did. They were very provoked and skeptical however, since we could not show them the picture immediately.

We climbed the hill back of Gulingon into the "old wood." We found a spot that really was secluded and also sheltered from the wind. It was pleasant to recline on the banks and to look up into the yellow and pale green leaves of the bamboo, delicately traced against a blue sky. The wind stirred the leaves into a gentle whispering music, reminding us of the classical themes of Chinese music which are played upon their ancient stringed instruments.

After five miles by wall and five miles across country—foreign mail and Chinese food "hit the spot." That evening we were well content to lounge upon the "davis" in front of the fire in the fire place. The doctor had been hunting and retired early. But soon a "wild" woman appeared, fantastically clad in garments procured from our different wardrobes, one girl's sport shirt, another's hat, another's veil and scarf, and my Poochow umbrella. Fancy garters, if you please, and much pose.

We had just tucked ourselves in bed when we heard the fire bell clang. We rushed to the windows and saw the firemen of Drum Tower in their white uniforms and flashing brass helmets dash out of the tower. We located a red glow from our south windows. "Let's go to the fire!" was answered by immediate action. We hastened down Bum-en-chiao and walked and walked and walked—always the fire was just ahead. We found the fire on a street called Chu-mem-chiao, and since we were y-gwa ren (foreigners) we managed to slip through the crowd. The police would not let people push in front of us, and consequently we had the vantage point from which to view the fire. It was a very dark street since there were no lights save those of the huge lanterns, carried by people in the crowd. These were very fragile, being made of paper pasted on a framework of bamboo, and they bore flaring Chinese characteristics. These lanterns bobbed around in a wierd manner and distributed a surprising amount of uncertain light.

The Chinese houses in this district were built in a series; i. e. a row of houses, say four in number; the first one opens on the street, but behind it is a court, and then a house and then another court, and so on. There is an alley-way from the street that opens into each court. Apparently, the fire was in the second house, for we saw the firemen hoist the little hose over the first house, and then the white uniforms and brass helmets became very animated, rising and falling in the rhythm of pumping water out of those pitifully small water barrels into that hose.

The Chinese folk all around did not seem very disturbed or excited. We were quite amazed that the people in the houses near by did not seem worried and were not even carrying their worldly goods out into the streets. But after considering this phenomenon, we decided that the Chinese feared thieves as much as or more than fire and would rather take the chance that the fire would not reach them. In leaving the "fire," we were forced to take hold of hands in order to stay together as we pushed our way thru the street that lead back to Drum Tower.

A Grey Day

ANOTHER piece of the wall today! On the way to the wall, an interesting garden caught our eye. Here was a finge built out in the center of a large pond, and a widow's arch loomed across the path that connected the tinge with the garden. My companion told me that if widows remained true and constant to the memory of their husbands, who have gone on before, their descendants will erect arches to proclaim the constancy of the widows. I heard of no widowers arches.

The colorings of the temples were varied, as a rule—here was one of orange and red, toned down in color by the kind hands of time and weather.

It was a slippery ascent to the top of the wall at Han-se-men. Leaving made the top, we walked along leisurely, enjoying the "crunching" our boots made upon the "seldom" snow. The path was wide and deep in grey clouds that completely covered the blue of the sky. We looked down upon a grey and sad world outside the wall. Tiny, slimy and filthy courtyards, which were surrounded by mud huts. These were the homes of the dung carriers, whom we met every day as we went to school. Most of these were women, and we supposed that their husbands were busy in some pursuit on the canal or river. These carriers went the entire day picking up dung from the streets. We noticed that they carried bowls with them and imagined that they frequented the free rice kitchen that a benevolent and rich Chinese gentleman had opened for the poor. In the evening they carried their loads over the little hills and on through the gate of the wall. Piles of precious fertilizer which they sold in the spring time were heaped high in the court yards.

Now and then we would see grinding stones around which a blindfolded donkey or a woman, treaded an unending path. They seemed to be grinding corn and that had been soaked in water.

This phase of Chinese life ran down to the edge of the canal, which at this time was deplorably shallow, but packed with bulky river junk, some of which were in quiet and very slow motion, apparently seeking the river. We had been told that the people were suffering due to the lack of rainfall. The pools, which they carried their loads over the little hills and on through the gate of the wall. Piles of precious fertilizer which they sold in the spring time were heaped high in the court yards.

The "Be-Glad Lake"

OUR BELOVED lady was very indulgent to us; because we liked Jong-wa fan (Chinese food) so very, very much, she planned that we might celebrate our Saturdays eating as much as we wished. After one of these exceedingly good lunches, Ves and I set forth to meet others to like to the "Be-Glad-Lake." A ricksha was engaged to carry the lunch, which had been prepared by one of the crowd as a surprise; we all had recognized the two "un-bearable" thermos bottles and knew who had been the thoughtful one.

gardens, were the people praying for rain. The rainy season was overdue, and would come eventually, but it seemed an eternity.

On beyond, we saw the faintest rosey reflections of the canal and distant ponds, caught from prodigal gleams from the sun, which was still wading. To us this rosey gleam meant a gleam of hope... the rainy season was coming!

Looking down upon the city of Nanking, which lay so snug within its walls, we could not help but notice the difference in the homes. Here were more substantial buildings, with their feet out of the mire. A natural point of interest stood forth in an imposing pink house with a garden cut off from the world by walls, we could not help but notice the difference in the homes. A great clattering proved to be a duck farm. Here ducks were reared off into "squads," the pens covering a bit of sloping ground and a bit of the pond below. It was feeding time, and therefore the clatter. After their supper, their evening diversion was a grand slip down the slope and a "ku-plunk" into the cold, cold water.

We investigated a room of the watch tower over the next gate. The occupant was not at home. He was a beggar, perhaps, but a very neat one. He had placed bricks to form a screen for his bed, leaving a place big enough to crawl through. The floor close by was neatly swept and his rice bowl and tea bowl were turned up-side-down on a stone. We saw many pairs of coolies shoes piled up, and wondered if this man did not collect his fuel while carrying on the business of his day.

At Shway-se-men (which meant Water-west-gate) we left the wall and walked home via Poo-je-me-ow or the Confucian Temple way. Here we saw shop after shop of toys and flutes. Then we walked down a street which might be called "idol street," where all the shops were selling funny little white plaster idols. I was told that when a woman wants a baby she buys one of these idols and presents it to a goddess in a temple.

Business was not very good today. It was a grey day. Too bad that the folk in the streets could not have seen the rosey gleam of promise and hope that we had seen from the wall.

The streets of Nanking always provided some new interest. Today we stopped to watch the process of stuffing sausages which was being carried on in the street just outside the gate. The Chinese home, the old fat-tai (oldest lady of the household) was sitting in a chair and bossing the job while she smoked her cigar— to smoke a cigar one must be pretty well "fixed" in China. The old fat-tai, the servants and the crowd which was gathering all of a sudden, began to ply our ricksha coolie with questions as to who we were, where we were going, what we were going to do, etc., so we left before the discussion became too interesting.

Passing through Han-Si-Men gate, we walked about two miles along the road which leads to another village. A most graceful bridge caught our attention. We marveled at the beauty of the curved arch of the bridge, which was built upon two supports, finished at the base by the gate. The large stone lions at the pen-touses were eye-brows; it was a belief that thieves would not try to enter this house because the eyes were watching.

velvet" for which Nanking is famous. The cloth is woven on fine wires, and then the threads are cut over these wires to form the design. The wires are pulled out and tea held, if you will, a marvelous soft fabric with thick velvet and rich design. Chinese designs are beautiful, and if you look closely you will find in those medallions, figures, or flowers, or birds, or dragons.

Our home-folk told us that we surely had caught some of the gladness of the "Be-Glad-Lake." We were surprised... but maybe so!

January 28.

THE VERSATILE one, Dorothy, plotted me to the "Temple of Everlasting Greenness," except that the greenness was covered over by the brownness of winter and the occasional snow patches. We sought the tea room located above the temples, which were located on one of the highest hills of Nanking. This tea room opened only to the east, and gave us an outlook upon Purple Mountain with Nanking, the serene, at her feet. This picture was framed by the railings of the tea house; my pencil was soon busy trying to place upon my drawing pad the truly "black and white" picture before me.

Suddenly I realized that I was all but frozen. We retired into an enclosed tea room and enjoyed the temple tea and dancing together with our sandwiches and "jakes."

A STEADY-RUNNING MOWER

that's "built around the oil holes"

WHAT'S WHAT they say about the Case-Osborne Mower—and as a matter of fact, it's just about true. You never saw a smoother-running, more economical and downright dependable machine.

It's extremely simple in construction—all non-essentials are eliminated. And it's built to last—working parts are oversized—the crank pin bearing is of high quality bronze—unusually well-lubricated and replaceable.

The cutter bar is unusually free from vibration due to a strongly re-inforced head and has a wide range of up and down movement to allow smooth, easy work on the roughest ground. Underslung construction reduces friction on cutting parts. By means of an eccentric bushing, the cutter bar can be kept in proper alignment. All these features mean fast, efficient cutting and light draft.

You'll want to see this popular Case-Osborne Mower—come in any time. Our store is headquarters for farm equipment—try our service.

Whether or not it pays to cater to a steer's "sweet tooth" by feeding cane molasses is one of the questions to be answered at the seventeenth annual livestock feeders day to be held April 19 at the college of agriculture in Lincoln, says Carl C. Dale, Valley county extension agent. One lot of steers has had a barrel of cane molasses in their bunk all the time in addition to the standard Nebraska ration of shelled corn and alfalfa. The check lot has received the standard ration. The steers are yearlings.

An exceptional program is being arranged and planned for the annual meeting of cattle and sheepmen at the college, according to Agent Dale. Results will be ready on several other tests that have been under way this winter at the station. Good speakers of national caliber are being secured. Plans are also being laid for an attendance contest between counties in the state and it is hoped by Agent Dale that many Valley county farmers will go and help Valley county win the contest.

BIBLE SCHOOL MEETING MONDAY WELL ATTENDED

Splendid Program at Presbyterian Church Is Heard by 250; Hawthorne Elected.

The annual Valley county Bible school convention, held Monday at the Presbyterian church here, was attended by more than 250 delegates from sabbath schools of the county and was regarded as a great success. For the second year C. C. Hawthorne was elected president to succeed J. G. Hastings, M. B. Cummins was chosen vice president, succeeding Mr. Hawthorne, and Mrs. Bert M. Hardenbrook was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

Dinner and supper were served Monday at the Presbyterian church. All delegates and were very enjoyable affairs. The main address of the day, "Man's Part in God's Plan," was given in the evening by John C. White, general secretary of the Bible school organization. Mr. White made an excellent impression with his inspirational talk.

The meeting convened at 10 a. m. Monday and after devotionals led by Rev. H. H. Spracklen, of the Ord U. B. church, Chas. A. Bowers welcomed the delegates to Ord. J. G. Hastings responded on behalf of delegates.

"The Teacher's 30 Minutes, How Should They Be Used," by Rev. I. E. Jenkins, was the next thing on the program and was followed by a talk, "Helps and Hindrances to Christian Religion," by Rev. G. A. Schwabauer, of North Loup. Both talks were much enjoyed. John C. White then spoke on "The Worker and His Tools."

Rev. Hawks, of North Loup, led devotionals at the beginning of the afternoon session, after which Rev. T. C. Perry spoke on "Bible School Opportunities." Other addresses of the afternoon program were "Goals for a Bible School," by Rev. Gailther, of Arcadia, "Daily Vocational Bible Schools," by Rev. Nathan Thomas, of North Loup, and a discussion of various subjects by John White. A pleasing feature of the program was a reading by Miss Gracey Pullen.

Mrs. Alvin Mazac was in charge of special music for the meeting and in the evening sang a duet with Miss Norene Hardenbrook that was greatly enjoyed. The Masonic male quartet also sang. A feature of the program enjoyed as much as anything was the singing of little Leland Finney, youthful Arcadia warbler. His two numbers were much appreciated.

The following department superintendents also were elected for the coming year: Children, Mrs. Jessie Babcock, North Loup; Young People, Miss Maud Shepherd, North Loup; Adults, J. G. Hastings, Ord; School Administration, Clara McClatchey, Ord.

The convention was regarded as one of the most successful ever held in Valley county both from the standpoint of attendance and interest and because of the high quality of the program.

Music Students Go to Kearney Friday

Entries from Ord who will compete in the music contest at Kearney this week include Norene Hardenbrook, soprano, who will sing, "Beloved, It Is I," "In the Garden of My Heart," contralto sung by Naomi Fuss; a clarinet solo by Elizabeth Janssen, "My Old Kentucky Home"; and a cornet solo by Ivar Hautala, the title of which is "Carnival of Venice." All the solo entries will be heard some time Friday.

On Saturday the Ord high school band will play "Heart Wounds", with thirty members carrying parts. The high school orchestra of sixteen members will play intermezzo from "L'Arlesienne Suite"; and the girls glee club consisting of twenty-four members will sing "Echo Song."

Of course the local contestants leave with great determination to bring home a number of awards, and have trained hard and enthusiastically. Hemming Hautala and Miss Bessie Rouse have worked overtime and unsparringly, and are trying to take their respective entries to the coming ordeal in prime condition. But if they do not win the city will still be proud of them, and their training will still have been of much benefit.

Transportation will be by means of the cars of those who are so kind as to donate their services. A number of parents and business men will probably go, as will Supt. Bowers, Mr. Hautala, and Miss Bessie Rouse, who will chaperone the students who make the trip.

Christian Science Society. Sunday services are held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and Wednesday evening meetings are held the second Wednesday of each month at 8 o'clock in the Lo-la building. All are cordially invited to attend all of our services and meetings.

Weather Report.
Very little rain fell in Ord during the past week with only .32 being recorded up until yesterday. The temperature was fairly normal with the highest, 87, being registered Thursday. The rain of Tuesday is expected to be a big help to small grains but delayed local farmers from getting into the fields for a day or two.

	High	Low
Thursday	87	44
Friday	78	62
Saturday	73	42
Sunday	69	35

Wednesday	42	37

Rainfall, .32 inches.

Spring work has started on many farms and oats and barley are being planted. Farmers who have been digging postholes say that the subsoil more than 18 inches down is dry and that considerable spring rain will be necessary if Valley county is to get a good crop this year. Several have reported finding traces of frost still in the ground.

Last Friday this portion of the state was visited by a severe wind storm that did considerable damage to small buildings and trees and caused housewives much discomfort. The air was filled with clouds of dust and sand all day.

As this is written a drizzling rain has been falling for 24 hours and people are hopeful that a real rain may follow.

Make Your Word Your Bond

What a feeling of satisfaction it is to have our fellow townsmen say, "His word is as good as his Bond."

CREDIT, the basis upon which present day business is built, is one of the greatest assets any man can have. Keeping his credit good is a duty every man owes to his community, his family and to himself.

Past due accounts reflect upon a man's business ability. They mark him as a man unworthy of confidence in any business activity. No one likes to be associated in a business or even in a social way with a "dead beat"

CREDIT may be kept good by paying promptly as agreed. Almost any immediate sacrifice is well worth while to maintain good CREDIT.

Methodist Church Notes
Last Sunday the Sunday school attendance went over the 200 mark for the first time in several months which was very gratifying to the officers and teachers of the school. We believe with just a little effort it could be 250 as well as below that. For the first time since Supt. Noll began awarding the banner to the class having the best percent of attendance during the month the young people's class taught by Ralph Hunter lost the banner. All the time it has been a close race between the "Friendship" class taught by Rev. Moorman and the young people. When the records were figured Sunday they showed that Mr. Hunter's class had an average of 22.5-5 while Rev. Moorman's class averaged 24 per cent. Mr. Hunter says the young people are going to win the banner again next month however.

A treat is in store for the school next Sunday morning. Rev. W. C. Pawell, pastor of the Wesleyan Foundation at the State University will be the speaker at the morning services. Rev. Pawell is a returned missionary from India and he will speak to the school for a few minutes after the lesson study period. All the departments of the school will assemble to hear him. Dist. Supt. Dr. A. V. Hunter, of Hastings was the speaker at both services Sunday. At the morning service a part of psalm 18 was used as a responsive reading. The scripture lesson was six verses from 1 Samuel 14, which was also the basis for a very helpful sermon. At the evening service Nicodemus is recorded in John 3 as the scripture foundation for his talk on the subject, "The Finishing Touch." Dr. Hunter is a very earnest speaker whom it is always a pleasure to hear.

The King's Herald had their regular meeting Saturday afternoon. This is the children's mission society and is in charge of Miss Ruth Holloway. They much enjoyed both the lesson study and the social hour which followed it. The ladies aid society are very busy getting ready for their bazaar and supper to be held at the church a week from Saturday. They will appreciate the help and contributions of every lady in the church.

A very cordial invitation is extended to all to hear Rev. C. W. Pawell at the morning services next Sunday. In the evening Rev. I. E. Jenkins, pastor of the Mira Valley United Brethren church will be the speaker at 7:30. Miss Alma Holloway will be the leader at the Epworth league. The subject for discussion will be "The Christian in Social Life." It will be good news to all to know that the pastor is making rapid recovery from his operation and will soon be himself again.

Christian Church Notes.
Wanted—thirty-one more Sunday school scholars in our Bible school next Sunday morning. We lacked that many in reaching the goal of 150 last Sunday, 119 being present. There was a splendid response last Sunday by the way of conversions. Four people made the confession. All of them were adults. It is certainly encouraging to see both the young and old responding to the gospel call. We need the Christian family of Christ in our church of every color, age and position.

Since the weather has become more favorable, the church attendance is growing, and as it continues to grow warmer with the coming spring many of our members and friends who have been kept away by the weather and sickness, which always hinder during the colder periods, no doubt will come back and enter again into the Christian fellowship with the others who have been with us all along.

Arrangements will be made for those candidates wishing to be baptized next Sunday morning. We invite the public to our services both morning and evening. The young people's program, the hour preceding church services in the evening, are always interesting and helpful. The young men and women are urged to attend this service and help boost this good work of the kingdom.

CHEERY CHATTER About the Golf Tourney.

Among the promising non-golfers was Arlos Thompson, although he was not a winner in the tourney he blamed his golfing partner, Henry Frey, for their failure to win a ball. Arlos agreed with Dale Norman that golf was an up hill game when he came to the eighth hole going up the hill.

It always happens in a tourney such as was staged at the club grounds last Sunday that some non-golfers swings many many times and seems unable to hit the ball very often. Such was the case with Wayne Norman. He said that he was swinging when no one was looking and then didn't count the swing in his total.

Eric Erickson was the boy who got a birdie three on hole number four when he got a copper for 200 yards on his last stroke. Golfers seemed to be watching with interest the play of Dale Norman, alias Jimmy Hicks straight from Boston, when he got a birdie two on the eighth hole. We don't know whether he carried the ball up the hill or hit it.

It took Bert Boquet to make a hard mashie shot on the bull pen number seven. Bert wants other club members to know that he is getting good all of a sudden. Ask him and see if he isn't.

It didn't take much to convince Bert Boquet that he ought to join the club for he did so immediately after the tourney was over.

It took Chas. Bowers all afternoon to go around the nine hole course. Jesse Kovanda was playing with him as his non-golfer and Bowers was continually praying that Kovanda wouldn't swing hard

The Moon Comes

AGAIN I was favored to take a hike with the versatile one. This hike was timed for desired effects—and we were not disappointed.

We started forth in ricks at 5:30 in the afternoon and were soon deposited at one of the rickshaws. We climbed the wall at this point and turned our steps in a southerly direction; southerly, because the wall, though it curved in and out and back, always lead us on in an uncertain south direction.

The sunset satisfied us beyond expectation and transformed the city of Nanking into a dream city, which gradually faded from our sight, leaving the darkened Bud-je-go floating in a soft haze. Then the lights began to glow... here, there and everywhere, and the dream city returned... a city of animated and flickering lights.

We found ourselves traversing the new wall that had to be built after the revolution of 1910; then we again ascended the old wall, which is twice as wide, twice as high, and twice as interesting. I wondered then if it was "Old China" I was finding so interesting, and also if it would be possible for "New China" to retain enough of the "old" to keep her always so charming.

We were waiting for the moon. We watched the rays of light that brought the contour of the footstool of Purple Mountain into black relief. In Ord, not to miss the coming of the moon, we stopped at the outermost edge of one of the curves and sat down upon a stone, conveniently left there for this... our resting place.

It came!... A bright orange tip, peaking over the black mass of the foothill, and seeing that "the coast was clear," arose surprisingly fast. My companion told me that the Chinese are afraid of this coming of the moon... I am not surprised, its coming is indeed a wonder!

Larger and large grew the huge orange bubble, which gradually rounded into a perfect circle. It seemed to be balancing itself upon the hill, and then it fairly bounded into the sky... Wonderful!

Below, we heard the marching song of the Chinese soldiers as they marched along one of the gates of Nanking. We picked up the refrain and continued our walk upon the wall at a marching pace. Before we knew it, we found ourselves at Taijing gate. Our last view of the moon from the wall showed its reflection in a beautiful white path across the small inside gate closed and there was no one in sight. My companion was equal to any situation and unwired the gate. We slipped through and reached the "dew luh" before we were detected by the soldier who should have been on duty. I suppose he wondered where on earth we had come from, until he found the gate ajar.

We hiked through the Tartar city, while my companion told me much of that disastrous revolution. Growing old, we took rickshaws... "as a beautiful China by moonlight, and you always dream dreams in the pleasing leisure of a ricksha; however, it was rather chilly on this second day of February, and dreams cannot keep one warm.

February 17.

Chinese New Year

GRAND preparations were made for the great event of the year—the Chinese New Year.

For some time the Chinese had been especially anxious to make money. The tailor begged us to have dresses made; the lace woman made frequent visits; the cook exerted every possible method of making a "squeeze"; the "boy" hounded every "dangsy" (things to sell) man for his "cumshaws" (commissions); beggars were more insistent on the streets; ricksha coolies would run forward us, eager for passengers; "newfoos" would urge us to ride in the matchays; and innumerable other opportunities were hurled at us in the hope of our spending money.

The reason for this extraordinary desire of making money was due to the Chinese custom that all debts should be paid by the New Year. If man were free from debt, he might paste red papers on his doors, papers bore black characters which declared to the world that he was free from debt. We would often catch ourselves looking involuntarily at the sign upon the door and wondering what would happen to the poor devil who was encumbered.

We noticed also that a grand "cleaning" was going on in the homes, and that scrubbing was the order of days and days. Windows became shiny and revealed many interlors long veiled from the gazing public. Moreover it seemed to be the season for bringing forth the bed comforts and for putting new protections upon them. The women used the streets for this work; perhaps there was not room enough in the tiny rooms and perhaps the comforts did need a good sunning and airing.

One of the important preliminary rites is the casting out of the old kitchen god, that had served for the past year, and installing a new one. This occurred a week before the New Year, and was accompanied by the shooting off of fire-crackers. No doubt, it takes the new god a week to adjust itself to the new environment and to function properly.

All during the week before New Year the weather chose to bring rain. And though the rain was a nice quiet rain, unaccompanied by any suggestion of storm, and though the rain was badly needed, it was not in the least favorable to the cleaning-up processes and other big preparations of the week.

Because of the rain, I yielded often to the ricksha coolie's desire to make money, and was thus transported over the cobble stones which seemed to be swimming in muddy water. I was literally submerged, except my eyes, under the old clo' h covering. There I was in a little box almost dry, and looking down upon the coolie, looking along in a rickshaw made of brass and a foreign straw hat. I wondered just how much he minded the rain, and also if he knew just how uncomfortable he really was.

All the Chinese seemed to be excited on the day before the New Year, the sixteenth of February this year. Our servants were very happy and the "boy" shot off fire-crackers while our little girl proved an appreciative audience. Our cook looked absolutely foolish as he grinned and grinned in his excitement.

On their New Year day, our servants served our breakfast and fairly beamed in their expectancy of the dollars wrapped in red paper and of the holiday promised them. We all said, "gongshe, gongshe," or "congratulations to them, and they bowed in appreciation. As we went to our work, we could not help but note the happy change in the faces of the Chinese we were accustomed to pass... usually so stolid, now quite bright with the expression of happiness.

After our work, we joined a party and hiked to South City. We noticed first that the Chinese were all cleaned up and had new clothes. Flowers, decorated the glossy hair of the women and girls. We noticed that many little boys had new bright hats, but that for most part they were dressed just like the papas who held tight to their little hands. Also, every child had a plaything, and we watched the skillful handling of the "singing tops" as they whirled over the string between the two hands that made the top do all sorts of fancy fops... high into the air and always back upon the tiny string singing its "whirr." We all invested in a "singing top," but for some reason or other the tops acted like singing birds, and would not sing in foreign hands.

It seemed that nearly every child was carrying a paper animal on a long bamboo pole. These proved to be lanterns, devised by the skillful Chinese fingers from bits of bamboo and paper. They represented bun-

A Real Profit-Maker

The New John Deere Two-Row Rotary Hoe

When you inspect the new John Deere Two-Row Rotary Hoe you will find many refinements and improvements that make it a stronger, and even more efficient machine than formerly—a real profit-maker through its ability to increase crop yields.

Easier control through a handy screw lift; heavier bearings and bushings; better clearance for trash; dust-proof type transport wheels; larger hubs and extra reinforcements which make the hoe wheels stronger—these are some of the improvements that make the new John Deere superior to anything that has gone before.

The John Deere Two-Row Hoe is unexcelled for early cultivation of corn, beans, beets, and other row crops. It does good work in alfalfa, mint, clover, and wheat.

It cultivates a strip seven feet wide, breaking up the hard crust which stops the seedlings from coming through. It tears out the sprouting weeds without damage to the planted crop.

It is a good soil pulverizer, and assists in the preparation of good seed beds.

You can also get the John Deere Rotary Hoe in the three-row size. This larger hoe is flexible, and cultivates a space 10 feet 6-inches wide.

Come in and inspect these profit-making machines at our store.

Burwell News

The Burwell chapter of the Isaac Walton League are up and doing, according to reports. At a meeting held last week arrangements were made to buy the camp grounds down by the river. The plan is to use the pond for a fish nursery during the summer, transferring the fish to deeper water in the fall. Shipments of fish are expected to arrive soon to put in the pond. The camp ground will be kept open for picnic purposes during the summer, the Odd-Fellows having leased the grounds before the League purchased them.

The opening of the Burwell horse shoe grounds was pulled off with much enthusiasm and interest, but the original program was not fully adhered to. Forty five members are keeping the grounds busy day and night, and some of the neighbors say that they can't get to sleep before midnight. Some new shoes have been purchased, which are a little better than any that have been used here before.

At an invitational meet held at St. Paul last week in which artists in music from all parts of the country participated, Burwell's piano artist, Lucille Messenger, carried off the first place for her piano solo. This is no small honor for the young lady, who is a senior in the Burwell schools, and has specialized with this instrument for several years. This coming Friday she will play at the district contest which is being held at Kearney, and in event of her winning there she will go to the state contest. Another Burwell girl, Helen Richey, will represent her home town in the district declamatory contest, which will be held at Broken Bow, according to reports.

Lee Lindsey, who left the farm and moved to Burwell last month on account of the condition of his health, went to Ord Monday morning where he expected to undergo an operation for appendicitis at the Miller hospital. For the present his family is staying with the Tobias Lindsey family, but later will rent a home, or return to the farm if Lee's health permits. His brother, Ray, had a serious time last fall with the same trouble.

E. Hanson, ably abetted and aided by John Snyder, is busily engaged this week in putting in the cable and laying the foundations for the sixteen new electroliners which are to be erected around the square. There will be twenty-eight of them in all when these are in place, and it should give our village the appearance of a city.

The twenty-fourth annual ball of the Burwell Volunteer Fire department is being held this week on Thursday night at the Johnson hall. The music for the occasion is being furnished by McDonald's celebrated orchestra of eleven pieces. These events in the past have always been well attended, and the advance sale of tickets this time show that this year will be no exception to the rule. Burwell had only two fires last year, and these were handled with a minimum loss. It is no more than fair that the people of Burwell show their appreciation of their fire fighters by helping in the good cause.

After much preparation the Burwell Oddfellows are putting on their much heralded carnival at the hall this week running three nights beginning Wednesday night. Among the advertised attractions are fortune tellers, the big woman, Hawaiian dancers, Jubilee singers, Alabama Coon Dancers, the two-headed man, the world's greatest wonder. Three act plays are billed for each night. Their names are, Burwell After Midnight, Irishman's Experience With Home Brew, and Twenty Years on the Plains. The shows will be followed by an old time dance, with music by a twelve piece orchestra.

The meetings at the Congregational church progress well. Several accessions being reported each night. The message as brought by the pastor, Rev. Houser brought people back night after night and the singer, Mr. Dircks made many warm friends while here through his splendid singing and his performances on the trombone.

What was perhaps the most interesting and beneficial church meeting held in Burwell the past year was held in the basement of the Methodist church on Wednesday afternoon of last week. It was called the festival of the months and was put on by the ladies aid society. Ninety dollars was raised for tickets selling at twenty-five cents each. It was reported that the attendance must have been three hundred and sixty. A splendid lunch was served to all who came. Two carloads of ladies came up from Ord, and several from other places.

North Loup, Apr. 10. (Special)—Several members of the local Odd Fellows lodge are planning to go to Burwell Thursday evening and put on a program. The Burwell Odd Fellows are having a three day carnival this week, and having heard of the reputation that the North Loup fellows have justly earned as entertainers, invited them to be responsible for at least one evening's entertainment. John Gray, Charlie Faut and Dell Barber will sing solos, Charles Sayre will give a reading, and a clever little comedy skit, which will be bound to make a hit, will be put on by those popular comedians, Cliff Goodrich, Paul Jones, Floyd Reddon and John Gray. Miss Dorothy Goodrich will accompany the boys in their musical numbers.

George Johnson made a business trip to Ord Tuesday. The ladies of the Methodist Aid society gave one of their enjoyable monthly teas Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Paul Jones. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Schbauer, Mrs. Willoughby and Mrs. Irvie Sheldon.

Mrs. D. S. Bohrer left Sunday for Hastings for a short visit with relatives. She expects to start on Thursday of this week for New Wilmington, Pa. Her mother, Mrs. Arnold will go with her, and stay for a few months with a daughter there, Mrs. R. S. Johnston. Mrs. Arnold is in poor health, and it is hoped that the change may be beneficial. Mrs. Bohrer expects to return home in two or three weeks.

Mrs. Howard Hamilton and Mrs. Clyde Baker, of Ord were hostesses on Saturday afternoon at a rook party at the home of the former, honoring Mrs. Clifford Collins, a recent bride. Fifteen guests were present and high honors were won by Mrs. Charles Sayre. A clever rain-bow was carried out in the tally cards, as well as in the dainty refreshments served by the hostess.

From Thelma Johnson Hamilton we learn that the debating class of the Geneva high school coached by her husband, Howard Hamilton, won the district debating contest last Friday. Debating seems to be one of Mr. Hamilton's strong points because when he taught at Friend last year and drilled the debating team they won the district championship, and moreover, Hamilton won the district debating contest in debating, who won the district championship.

Today, April 10, is the eighty-sixth birthday anniversary of Robert Preston, pioneer Valley county farmer and business man of North Loup. In honor of the occasion, his daughter, Mrs. L. L. Sheldon, is serving a birthday breakfast at the home of the invited guests are the Sam Gilroy family, of Ord, Mrs. Jennie Schultz and family, and the Will Prestons from the country. A few days ago Mr. Preston received a birthday gift of a box of fine navy-blue clothing from his brother, Sylvester Preston, of Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Preston is quite vigorous for a man of his age, and although he was kept at home a great deal on account of the unusually severe winter, with spring now at hand, Mr. Preston is able to get about, and is helping at odd times in the Sheldon variety store.

A number of the high school girls who are taking normal training are spending the week doing practice teaching in the various country schools of the county. Arvada Van Horn is at District 42, Merna Negley at District 46, Elvira Anderson at District 24, Dorris Davis at District 3, Lois Kildow at District 47, Doris Clement at District 9, Alice Pierce at District 14, Helen Cook at District 43, Bernice Hawks at District 70, Gertrude Green at Elyria, Helen Lee at District 64, Velma Baker at District 57, Lucille Paddock at District 68, and Ruby Kirk at District 58.

We'll make a new Man of your House!

First we will apply a coat of new, durable and pretty wall paper. At a cost surprisingly painless to the pocketbook. Then we'll plaster him with a fresh coat of paint, inside and out, and as a finishing touch we'll put a layer of wax on the floors. When he has recovered a trifle from this strenuous treatment, we'll lay out a diet for the breakfast set, a bright colored coat of Kyanize, which you can administer yourself.

You are probably familiar with ailing houses, and can decide on the every day details of the treatment needed. If it is a gay door-stop, or a brightly colored and graceful vase or bowl; if it is incense for his bad breath; if it is a big soft footstool to save him wear and tear, we have it.

We'll help you treat him.

"Man Works from Sun to Sun"

But Woman's Work with an Electric Range Is Sooner Done

Because Electric Cookery is clean—there is no scouring of pots and pans, or of the stove, no scrubbing of wood-work, walls or floors. Why is there no scrubbing and scouring?

Because—there is no soot, no smoke—no fumes—no ashes—no wood box—no coal bucket—no burned matches—no dust.

Electric Cookery is convenient—Why?

Because—with just the touch of the finger there is instantaneous heat—just the right amount of heat. There is practically no attention necessary to cooking operations.

The cook is not cooked.

It cooks the food, but does not heat the kitchen.

Clean-Up Week — An Ideal Time

TO HAVE A RANGE INSTALLED

Next week is an ideal time to modernize your kitchen by having an electric range installed. Ord has a low rate on electricity for cooking purposes. Take advantage of this low rate.

... nies, white, long-eared, and very fat, or green frogs, with legs that moved, or dragons of different colors, protuberant eyes and long red tongues. There were other kinds of lanterns—some represented theaters and when lighted little actors performed in a surprising fashion. Another, when lighted, disclosed the fact that there was an inner lantern that turned and in so doing a dragon writhed and twisted, as if it were chasing its tail. Another seemed to be puffing on a race between match-chays and rickshas. Others were large lotus blooms with overlapping petals and green stems. (The making of paper "knick-knacks" is a fine art in China, and we always voiced regret that we could not fill our trunks with such perishable works of art.) On the night of Chinese New Year, these lanterns were lighted and carried down the streets in a beautiful lantern festival. Moreover, large red lanterns were placed in front of the homes and these bright lanterns made the streets both beautiful and gay.

The shooting of fire crackers and sky rockets was exceptionally popular with all ages.

We stopped to watch a story teller who was surrounded by a group of men, forming a circle that the story teller might have plenty of room for action. He showed much feeling in his face, pulling it into all sorts of shapes. He seemed to be acting out all the parts of a story. The story teller seemed quite perturbed at our stopping, because the audience seemed to want to shift its attention to us. His method of understanding is worth his audience up into a state of keen interest and excitement, stop at the most interesting spot, "pass the hat," and if sufficiently reimbursed continue the story.

All the shops were closed and the shutters were up. On the doors and shutters were pasted red placards of "happiness" and many red sheets of paper upon which were printed black characters of famous sayings such as, "Mater is beautiful, but heaven is precious." Over the door ways were hung lace cut-outs of paper and in the center of these would be a gold character of "happiness." Sometimes the papers were not red, but of yellow or white which were indicative of certain periods of mourning for a departed ancestor.

We found the large open space of Fujimallow a gay bazaar, where lanterns, slinging tops, little toy toms-toms and all kinds of good smelling Chinese foot were being sold. That street skirts the canal where the flower boats are packed side by side. We could hear the clicking of the gambling sticks and the Mah Jong ivorys and caught a glimpse of a "flower girl"—painted cheeks, pink gwoda (coat) and a complete wreath of flowers around her head.

Another stop was to watch the making of the covering for Chinese "spring rolls." A man squatted in front of a little Chinese stove containing a hot fire. One of his hands was full of dough, which he would swipe very gently over a hot grid-iron, leaving a film of dough. He would pull this up with the other hand and turn it over to brown. Then it was a flimsy, papery, almost transparent sheet, round like a pancake. Later I had the opportunity of eating "spring rolls," and these sheets were filled with a mixture of garlic, meat, etc., and fried in deep fat.

We hired a matchay to take us back to Kuleo. The mawfo had been celebrating with rice wine... and therefore, we had an exciting ride... with a graze of the wheels at the corners, wild shouting on the part of the mawfo, and speed beyond realization.

Just in time to help get the dinner... a new experience! Lots of fun and with many to help. The dishes were the inevitable, however, and caused us to appreciate our emancipation from this task in China.

the moon reflections in the ponds. We sang and tried to imitate the nasal style of the Chinese. Our audience was respectful, but astounding one exclaimed, "My grandmother!" At one stop a lot of soldiers boarded our car, so we climbed up to the top of a covered box car, and from there enjoyed more view, more coal dust, but above all, more freedom.

Hsia-gwan with its brilliantly lighted factories, godowns, electric light plant and round house caused us to feel as though we were truly entering an American city.

We found that we were too late for the festival, but the crowd was still assembled, packing the streets. We were attracted by the beating of cymbals and soon a strange spectacle came into sight. Brilliant lanterns bobbed beside a chair that was in the shape of a boat. Some men were dancing along-side in a queer manner and through the curtains of the chair we could see a man dressed like a woman. The chair was carried away and again the significance of this celebration was lost upon us.

All at once we heard a feeble whistle, which had a very strong effect. The crowd quickly made way for the fire department, all dressed up in regulation white suits and brass helmets and pulling a tiny, infinitesimal pump, which we compared to a "scooter." The water wagon was the big tub which we had seen so often, and the hose like our garden hose. Later, as we were walking over the bridge of the canal, we saw the fire, a monster, whose blaze leaped menacingly and high into the sky, casting a ruddy glow over the buildings.

Finally, we found ourselves at the river, and all registered the sudden desire to have a ride. We found a small ferry and hired it to take us across and back. We piled in and huddled together in the stern under our two steamer rugs. The lights were myriads on both sides of the river, which was just rough enough to afford white caps for our pleasure. The moon could not be seen kinder.

"Worthy of Note"

CHINESE food at noon at the home of friends consisted of spinach, pork balls, cabbage, bean sprouts, liver and boechee, egg rolls, and the famous "spring rolls." The rolls were flavored with garlic, which is not offensive to the taste nor to the smell of him who indulges, but God pity the man who does not partake. It is worthy of note, too, that it was most satisfying and pleasant to shake off the shell of long on in order to do something dressy for the lecture and reception that evening. The whole household blossomed forth in unbelievable loveliness... a real metamorphosis it was!

Before going to the lecture, we heard strange noises in a room behind, and when we went forth to see, we were entertained by Chinese students from the agricultural department of the University of Nanking who danced the horse dance for us. Lanterns, square and gorgeous, cast their light on a circle of students dressed as prancing horses, urged to wilder prancing by frantic gestures of their drivers and by the constant, deafening music of tom-toms. Faster and faster danced the horses in the dizzy circle until all at once the circle changed into a long line which pranced out of the compound into the street. This is a celebration of the Chinese New Year time, and though we did not know its significance, we did agree that it was very Chinese in aspect as well as in sound.

Another moonlight ricksha ride to the Community Center!... Truly no such ride should go unmentioned, for as far as I was concerned the lecture on the Philippines was more appreciative because of the few moments of quiet thoughtfulness on the way. Yes, I would like very much to see the "coral-fringed islands."

March 2

An Evening Out

ON THIS evening the elements seemed to be against us in our plans to go down to Hsia-gwan to see the dragon festival. The wind blew great fogs of dust in true March style and it was very cold. We could not get a matchay and rickshas, of course, were out of the question. Our master of ceremonies had a happy thought... we would take the coolie train.

Fate was with us, after all, and we found at the station near by that the train was almost due. We purchased fourth class tickets and boarded the box car, which was conveniently quite empty. We sat in the big open doorway, feet hanging outside, and thoroughly enjoyed the misty dimness of Purple Mountain, the graceful clumps of bamboo, and

THE RESULT OF EYE STRAIN

ARE DETRIMENTAL according to the amount of the errors of vision that cause them, the health and temperament of the patient, and other factors. But they are always harmful. They always slow a person up in his work. Make him irritable. Rob him of his nerve energy. And cause other annoyances. That is all unnecessary. We often cause abnormal eyes to see normally.

ORD HIGH PLACES SIX WINNERS IN MUSIC CONTEST

Band Takes 1st Prize; Students Are Honored in Five Other Events for 7th Place.

Headed by Hemming Hautala's band which carried away first honors in its class, Ord high school music students placed seventh in the district high school music contest at Kearney last Friday and Saturday and will place three more silver cups in their trophy case because of it. Twenty-six high schools competed in the contest.

The high school orchestra and girls' glee club, under direction of Miss Bessie I. Rouse were granted second places in their departments. Ivar Hautala copped second and a silver medal on his cornet solo, Naomi Fuss placed third in the contralto solo class, and Elizabeth Janssen won fourth place with her clarinet solo. They were awarded ribbons. Norine Hardenbrook did not place in the soprano solo class.

Because of their victory at Kearney, the high school band and Ivar Hautala will enter the state high school music contest at Lincoln, May 3rd and will endeavor to eclipse Ord high school's record of first place in Class B.

Ivar Hautala's solo was tinged with disappointment when, partially through the piece, a valve stuck on his horn and he was obliged to begin over again. The solo classes were hotly contested because of the fact that a large number of schools were entered. Lack of complete orchestration and tympani is the reason the orchestra did not make a better showing, according to the director, Miss Bessie Rouse.

The high school band had a personnel of 27 at the contest. The names follow: Hemming Hautala, Director; Ivar Hautala, Albert Moorman, Sylvester Carlski, Dale Chaffield, Frank Rysavy, Ail Hautala, cornets; Elizabeth Janssen, Alma Misko, Adrian Zikmund, Lois Wentworth, Hans Hansen, Velmor McGinnis, clarinets; Merna Crow, Mildred Haas, Arthur Auble, Beulah McGinnis, alto; Eldon Benda, Lumir Beran, basses; Rodney Stoltz, Emil Danzek, Marcus Steinwort, Eldon Lukesh, trombones; Edwin Auble, Lillian Crow, drums; Elmer Palmatrix, George Pratt, saxophones; Adrian Tolen, baritone.

The young people were faced by a judging staff consisting of Chas. B. Righter, supervisor of music, Lincoln; Earnest L. Harrison, instructor in pianoforte, Lincoln; Miss Alice Musselman, supervisor of music, South High, Omaha; Burwell, Elba, and Elton Hastings, North Platte; St. Paul, Ravenna, Loup City and Central City were among Ord's competitors at the contest. Grand Island high school was awarded the sweepstakes.

PHONE MEETING ENDS IN FIGHT

Hansen Brothers Draw Heavy Fines On Assault Charges; Clement Is Partly Injured.

A telephone meeting at the Brick school house north of Ord ended in a fight Tuesday night and as a result Wayne and Edward Hansen paid heavy fines in county court yesterday. They were arrested on assault charges filed by Hans A. Clement, 60, who was hurt in the fight.

According to the story told in court, Clement was acting chairman of the Elmcrest telephone line meeting. A dispute arose over ownership of stock in the company. Clement, as chairman, ordered one of the Hansen brothers to leave the hall, which precipitated a fight. One of the Hansens knocked Clement to the floor and then both pummeled him, he charged. His son-in-law, Will Dittman, who came to his rescue, also was hurt. A man who attempted to call peace officers was prevented from doing so. Officers were finally called but when they arrived the meeting was over and all parties had gone home.

Wednesday morning the two Hansen boys were arrested and in county court plead guilty to assault and battery against Mr. Clement. Judge J. H. Hollingshead fined them $25 and costs each, which they paid.

Burwell Wranglers Meet Monday Night

An important session of the Burwell Wranglers was held at the Burwell hotel Monday night, covers being laid for seventy-four. Mr. Whitten, secretary of the Lincoln chamber of commerce, was the speaker and pledged Lincoln's support to Nebraska's big rodeo, held at Burwell every year. Irl D. Tolen, of Ord, was a guest of Clyde Hignett.

Edna Smolik Will Compete in Omaha

Valley county will be represented in the state-wide spelling contest, at Omaha, by Miss Edna Smolik, who was judged the best speller in the county last month, after spelling down seventy of her grade school opponents. Miss Smolik is a pupil in the eighth grade, district 51, about eight miles west of Ord. She is twelve years old. Her spelling abilities were put to good test when, during the county test, the judges went through the fifth, sixth, seventh and advanced list of words before the winner could be determined.

The contestants of the state contest, which is set for May 3, will be entertained by tours about Omaha, and theatre parties, by the city and the Omaha World-Herald, which is sponsoring the contest. The winner of the state spell-down will be sent to Washington to compete for the national prize of $1000 in gold.

COE ELECTED PRESIDENT OF CREAMERY MEN

Co-operative Plants Hold Meet at Elgin; Elect Local Man Chief Officer.

Last week at Elgin, co-operative creameries of Nebraska held their annual business meeting and elected Fred W. Coe, manager of the Ord Co-operative creamery, as president for the coming year. Delegates were present from twenty-three cities, including Arnold, Albion, Ashton, Atkinson, Broken Bow, Bassett, Battle Creek, Callaway, Creighton, Central City, Ewing, Elgin, Madison, Minden, Newman Grove, Orchard, Pierce, Plainview, Stuart, Stanton, Scotia and Gothenburg. Sixteen new creameries applied for membership in the association.

W. H. Brokaw and H. C. Filley, of the state agricultural college, made excellent talks and Homer Kyle, of the attorney general's office explained some of the laws relating to cream buying.

During the afternoon discussion it developed that there is a wide difference in prices being paid for cream in different parts of the state. In many places in the south and west part of the state, where there are few co-operatives, the centralizers are buying cream at a low price, using extra profits to pay higher prices where they have local competitors. A resolution was passed asking the attorney general to investigate this practice.

Another important discussion entered around the new plan being put into practice by centralizers whereby the patron is charged a service charge for testing and handling his cream. The service charge is the same whether the can is full or partly filled. The use of this plan results in the producer holding his cream until he has a large quantity, and by that time the cream is in bad shape. This poor cream makes low grade butter, which sells for a lower price, and then cream prices must be lowered correspondingly. It works against the small producer and thus discourages development of the dairy industry. The co-operative creameries are opposed to this plan and will not deduct any service charge from the checks of their customers.

The next meeting of the co-operative creameries will be held at Central City.

MRS. BEEGHLEY NEW PRESIDENT OF ORD P. T. A.

Parent-Teacher Body Has Annual Business Meeting, Tuesday; New Officers Chosen.

The Parent-Teacher association's regular April meeting was held in the high school auditorium Tuesday evening, with "Character Education" the subject, and the annual election of officers an important part of the program.

In opening, Mrs. Mark Tolen sang two delightful selections, accompanied by Mrs. Kirby McGraw at the piano. Following, Rev. D. C. Williamson talked on "Character Building" and tried to explain just the relationship of the home, the church and the school in this connection.

Mrs. McGraw played two piano selections, which were well received, as she is a local favorite. Rev. T. C. Perry spoke on "Character Formation," and especially dealt with the influences of environment and heredity, and the bad effect that street life had on the innate character of a boy. He said that it was a constant fight to build character, inasmuch as it is a training and subduing of the animal instincts, and in direct ratio to them.

Minutes for the previous meeting were read and approved, and the treasurer's wife, Mrs. Geo. Parkins, reported $18.01 on hand, after which the real business of the evening was begun. The election resulted in the presidency going to Mrs. J. M. Beeghley, the vice presidency to Mrs. E. C. James, Mrs. Iga Kilma being elected secretary, and Rev. D. C. Williamson treasurer for the coming year. It was voted to give the $18.01 over to the home economics department of the school for dishes or equipment that might be needed.

Ivan Jurgensen, 15, Meets Death Monday Evening While Playing With Rope in Barn.

Ivan, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jurgensen of Burwell, died Monday evening while playing in a barn at the Jurgensen farm northwest of town. He was found by his mother suspended from a rope in the driveway. He had been playing with the rope and in some manner a loop became wrapped about his neck, after which he either fell or jumped. The rope held him about six inches from the ground. Dr. E. E. Clark and others who were called pronounced it plainly an accident. The boy lived all his life in Burwell and was a member of sophomore class in Burwell high school at the time of his death. He had been a member of the Wolf Patrol, Burwell Boy Scouts, and his scoutmaster, Rev. John B. Houser will deliver the funeral address at services this afternoon. Boy Scouts are acting as pall bearers.

Six observation planes and twelve attack planes made up the flying army that are now waiting at Fort Huachuca, with orders to shoot down the first Mexican plane that crosses the American border. After cruising over Douglas, Naco, and Nogales, they arrived over Tucson in "V" formation, and landed at the Tucson airport. Taking off after a short rest and exhibiting some formation technique to the hundreds of watchers below, Lieut. Pratt led the fleet to inspect the border situation and then landed at Huachuca, their temporary base.

First Talking Picture Here Next Monday

Talking pictures will make their appearance in Ord next Monday! So announces Bill Nieuwland, manager of the Ord theaters, today. The new Vitaphone has been installed, the theater has been completely redecorated, and the Gem will open next Monday evening with the picture "Alias Jimmy Valentine," a picture with sound and talking sequences. William Haines is the featured player and is supported by Karl Dane, Tully Marshall, Leila Hyams, Lionel Barrymore and Howard Hickman.

Since Mr. Nieuwland first announced a few weeks ago that a Vitaphone installation would be made here, theater goers have been awaiting it with great anticipation. Ord will be placed in a class with Lincoln, Omaha and Grand Island when the first talking picture is shown, as the equipment installed here duplicates that used in the Capitol theater, Grand Island, and the Riviera theater, Omaha. It will no longer be necessary to leave Ord to see and hear the finest attractions.

Mr. Nieuwland is feeling particularly fortunate in securing "Alias Jimmy Valentine" as his first attraction. The feature is made from a famous book and a famous stage play and is particularly well suited for William Haines, the star. Haines plays the part of a wise-cracking crook who pulls the noses of police departments of a half-dozen cities before he decides to "go straight."

"Dad" Sherman Is Sent To Ingleside

Aged Ord Recluse Adjudged Insane Tuesday; Lived Here For Many Years.

Alfred F. "Dad" Sherman, 86, old-time resident and noted character of Ord, must spend the rest of his days in the Hastings Asylum for the Insane, by an order of the insanity board of Valley county Tuesday.

Sherman has been a familiar personage in Ord for many years. In recent years he lived secluded in a run-down shanty in the city, caring little for companionship and living under conditions of sanitation usually considerable unbearable.

Due mostly to his advanced years, Sherman's mental fibre began to break. His peculiar actions, though harmless, began to be noticed not long ago, and he was given a physical examination and sent to a local hospital for medical attention.

The old man was released Sunday from the hospital and Monday night was discovered by Night Watchman Roy Pardue on the steps of Mutter's studio in the early hours of the morning, on the whimsical grand of looking for a fire.

Information that could be obtained from Sherman was incoherent and undependable, but he said he was 86 and had come to Ord from New York state. He said that he had been married, but that his wife had left him.

At a hearing of the insanity board, Tuesday morning, it was concluded that Sherman was in such a state of mental derangement that he should be moved to an asylum, where attention and decent conditions could be afforded him.

Deputy Sheriff Archie Keep took him to Hastings Tuesday.

DALE WARNS HOG RAISERS WATCH HERDS CLOSELY

Cholera Makes Early, Serious Appearance in North Loup Neighborhood.

Deaths from cholera have been biting deeply into the herds of Valley county hog raisers this month. County Agent Carl Dale is sounding the alarm throughout the county to vaccinate, in an effort to stamp the disease out before it becomes a menace to the 9.9 pig crop.

Reports to the county agent's office indicate that hog cholera is prevalent over the county now—a month before it usually appears. Diseased herds have been noted in various spots, with the center of the trouble being around North Loup.

Hog raisers in the county are warned by Dale to vaccinate at once, or to watch their herds carefully for symptoms of the disease. Any indications should be reported without delay to the county agent's office in Ord.

Because of its early and serious appearance, County Agent Dale predicts that hog cholera will cause more trouble in Valley County than usual this year.

My Own Column

By H. D. LEGGETT.

I am just like Bill Maupin in some ways. One of them is that I am not afraid of work. Bill's friends say he can lay right down side of work and not be a bit afraid. Bill is the editor of the Hastings Democrat, so named because it is a republican paper. But Bill is getting old and sick of work so he is putting up the stall that he is not well so Bill Maltman won't get next. Bill talks about being around 60 but if that is all he is he started voting the democrat ticket when he was about 10 years old. I don't think he is going to be able to put anything over on Bill Maltman.

I got a nice lot of garden planted last week, at least Rufe Clark says I have and if he didn't do the work right I have been windied out of a day's work. I wanted to have the Missus do that planting same as she has always done but she had something else on the string this time. She has agreed to be on hand when it is time to thin and weed the onions.

I drove over to Broken Bow Sunday and at once called Emerson Purcell who had just got home from church and he came to show me his new office. It was my first visit over there since he finished it last year. I don't blame Emerson for refusing to run for governor. I thought it would be more fun to publish the Custer County Chief in a fine new building than to be governor anyhow. And then Weaver might have walked Emerson's log just as he did Bryan's. The Chief building is the last word in what a country newspaper office should be.

My purpose in going to the Bow was to bring home C. A. "Hi" Anderson who has a branch of his Chrysler business there and who had been over there for a few days looking after business. He says they are selling a number of the famous Chryslers there every week. Sold two Saturday. He has a local manager there, has a fine brick display building leased and carries a stock of cars there. "Hi" says so far the majority of the cars sold there have been sold for cash; that there is not near the amount of trade-ins that he has at his Ord store.

While we had a short crop in Valley county last year, they had a pretty satisfactory crop in Custer county and business has not suffered as it has here at home. But speaking of business, did you ever see the spirit of optimism as strong as it is this spring? People both farmers and business men, who have suffered from short crops and lack of business are saying: "Well the ground is sure soaked up good, it froze hard last winter and we are sure going to get a crop this year and won't there be a whale of a business this fall. People with that kind of a spirit just can't be kept down."

Jim Misko took his radio set all to pieces the other day to find out what was the trouble with it and came to find out he had been listening to a program of bagpipe music.

"What can a girl do about an unattractive knee?" wrote a Burwell young lady to George Round's department the other day and George replies, "Nothing but grin and bare it."

The weather man is getting in awful bad with the fishermen by having the weather turn cold every Sunday morning. Of course I wouldn't go fishing on Sunday but it is hard on Carl Sorensen, August Petersen and several others I could name.

I got a certificate the other day from my former friend Ben F. Bowen of Sargent, certifying that I was entitled to membership in the International League of Lars. This purports to be an organization of fishermen. There are twenty fishermen in Ord more entitled to membership than I am and I am at a loss to know why I was singled out by Ben for the honor.

A salesman working for Graham-Seyler rushed into the private office of Mr. Seyler the other day and asked what he should do with a customer who wanted to buy a car and pay all cash for it. "It is very unusual," said Mr. Seyler, "and you had better make him give a pretty good reference."

Before coming to Ord Col. Weller

had a job as salesman with a soap company that makes a product that floats. He called one day at a fashionable residence and was informed by the maid that the Missus was in her bath. "That's all right," said our hero, "I sell soap."

Sandy bought two tickets for a raffle and won a fine automobile. When his friends heard about it they went to congratulate him and found him with a bad case of the dumps. Asked what was the cause of his gloom after being so lucky, Sandy replied that he couldn't figure out why he bought that second ticket. This is one of Jim Misko's stories.

It seems to me that the Ord Community Service club might figure some scheme to put Ord and Valley county on the map more effectively than has been done in recent years.

The Back Forty

By J. A. KOVANDA

So many important topics arise in connection with the corn planting procedure that another column is herein extended to deal with factors of seasonal interest.

The experiment station made recent comparisons of both planting methods in various parts of the state. The surface planted corn out-yielded the listed corn, but the listed corn netted greater profit to the farmer because it required less labor.

White corn does not out-yield yellow corn. The fact that one color variety produces deeper kernels or larger ears does not necessarily indicate that it will turn out more pounds of shelled corn per acre.

Smoothkerneled ears outyielded rough seeded ears rather consistently. Last year 48 Buffalo county farmers planted smooth and rough seeded corn side by side under the direction of Agricultural Agent Alvah Hecht. In the fall, a husking bee was held at each place and the various samples were weighed up.

The average increase in yield of the smooth over the rough corn was about 2 1-2 bushels. When used for feed, yellow corn has little if any advantage over white corn, even though animals seem to like it better. This was proven in a recent test at North Platte where several hundred pigs were fed in different lots over a period of two years, half of them receiving yellow corn with various feed combinations. Those on yellow corn made an average daily gain of 1.36 pounds to 1.35 pounds for those on the white corn. However, 877 pounds of feed were required for each 100 pounds of gain by the yellow corn lots, while the pigs eating white corn needed only 858 pounds of feed to make 100 pounds of gain.

Station Supt. Snyder remarks, "A study of the results would give no reason for a farmer to pay any attention to the color of his corn so far as its feeding value under usual farm conditions is concerned."

The best yields are not necessarily the best show ears. Mr. Hecht found ordinary corn from 50 to 60 farms outyielding that from others by as much as twelve bushels when grown under the same conditions. There are many such superior varieties of corn that have never yet been discovered.

On the subject of home seed we quote Dr. Kisselbach of the College of Agriculture at Lincoln, who is probably the greatest authority in the world on the subject of corn: "In a two-year test comparing native Nebraska experiment station corn with native seed from the experiment stations of eight neighboring states, the local seed yielded an average of ten bushels or 18 per cent more than the imported seed. Seed from several states did yield quite as well as home-grown seed. It may be concluded from both of the above tests that native seed is in general superior to imported seed. However, it is entirely possible to secure seed, (1) from neighboring farmers, (2) from a distance within the experiment station (3) from other states, which may be substituted for the native home grown seed without detriment. Nevertheless the importation of seed corn from a distance is hazardous."

In regard to seed corn treatment Prof. Koehler of the Illinois Agricultural college writes: "Increases in yield resulting from the treatment of well selected but untested seed ranged from less than 1 bushel to 8.4 bushels, the mean increases ranging from 2.1 bushels to 5.4 bushels in the experiments conducted in Illinois and from 3.7 bushels to 4.5 bushels in the experiments conducted in Iowa."

Agronomist Throckmorton of the Kansas State Agricultural College

replies that "We have tried practically all known treatments for seed corn, and have not found them to be profitable under our conditions in this state. Consequently, we are not recommending any of these materials to our farmers."

Prof. Johnston of the South Dakota State Agricultural College states: "We have no data from this station concerning this problem. We have very largely taken the viewpoint of Dr. A. G. Johnson of the U. S. department of agriculture."

This is the viewpoint of the latter Mr. Johnston: "We lack information as to just how much benefit there would be from treating seed corn in South Dakota, particularly the more arid sections. My guess would be that there would be distinct gain from treating seed in the southern portion. There may be a slight advantage in other sections but there are sure to be disappointments if too much is expected where such disease organisms as Diploia and Gibberella do not occur in considerable abundance. In the greater part of South Dakota, therefore, I would suggest that these seed treatments be tried out rather sparingly at first to determine how extensively they may be of value."

Prof. Kelzer of the Colorado agricultural college answers: "We have not been recommending the treating of seed corn as a general practice in Colorado simply because as yet we have not been troubled enough with the various seed born root diseases of corn to make the practice commercially worth while."

For the nearest and most accurate data we must turn to Dr. Kisselbach's bulletin on "Field Experiments with Seed Corn Treatments and Crop Stimulants." The summary of this Nebraska publication reads as follows: "Except in the case of small grains infected with covered smuts seed treatment of Nebraska grown crops was not beneficial in tests made at the Nebraska Experiment Station during the three-year period from 1924 to 1926. The seed used was representative of varieties of corn, winter wheat, oats and barley adapted to this locality and was selected for planting in accordance with usual farm practice."

"The organic mercury disinfectants, including Uspulun, Semezan and Bayer Dust, applied to ordinary seed corn, had no significant effect upon the germination, field stand, rate of seedling growth, crop vigor, percentage of smut, barrenness, lodging, yield per acre, or quality of product. The securing of equal field stands is indirect evidence that the damage from worms was not reduced."

"Results by other investigators suggest that favorable response from these treatments may be expected primarily with Diploia-infected and Gibberella-infected seed. Evidence indicates that these are serious factors as seed-borne diseases in the corn production of this state. There was no sign of damage caused by seed-borne diseases to corn grown from either treated or untreated seed under the conditions of these experiments."

"Uspulun as dust or liquid and the standard treatments, copper carbonate and formalin, have proved effective in the control of stinking smut of wheat."

"Used as crop stimulants these organic mercury compounds have no material effect upon the growth or yield of healthy wheat, oats, barley or corn."

The Quiz Forum

Fake Radio Advertising. April 13, 1929.

Ord Quiz: Gentlemen: I have been thinking for some time why some radio advertisers were such cheerful liars and the only thing I can think of that explains it is the fact that what they say is not put down in black and white as it would be if the same advertisement was published in a newspaper. The other is that it is easier to lie to a man if you can talk to him without him seeing you.

The thing that brought this afresh to my mind was the fact that only yesterday I read the report of our state agricultural college as to the value, or lack of value, of treating of seed corn to keep worms from destroying it or birds from picking it out of the ground. That report anyone interested can secure. Their absolutely impartial tests prove that the so-called treatments by whatever name they are sold are absolutely worthless, if not a little worse than worthless. Then this morning when I tuned in on my radio I got one of these radio advertisers who seemed to have no regard for the truth telling of a dozen different benefits from treating of seed corn.

If my forty years of experience in being close to the farmers problems has taught me anything, it is that they spend millions of dollars every year for stuff that is worthless and they buy it because some one they think is not misrepresenting it advertised it.

If there was some way to head off this getting of farmers money by unscrupulous people, the "Farm Helier" problem would be partly solved.

Yours truly

4 TIMES the WEAR

with the CASE Self-Dump RAKE

HERE'S THE LAST WORD in hay rakes—a light sulky rake of extra strong construction that picks the hay up clean and keeps it free of dust and dirt. Specially curved spring teeth carry rather than drag the hay, and retarder teeth prevent rolling.

The unusually sturdy wheels are Case-made. Spokes are widely staggered and riveted on both sides of rims and hubs. Channel steel tires protect rivet heads from wear and give extra rigidity and strength.

All wearing parts are adjustable to take up wear. Dump rods reversible end for end and right for left—giving 4 times the usual wear. Wheels easily changed from one side to the other and axles are reversible end for end. All this to give the Case rake extra long life.

Come in soon and see it—ask for interesting booklet. Headquarters for the best in farm implements.

"Inside Talk"

The tire trade has its "inside talk" the same as any other.

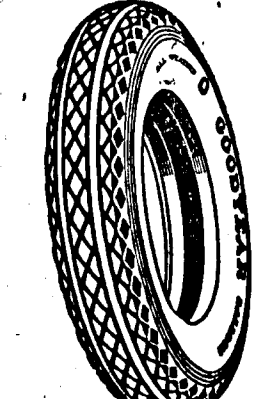

Just now that talk is all of Goodyear—and the terrific pace Goodyear is setting for the field.

The reason that Goodyear is stepping out ahead of everybody else in the tire business comes right down to the product.

Right now, and for years past, Goodyear prices, values and quality have had it over all the other tire-makers like a tent.

This is no secret in the trade—it's common knowledge.

The hint may be valuable to you the next time you need tires.

A Real Profit-Maker

The New John Deere Two-Row Rotary Hoe

When you inspect the new John Deere Two-Row Rotary Hoe you will find many refinements and improvements that make it a stronger, and even more efficient machine than formerly—a real profit-maker through its ability to increase crop yields.

Easier control through a handy screw lift; heavier bearings and bushings; better clearance for trash; dust-proof type transport wheels; larger hubs and extra reinforcements which make the hoe wheels stronger—these are some of the improvements that make the new John Deere superior to anything that has gone before.

The John Deere Two-Row Hoe is unexcelled for early cultivation of corn, beans, beets, and other row crops. It does good work in alfalfa, mint, clover, and wheat.

It cultivates a strip seven feet wide, breaking up the hard crust which stops the seedlings from coming through. It tears out the sprouting weeds without damage to the planted crop.

It is a good soil pulverizer, and assists in the preparation of good seed beds.

You can also get the John Deere Rotary Hoe in the three-row size. This larger hoe is flexible, and cultivates a space 10 feet 6-inches wide.

Come in and inspect these profit-making machines at our store.

Rowbal Demonstrates Skelgas This Week
Skelgas, the compressed natural gas distributed locally by Joe Rowbal and which is being demonstrated at the Anderson Grocery this week is essentially a dependable, always-operating individual gas burner. Hence Skelgas burns with an exceptionally hot and entirely sootless blue flame.
Each cylinder holds a supply sufficient to provide gas for cooking for the average family for several weeks. When a cylinder is used up, the supply line is switched by means of a simple lever to the second cylinder in the Skelgas cabinet and a fresh, full cylinder is ordered.
Many local women are viewing the interesting demonstration of Skelgas each day, and every woman in or near town is invited. Skelgas marks the dawn of a new day of kitchen aid bringing dependable and convenient gas service to homes wherever they are located.
Mr. Rowbal invites all home makers to attend this practical demonstration of Skelgas.

Methodist Notes.
We are very much pleased to report that the Sunday School attendance is growing right along, there being 211 present Sunday. The officers and teachers are hoping that this may continue and it will not be long until we can report 250 present. At the session Sunday Rev. W. C. Farwell told something of his four years of work in India. Miss Ella Mae Marks and Melvin Cornell dressed in the costumes worn by young people attending school in that country. The costumes of the ladies are somewhat like the Japanese and are very bright and pretty in color. The gentlemen's costume was white and it took nine yards of goods to make the trousers. Rev. Farwell told that the Boy Scouts are active in the section of India in which he worked and are having a useful part in breaking down the caste system which is a big drawback in the development of that country.
Rev. Farwell, who is pastor of the Wesleyan foundation at the State University, was in charge of the morning service. He used a part of Psalms 22 for the responsive reading and read a scripture lesson from John 6. He told something of the religious life at the university and something of what the church is trying to do to hold the students who came from Methodist homes and help them to attain the best possible standard of Christian usefulness. There are 2,000 Methodist young people attending the university. At this service Mrs. Chester Hackett sang "Strengthen for Today," very sweetly as a solo.
At the evening hour Rev. I. E. Jenkins, pastor of the Midvale U. B. church brought the message of the evening. He used John 4:31-43 as the scripture lesson and based his talk on the theme, "Man's Part in God's Program." Rev. Jenkins is a very able speaker and his message was helpful and appreciated.
On Saturday afternoon and evening the ladies of the Aid Society will hold a bazaar and supper at the church. They have been busy for several weeks preparing for the big bazaar and have many nice articles for sale and the supper will be up to their usual high standard. The Missionary Society will have a booth and arranging their friends for cooked food and articles for their "Country Store," where they hope to have some good things for sale for the Sunday dinner of their patrons.
The church people and friends are rejoicing in the speedy recovery of the pastor and will be glad to know that he was well enough to return to his home last Sunday. However it will be a while yet before he is able to return to the pulpit. The speaker for Saturday morning will be Rev. R. A. Gaither, pastor of the Methodist church at Arcadia. In the evening the "gospel team" of the North Loup Methodist church will hold the service. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present at these services.

On Wednesday of next week a Men's Council of Hastings District will be held at Aurora at which a very excellent program will be given. Among the speakers will be Dr. Chas. Findley of Findley Temple in Philadelphia, the largest negro Methodist church in the United States. Mario Capelli celebrated tenor singer will give two concerts during the day. Rev. Moorman tells us that several plan to go from Ord and urges every one who can do so to attend the council.

Herpy Side, Fighter From Burwell, Issues Challenge to Dandruff Bean

During the past two months or so there has been a column in the Lincoln State Journal edited by Shad Roe, a Lincoln business man. In this column Roe challenges the world to a prize fight with his Dandruff Bean, as he calls the fighter he manages. Last week a letter came to George Round, Jr., sports editor of the Quiz, accepting the challenge of Roe. The letter was forwarded to Roe at Lincoln and he acknowledged receipt of it in two editions of last week's paper. The letter received by the Quiz sports editor follows:

Burwell, Nebraska April 10, 1929 Mr. George Round, Jr., Sports Editor, Ord Quiz, Ord Nebraska

Dear Mr. Round: About ten days ago I see where a guy writes in the State Journal in regards to his fighter by the name of Dandruff Bean and challenges the most everybody. This guy signed himself Shad Roe but I think that is merely a alias as it sounds fishy to me.

But what I want to say is this. I have a boy fighting under my management who will accept the challenge. His real name is Herpy Side but he fights under the monicker of Lucky Tiger. We will take on this Dandruff Bean and guarantee to clean him in one application. My fighter was captured in the sandhills north of Burwell after he had been weakened down by a hard winter and

Furtak Fans Fourteen, Spuds Defeats Joint

Superb pitching in the pinches by Al Furtak gave the Round's Irish Potato ball club of Ord a 9 to 2 win over Joint Sunday. The game was played on the Joint diamond with the weather being ideal for football but poor for baseball. The Ord team took the lead from the start and was never headed by the weaker Joint team.

Furtak, Ord ace, got out of two big holes by himself in the first two innings. Ord, who came to bat first, scored two runs with Furtak and Round crossing the plate for counters. However, in the last half of the first inning the first three Joint men got on base and Furtak then bore down and struck out the next three men on the side and held them scoreless. Again in the last half of the second inning, Joint got the first three men on bases and Furtak struck out the next three men.

Joint pushed across their runs in the fifth and sixth innings when Dye and Pocock countered on two hits and an error.

As usual Furtak was the star of the game, allowing but four hits and striking out fourteen men. However, Blessing, Ord shortstop played mighty neat ball and got two hits out of five trips to the plate. All other members of the winning Ord team played fair ball throughout.

Pocock pitched a nice brand of ball for the losing Joint team although the Ord team hit him fairly hard at times. His control was bad during the fore part of the game. The sensational catches in left field by Woods were the most outstanding playing of the Joint team. Woods made two impossible catches after the ball had apparently got away from him.

Team Organized By Harry Wolf

At a meeting at the county agent's office in the courthouse Monday evening another baseball team was organized in Ord under the management of Harry Wolf, well known community baseball catcher. The team will play under the name of Ord and probably most of their games will be played out of town with neighborhood town teams.

Practically all members of the last year's Round's Irish Spuds are reported to have signed up with the Wolf managed team. If the Wolf team functions and is a success, in all probability, the Round team will play no more ball in Ord this year as most members of the team have signified their intention of joining the Wolf team.

Jeffries Is Elected. Richard Jeffries was elected to the captaincy of the North Loup high school 1929 basketball team at a meeting of this year's lettermen last week at the home of Mitts Hill. Jeffries was one of the most outstanding players upon the Class C district championship team and is deserving of the honor bestowed by his team mates. He played at a guard position during the past season.

Rifling Team Wins Matches. Chauncey Hager, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hager, of Ord, lettered in the rifling again this year at the University of Nebraska. Hager won his first letter last year and cap-has those qualities essential to success in the prize ring, viz., sand and grit. In fact he was lost in the sand storm at a very tender age and his pores has been so full of sand ever since that he looks like a piece of sandpaper. Infighting is his specialty and how he does beat down in the clinches.

He was entered in the Burwell Rodeo last fall and win the bull throwing contest sassy from a saddle field. Well if you can locate this Dandruff Bean and his manager we will fight him any time and anyplace at catch weights provided that you will give me two days to catch and weigh my fighter. The only thing what we insist on is that the ring be made of barb wire and be at least eight feet high as I can't keep my boy in any other kind of enclosure. This feller Bean may look tough to his manager but when my tiger gets in the ring with him will put be another Bean hole bean looking for his hole.

So long. SANDHILL PETE

Editors Note: It is highly probable that Quiz readers will hear more about Herpy Side in next week's Quiz since Roe, the manager of Dandruff Bean, has agreed to fight Herpy at anytime. Roe is leaving all of the final arrangements up to Sandhill Pete with the writer taking all including the flowers.

tained the team this year. The team won the biggest share of its competition during the season just finished. Young Hager will not be on the Nebraska team next year as he plans on enrolling in the Medical college at Omaha. He is a junior in the university this year.

It's time now to begin preparing for spring, cattle raisers. You'll soon be turning the stock out to pasture and before you do you'll want to be sure that your windmills are in working order. We'll repair them for you if they need repair and will be glad to install new mills where they are needed.

little shops articles like candlesticks of lignum vitae and all sorts of baskets and wicker work furniture are on sale at low prices.

In the Central plaza, opposite the cathedral, one sees an octagonal platform, like a bandstand without a roof, on which the names of national heroes have been inscribed on rather pathetic slabs of white marble sunk in red brick work. In walks approaching this "stand" one sees at frequent intervals fairly comfortable stone benches, with people's names inscribed on them. On inquiry it was learned that those people able to afford it, instead of having a tomb stone erected to their memory, have these benches put up.

What a contrast in spirit those objects are to the Voodoo Shrine, which one may visit within ten minutes walk from the park. "Ever observe any worshippers at the Shrine?" I asked. "Oh, yes. On a fine moonlight night it is quite customary to see the figure of a woman or a man kneeling there."

On Tuesday we are welcoming the secretary of the navy on board who will witness our firing of long range battle practice. It is quite possible that we may return the secretary to the United States, thereby shortening our stay in these waters about three weeks. We do have pleasant things to think about at least.

Mr. Barret lived with the Dr. Hemphill family in North Loup for about a year, some twenty-four years ago, and a number of the longer residents here will remember her. Wetzel Attends Crop Meeting at Lincoln

North Loup, April 16—(Special)—Floyd Wetzel, prominent farmer and crop exhibitor of Valley county, went to Lincoln Friday to attend on Saturday a called meeting of the Nebraska Crop Growers Association. There is a vice-president from each Congressional district, and Mr. Wetzel is the one from this district. He returned to North Loup late Saturday night, and reports an interesting and profitable meeting. Several important matters came up for discussion and efforts will be made to increase the use among farmers of certified seed. Plans were started for the crop exhibit which will be held in Chicago next fall, and at which the association will do everything possible to advertise Nebraska's farm products. The delegates to this will be two men from the agricultural college and one farmer of the state who will be chosen by a committee made up of members of the Crop Growers Association. The association is also sponsoring the corn show to be held in Lincoln next winter during the parent-teachers association week. Mr. Wetzel feels well repaid by what he learned and the inspiration he received by coming in contact with the men of this organization who have the successful growing of Nebraska's crops so much at heart. He visited a short time with the family of the late Mr. Wetzel at York, who were formerly of North Loup, and also enjoyed a short stay with his brother, Deway, a North Loup boy who now lives in Lincoln.

Mrs. Greene Chosen P. T. A. President

North Loup, April 16—(Special)—The April meeting of the North Loup Parent-Teachers association was held in the high school auditorium Monday evening, April 15. The subject for the evening was the value of music in the public schools. After community singing led by Mrs. Murphy, and the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, Mrs. D. G. Babcock, dressed in a style of other days, played "An Old-fashioned Melody," which was followed by eight girls of the grammar room, four as old-fashioned girls, and four dressed as boys, who sang and acted out "School Days," in a very taking manner, and responded with "Reuben, Reuben I've Been Thinking," as an encore. Mrs. A. H. Babcock read a splendid paper on "The Value of Music in a Community," in which was much food for thought. Among other points she made was the value of good music in place of jazz in the formation of character and high ideals. She also told at length of the splendid results which have been accomplished among the boys in various city schools by the organization of harmonica bands, which act as a stepping stone to the appreciation of music and which lead to the desire for the mastery of other and more difficult instruments, because of the need for self expression in music which has been created by learning to play the simple harmonica. Mrs. Babcock formerly taught music in the North Loup schools. Under the direction of Mrs. Murphy, the high school chorus sang two numbers and sang them well, entitled "Swing High, Swing Low" and "Bells of Dreamland." This was followed by a well prepared paper by Mrs. Murphy on "Music in the School." Among the other interesting facts which she presented was her description of the Beatrice plan which is used here in our own state for the furtherance of education along musical lines. In that school as in some other schools using a similar plan, instruction in music is offered as a part of the regular course, and at a nominal fee, making it available for all. The pupils are encouraged in the study of various instruments as well as in vocal work, because of the low cost of instruction, and in fact some schools even furnish instruments for the pupils' use. This was the night for the annual election of officers. The present officers were not candidates as they can be elected only for one year according to the rules of the association. Mrs. L. O. Greene was chosen president for the coming year to succeed Mrs. W. J. Hemphill and Mrs. Sterling Manchester was elected vice president. Wilfred Leibl succeeds Ethel Jefferies as secretary, and A. D. Moulton will manage the association's financial affairs in the place of Harold Hoepfner. All these retiring officers have filled their offices well. It was decided to change the time of meeting to the third Tuesday of each month. Coffee and wafers were served in the domestic science room at the close of the program.

Library Notes
The Ord Township Library board wishes to publicly thank the Tuesday Study club for its donation of $100 to be added to the present library building fund and also to thank Mrs. George Parkins for her gift of several years of the Geographic magazine which have been bound and are now ready for use at the library.
—Miss Ellamae Marks has been up from Lincoln this week while the State University students are enjoying their spring vacation. She has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Marks.

Olean News

By Eva Adamek.

The weather the past week has been very disagreeable and seems more like winter than spring. The weather the first of the week quiet, mostly the wind was trying to play some more pranks with the dirt and made the roads a great deal more slippery. But we hope the rain and snow helped the small grains and gardens in growth.

The wedding of Miss Emma Vascek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Vascek to Edward Adamek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Adamek, was well attended and every one present reported a good time. The young couple will make their home on the Anton Adamek farm west of Ord. A dinner was given at 12 o'clock and a dance at the Bohemian hall at 8 o'clock.

Elwood, Vernon and Ellen Stanton were guests at a birthday surprise party on Robert Baxter Sunday afternoon. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all. About fifteen of Robert's friends were present to surprise him on his sixteenth birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Devillo Fish and two daughters, Mildred and Mary were Sunday guests at the H. D. Kason home.

Misses Gertrude and Lucille Green were Friday afternoon callers at Myrtle Stanton's.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Roberts and family were Sunday guests at the Earl Bartholomew home.

Miss Betty and Florence Lukesch accompanied Frank Adamek, two daughters Alice and Marie to Kearney Saturday where he entered the contest. They returned the same day.

Friends in this neighborhood are sorry to learn of the illness of Mrs. Emma Burris of North Loup. She is the mother of L. L. Oliver.

Our cadet teacher last week was Miss Alice Pierce of North Platte. These teachers are normal trainers sent out for practice teaching. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday she took down notes for teaching and watched Miss Twombly teach. Thursday and Friday she taught school and Miss Twombly visited other schools. Miss Pierce spent the week end at the Wilbur Zangger home.

Miss Clara McClatchey, county superintendent and Alice Pierce, normal teacher, and Mrs. Morris were Friday morning visitors at Olean school.

Last Thursday the eighth grade pupils received their examination grades. Each one of the pupils have but one or two more subjects to take but are going to try and raise some of their grades.

Springdale News

Miss Ruby Kirk, a normal training student from North Loup, did her practical teaching in our school the past week. Miss McClatchey and Mrs. Morrison of North Loup were callers at school Friday morning.

NEW FILTERING PLANT BEGINS WORK MONDAY

System Installed at Cost of $40,000 Now Supplying Pure, Soft Water.

Ord's new filtering plant, which has been under construction for many months, is now a reality.

The new plant, built at a cost of about $40,000 by the M-N Construction Co., began Monday afternoon to supply the city with water taken from the North Loup river and, by processes of filtering and subjection to chemicals, reduced to pure, soft water.

The process by which Loup river water is purified and made potable is an interesting one.

Just north of the Loup river bridge is located the intake valve by which water is taken from the river.

The first step in purifying river water is the aerator. An electric button on the wall is touched and the pumps at the river, nearly a half-mile away, begin sending water to the plant.

Located in the main portion of the plant are two vats, each of 200-gallon capacity.

After flowing through the four settling basins, the water goes into the filter basins.

Before the water gets to the chlorinator from 85 to 98 per cent of any bacteria present are destroyed and the chlorine completes the work of rendering the water absolutely pure.

Before the new plant was completed the city, from all of its wells, could produce a maximum of 800 gallons per minute.

The filtering process is not nearly so complicated as the description would indicate.

Manager Walters warns people that for a few days there may be a slightly unpleasant odor to the water.

Help With Farmers Fair. The following students from Ord who are attending the college of agriculture are taking part in the Farmers Fair by serving on the following committees:

growth dies and is washed out of the mains. It is entirely harmless and will last only a few days, Mr. Walters says.

The city will realize a great saving in water production by the new plant. Tests have shown that the same amount of electric current as pumped 300 gallons of water will filter and purify 1,000 gallons.

A severe test for the new plant was provided by Tuesday night's storm. The river was exceedingly muddy, but the water when filtered, was as pure and clear as before the storm.

J. C. Rogers Has Unique Hobby, Raises Deer And Elk on Farm South of Town

BY LYMAN H. CASS. The usual hobby of hunting and fishing, collecting autographs or playing carpenter were far too tame when John C. Rogers came to picking his. He wanted something more unique and different.

No effort is made to house the herd, for they refuse to use sheds in winter or summer. A small shed has been provided for them, but through storms and coldest winter they choose to stand unprotected in the blasts. Thus far, cold has never affected them.

The delicate lines of limb and body, and the soft, gentle faces so characteristic of the family mark a vivid contrast between these animals and the heavy, sodden features of the usual Nebraska herd.

Mr. Rogers, who is a prosperous retired cattle-raiser in Ord, intends to permit his herd to multiply until he can kill them for food. He is provided with a government license which permits him to raise and kill them as he sees fit, so his hobby will soon be especially useful as well as entertaining.

Every once in a while we get into a jam here at the Quiz office and have to leave a lot of copy out and then people interested are peeved. And I don't blame them. Each person thinks his or her copy the most important. Of course each person's copy is the most important to that person. Last week we started out thinking there would be lots of room and slack advertising. Matter was run that could have been left out, had we known what was going to happen. After a couple of runs were off and it was too late to leave out less urgent matter an avalanche of advertising came pouring in and several galleys of set matter was left out. Several correspondents called to give us binks (if you know what that is) for leaving their matter out. Several other organizations were also disappointed. We are sorry. This week we are printing more pages. The advertising seems to justify it to start with. You know how it is, if we run more pages than the advertising justifies that means losing money and what a payroll of a couple of hundred dollars each Saturday night, it is not wise to waste $25 dollars worth of paper if it is not needed. There is one manner in which the whole problem could be solved. That is by having the business people let us know just a little sooner in the week what space they need. Sometimes they don't know themselves, I suppose, until the last minute and I don't suppose the problem will ever be solved in that way.

In writing to renew her subscription Mrs. Abi Packer of Central City, told me what a fine time she had during the winter. She spent the whole winter with her children and other relatives in California, stopping at New Plymouth, Idaho, enroute home to visit her son K. L. Packer. She admitted, though, that she was glad to be back in good old Nebraska.

I have had to take a lot of good natured kidding about my "fish ponds" out in the front yard but I believe as the season advances and possibly as year succeeds year, the kidders will agree that the work was not all in vain. It was, that landscape man who did my work put one over on me for quite a tidy sum.

When I came to fill out my intangible property schedule I found it was not such a serious thing after all. I did have to spend several hours figuring and running the adding machine to get the right totals to put into it. I believe it is going to work out all right, too, and I also believe that a lot of us will remember, next year, to check out money in the bank April 1, a day or two before to avoid paying taxes on it. It is not right to pay taxes on cash in the bank the morning of the first that has to go the second and third, to pay current expenses.

I didn't say a word last week in this department, about subscription payments. At that the payments kept right on coming in. I am glad of this because I do hate to have to take anyone off the list when June 1 comes, because their subscription is not paid in advance. I will have to do so, I know, for there are sure to be some who will not be paid. They will no doubt miss one or more copies of the paper. I am trying to be fair in the matter and give all a chance to get right with the Quiz before that date. I must treat all alike when June 1 comes, however, and if you don't get your Quiz you will know the reason.

I am pleased with another matter, too, and that is the way people who owed back Journal subscription are sending in their money. No doubt people feel like the man who bought a horse and it died and later he had to pay for it. Paying for a dead horse is hard work. Still I had bought all those accounts and it is easier, much easier, for each to pay his than for me to lose them all. Just think about this when you are hesitating and asking yourself, should I pay that.

And there is another thing I want to mention in this letter. The Bee-News is still $7. The regular price is $9. The publishers may tell me to go back to the regular price May 1. If your Bee-News is anywhere near out, better send or bring me $7, before May 1 and save the $2., that is, if you are going to take the paper anyhow. There are other daily papers in Nebraska and some of them cost less money. Probably none of them are better and perhaps not as good as the Bee-News. Surely none of them give us as many colored pictures, or as many features or as good a Sunday paper. At any rate no matter what daily paper you keep, the Quiz would like to order it for you. It doesn't cost you any more. It even saves you some work and slight expense and we get a commission for sending it in.

As a general proposition a dog is a damned nuisance and I guess anyone is foolish to keep a dog. I found that two dogs were four times as much nuisance as one dog and that three dogs are absolutely impossible. I gave one dog away but she lived so close that she was still my dog most of the time so I gave her to a friend out in the country and if Jack doesn't watch his step I will find a good country home for him also. But I really pity anyone who don't like a dog and though a common scrub, our dog is just as loyal to his master as is a blue blooded, pedigreed dog.

I wrote this department Thursday afternoon the 18th and Eugene was unkind enough to remark that I must be figuring on taking a fishing trip, getting my copy out so early. If we should happen to get a few days of good fishing weather and I could find a can of worms I probably would go, too.

The Back Forty

By J. A. KOVANDA

Feeding hogs coal is a widespread practice. One Ord dealer told me recently that he sells fifty tons of coal to farmers annually for this purpose. In trying to determine whether or not any benefits might be derived from such feeding practices the requested the opinions of a number of outstanding authorities on animal nutrition. We herein present the replies of feeding specialists from Kansas, Colorado, New York, Iowa, and Nebraska:

Mr. J. A. Kovanda, April 3, 1929
Ord, Nebraska.
Dear Sir:
We do not recommend the feeding of coal to hogs. It does no harm but it does not seem to do any particular good.

The advisability of feeding minerals to hogs in addition to what they may get out of the ration fed will depend upon the feeds which constitute the ration used. In some cases minerals are necessary. In other cases they are not necessary. Ordinarily when tankage is used as the protein supplement it is not necessary to add minerals but when protein supplements of a vegetable origin are used such as linseed oil meal, soybeans, etc. one should then feed a mineral mixture. Probably as good a mineral mixture as one can use consists of finely ground limestone 5 parts, steamed bone meal 5 parts, and salt 1 part.

Yours very truly,
C. W. McCAMPBELL,
Professor of Animal Husbandry,
Kansas State Agricultural College.

Mr. J. A. Kovanda, April 6, 1929
Ord, Nebraska.
Dear Sir:
I have your letter of April 1 in which you ask regarding the feeding of coal to hogs.

Evidently there are certain minerals in coal that hogs desire very much and there is no harm in giving them access to a pile of coal. However, I do not believe that coal alone furnishes sufficient mineral matter to insure the best results and would advise that the hogs have access to a supply of calcium and phosphorus in the ration itself by feeding such feeds as alfalfa hay, etc. or by feeding such constituents in the form of mineral matter.

Salt should be available at all times.
Very truly yours,
FRED H. LEINBACH,
Assistant Professor
Colorado Agricultural College.

Dear Mr. Kovanda:
We do not recommend the feeding of coal to hogs because we do not know of any nutritive value that it contains. It is true that hogs like to eat coal and charcoal, but that does not necessarily mean that they ought to eat it in my judgment. I recall not very long ago an article by Doctor Ferrin of the University of Minnesota, in which he definitely advised against the feeding of coal to hogs and cited some very good reasons.

Our standard recommendation as a mineral mixture for hogs is equal parts by weight of steam bone meal and ground limestone. If the hogs are getting tankage or some other bone-carrying supplement, the extra minerals are probably not needed. Also they are probably not needed when the pigs are on good legume pasture in summer.

Yours very truly,
L. A. MAYNARD,
Professor of Animal Nutrition,
Cornell University.

March 25, 1929
Mr. J. A. Kovanda,
Ord, Nebraska.

Dear Sir:
We are sending you one of our leaflets which shows the results we had where a small amount of coal was fed to growing and fattening pigs. Apparently the small amount of coal did not do any harm. We know of cases where some conditions might improve the ration somewhat.

Our experience in general has been that if pigs are receiving a good ration, by good ration we mean plenty of grain supplemented with a good supplemental mixture and a mineral mixture, then certainly coal would not do any harm. We know of cases, however, where pigs that were receiving a poor ration made a relatively poor showing when coal was added. The reason for this was probably that the pigs ate much more coal than they needed inasmuch as they were trying to get the needed nutrients from the coal.

We would much prefer a mineral mixture to ground coal or coal slack, however as we have said, you could probably give the pigs access to the coal without any detrimental effects providing the rest of the ration was good.

Very truly yours,
C. C. CULBERTSON,
Animal Husbandry Section
Ames, Iowa.

February 18, 1929.
Mr. J. A. Kovanda,
Ord, Nebraska.

Dear Sir:
Slacked coal is of no value in a mineral mixture for hogs. They like this product and will eat considerable amounts of it but it can be definitely proven that it is impossible for them to digest even small portions of it. Charcoal is limited in mineral value but might be of some value in the cleansing effect it has on the intestinal tract.

When animals are receiving a balanced ration and as much as one-half of the protein supplement is of animal origin (as tankage, skim milk, meat meal, etc.) and where either alfalfa or alfalfa pasture is available it has been the experience of those at this station that other mineral with the exception of salt is not necessary. If it is desired to feed other minerals, a mixture composed of air slacked lime 45 parts, bone meal 45 parts, and salt 10 parts has as much to recommend it as any other. To this a half bushel of cob or wood ashes may be added in case you desire it.

Dr. E. M. Forbes of the Pennsylvania Station has this to say regarding the use of sulphur, copper sulphate, ferric oxide, etc. in lime rations. "There is no place in the ration of well hogs for these ingredients and sick hogs should receive medicines chosen with reference to the particular disease from which they suffer."

Twenty-five Teams Enter At Burwell

According to Kenneth Parsons, the Wranglers high school track and relay meet scheduled for tomorrow afternoon on the rodeo fairgrounds is going to be another successful meet if entries can be taken as any indication. Parsons, who is directing the meet, says that twenty-five teams have already signified their intention of taking part and among the entrants is St. Paul, champion of the Loup Valley this year.

The meet is supposed to start promptly at 1:00 p. m. at the fairgrounds in Burwell. Last year the weather was anything but favorable for a track meet so officials are hoping for better conditions this year.

Earnest Team Gives Beating To Ord Spuds

Manager Jake Earnest's North Loup baseball team, central Nebraska league champions for 1928, started off their present season Sunday by administering a 13 to 1 wallop to Round's Irish Potatoes of Ord. The game was played on the North Loup diamond before a fair crowd of enthusiastic baseball fans.

The North Loup team had little trouble in defeating the Ord nine and were always safely in the lead. The Earnest team counted four times in the initial inning on combined hits and errors. They scored in every inning except the fourth.

The lone Ord tally came in the third inning on two hits and a sacrifice. Shirley, first man up for the Round's team, grounded out, Finch to Williams. Ed Furtak singled deep into center field and Round sacrificed him down to second when he laid down at bunt along the first base line. Al Furtak then singled to left field, scoring brother Ed. Blessing grounded out to retire the side.

Evidently Manager Earnest has again assembled a winning ball nine at North Loup if Sunday's victory can be taken as evidence. He has practically the same team that went through the league season last year without a defeat with the exception of two men. The North Loup team opens the Central Nebraska schedule next Sunday by playing Elba at Elba.

Spring Showing of General Motors Cars.

This week, throughout America, the public is viewing the newest models of General Motors products.

Check and mail the coupon below. It will bring this Spring Showing into your own home.

CHEVROLET—Last year the public bought more than 1,000,000 Chevrolets. This enabled Chevrolet and General Motors to effect one of the most remarkable feats in industrial history: almost overnight, Chevrolet was changed from a 4-cylinder car to a six in the price range of the four. The new Chevrolet Six is new in every respect: smoother, more powerful, and luxurious bodies by Fisher. 7 models—$525 to $725

OAKLAND—General Motors' policy of continuous improvement is nowhere more noticeable than in the new models of the Oakland All-American Six. The distinctive style and advanced engineering principles which Oakland represents have made it a center of unusual public interest at automobile shows. All-American in name, the new Oakland is All-American in its qualities of speed, snap, power and stamina. Fisher makes the bodies. 8 models—$1145 to $1375

BUICK—This famous member of the General Motors family, year after year, has given increasing value. Over 2,000,000 Buicks have been built and sold. The new Silver Anniversary Buick, with masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, comes in three wheel-base lengths. All are powered by the Buick Valve-in-Head engine, which is vibrationless beyond belief. 19 models—$1195 to $2145

PONTIAC—Since General Motors introduced the Pontiac Six three years ago, its sales have practically doubled each year. Now General Motors offers, in the new Pontiac, a "Big Six," at the same base price. It has big-car power, big-car performance and big-car luxury in the Bodies by Fisher. It is appealing particularly to families which are "stepping up" in car ownership. 7 models—$745 to $895

VIKING—There was demand for an 8-cylinder car of General Motors quality in the medium price field. General Motors chose Oldsmobile to design and build the new car, and three years were spent in its development and test. The result was revealed last month in the Viking, the latest member of the General Motors family. Around The World And A Year in China

The Peking language school entertained the Nanking language school and its party, at tea in the late afternoon. We were most interested in the lovely old Chinese palace in which the Peking language students should be able to get the true Chinese view point and understanding.

As usual our ricksha coolies left us with many "goodbyes." They always said "goodbye" as though they had been waiting all day to say it. Three words they knew, "good-morning," "awright," and "good-bye." Many times they said "awright" in the most understanding manner, but we would find that they did not know and were taking us off in the wrong direction. But such happy childish fellows they were and we just could not get angry with them.

Sixth Day

THIS morning was devoted to a trip to Forbidden City whose yellow tiled roofs we had passed and glimpsed from the city wall. We entered by the south gate which will be very beautiful some day when the grass is green and the gardens properly dressed. . . . We were a little too early for the springtime in Peking. We passed through pine avenues and over news making our way to the gate of the museum. We entered a paved open place, passed over one of the white marble bridges and found ourselves entering another low building with imperial yellow tiled roof and in front were the white marble balustrades so typical of Peking.

The museum is one of the most interesting I have been privileged to visit. There were three rooms—the first contained very old and priceless pieces of cloisonne and potted plants, the leaves and flowers of which were rare pieces of jade, crystal, agate and other precious stones. Both the cloisonne and these jeweled assemblages, representing plants and flowers, show the mastery of the Chinese in pleasing symmetry of fine details. The second room displayed fine specimens of another proud art of China—pottery. The china had been arranged in different colors, yellow, blue, and grey, and according to the various makes. In this room we found a beautiful display of carved red lacquer, and since we knew the prices of the smallest of boxes on sale in the shops, we knew that those on display were very, very valuable. Here we also saw broodered throne pillows, skulls made into bowls, pieces of armor, saddles decorated in finest of embroidery, and bowls and dishes made of silver thread. We admired the screens, decorated in much of ivory and precious stones, but we were most enthusiastic over the cases of jade—all kinds of jade, carved into many different articles, and ranging from the waxey, pure white, into the milky green, and that of the most precious shades of green. The third room was devoted to very old pieces of bronze and brass.

From the museum we made our way to the huge, paved courts of the three throne rooms. Such a huge court it was, where a large army could stand at attention, where large celebrations could occur without being cramped, and which offered a most fitting setting for the huge building. Moreover, the five arched marble bridges with the typical carved balustrades offered a beautiful passing over the moat. Access to the building was typical with its three landings and carved balustrades, and on each landing were placed bronze birds and ivory big urns. In the first throne room which is the largest, 110 feet high. The pillars were very large and painted in beautiful shades which were harmonious with the ceiling that was painted in less vivid colors and in exacting designs. In the room were many fine and beautifully carved screens and upon the elevated platform in the center was the carved throne with the Chinese crest upon the back. The second throne room contained some very interesting old screens; we were not permitted to go into the third throne room.

We had time to go to the Chinese fair before lunch, which proved to be booths of five-and-ten-cent store style down the center of a street, over which is a matting covering. The stores of this street are also open, or without windows, and consequently the whole looks very much like a market. One could buy most anything at the fair and we purchased chop-sticks at the rate of 50 cents for 20 pair.

We were invited to tea and since we were not permitted to dine we spent the time after tea in shopping, visiting a bead shop and admiring the treasures there. We also visited "Flower street" where a great profusion of artificial flowers of the flowers where great festoons of the street and in front of the shops. Again we looked upon the marvellous skill of the Chinese in creating beautiful things from paper.

Seventh Day

March 22.

"EARLY to rise" because we were going to see one of the wonders of the world this day, the Great Wall of China.

Again the fine hospitality of the missionaries at the hospital was evident for they saw that we had breakfasted properly and that our lunches were ready. At the gate even at this hour, were our faithful ricksha coolies who tucked our robes about us and trotted off on a delightful early-morning trip to the station.

Though it was early, the street sprinklers were busy, and their system seemed unique to us. A coolie brings a huge, wooden bucket full of water and places it in the center of the street; the skilled workman then takes his long-handled dipper and throws the water in such a way as to cover the most space, and he knows exactly how far it will go. You may turn around in your ricksha to see a dipper full of water coming directly at you. Involuntarily you will duck for you think you will be drenched, and it will just miss you.

When we arrived at the station we found the cars ready for us. These cars were furnished with very straight and stiff seats, facing each other in pairs.

It took three hours to get to our station up in the mountains because of the steep grade. We were very interested in the scenery. It was not long before we were in real mountains and our train followed a clear mountain stream. With great ingenuity the farmers had built rock walls into a sort of bunding so that they might have terraced gardens. When we were seven miles from our destination our train was switched about and hooked up to a great big American made engine, which managed to get us to the last station.

The Great Wall of China . . . and it is great! There it was marching up and down and around and over the mountains. It seemed a going living thing, unafraid of the mountains. Though it is called "Folly" for it has never accomplished that for which it was made, we fell into admiring silence as we stood at the foot of this great work of man.

We followed the donkey trail to a gate in the wall, so that we might climb up on the wall and get the effect from its top. We lost no time in climbing this giant which in most part was about 20 feet high. It was wide enough at this spot for a wagon to pass along. We felt sorry to see that the wall was falling rapidly into decay.

Since it was past lunch time and since we were very hungry, we sought a sheltered place, where we could eat our lunch. As we did so, we looked far off in the east at the great monster which seemed even now to be crawling and zig-zagging over those mountains and with no ultimate purpose.

After lunch we climbed over the uncertain and very difficult path to the highest watch tower toward the west. We were almost swept off the wall by the wind, but we found the climbing very exhilarating and the view we commanded from the tower was well worth the effort. We had no doubt but that the sign would be folly to try to describe it. In fact, we were quite overcome, and blessed the powers that be that we had been privileged to look forth from this high watch tower upon this great wonder of the world.

March 23.

Eighth Day

WE JOINED a party which were to be shown the Peking Union medical college and hospital. It is a John Rockefeller donation and we were told that the plant was the finest of its kind in the world.

The buildings are built of grey brick and the roofs are of bright green tile and follow the Chinese style of upward curving corners with little animals of brass seeming to play on the roof. The white marble balustrades cause the buildings to be a harmonious part of Peking.

On our tour of inspection we started with the auditorium to the right and on the main plant just across the street north. We noticed that the wood furnishings throughout were of the finest, that the class rooms were well equipped, that the laundry boasted of machinery, that the furnaces and boilers looked like modern American plants, the well for pure water followed an excellent plan, that the hospital wards were wonderfully clean, and we were awed by the wonderful x-ray and other equipment of the latest type and not drenched, and it will just miss you.

We were lost in wonder when we beheld "the finest operating room in the world." We did not doubt but that it was one of the finest alright. We were truly interested in the sunny parlors where unfortunate and Chinese were basking in the welcome heat of the sunshine. The kitchen was very clean and arranged for the cooking of Chinese food.

The Peking Union medical college (P.U.M.C.) and hospital seemed to us a very fine monument which is dedicated to one of the greatest needs of China . . . to bring to its people the much needed medical assistance by training its bright young men into doctors and surgeons and by curing a great many of the suffering thousands. As we passed through the clinic and saw the great number waiting for medical treatment and when we saw the long line being served at the medicine counter we realized that this institution was busily accomplishing its mission.

On the afternoon of this day our entire party had been invited to meet the president of China, and we made our appearance at the south gate shortly after 1:30 p.m. o'clock. We passed through a gate or two and found ourselves looking north across a lake to an island which was created by the graceful sweeping lines of Chinese buildings. There were two or three larger than sampans and quite lively in colored decorations, upon which our party were transported across the lake to a stone tinge in which was a large stone throne.

A Chinese gentleman in foreign clothes was awaiting us when we introduced as one of the advisers to the president. He acted as our guide and let us through court after court and we found them very dusty and badly kept up; all the buildings were in need of painting.

Finally we reached a large building and found ourselves in an immense hall, the ceiling and walls of which were painted white. The floor was carpeted by a beautiful Peking-blue rug . . . a handsome thing. There was a large plant in the rug, but we found seats along the wall on the west and east sides. We noticed that on the east was a long tea room, and on the west were several little rooms. To the north was an elevation where we obtained several rooms enclosed with glass. Upon the porch-like entrance to these rooms were arranged potted and dwarfed plants, loaded with blossoms . . . the flowering peach and the may-wa being the most exquisite.

As soon as President Lu was announced we found a long line across the room facing the elevated rooms. From these rooms appeared a middle aged, middle sized, middle looking Chinese gentleman, dressed in a foreign, dark, swallow tail coat and striped grey trousers—this was the president of China. With him were eight of his advisers, grouping themselves four on either side of the president, who had stopped upon the porch of the enclosed rooms. These were fine appearing Chinese gentlemen and all wore foreign dress. Two servants were dressed in purple suits. We bowed as we had been instructed, and the president bowed also. He then took a folded paper from one of his advisers and it proved to be his address to us, which he read in Chinese. Another of his advisers translated the address to us. Dr. Arthur Smith, a well known author, responded for the rest of the Chinese. The president came forward, shook hands with Dr. Smith and was introduced to the party as a whole. Then he invited us to have a cup of tea in the east tea room, and he and his party came to the tea table.

We found a long table in this tea room covered with a wonderful array of cakes, which looked for the world like French pastries. After having tea we wandered about in the elevated rooms, finding a grotesque combination of handsome carved ivory screens, a huge throne like chair of carved teak wood, some nice urns, and little carved ivory, whose enclosed compartments together with badly worn brussels, carpets, old foreign stuffed chairs, and cheap looking electrolators that bespoke of foreign influence of a date quite a few years back.

We then visited two halls in which were hung for our benefit the pictures of the Emperors and Empress Dowagers. The oldest was dated 2965 B. C. Again we felt like paying homage to the great age of China.

March 24.

Ninth Day

ANOTHER early morning expedition, going to the Central Hotel to join the rest of the eightseers. We were transferred to motor cars, our objective being the Summer Palace, where we were to spend the day and their courts spent the summer, during the days of the Chinese empire. This wonderful place is located northwest of the city of Peking.

Here we found every building and low and emerald blue tiles, which were most impressive in effect. In an outer court were the famous bronze and gold lions, which smiled a welcome at us, and did not appear in the least like guards of a portico.

The guide led us through many courts to a place where actors played to the royalty. They came up through the floor of the high platform upon which they acted before the huge throne room just opposite. Ten we were brought abruptly to the side of a large lake and around the lake was a beautiful panorama of Chinese landscape, for the most part made by hands. . . . To the right, following a white marble balustrade, which skirted the water's edge, we saw the large tower that lifted its head above countless other towers and buildings, all high up on the hill side. A little higher on the north was a temple which seemed to have as its duty the protection of the many buildings at its feet.

Our guide headed the procession which started for the main tower and took us down a long, long covered walk, the ceiling and pillars of which were painted in very bright colors. This walk seemed to be about two blocks long, and afforded something new and varied all along the way. Finally, we came to the ascent to the tower. . . . it is built at the top of a stone wall. We climbed and climbed up the steps and with a view across the large artificial lake to the island just opposite, and the camel backed bridge on the right. We descended by the rocky road and the bronze tinge about head to us a beautiful piece of work. At the bottom of the descent is an exact counterpart of the other covered walk extending into the opposite direction. It seemed that all Chinese settings must be exactly the same on both sides in order to preserve a certain sense of proportion.

Following the covered walk we found that it took us to the water's edge, and close by was the famous Marble Boat. But such a disappointment it was in that the ship part was only painted to look like marble.

From here we took a boat over to the island which we had seen from the tower. After landing upon the island we were guided through a narrow grove to see a temple of no consequence, and then over a white stone bridge to the east, where we found a very beautiful tinge and the famous bronze cow in its white marble pen.

From the Summer Palace, we went to see the Jade Fountain, which proved to be a spring and the water seemed to be of a bright green color. That afternoon we visited Fur and Embroidery street as well as Silver street. Truly we received much pleasure in seeing the choice wares of Peking displayed thus in such profusion. And the streets were well policed with a policeman on the corner and one or two walking up and down the streets. Some of the streets of Peking were exceptionally wide but these streets were very narrow with signs all along. Chinese men would stop us saying, "Want embroidery?" "Man-darin coat?" "Want fur?" "Want cheap pants?" Often times the shops were not on the street and we would enter a little hallway, go through courts and come finally into the shops.

Our kind hostess had arranged that we might have another Chinese feast that evening. This time we had bawdzas, meat wrapped up in raised dough and then steamed. With this we drank a soft "chi fan," or rice soup. For dancing (dessert) we had fruit, persimmons and pears.

That evening we went to another theater, which was more like our own, with exquisite properties and curtains of embroidered satin. The audience seemed to be of a higher class than the one we saw at the other theater. We were very interested in the dress of the Manchu ladies, who wore long robes like the men and small jackets over them—jackets without sleeves. We saw the most delicate of colors in the silks worn in Peking. Many of these Manchu ladies had their hair dressed beautifully with quite a bunch of flowers on the right side and some very small ones on the left; two low loops of hair were arranged low at the neck. The president of China, whom we had met the day before, and his second wife sat in one of the boxes.

We felt very fortunate to see the wonderful Mei Lan-Fang, who is the most delicate of colors in the silks or who impersonates women. We were told that he gets 1,300 mex an hour for acting, that he is very independent and cannot be induced to accept big American offers, and that he has the beautiful wives. He was very graceful and wore a handsome red satin costume which was greatly bestrapped with pearls and pink satin. He gave two lovely dances, one a sword dance.

Tenth Day

THROUGH the influence of Pastor Lu, a most influential Christian we were invited to go to the camp of General Feng Yuhsiang, the "Christian General." The camp was located south of the city and we made the trip in Fords.

We were ushered into a very bare and a very clean hall; in fact, we found that all the buildings and the grounds were very bare and very clean. We were told to sit down upon the tiny benches and await the coming of the general. A little Chinese lady, very modestly dressed, was introduced to us as Mrs. Feng. She was told that she was the mother of five children.

The general came—a very large Chinese man, dressed in a grey army uniform devoid of any mark of office. His eyes were bright and keen; his face bore a frank, open and pleasant expression. He bowed to us and addressed us in Chinese. He told us that he had very recently undergone an operation and that his physician had ordered him to do very little talking. He said, "And of course we must obey orders." He told us that China needed most of all Christianity and its ideals, and that he felt it his duty and privilege to meet those who came to China to help in these ways. He asked to shake hands with everyone of us. Then he invited us to have tea in the dining hall.

Arcadia News Briefs

Arcadia, Neb., April 24th—A heavy rain Tuesday evening amounting to three inches in two hours caused a heavy drain from the hills surrounding Arcadia with the result that by 2 a. m. practically half of the town was under water. Basements were flooded and the residents of the community were awakened in order that they might assist those who were in need of help. The depot street which was washed out by high water three years ago, was again the object of destruction, the rushing water cutting a channel across it and main street and to the river. Russell's creek in the east part of Arcadia flooded the surrounding territory washing out the approaches to the bridge at the east entrance to the town.

Mrs. E. C. Baird had her left ankle broken Tuesday evening when she slipped and fell as she was entering the front door at her home. Medical aid was secured and she is resting easily at present. An interesting meeting of the Arcadia Community club was held at the Congregational church basement Tuesday evening when the ladies of the Aid Society of the church served the members a seven o'clock dinner. After dinner the regular business of the club was transacted at which time many matters of interest were brought up, discussed and decided upon. The next meeting of the club will be held at the Methodist church basement, May 27th.

Burwell News

Joseph Flakus, who recently arrived from New York City, bought out the Higgins pool hall and took possession Monday. This is one of the best halls in this section and has always done a splendid business. Mr. Flakus for a long time has been going to New York seven years ago and getting a position on the Municipal band. In this band he was a member of Mayor Walker's reception committee, and had a part in welcoming a great many celebrities to the city, among them such people as Lindy and Trudy. He said it was a nice job, but that the pay was hardly what one would expect it to be, and he decided to come west again and go into business in the old home town. Old faithful John Graboski will continue with him as in the past. James Anderson, who recently went to the Wise Memorial hospital at Omaha to be treated for gland trouble, passed away after undergoing an operation. Mr. Anderson lived for the past thirty years near Burwell, farming for the past five years on the McClimans place three miles east of town. His health had not been good for some time, but he neglected to go until it was too late for the doctors to do much for him. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from the Methodist church, the pastor Rev. Gettys having charge of the services. He was a brother of William, Edward, Onie, John and Asa Anderson and Mrs. Elmer Finkle and Mrs. J. N. Johnson, all of whom live in Burwell. Mr. Anderson was a man of great worth and merit, and merited the highest respect of all who knew him. Alvin Spelts, who has been in poor health for some time, went to the Grand Island hospital last week and underwent an operation for ulcers of the stomach, from which he recovered as well as could be hoped. As soon as the doctors think he is strong enough, he will have to have another operation for liver trouble. While he and his wife are away the affairs at the ranch are being managed by the management of Emory Butts. Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Butts are the proud parents of a fine pound baby girl named Gladys Lavonne, born at midnight, Sunday night. All concerned are doing well, including grandpa and grandma Shafer, who as a result of the happy event, are grandparents for the first time. Dr. and Mrs. Walker, of Omaha, made a social call upon the Dr. Gaukel family Monday night. The doctor is on the road in the interests of veterinary supplies, and makes this territory quite frequently. He was a member of the same class as Dr. Gaukel. The town of Burwell is beginning to take on municipal airs, with a part of Grand Island, and for traffic this week while a new crossing was being constructed west from the southwest corner of the square. Work is progressing nicely on the new electroliners and will be ready for use in a short time. Burwell's three man track team went over to Callaway Friday and did better than could be hoped for against the keen competition put up by the schools represented there. James Rowse is sporting two medals showing that he took second in the half mile and second in the mile. It being his first attempt over the longer distance. George Hoyt picked off medals for second place in both the high and low hurdles, which is going strong against the competition he had. The other man, Marshall Thompson, failed to place in the pole vault, falling to cross the bar at ten feet two inches, although the best vault made was only three inches higher. Between thirty and forty schools were represented at the meet. Burwell can well feel proud of the showing the boys made. These same boys with the addition of several others, will represent Burwell at the Wranglers track meet, which is scheduled for the coming Friday. Entry blanks have been received from about 20 schools, and more will enter before the meet opens. The Burwell boy scouts met Monday night in regular session at the congregation of church. Twenty members being present. It was planned to hold a Court of Honor at the high school Tuesday night, at which time District Representative Glenn Fordyce of Lincoln was to be present. However, Mr. Fordyce was unavoidably detained, and the meeting was postponed until a later date. Friday night of last week over one hundred met in the basement of the Methodist church, the occasion being the banquet which the ladies gave the men after losing out in a contest. The Burwell section was nearly drowned by the rain that fell on Monday and Tuesday nights, and some on Tuesday during the day. The streets were full of water. The streets were full of water Wednesday morning. The ground should now be in perfect condition for starting a good crop. Coats Tells on Neighbors. At a recent social function in the Vinton neighborhood E. S. Coats was on the program and among other things he said: "Last week Date Auble was out here to buy a cow. A few days later I was in Ord and Date and I got to discussing the cow and she had the prettiest calf I have ever seen." Just then I heard a giggle and looked up into a pair of laughing blue eyes, and the young lady said, "Foxy Grandpa." Next time I discuss cows and calves I will make sure there are no young ladies passing by. "Ed Hackel says when he was a boy and went out riding with the schoolmams he got cramps in his left arm and had to straighten it out to stop them, and when he got up into the schoolmams of ten he had a school mam in it. He says that after all these years whenever he sees a pretty schoolmam he feels those same old cramps coming on."

Left His Ad Out.

Last week the Quiz makeup man got the back page of the paper all filled and locked up and about that time Edmund Seyler came in with his usual used car copy. We have an agreement with him and Plagg & Tumbitt that they shall have certain spaces on that page and that in case they forget or fail to get their copy in the space shall be run blank and they are to pay for it. That is just how anxious they are to always have their ad in the Quiz. But they were a rush of late advertising, the Seyler ad was forgotten, the copy not being in and when he came in about 9 a. m. Thursday morning the page was full and we were all ready to go to press. To change, then, was to miss the routes and noon train and that we just couldn't do. Mr. Seyler talked some about licking the whole bunch of us but after looking the whole bunch over, Eva, Harry, Everett, Eugene and Kent, and two or three of the Ord Linotype School boys who are helping to set the Quiz these days, he mentioned the boss, he thought better of it and cautioned us not to ever leave his copy out again. This week he has a real attractive used car ad three columns by ten inches in size and you want to read it. He gave it to me when I was in his place Monday morning and he also told me that their service department was keeping to work like thunder to keep up with the business being brought in. He also said they had put out new Chevrolests this month already.

By FRARY RHEA COLLISON

Upon the return trip, we walked through the streets of Hsi-gwan, investing in butterscotch, chocolate (both of foreign make) and red-hot "eu-te-ows" (a kind of doughnuts). Since we saw these eu-te-ows come from the red-hot lard, we felt that no disease germs could be living at that temperature, and took a chance. We found a matchy eager for a trip to Drum Tower, and on this ride we indulged in much "fool" talk, candy, and "eu-te-ows."

No one of us felt very sorry that we had missed the dragon festival.

Peking

IN NANKING was located one of the language schools of China, where new missionaries, and also new business people, might spend one or two years acquiring the Chinese language. Each year the students were encouraged to take a trip to Peking during the spring vacation, giving them an opportunity to see the greatest "show place" in China, to adjust their mental and visual view points of the historical city, and to use their recently acquired Chinese words in bargaining for the many tempting wares for which Peking is famous. This trip was arranged with the railroad company and fourth class cars chartered, cleaned and disinfected. Special student rates were procured, amounting to $14.50 mex (about $7.25 United States money), or about half of the third class fare for the round trip.

This year, many out-siders applied to accompany the language students, and consequently, there were passengers enough to fill two cars to overflowing. The Hillcrest school authorities were very kind and arranged that we might have our vacation at the same time as that of the language school; moreover, we were fortunate applicants for the trip to Peking. "Useful hints" were sent us—to take our own bedding, to take a wash basin, our own soap and towels; and the hope was included that we might all be able to go to bed at one time.

It was always a mystery to me how the mawfoo could manage to stow the three of us and our "tons" of baggage into a matchy. This morning it was raining and the matchy was a "ki-matchay" (covered carriage) and somehow or other the man stowed everything into a dry spot. We crept under the puki covering and trusted to the mawfoo to take us to the proper hulk. Here we were met by an army of coolies who grabbed our baggage and dumped it on the baggage launch. We were then plotted to another launch, the passenger launch—here a dampness prevailed even in spirit.

After the wet passage across the Yangtze, we found our chartered cars which looked much like box cars and caused us to feel like vagrants for sure. In fact the party looked rather sad when it found that the cars were quite wet and that the rain was pouring in through broken windows. We three appropriated a corner in one of the cars, sat down on the twelve inch bench, looked over the dismal prospect, and wondered why we had been so eager to elect this trip.

However, the train had not gone far on its northward journey, when the rain ceased and the sun began to shine. The effect of sunshine is marvelous, and with its coming that "at home" feeling descended upon us. The train stopped at every little village, and it was great fun to jump out, take a pound on the fenced-off platform, and look over the crowd gathered invariably to watch the train pass. And our lunch and supper were lots of fun... like a picnic, except that two or three had brought their lunch together, so that we were eating in squads.

Bed time brought a new interest. Our most considerate Pauline arranged our beds; two of us sleeping on the bench or shelf and she upon the floor. Besides our clothes we donned fur shoes, sweaters, coats, bathrobes, and scarfs; then we rolled up in our steamer rugs and put ourselves away on the shelf. We should have slept well for the arrangements were excellent; but the shelf was very hard and narrow, and I was the last word in restlessness.

One lantern, hanging from the center of the car, cast a ghostly light so faint that it scarcely reached the corners. I was reminded of the scene of the "Unborn" in the play, "The Bluebird," for all over the floor and all over the benches were shapeless rolls of humanity.

Most sleep dispelling were our attempts to keep the Chinese travelers that swarmed upon the train after each stop, out of our car. They would open the door and drag in their luggage, while we would yell ineffectual "Bye-byes" at them (We do not want.) Finally someone tried saying "bow chay" (reserved car) and this caused a miraculous exit in every case.

March 17.

Second Day

AT THE first flicker of dawn we were awake. A stage whisperer announced that this was Saint Patrick's day. We were frights to behold, but our spirits were high. We washed in our "individual" wash basins, breakfasted, and were exceedingly glad to arrive at Tianfu where the train stopped several minutes allowing us to have some badly needed early morning exercise.

After leaving Tianfu we crossed the Yellow river, and passed over a country so level that it reminded us of Nebraska. This is the district which suffers from lack of rainfall, and consequently has a season of drouth and famine each year. Instead of small truck farms, as around Nanking, here were huge brown fields. Plowing was the business of this day... a rude plow, an odd team of an ox and a donkey, and the farmer dressed in coolie blue, shaven forehead, and a long queue rolled around his head or hanging down his back. A runaway donkey and ox, frightened by our train no doubt, and in pursuit of a wild looking Chinese man with his queue flying, cut a funny furrow across the field. The clusters of farm houses were made of yellow mud, flat roofed and surrounding this little settlement was a wall, also made of yellow mud.

Peking carts were one mode of travel across the country and they looked like miniature "moving wagons," being a two-wheeled cart with an arched top which was covered with blue coolie cloth. This strange vehicle was drawn by a pony, or by a team of an ox and donkey, or an ox and a pony.

At the stations we amused ourselves by buying Peking or Tientsin stamps, and the vendors who hung over the fence of the platforms. They were not allowed on the platform and neither were the beggars who would hold out their hands to us and cry beseechingly for coppers. We found these beggars exceedingly dexterous in catching coppers.

We were forced to transfer ourselves and baggage at Tientsin to one car. This transfer occurred about seven o'clock in the evening, and it was a three hour run from there to Peking. We were aboard "high in the middle of the car. Two tiny candles caused us to feel deep respect for the lantern of the night before. The crowd grew more and more restless and uncomfortable, and for that reason we rejoiced when we caught sight of the city wall of Peking. A very tired and very jaded looking bunch of foreigners detracted at 10 o'clock at Peking station where we were met by representatives from the Peking language school. They led us to our baggage, put us into rickshas and sent us off to the missionary homes that had been opened to us.

We three were sent to the Sleeper-Davis hospital—a hospital sound-ed very ominous and preposterous, but for that reason we rejoiced. At the hospital we were ushered into the nurse's quarters by one of the foreign nurses. Again I must pause to remind you girls of the wonderful hospitality and lasting friendship that these girls offered us straightway. Our comfort, our rest and our pleasure seemed to be their first thought and they gave us of their time most generously. Up two flights of stairs and into a large, beautiful room, containing two beds. And next door was a bath room with a real bath tub in it... a hot bath and into a soft comfortable bed! Al, ya! And wasn't that bliss?

March 18.

Third Day

SUNDAY and a good long sleep! Finally, I went to the good folks to have a "look see" and found that we seemed very close to the Peking wall. Looking down into the street below, I saw a camel train of five very shaggy, very woolly, very big and awkward, and most ancient looking camels, piled leisurely along with big packs on their backs.

And at breakfast we indulged in all the big fat permissims we wanted. Such monsters are the Peking permissims! In the afternoon we took a walk on the city wall to get the various points of interest located—the Legation buildings, the Hotel de Peking, the Wagons Lits, the P.U.M.C. with its green tiled roofs, the Forbidden City with its yellow tiled roofs, and to the left of us and some distance away the round white tiled roofs of the Temple of Heaven. It seemed strange that the wall was wide enough in this part for a park on the top. Trees, nice walks, benches, and a donkey path, for the kiddies, love to ride the beasts. However, only the foreign kiddies had that privilege for no Chinese except the escorts of the foreign children had been permitted upon the wall since the time of the Boxer rebellion.

Late in the afternoon we went to the Hotel de Peking for tea, where we understood that the foreigners and many Chinese made it their custom to gather and listen to the very good Russian orchestra while they sipped tea from adorable jade-green cups... a great pleasure to us.

We attended the mission vespers that evening and we shall never forget the sincerity these folk had in their work, and the cordiality and human interest they extended to us.

March 19.

Fourth Day

IT WAS a beautiful morning with fine, cool and reviving air. We rickied to the Central hotel, where our mob of sightseers were gathered. Sun and a very rick, two-gwara (foreigners) were exceedingly happy, and rick coolies were having the time of their lives besides being absolutely certain of twenty coppers per hour. When we started out there were long lines of ricks and a donkey path, for the kiddies, spirals in the sunlight.

We passed through a gate near Chien Men, the huge watch tower and gate through which in times past only the emperor might pass. We also crossed the famous Bridge of Heaven, where there are bazaars and matting roofed theaters... very ornate in aspect and to my opinion belying its name.

It was not long until the gate of the huge, long, red wall, that encircles the great open space devoted to the Temple of Heaven, was reached. We paid our fee of five dimes, and then found ourselves in a magnificent huge opening with a long avenue stretching to the eastward. To our delight we found here old, old evergreens of the Juniper and arbutus vitae variety, very twisted and very gnarled.

It was the emperor's wont, each year, to the worship heaven and the great, undefinable god at this shrine. We went through the gate of the inner wall and through corridors after corridors to the place where the emperor remained over night and where he prepared himself for the worship of the next day. Here was a big Chinese house; all the rooms being entirely empty now.

We then went back into the main entrance avenue and, after climbing a long flight of stairs, arrived at length upon a wide, long platform. Here we had a beautiful perspective to what seemed to me the north and south directions of a long white marble walk in the center of a paved, elevated area. And to the north, through many pailous, or gates, we saw the temple, a circular, built in three tiers, each resplendent in Chinese-blue tiles, and topped by a huge gilt ball.

The temple is approached by three flights of white marble stairs of nine steps each—nine being the imperial number—and red, the color encircling the temple and finished with a beautiful balustrade of white carved marble. Dragon designs are carved along the center of the steps, and serves, I understand, for the compensation of the emperor's hand. The outside of the temple was not kept up very well, but presented pleasing dull shades of color. Inside, the circular hall was supported with huge pillars, some of which were solid red, others gold and red. The ceiling was painted in many designs and colors. In this temple, the emperors worshipped a screen dedicated to Heaven, and smaller ones to the Wind, the Earth and the Rain.

We retraced our steps and followed the path that the emperor had taken in next visiting the Altar of Heaven. We traversed a similar perspective to the south, passing thru several gates, circled another wall, and entered another open space which lead to the Altar of Heaven. The Altar of Heaven, the holy of holies, is a circular platform approached by three flights of stairs like the temple. Here was the same marble balustrade and carvings. The platform disclosed a round block of stone in the center, which was considered the center of the earth. From this radiate pine concentric circles. Upon this platform the emperor interceded with the God of Heaven for his people for the coming year. To the left of the altar is the green urn in which the sacrifice of a perfect bull, inspected by the emperor himself, was made. To the right is a huge wooden structure of logs, capped with yellow tile, which represent an erection to man. We were told that one emperor had the altar destroyed because he recognized Man only.

We returned to the outer gate by another path that lead us through an impressive avenue of trees which forced us to consider the age and beauty of, and to reverse this spot. We felt that here were beautiful and impressive monuments of high and noble thoughts striving to realize a higher deity.

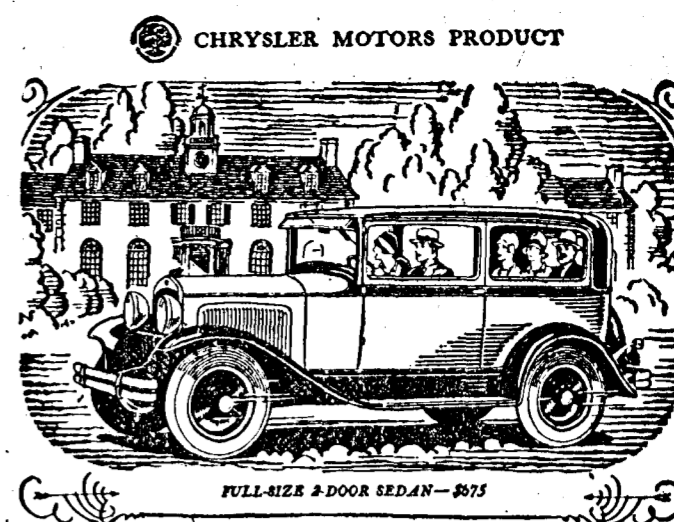

Just opposite the outer gate we followed the path to the Temple of Agriculture... the outer buildings being roofed in black tile. We were told that the altar was dedicated to Shen Nung, the first farmer, and that the field just southeast of the altar was plowed annually by the emperor and his retinue. The afternoon of this day was spent in shopping. One American lady, interested in the Nanking language school, opened her home to a bazaar where we could acquaint ourselves with the wares of Peking as well as empty our purses in the purchases. Here were beads, jewelry, brass, silver, mandarin coats, fur embroideries and rugs. Then we went to Lantern street where every store dealt in the most exquisite of lanterns made of carved wood and painted thin silk, which was drawn light across the frames. That evening we went to the Chinese theater in South City where the actors are all Chinese women. It is quite an innovation for women to be acting upon the Chinese stage and we understood that this was a returned-student enterprise. Heretofore, men were the only Chinese actors, and they enacted all feminine parts; even now the two sexes do not appear in the same theater. The theater was brilliantly lighted in front as are all Chinese theaters, according to my observation. We approached this one by winding courts, and when we arrived, we found ourselves on the level with the stage. We stepped down a few steps and seated ourselves quite comfortably in a box. We then looked to the stage at the side of which an orchestra was making a terrible "hullabaloo" with cymbals and Chinese fiddles. Upon the stage two actresses were singing in thin, chirpy, nasal voices.

The house was not darkened and the stage was bright with footlights. The stage boasted of scenery... a back drop and two wings. When these were changed a bright yellow silk curtain was dropped on each side and disclosed to our view the inevitable picture of a package of Camel cigarettes. There were no properties upon the stage to speak of... a table and two chairs, and over the front of the table hung an embroidered silk cloth. We were quite lost in the singing of the actresses, which must have been good for there was some applause and grunting in the audience. We were admiring the headresses of the actresses when a boy informed us that we must pay $3 more for the box in which we were sitting. We gathered from his gesticulations that we could go to the balcony above and not have to pay the extra $3. We hastened to the balcony and found it a much better point of vantage from which to study the audience. We noted that in the boxes below only Chinese men were sitting, and felt that the audience must have been quite relieved when we had made our way to the balcony.

This One Fact Overrides All Argument—

More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind

When the consensus of opinion, as represented by dollars laid down on the counter, is the same everywhere among the people who drive all kinds of cars over all kinds of roads—

You can bank on it that there are good sound reasons behind such concerted action.

The opinion, on tires, is that Goodyears lead all other makes in ability to stand up and deliver the lowest cost mileage.

More people—and the number increases daily—ride on Goodyear Tires, and BUY Goodyear Tires in preference to any other kind.

This one fact overrides all argument. And it places Goodyear in the position of being able to give the greatest quality value for the least money—BECAUSE IT COSTS LESS TO MAKE TIRES WHEN YOU MAKE MILLIONS MORE OF THEM THAN DOES ANY OTHER COMPANY.

Lowest Prices, Highest Quality in History!

I fear we missed much of the program in watching the audience—especially when a group of Manchurian women and children arrived. We were especially interested in the butterfly headress with the black silk wings and decorations of flowers, worn by the ladies. This party settled in a box of the balcony, and I supposed the men of the party may have occupied the box below that we had vacated "upon request." We were quite amused when they brought forth things they had brought with them to eat, and we noted that they all talked busily and gave only casual glances at the stage.

Near by was a party of two handsomely dressed Chinese couples, who talked incessantly, brought many kinds of candy and all smoked cigarettes. They did not look out at the stage... that seemed unimportant, but they applauded. They had heard.

We were pestered by a boy wanting us to drink tea. Time after time he appeared with the little tea pot and tiny cups. Then he tempted us with a bar of foreign chocolate, and gave up finally when we actually refused to indulge in Wrigley's chewing gum.

We wondered how the actress could endure the incessant noise of the orchestra. We marveled at the costumes, some looking like tapestry, some with four huge flags standing up at the back of the neck, and some with horrid faces on the stomach. The headresses were extravagant... some with chenille balls standing straight up all around the face, and often these were finished by two long pheasant feather antennae, which the actresses seemed to use for emphasis. The actresses emitted strange screams, there was a bit of dancing and especially interesting was the sword dance. The faces of the actresses never registered any emotion, but every motion of the hands and fingers meant something—all lost upon us, alas. We were most amused by and interested in the "stage hand." He was dressed in the ordinary blue denim of coolie dress and he walked around on the stage in perfect liberty and the audience, except the actresses, took no notice of him. He would fix a table and some chairs... actresses would use these and he would take them off the stage. The actresses would sing in high falsetto for a few minutes and then would need to be revived by a cup of tea. The stage hand would bring in a cup of tea; the actress would turn their backs to the audience and drink the tea under cover of their long flowing sleeves. The actresses would dance the sword dance and get the headresses awry; the stage hand would fix the little balls into their places, and the actresses could continue.

Then our attention was drawn from the stage by round balls being thrown about in the audience of the pit. These were explained, when all of a sudden something was pushed in front of my face... it was a steaming hot towel. The boy was quite insulted at my refusing it. I noticed that the towels were quite welcome to the Manchurian party which had been indulging in the eating of oranges.

It is the custom for the best of a Chinese program to come last, and the act we saw before leaving was the best of the evening. This act was a graceful dancer and the climax of her act was the drinking of a cup of tea and, holding the cup, she bent backwards into an arch and placed the cup upon a saucer, not using her hands. Since the show was getting better we hated to leave, but it was 11:30 p.m., we were very sleepy, and a busy day was scheduled for the morrow. It was the common sentiment of all in the party that they would not have missed this day for the world. In fact, we three made this statement every day of our stay in Peking.

March 20. Fifth Day

THE RICKSHA coolies we had the day before were waiting for us at the gate the next morning, knowing that their glad smiles and happy "good morning" could not be denied. They whisked us off in noiseless comfort at 8:30, and off we went to the extreme north part of the city, where we found the Lama Temple. This was a Tibetan Buddhist temple with six principal buildings. There were two fine conventional bronze lions at the entrance, and here was a beautifully carved, immense, bronze incense burner which was greatly admired by the party. Especially interesting were the large prayer wheels, which by the spinning give merit to the spinner in the next life. In the largest and last temple was the huge black Buddha, 70 feet high. We looked up expecting to see the Buddha, but we had to look up three times before we could see the head... it was monstrous in height and monstrous to look upon.

Christian Church Notes.
The familiar story of the drummer boy in the army camp, who when ordered to beat a retreat replied that he had never learned to beat a retreat but that he could beat a charge reminds loyal Disciples of Christ who have never learned to surrender their stations on the mission fields and retreat, that this is the time to beat a charge and go over the top with funds to keep mission stations open and the workers on the field in both home and foreign lands, and to feed the orphans and aged and care for veteran ministers and their widows.
Self-denial Week, April 28 to May 5, has been set apart that souls of the Disciples of Christ may be strengthened by plain living and sacrificial giving together with self-forgetfulness and prayer. New spiritual tides are starting in the brotherhood as a result of preparation for this self-denial period, and none are willing to beat a retreat from the strategic stations on our ten mission fields.

Bible school at 9:45 a. m. Church worship at 11, Christian Endeavor at 7 p. m. and Church services immediately following.

Methodist Church Notes.
The attendance at Sunday School continues to grow with splendid interest in all departments of the school. Last Sunday 231 were present which is the highest attendance in several months. After the lesson study, Mrs. Evet Smith gave an interesting report of the county Sunday School convention held two weeks ago. Next Sunday the "friendship" class will enjoy their regular monthly dinner and social time together following the morning preaching service. All members of the class please keep this in mind and plan to be present. Every member and friend of the school is invited to be in his place next Sunday and help to reach the 250 mark.

Rev. R. A. Gaither, pastor of the Methodist church, Arcadia, was in charge at the morning service last Sunday and brought a very worthwhile message based on the story "The Good Samaritan." He used a responsive reading from Psalm 91, and read Luke 10:25-37 for the scripture lesson which was the foundation for his sermon. Rev. Gaither is a pleasing speaker and his sermon was much enjoyed.

In the evening the Gospel Team from the M. E. church at North Loup were in charge of the service. The team is made up of six young people each of whom had a part in the service. One young lady lead the responsive service from Psalm 51 and voiced the prayer, and another member of the team read the second chapter of 2 Timothy as a scripture lesson. Two pleasing solos were given and interesting talks on the following subjects were given: "What is the difference between the Christian and the Moralist?" "What Young People Expect of the Church," "The relation between the young people and the older people in the church," "What it means to be a Christian," and "Is the church living up to its possibilities?" The young people showed careful study and gave an interesting service. The regular young people's choir of the home church also gave a beautiful anthem.

The Epworth League held a very helpful devotional service under the leadership of Miss Grace Pullen. Refreshments were given by Misses Alma Holloway and Beulah Pullen and Albert Moorman played a cornet selection. At the meeting a pretty pennant was given to the League by Miss Ella Stowell. It is made of bright red with the words Epworth League in white letters on it. The League are much pleased to receive this gift from Miss Stowell, who is a student at Wesleyan University. The young people from North Loup who later conducted the evening service were guests at the meeting.

Next Sunday evening at the League Service the following question will be debated: Resolved "That environment has more to do with shaping our lives than heredity." Misses Roberta and Audrey Rogers will have the affirmative side while Melvin Cornell and George Round, jr., will have the negative. An interesting time is promised and all the young people are invited to attend.

The Ladies Aid Society enjoyed splendid patronage at their bazaar and supper Saturday and added a nice sum to their treasury. The Missionary Society also had a booth where they ran a country store which was so well patronized that everything was sold out. Both organizations very much appreciate the help given them.

This evening a meeting of the Sunday school board will be held at the church. All members are urged to attend.

For the morning service next Sunday Dr. Pinckney of Scotia will be the speaker. The Doctor is a returned missionary from India and has spoken in Ord before. His hearers have been pleased with his messages and we are sure that Sunday will be no exception.

In the evening the orchestra under the leadership of Glen Auble will give the program. A cordial invitation is extended to all to join the services.

Next Thursday afternoon Mrs. D. B. Smith and Mrs. B. M. Hardbrook will be hostesses to the Women's Foreign Missionary Society at the Smith home. Mrs. R. C. Greenfield will be the program leader. All friends of the missionary cause are invited to attend.

The Rev. J. Magnussen family are pleased to be out of quarantine. They were in for several weeks with scarlet fever.

We then visited the Confucian Temple near by. Here we found quite a contrast for whereas the Lama Temple had been very dirty and ugly, we found the Temple of Confucius very clean and gorgeous. The courtyard to the temple was large and clean and was graced with many old, twisted juniper trees. Here were shrines, six on either side, and each containing a stone turtle bearing on its back a tablet upon which was inscribed some teaching of Confucius. There were ten old stone bells in this courtyard which were used, they told us, 2600 years ago. The interior of the temple was "red" and it seemed that the very walls were hung with handsome, figured, bright red silk which pleased the eye in the subdued light of the temple. Many altars were draped in this red silk and over the main altar was the inscription "The Master and Model of Ten Thousand Generations."

From this temple we went to the Hall of Classics, where around the sides of the main building, with more of the white marble balustrades and a moat, were stored several hundred tall stone slabs standing erect. Upon the faces of these slabs were carved pictures and sacred classics as an insurance against another total destruction and loss. At one time one of the early emperors had ordered the classics to be burned.

The Bell Temple and Drum Tower were next visited both interesting because of our having these two in Nanking. They were both lookout towers and both stood in Peking during the time of Kubla Khan. We saw the famous big bell, imbedded in the ground by the side of the temple. It looked very much like the big bell in the Nanking Bell Temple and might well be called it "sister bell." The Drum Tower is a little larger but looks very much like the Drum Tower of Nanking, which guarded us day by day. We were told that, in older times, time was given to the people gauged by water trickling through vases, then by burning incense, and then it was now given by watches.

At noon we were surprised by the boy serving Chinese food, Peking style. We enjoyed the soup which contained a sea vegetable. But the "baw-bings" were the most fun and oh! so good. A thin pancake made of flour and water was placed on our plate which we buttered with a little oil butter. Then we placed on the fifteen dishes on the table—all kinds of vegetables, onions, ham cut into strips, shrimps, peas, salt vegetable, fried eggs, and chicken, all of which was generously flavored with garlic. Then we rolled this all up inside the pancake turned up the bottom end, and tucked in the top; holding them in our hands in ice-cream-cone fashion, we ate them. To finish this feast we were served tea and fruit.

Before we joined our party that noon, Ves and I visited a cloisonne factory for a few minutes and watched them shape the fine silver wire into designs with their finger nails. We saw them soldering these upon the tin vases, and saw others filling the spaces with different colored enamels ready for the baking. We also visited a rug factory—a very dark damp place where small boys were working at big looms. The design was printed on the wool and the boys were busily tying the wool from the big balls, cutting it off and leaving unbelievable thick smoothness. Then we joined our party at the observatory on the east wall where some of the oldest instruments in the world are located.

Is Your Business Sick?

Are you worried? Does your inventory make you think of suicide or bankruptcy?

Then you need to read this stirring tale of A. Persuer, written for the Quiz by Maximus Efficacious. The moral is so plain we won't even print it.

Mr. Persuer (see photograph) Hurried night and day, To catch the elusive dollar Before it got away.

Had no time for leisure, Always on the go, Never seemed to get ahead Summer, rain or snow.

Never advertised his store, Because he said, said he, "Everything I have for sale, Is out where folks can see."

Worked until he lost his hair, But still he was in debt, Couldn't make his business pay, Summer, snow or wet.

At last he called one-seven—"Send me," he said, "a man, 'Who'll help me write some snappy ads According to your plan.'"

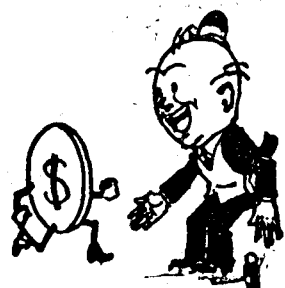

One ad each week he helped him write Location, goods and price, With novel wording, such as this—"Buy once—but don't pay twice."

Doubted if 'twould do much good Thought he'd try and see, Settled back to watch it work, Grumbling at the fee.

Days passed by, more business came, Register was busy, Soon was selling goods so fast. Made him fairly dizzy.

Now we find him at his ease, (See photo) Full of vig. and vim, No longer chasing dollars, for The Dollar's chasing him!

Is Good Samaritan. North Loup, April 23—(Special)—Robert Van Horn has for a few days been playing the part of the Good Samaritan to a horse which, while not falling among thieves, yet met with extremely hard luck. It seems that Nick Whalen the latter part of the week had been buying a bunch of horses at various places, and as he was bringing them to North Loup, one three year old broke away from the others and ran into Swede Kron's place north of town. Mr. Whalen decided to leave it there for the time being, and on Sunday sent one of the Whalen boys and "Hollywood" Drawbridge after it. They started down the highway toward North Loup driving the horse loose ahead of them and met a car coming at about 49 miles an hour. The driver of the car did not see fit to turn out for the horse, and the horse did not turn out for the car, and suddenly found itself in a deep ditch badly crippled. Learning of the accident, Mr. Whalen decided to have the animal shot, but Robert Van Horn who has a pasture near by that the horse ought to have a chance for its life, and agreed to feed and water it. Mr. Whalen promptly turned the horse over to him with the understanding that if it died it was Van Horn's, but if it did the latter would see to the disposal of the carcass. However, the horse is already responding to its kind treatment, and is up and around, the crippled one hip. Mr. Van Horn does not expect to benefit financially from the transaction, but the Good Samaritan spirit which he has, prompts him to try to see that everything and everybody gets a square deal.
