VALLEY COUNTY NOW OFFICIALLY A DROUTH AREA

Federal Funds Ready to Provide Feed, Seed in Extreme Cases; Privileges Extended.

Brokaw, Gramlich Here.
W. H. Brokaw, H. J. Gramlich and George Round, of the college of agriculture, University of Nebraska, drove through Ord early yesterday enroute to Long Pine where Messrs. Brokaw and Gramlich boarded a train and went to join Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who is making a personal investigation of drouth conditions in the west. About noon Mr. Round, who is a son of Sheriff and Mrs. Round of Ord, returned through Ord enroute to Lincoln. Adequate federal drouth relief is promised for Nebraska.

Valley county is now officially classed as part of the midwestern drouth area. Official designation by the federal government was made last Thursday, May 31 when County Agent C. C. Dale received a telegram from relief authorities.

Designation as a drouth area means that, in extreme cases, Valley county farmers will be supplied with livestock feed and seed for forage crops by government authorities.

The federal definition of an "extreme case" is so restricted, however, that the amount of federal relief to be extended here will be comparatively slight unless present regulations are modified.

Instructions received Monday from Rowland Haynes, state emergency relief administrator, say:

"Assistance will be limited to families now on the relief roles or families likely to come on relief if this assistance is not given. In no case will assistance be extended to cover more than ten units of domestic stock. By one unit we mean 1 cow, 1 horse, 4 sheep or 2 hogs. The parties to whom either seed for forage or feed for livestock is furnished will be expected to sign an agreement to repay same in labor to be performed under the direction of the Work Division of the State Emergency Relief Administration of Nebraska.

County and township committees to administer federal drouth relief were formed at a meeting of farm organization heads in Agent Dale's office Saturday.

Members of the county committee are C. C. Dale, chairman; A. W. Cornell and Fred W. Coe. Members of county and township committees will serve without compensation.

Township committeemen are: Eureka—Joe Rousek; Paul Sezwaneck, alternate.

Elyria—Wm. Dodge; Chas. Sohon, alternate.

Noble—Henry Jorgensen; Henry Enger, alternate.

Springdale—Ben Arnold; Earl Hanson, alternate.

Michigan—John Janus; Chas. Veleba, alternate.

Ord—Henry Vodehnal; Evet Smith, alternate.

Geranium—Otto Radl; Rudolph Krahulik, alternate.

North Loup—A. H. Jackman; Chas. Bridge, alternate.

Enterprise—S. W. Roe; Clara Clement, alternate.

Vinton—H. B. Thompson; Henry Creemen, alternate.

Liberty—John Hruby; Anton Radl, alternate.

Independent—A. Frazier; Murray Rich, alternate.

Davis Creek—John Falser; J. J. Skala, alternate.

Yale—Ray Lutz; Ross Evans, alternate.

Arcadia—A. H. Esterbrook; Elmer Wibbels, alternate.

Each township committeeman has been provided with application blanks and farmers who must have livestock feed or seed for forage crops and have no money to buy them should see their township committeemen and fill out application blanks.

Funds are available so that relief can be extended quickly. Agent Dale says. Livestock feed, probably cotton cake and bran will be purchased locally. Very little hay is available at a low price anywhere in the middle west. It is stated. Even Dawson county, normally producer of a large volume of alfalfa for export, will have barely enough to care for its own needs, relief experts say.

Designation of Valley county as a drouth area also brings to wheat and corn reduction contract signers certain privileges, it is learned. All contracted areas are now released for pasture or may be mowed for hay or may be planted to all forage crops except corn and grain sorghums, a telegram received Saturday from state headquarters says. Abandoned small grain land may be planted to an average crop or to grain sorghums now or to corn for forage on or after June 25.

Two federal drouth relief moves are under way, the first furnishing livestock feed and seed in drouth areas, the second purchasing drouth-affected cattle by the government. This work is now under way in Minnesota and

Comstock K-Ballers Play Here Tonight

Comstock's fast kitenball team will play an all-star team from the Ord city league under the lights at Bussell park tonight, it is announced. Last Friday evening the Comstock team defeated Ord 8 to 1 and the local boys are out for revenge at this session. The Ord team will feature such stars as Bill Heuck, Harry Wolf, Dr. Nay, George Finch and others. As a preliminary a ladies' game will be played and if you have never seen the brand of kitenball these women put out you want to see the game tonight.

Band Concerts To Be Wednesday Features

A band concert will be given by Ord's 40-piece municipal band every Wednesday evening during the summer months. It is announced by Director Dean S. Duncan, who returned Monday from the national band contest at Des Moines, Ia., and began directing band rehearsals Tuesday. The public is invited to visit Ord and enjoy these band concerts every Wednesday.

The first concert was given on the evening of Memorial day when the band was capably directed by Dr. Glen D. Auble in Mr. Duncan's absence. Ord has the best band this summer that it has had in several years and the concert last Wednesday was enjoyed by a large crowd.

CAN'T GET FAIR TRIAL HERE, SAYS FRANK JANICEK

Farmer Being Sued for $15,125 By Lillie Mach Seeks Change Of Venue In Petition.

Petition for a change of venue in the district court case in which he is being sued for $15,125 by Lillie Mach was filed here Monday by Frank Janicek, Garfield county farmer. Because of the sentiment against him in Valley Garfield, Wheeler, Blaine and Loup counties it would be impossible for him to get a fair trial and he wants the case tried in some county other than those named, Janicek says. He is represented by Lanigan & Lanigan, of Greeley.

In her suit for damages Miss Mach charges that Janicek, her brother-in-law, was guilty of grossly inhuman conduct toward her during the months she lived in his home after the death of her parents. He beat her frequently and otherwise mistreated her, she alleges. The girl is a minor and Guy Laverty, of Burwell, is her guardian.

More than a year ago the girl filed charges of assault and battery against Janicek at Burwell and Judge Ben Rose sentenced him to serve 90 days in county jail, part of the time on a diet of bread and water.

Janicek's civil suit against Miss Mach was filed here some weeks ago and since then his attorneys have sought twice to have the case dismissed on legal technicalities. Both times Judge Ralph R. Orth has refused to dismiss the case.

Now the defendant seeks a change of venue and as supporting evidence T. W. Lanigan, one of his attorneys, filed an affidavit Monday to show that feeling that exists against Janicek among the Polish and Bohemian people of Valley and Garfield counties.

On June 6, 1933, he went to Burwell to defend Janicek in the criminal suit filed against him by the girl. Mr. Lanigan swears. When he reached there on the day of the trial he found a mob of several hundred men, women and children milling about the jail and threats of violence were freely uttered. When the trial was held he advised his client to plead guilty because he feared mob violence, Mr. Lanigan says. This he did, and when Judge Ben Rose imposed sentence he appealed the case to district court.

Released on bail, Janicek went to his father's country home but that night a mob went there and threatened violence, frightening him so badly that he voluntarily sought the safety of the Garfield county jail. Advised by his attorney to leave the country until time for his trial, Janicek did so and was gone several months.

Because of the wide publicity given the case by newspapers in Valley and Garfield counties, Attorney Lanigan feels that Janicek could not secure a fair and impartial trial, hence his request for change of venue.

Judge Orth will rule on the petition at the next equity term of court here June 18.

North Dakota and it is estimated that 1,200,000 head of starving cattle will be bought and killed. This work may be extended into Nebraska if it becomes necessary. A drouth survey is being made in Valley county now to determine just what farmers' needs will be in the event that copious moisture is withheld during June.

CO-OP CREAMERY PAYING A $7,000 DIVIDEND TODAY

Mid-Year Bonus Surprise To Patrons; Money Should Be Spent for Feed, Seed.

The Ord Co-operative Creamery company—always in the forefront in movements that will benefit its patrons—today announces a $7,000 "surprise." This amount of money will be distributed among patrons beginning today as a patronage dividend. It is the first mid-year dividend the local creamery has paid since 1926.

In a statement issued last evening, directors of the creamery said:

"It has been our practice for the past several years to issue dividend checks only at the close of each year's business but because of the drouth we feel that an emergency exists and that it is our duty to distribute these dividends at this time.

"Since this money has been derived directly from the product of our patrons' milk cows and indirectly from our patrons' labor and the feed their cows consumed, we wish to respectfully suggest that those who receive dividends use part of the money to insure feed for their cows during coming months. Cream checks may mean more to us this year than ever before.

"Dry hot weather has ruined pastures and wild hay and alfalfa will be a short crop no matter how much it may rain, so there will be a shortage of cattle feed unless some quick maturing forage crops such as sudan, cane, or millet are raised on each farm. The cattle industry has been the backbone of this community and if people are forced to sell their cattle at present prices it will mean a terrible sacrifice.

"Knowing that money is even more scarce than hay, we have authorized this mid-year dividend with the thought that our patrons may use the money, if necessary, to buy seed and grow a crop of cow feed when the rains do come."

The $7,000 being distributed this week end was earned in the past six months operation and is being paid at the rate of 3-1-2 cents per pound on all butterfat bought during this period, says the creamery manager, Fred W. Coe. Money also was set aside to pay interest on the investment, for depreciation on equipment and for the reserve fund, it is stated. A good volume of business, economical operation and a new market for butter that enables the creamery to ship to New York in carload lots at car lot freight rates are factors in the creamery's success during this trying period.

Butterfat prices were maintained at a high level at all times and during May 20 was paid every day. Addition of 3-1-2c per pound to money already paid gives creamery patrons an exceptionally good price for their butterfat; in fact, few if any markets in Nebraska have been so good.

Valley county farmers should feel fortunate at having such an outlet for their cream as the co-op creamery furnishes. In its 7-1-2 years of operation it has paid out over $110,000 in patronage and stock dividends, besides paying top prices for butterfat at all times; has about $9,000 in the surplus fund; and has charged off over $10,000 for depreciation.

The creamery expects to pay a dividend on butterfat receipts for the last half of the year at the usual time, about a week before Christmas.

Irrigation News Expected Hourly

Final Decision Promised This Week, Dunmire Wires; PWA Working on Project.

Officers of the North Loup power and irrigation district have reason to believe that approval will come today or tomorrow—in fact, news of the project is being expected hourly.

A telegram received Sunday by President Hardenbrook stated that Major C. M. Olberg, who inspected the project, had been called back to Washington and that Mr. McDonough, head of the PWA, promised a verdict early this week. Telegrams have come since requesting information on various phases, which leads officers to believe that Major Olberg, Mr. McDonough and other officers are working on the project.

The outlook is very hopeful. Engineer Dunmire reports, and approval in some form acceptable to the district is very likely.

—Anton Zellek and daughter, Delpha of Tabor, S. D., and Joe Zellek and daughter, Matilda, of Yankton, S. D., left Friday for their homes. Anton and Joe are brothers of the late Mrs. John John.

Ed S. Stone Files For County Sheriff

Ed S. Stone, well known farmer and stockman of Liberty township, filed last week for sheriff of Valley county on the democratic ticket and announces that he expects to make a strong campaign for the democratic nomination. Identified with sale rings in Arcadia and Comstock for several years and generally known and respected by livestock men all over the county, Mr. Stone should prove a strong candidate. Other democratic candidates include Charles Burdick and Warren Lincoln, of Ord, and Will Nelson, of Noble township. Republican candidates are George S. Round and John N. Garner.

Drouth Is Broken By Minor Showers

Prospect of Heavy Rainfall Good, Forecast Indicates; Extreme Heat Still Prevailing.

Prospects of heavy rainfall in central Nebraska are good for today and tomorrow, weather forecasts indicate, and people here are hopeful that the long drouth will soon be broken.

Heavy rain fell in eastern and western Nebraska early in the week and Tuesday evening light showers fell over most of Valley county.

Extreme heat has prevailed most of the week, the temperature registering around the 100 mark every day.

Crop conditions are terrible but heavy moisture during June would assure a partial corn crop and would permit planting of forage crops to take the place of alfalfa, prairie hay and other feeds blighted by drouth.

The movement of livestock to sandhill pastures continues strong.

Water Rates Cut 1-3 At North Loup

North Loup, June 5.—(Special) The village board, in session last evening, decided to allow water consumers to use 3,000 gallons of water monthly for the minimum charge of 75c instead of charging this amount for only 2,000 gallons as in the past. The reduction in price thus amounts to one-third. Additional water will be billed at 15c per thousand gallons.

M. J. Cushing Files For Representative

Marion J. Cushing, for the past two terms representative from Valley and Garfield counties in the lower house of the state legislature, Monday filed for the nomination on the republican ticket. He is opposed on his own ticket.

One of the most highly regarded members of the legislature, Mr. Cushing is prominently mentioned for speaker of the house. At the last term he sponsored some of the most progressive legislation that was passed and this summer he has been urged to file for lieutenant governor, governor, congressman and United States senator but believes he can serve his neighbors and friends more ably at this time by standing for reelection to the house.

His work as chairman of the Valley county corn-hog allotment committee has kept him busy this spring, which is the reason he did not file sooner.

Albert Moorman Is Wesleyan Graduate With High Honors

Albert Moorman had the distinction of graduating from the Nebraska Wesleyan university last Friday, receiving the degree of "Bachelor of Arts with High Distinction" which was the highest scholastic honor received by any member of his class, which numbered about fifty.

Albert has also been awarded a fellowship in zoology at Northwestern university which will pay his tuition and all university expenses; he will assist members of the faculty in that department thus placing him on the list of faculty members of that school. He will be working on a higher degree at the same time.

He will be remembered by many Ord people, having graduated from the high school here in 1930, when his father was pastor of the local Methodist church. His home is at Hebron at the present time.

Frank Blaha, Sr., Died Wednesday

Frank Blaha, sr., 67 years old and a long time resident of Ord, passed away at his home here about 8 o'clock Wednesday morning after a long illness. The body is now at the Frazier mortuary and funeral services will be held at the Ord Catholic church at 9:00 a. m. Saturday, June 9.

COUNCIL PASSES NEW DANCE HALL, BEER ORDINANCE

License, Police Supervision Is Required Of Dance Halls; May Sell 3.2 Sundays.

A new ordinance regulating public dance halls in Ord and another that removes restrictions on the sale of 3.2 beer in that city were passed by Mayor Gould Flagg and city councilmen at the June session held last Friday evening.

The new dance hall ordinance requires that any person who aspires to conduct public dances must make application for license to the city clerk and the application must be acted upon by the city council at its next regular meeting. If favorable action is taken, a license will be issued upon payment of $10.00 by the dance hall operator. This license is good for one year.

It is also required that 24 hours in advance of holding any public dance, the operator of a dance hall must deposit with the city clerk the sum of $2.50, this money to be used for payment of a special policeman who will be appointed by the council and will act as supervisor of the dance.

The council also passed a resolution embodying a set of rules to regulate public dances. These rules require that the dance hall operator must observe all laws of the state of Nebraska and ordinances of this city, must preserve good order and keep his hall free from indecent, vulgar or improper dancing and entertainment, and must suppress the sale, possession or use of intoxicating liquors; it also requires that dances stop at 1:00 a. m., and provides that no "moonlight" dancing will be permitted.

Passage of this ordinance was made necessary by alleged indecent performances given recently by entertainers with traveling orchestras that have played here. It is charged that a fan dancer practically nude appeared with one orchestra a few weeks ago and that other suggestive and improper entertainment has been put on.

The new 3.2 beer ordinance passed Friday permits city licensees to sell beer at all hours of the day and night and also on Sunday. In the past sale of beer has been limited to the hours between 7 a. m. and 11 p. m. and it has been illegal to sell the beverage on Sunday.

Mayor Flagg expresses his intention of requiring strict enforcement of the city beer ordinance. No "spiking" will be permitted in places selling 3.2 beer and any sale of beer stronger than 3.2 per cent will result in revocation of licenses, Mayor Flagg warns.

Paving Contract Is Let to Kiewit

City Paving on L Street To Cost $7,788.10; Only Two Bidders Represented Friday.

There were only two bidders on the job of installing paving, curbing and guttering on L street in Ord and the contract was let by Mayor Flagg and the city council to the Peter Kiewit Sons' company, of Omaha. Total cost of the job will be $7,788.10 and bonds will be issued to raise money to defray this cost. The Diamond Engineering company of Grand Island was the only other bidder.

Federal paving on L street is being finished this week and the work of grading for the city paving will start at once.

The federal paving is 20 feet wide and the city paving will include a 7 foot slab, gutter and curb on each side of the federal slab.

It is probable that all paving will be completed and L street will be open to traffic about July 15, or a few days later.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

This is an important notice to you who are in arrears on subscription. Subscription payments have dropped off to almost nothing. We are not surprised at this for the dry weather has cut the cream checks. It has cut our business, but not the overhead expense. We do not insist that you pay all now. But those who owe must pay some or we can't keep sending the papers. 50c all around right away from those back on subscription would help a lot. Please try to do your part.

Ed Bazant Is Married.

At Loup City Monday occurred the marriage of Ed Bazant, a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Bazant of the said flats to Miss Wanda Crella. In the evening a wedding dance was held at the Wichman pavilion, music being furnished by the Joe Puncocar orchestra of Ord. Ed is employed at the co-op creamery in Loup City.

Two More Elevators Visited By Burglars

Elevators at Elyria and Burwell were visited by burglars during the night Sunday and again the night prowlers walked off with over $100 in cash as a result of their labors in safe wrecking. Evidently the burglaries were committed by the same men who worked at North Loup and Scotia the Sunday previous.

At the Mike Kusek elevator in Elyria the safe was left unlocked but the thieves did not discover the combination and otherwise wrecked the safe. Then they threw books and papers all over the office but found no money.

At the McDonough & Meyers elevator in Burwell they were more fortunate, finding $112 in currency in the safe.

Deputy State Sheriff Otto Duescus was here Monday and Tuesday assisting Sheriff Waters of Garfield county, and Sheriff Roun of Valley county, in trying to find the guilty parties.

Three men were taken into custody by Deputy Sheriff Keep Monday on suspicion of complicity in these robberies but were released after being questioned by County Attorney George A. Munn. They proved to be itinerant remedy peddlers from Norfolk and readily established their innocence. Officers have several clues that may lead to arrest of the burglars at any time.

WIND OVERTURNS TRUCK & NELSON SERIOUSLY HURT

Tatlow Truck Wrecked Tuesday Nite Near Millard; Parents of Herb Nelson Called

Arthur Tatlow's huge truck was overturned by a high wind near Millard about 2:30 a. m. on Wednesday and the two drivers, Herbert Nelson and Oakley Hather, were injured, according to a telephone message that reached Mr. Tatlow here shortly after the wreck. He left at once for Millard.

Only meagre details of the accident are available but it appears that the Tatlow truck took a load to Omaha Tuesday, unloaded and was going to Crete for a load of flour when the storm struck.

Overturnd by a sudden blast, the truck was badly wrecked and the young men injured. Young Hather's injuries were said to be minor ones but young Nelson was so badly hurt that his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nels Nelson, were summoned to Millard early yesterday. He was in a hospital and was being treated by an Omaha specialist, it was said.

Unemployed Meet at Arcadia.

A meeting of farmers and unemployed was held at Community hall in Arcadia Tuesday evening, the principal speaker being Charles Taylor, formerly a state senator in Montana. He was introduced by Burt Sell, who made an able talk on the various processing taxes and their harmful effects upon farm prices. About 150 people heard the talks.

Valley Co. Students Get Uni Diplomas

Lincoln, Nebr.—Four students from Valley county were among the 754 who received degrees at the sixty-third annual University of Nebraska commencement held here Monday morning, June 4. Two were from Ord; one from North Loup and one from Arcadia.

Those who were graduated are: Della N. Benson, Ord, teachers college, bachelor of science in education, and University teachers certificate. John N. Round, Ord, medical college, doctor of medicine. Gertrude M. Hemphill, North Loup, agriculture, bachelor of science in home economics. Stanley L. Jameson, Arcadia, engineering, bachelor of science in mechanical engineering, with distinction.

Annual baccalaureate services were held Sunday afternoon with Dr. Samuel A. Elliot of Boston as principal speaker. Mr. Owen D. Young, internationally known financier and business man, delivered the address at the commencement exercises Monday. One of the largest crowds in the history of the University heard Mr. Young speak.

Boys On Long Trip Have Pockets Picked

Horace and Frank Johnson, 11 and 15 years old respectively, arrived Sunday to visit their aunt, Mrs. Olof Olsson. Their home is in Fort Worth, Tex., and they made the trip to Ord by bus. Enroute through Kansas their pockets were picked and neither had a cent to buy food with, although their tickets to Grand Island were not taken. A kind lady on the bus gave them $1.00 so they were able to get a lunch and notify their aunt when they reached Grand Island. Mr. and Mrs. Olsson drove to the island after them Sunday and Horace and Frank will spend the summer in the Olsson home.

VALLEY COUNTY'S CORN-HOG QUOTA IS CUT GREATLY

Allotment Committee Bitterly Disappointed At Decision of State Triple A Board.

Bitterly disappointed about the action of the state Triple A committee in fixing Valley county's corn-hog quota at figures sharply at variance with those submitted by farmers, members of the Valley county allotment committee yesterday were preparing to repeat a large amount of the work that kept them busy throughout the spring months.

The contract statements of Valley county farmers showed an average of 94,346 acres of corn planted in 1932 and 1933 but according to the state board of review this average should be only 87,256 acres. This means that by some means the local allotment committee—M. J. Cushing, Arthur Mensing and Don Rounds—must reduce the acres as shown on contracts by approximately 7,000 acres each year.

The contract figures on hogs showed an average production for the two years of 62,235 while according to the state board this figure must be reduced to an average of 51,450, making it necessary for the local allotment committee to lop off approximately 11,000 head each year from contract figures.

These quotas were received by County Agent C. C. Dale Monday and he immediately called the allotment committee into session to consider ways and means of doing what the state board demands.

Chairman Cushing immediately got in touch with allotment committees of neighboring counties and found that other counties had suffered cuts equally severe. The word also comes to the committee that there is no appeal from the state board's figures and that the contracts must be adjusted to meet these figures.

The local allotment committee is grievously disappointed with the allotments as set by the state board, since it makes it necessary to work over all contracts before they can be sent out for second signing. It means that all hogs claimed on the contracts must be supported by absolute and unqualified evidence. It is the sad duty of the committee to cut down the contract figures and in this work they request the cooperation of all contract signers so that it may not be necessary to make a flat cut on a percentage basis on each contract. Contract signers who have definite measurements on their fields showing that their statements of acreage are accurate should file these measurements with the allotment committee, as a matter of protection to themselves.

There is one redeeming feature to the situation, as the allotment committee sees it, and that is the fact that corn may be planted for forage purposes on land which was in small grain and has been abandoned. The date when this may be planted has been set at June 25 and there is a possibility that the date may be advanced.

The allotment committee and township committees are now busy trying to get the contracts in shape for signing and although it is a hard and distasteful job they are bending every effort to get the contracts in shape so they may go out for second signing in the immediate future.

Arcadia Man Fined For Reckless Driving

Robert Scott, a young man of the Arcadia vicinity, was charged with reckless driving in a county court action filed last Friday and upon his plea of guilty was fined $25 and costs by Judge John L. Andersen. Evidence showed that a couple of days previous Scott was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Lloyd Bulger, of Arcadia, on a charge of intoxication. Fined by Judge Bulger, he made several derogatory remarks and was threatened with another fine for contempt of court unless he desisted. He paid his fine and left but a day or two later, as Judge Bulger, his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wedderburn were returning to Arcadia from Loup City a car driven by Scott, who had several companions, came up beside them and Scott shouted insults at them and made a number of profane remarks. He harassed them most of the way to Arcadia by refusing to let them pass him, the evidence showed, and the reckless driving charges were filed as a result of his actions on this occasion.

My Own Column

By H. D. LEGGETT

My idea of the meanest person on earth, is one who will go to cemetery and steal plants that people have set out on the graves of loved ones. That happened in Ord last week. An Ord lady set roses on the grave of her husband and carefully watered them. She watered and cared for the rose plants late one afternoon and the next morning they had been dug up and taken away. Cases were numerous where fine peonies were cut and taken the evening before Decoration, the thieves entering private grounds to get them. That was done so much at my place, on a prominent corner that I have about given up the idea of trying to have a beautiful place. It is very discouraging for people, who pay a good price for something nice and spend lots of time taking care of it, to have it stolen or destroyed in that way. And until such business is stopped, people of Ord will not be over enthusiastic about beautifying their grounds.

John Boettger caused his friends quite a lot of anxiety the first of the week. Mrs. Boettger has been caring for a sister who is ill at Chambers and John has been alone. There has been a lot of work in his line and he had told his helper, Charley Kingston, that they would get an early start Tuesday morning on a rush job of well work and Charley was on hand but John failed to appear. Charley waited until an hour or two past time to start work, then went up to the Boettger rooms and rapped but got no response. He tried it an hour later and then told Ralph Hunter that he was afraid something was wrong. He recalled hearing John talking about the nudist colony in Omaha and said John wondered if there would be one in Ord. Finally Charley and Ralph went and got the county attorney and with the aid of a skeleton key, opened John's room and there were, apparently, all of John's clothes in a neat pile in the middle of the floor, and then they thought sure John had gone to join the nudists. But a little after noon John showed up all right and explained that a friend was going to Chambers the night before and wanted him to go along for company, promising to have him back before morning and John went. John would no doubt have been an ornament to the nudist organization but he says he is not even thinking of joining them.

In the passing, last week, of Mrs. Fred Kuehl, I am reminded of the fact that her husband has for several years, devoted his entire time, day and night, week after week and month after month, to giving her the tenderest care possible. It has been a long time since a serious illness made Mrs. Kuehl almost helpless. Always full of vim and active, this was a great trial to her, not to be able to care for her home and serve her friends as she had done for so many years and it required tact and constant care on the part of Mr. Kuehl to keep her happy and cheerful. He has my sympathy, now, in his loneliness and also has the satisfaction of knowing that everything possible for the comfort and happiness of his wife during her years of invalidism, was done by him.

When Ralph Hunter thought John Boettger had gone to be a nudist, he was heard to remark, "I wouldn't have believed John would have gone like that without asking me to go along."

The Missus and I have been much interested in the welfare of an Ord young lady who has been striving for years, to get an education and when we learned last week that she had completed her course and would receive her degree on June 4th, we were happy indeed. She had to work hard on the way through the Ord high school, then through numerous terms of summer school so she could teach to get money to attend the university. She alternated teaching with attending school, until the last couple of years when she has worked at all kind of jobs in Lincoln while completing the course. And she graduates with high honors too, being recognized as one of the leaders in her class. She expects to teach the coming year. Congratulations, Miss Della Benson. No one needs to wish you success, but it would be perfectly proper to congratulate you upon having the ambition to go right out and win success regardless of circumstances.

As a fat boy who loved to eat one of my earliest recollections is of Grandmother Warrington and her old, strong clay pipe, and how scared I was when she came to visit us and of course helped my mother with the work, for fear she would drop some of the ashes in the butter, or greens or mashed potatoes. I made the charge once, regarding the potatoes, but my mother said it was pepper. I had not thought of it for years until I read Mr. Haskell's department on this page last week. By the way how did you like the new department last week. We all know what an interesting writer Haskell is and always has been. George G. is also going to give us something to think about and I should not be surprised if he trod on some of our toes occasionally. But I don't get mad about it. Haskell is likely to do that too.

We may have to discontinue the Cook's Col-Yum-Yum, as printing it nearly caused a divorce in a well known Valley county family recently. Here is what happened. "Nick" printed a beer coupon in his ad and it happened to appear right on the back of the recipe column. Mrs. Port Dunlap clips and keeps all the recipes. Port wanted to salvage the beer coupon and he says they finally compromised, after his wife had threatened to get a divorce if he took the coupon. Oh, yes, they compromised by her getting the recipes and when Port found out there was no beer he said he was glad he gave in, as he considered his wife worth more than a bottle of beer anyhow.

Recently a Boone county farmer saw a man in a Hastings, Neb., restaurant who was attracting much attention to himself by pitching balls; he wound up and delivered the ball in pantomime in the most approved style. The man was in the custody of the Valley county sheriff, so approaching the latter the B. C. f. asked what was the matter with this man. "Well," replied the sheriff, "he is a farmer up in Valley county—one of our best—and the drouth and hot winds have about ruined him, and when he heard a rumor that the North Loup Irrigation Project was not going through, he went plumb batty, and now he thinks he is a big league base-ball pitcher." The B. C. f. watched the antics of the V. C. f. a few moments, and turning to the V.C.s. said confidentially; "You know [it] don't rain up in our country pretty soon I'm afraid I'll be catching for that fellow."

Something DIFFERENT

On the last day of school, Miss Lincoln fondly kissed all her little kindergartners. All that is, except one, for Tommy Tolen, had other ideas on the subject and didn't want to be kissed by any teacher, and so informed the world. "Tommy is all boy," said someone. "But I was surprised," declared Tommy's mother when she heard about it, "for Tommy is very affectionate around home." Tommy isn't much like his father is he? Tubby was reputed to be very fond of kissing teachers, especially one, who is now Tommy's mama.

Little Jackie Clements watched the goldfish in her grandfather's pool as they slipped around in the water, with mouths silently opening and shutting constantly. She was fascinated and stared at them for some time. Then she said: "My, but goldfishes drink lots of water, don't they?"

All the Ord people who went to Broken Bow to compete in the bridge tourney a few weeks ago are rather disgusted. For all five couples placed quite high, when final results were counted, and all five couples were eligible to enter the state bridge tournament at Omaha a few days later.

Callaway people have quite a reputation as contract players over the state. And Callaway people kept the scores at the Broken Bow tourney. And the Callaway entrants, though they did not top the Broken Bow tournament, (an Ord pair of males did this) went to the Omaha meet a week later.

Not knowing they had qualified no Ordites entered. And now there are whispers in some circles, as some Ord people wonder whether the oversight in neglecting to let local players know of their eligibility, could have been accidental.

At least it was careless. But Mr. Charles Fredericks seemed so nice that I do not believe it was intentional.

An Ord man who doesn't mind at all being on the county didn't care to make garden, he informed those in charge of giving out the free garden seeds.

But you have to make a garden, he was told several times. "Why should I make a garden," he inquired. "The county'll feed me anyway."

At which juncture he was firmly grasped by the arm and led to the bulletin board. There he read the flat statement—no make garden, no get county help. "Oh, all right," was the resigned reply. "Give me the seeds then."

Another family who take county aid with pleasure and a feeling of righteousness spend their leisure time, a good deal of it, riding in an old wreck, up and down the pavement, hour after hour. "While I feel too poor to buy gas," complained a responsible taxpayer. Irma.

Another wedding that attracted much interest was the ceremony of Miss Lottie Smith and Harvey Friend, performed at the D. B. Smith home. BACK FORTY

By J. A. KOVANDA

Every drought has its rainmakers. In Colorado they intend to shoot clouds with explosives over the drought stricken San Luis valley, in an effort to produce moisture. The experiment is not a new one.

Forty years ago the business men of Russell, Kansas bombarded the sky with dynamite sent up on kites. A cloudburst followed, so intense that it threatened to wash out the town.

The practice was based on a theory that war caused precipitation. And no denial came from scientists because downpours followed battles too frequently to be called coincidences. The profits of the rainmakers were great. A dispatch from San Angelo, Tex., in 1912 stated:

"They are cracking rain from the clouds with dynamite in Texas, and San Angelo is rejoicing today over a 2-inch rain. 3,000 pounds of dynamite were used in the trial, and the rainmakers say they can bring a shower any time the town desires. The town raised a $3,000 rain fund. Stamford, Abilene, and Haskell also will dynamite for rain."

The U. S. Department of Agriculture got busy. It spent $12,000 in attempts to coax downpours from the clouds by blasting with explosives. The effort was made in both the humid regions of the east and the sub-arid regions of the west, but no rain whatever was produced. Nor could they find any evidence of rain following the hundreds of accidental explosions of powder mills and magazines, or any records to show more rain on July 4 and 5 than on the other first fifteen days of the month.

Japanese aviators sprayed the clouds with a refrigerating powder in 1929. The experiment was not successful. There are chemicals around which water may form, but 75 tons would be required aloft to produce enough rain to wet one city block.

The present scarcity of rain-making charlatans, as compared with years of drought gone by, can be attributed largely to education.

Farmers Club Abandoned. Plans to organize a farmers club to be known as the Farmers Protective Association were abandoned Saturday when officers of the Taxpayers League, one of the organizations that would be merged in the new club, objected to their organization holding its separate identity. THE COOK'S COL-YUM, YUM!

This column is badly in need of recipes. I wish you would please send in one or two. Write them on a penny postal, that will be all right. But it does seem unfair that a certain few faithful contributors should send in the bulk of the recipes, while hundreds of other women do not other to help create this column but are glad to take advantage of any help it offers.

If you read this column regularly, if you use one of the Quiz calendars in your kitchen, I feel that you owe a recipe or two. Please send them in, or this column will likely quit, and you will be through receiving Quiz calendars.

Pinwheel Cookies. Cream one-half cup butter, add one-half cup sugar, one beaten egg yolk, three tablespoons milk. Beat well. Add one and one-half cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, pinch of salt, sifted together, and one-half teaspoon vanilla. Divide the dough into halves. To one-half of the mixture add one square of melted chocolate. Roll out both the plain mixture into sheets of equal size. Place the chocolate on top of the white sheet and gently press together. Roll up as for jelly roll in a tight roll. Set in the ice box for several hours to become firm, or let stay overnight. Then cut thin slices off the roll and bake in a buttered cookie sheet about ten minutes.

Mrs. H. T. Walkemeyer.

Whipped Cream Cake.

Two cups pastry flour (or use bread flour) and take out two tablespoons out of each cup and you get the same results as with cake flour) three teaspoons baking powder, one and one-half cups sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Sift these four things together two or three times. Then combine one cup of whipped sweet cream with three beaten egg whites, add one and one-half teaspoons vanilla and one-half cup cold water. Add the flour, and sugar mixture, folding it in to the cream mixture carefully, not beating. Bake in two layers or in a loaf pan in a moderate oven.

Mrs. F. Chlewski, Arcadia Sour Cream Cake.

Beat three eggs well, add gradually one and one-third cups sugar. Then put in one teaspoon vanilla, and add one and one-half cups sour cream (not too thick) in which has been dissolved three-fourths teaspoon soda alternately with two and one-half cups flour in which is one and one-half teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt. Bake in a moderate oven. For spice cake add two teaspoons cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves and one teaspoon allspice. For chocolate cake add two squares chocolate to the sour cream.

Some Machine

If you like to see machinery operated on a large scale you can profitably put in a half hour or more watching the laying of the pavement in Ord, but you must hurry for it is going in at about three blocks a day. Two heavy steel rails have been laid 20 feet apart and exactly to grade. They make the retaining walls for the 20-foot pavement and carry the grader and all the surfacing equipment. Between these rails a caterpillar engine carries the heavy mixing machine and propels the grader which shears the ground to an exact grade below the rails. Trucks, each loaded with the proper proportions of gravel and cement, back up to the huge mixer one at a time, dump the loads into a scoop and get out of the way for the next load. The scoop is then lifted and discharges the material into the rotating mixer. When mixed the concrete goes into conveyors which drop the mixture at any point between the rails. Before the concrete is deposited, however, the earth is covered with tar paper to prevent the water in the concrete from being too rapidly absorbed by the soil. As soon as a lot of cement mixture is discharged, men in rubber boots wade in and shovel the cement into all depressions. Re-enforcement nets are then laid and more cement is dumped and men see that there is a constant supply in front of the surfacers which make the proper arch between the rails. Wheelers follow riding on wheeled bridges and finally the finished grade is covered mechanically with sacks and these are wet thoroughly through hose. Barring unusual delays the outfit will lay about 1,000 feet of 20-foot pavement each day.

A Vengeance Party.

The following poem was printed in the place card used at Mrs. Haskell's party last Friday. It tells its own story.

Dear ladies of the D. D. O., I write these lines to let you know that (as I write in grief and shame, Accused, but truly not to blame), I hope you laugh in joy and din While celebrating my chagrin, I hope the s'lad and the cake Won't cause you any sort of ache. I hope the cream, when duly chilled, Will taste okay and not be spilled. I hope, when you essay to sip, The coffee will not burn your lip.

You know of course what real intent I had in mind at this time of event. At your last meeting of the year My good wife said to me: "My dear, Please call for me at half past two. Now don't forget. I'll look for you." Of course I promised that I would, Kissed her good-bye, just as I should And started. Ere I left the lot My promise, darn it, I forgot. Some work I had employed my thought. Thus my discomfiture was wrought. At suppertime there struck my pate The awful truth: That date, that date! With lagging step I started out Burdened with dread, laden with doubt. I tried to think of some excuse To ease my fate—there was no use, For I had done that thing before, For I had done that thing before, I say three times, but she says more. I near the house—no one in sight. Maybe she's gone—O, that she might! My scared eyes search the window pane. I stop, I listen, start again. My fingers tremble as they catch And fumble on the porch door latch. I ope the door—there, there she sat! Clad in her party dress and hat! Her eyes shone as a tiger's shine And shot forth daggers into mine (If I have grasped what hunters tell). A moment passed, then she said "Well! Just one brief 'well!' but in that word Sorrow and hurt and love were stirred. She let that forceful word soak in 'Then sentenced me with lifted chin: "While sitting here since half past two I've thought, decided what I'll do. To heap my vengeance upon you, I'll have a party few weeks hence And you shall bear the whole expense" My fainting heart began to beat; I felt a dancing in my feet; The sunbeams flickered on the wall. I think I stammered: "Is that all?"

Now ladies, when it's time to go— No, don't you hurry, no, no, no! Please take the hostess's hand and say: "We've had a jolly time today. Your entertainment was complete And we've enjoyed this extra meet. The thing your husband did was punk, And we all glory in your spunk. You punished him just as you should, And now, perhaps, he will be good." But in your heart add this refrain: "I hope that he forgets again."

God Bless the Ladybug.

When potatoes made their tardy and slow appearance this spring they were greeted by a great army of adult potato bugs, which had survived the winter, and proceeded to deposit their eggs in great numbers on the tiny plants. But there were also many ladybugs in evidence. The adult Colorado beetle is not harmful, but its larvae are very destructive to potato plants. To my surprise not one young potato bug has shown up in my little patch. The ladybugs must have done their duty.

Why Not Share the Loss?

Last Thursday morning I found King Huff standing in the shade of the First National Bank evidently trying to get cool after a ride into town facing the blazing sun. Of course we conversed about the drouth and the consequent destruction of crops, and then he exclaimed: "What are the farmers going to do as things are going?" Then he mentioned one of the most substantial farmers of Valley county, whose farms are going under the hammer, and will be sold in a few days. He said that an agent of the loan company came to him and offered to turn this man's farm over to him if the company could get a little cash out of the deal, but he said he did not dare to make an offer under these conditions. This turning of our farmers out of farm and home has been going on for years, first the weaker farmers and those most heavily in debt succumbed, but now the formerly rich farmers are being sold out all over the middle west, the breadbasket of the world. Such a condition is of course national economic disaster. No agricultural country can prosper with its farmers bankrupt. If you ask yourself the cause, your answer must be "debt." But if these farmers had not gone into debt long ago they could not have had their farms and the middle west could not have been brought to its present state of development. Debt enabled these plow-neers to build up these fine farms and now debt is evicting the owners from their farms. This is a paradox. Debt cannot be both bad and good. The puzzle may be solved by placing the blame not on debt in general but upon the Shylock method of its liquidation.

When a farm loan is made for a term of years, neither the farmer nor the money lender knows what the conditions will be when the payday shall come. They are both gambling on that, and both taking chances. If times are good when pay day comes both are happy and neither is harmed. But if a depression is on at paying time, it is not fair that the farmer should be the sole loser. He and the money lender should share the loss in proportion to their respective equities. Deficiency judgments should be barred and no confirmation of sales should be permitted for less than the face of the mortgage. Under such conditions, in case of foreclosure, the farmer would get something. He could not be kicked off the place penniless. The loan companies would not make excessive loans, and would be more willing to permit the borrower to remain on the place in hopes of paying out eventually. Ed F. Beranek, Druggist. Care of The County Board, Ord, Nebr. North Loup, Nebr. Dear Jake:- I heard yesterday that Clarence Davis has his hat in the ring for Congress. I would like to ask you a favor. Couldn't you say a kindly word about me to him? You see, Jake, I want a soft job. It would not matter if what you said was true or not. Do not forget to tell him that I have always been right politically. Tell him that if he will promise me a job I shall write a rhapsody about him. Irvy Sheldon, who is a crack weather prognosticator, says that every day that passes is just one day nearer the next rain. By the way, what has happened to those fellows who have been saying that we do not need irrigation in this country? Did you hear of the bumpkin who dropped into church last week and when the collection was taken, he tossed a phony half dollar into the platter? I do not think we should condemn him entirely, for he told me that he hated to do it but that it was the last and only cent he had and he felt that he should give something for the foreign missions. His heart was right anyway. The story is reported that for a few days after the bullheads were dumped into the bayou, the banks were lined with fishermen, and big catches were reported by everyone. I suggest that they just rent a big tank and let the anglers fish from there. That would save a good deal of road work going to and from the bayou, and also save the trouble of fishing after all the fish had been caught. It seems silly to have to catch the fish the second time, but you see when a fellow is fishing he is not only supplying the larder but is also relieving the unemployment situation. Very sincerely, Geo. G.

School Musicians To Resume Work June 12

Summer classes in all band and orchestra instruments will get under way next Tuesday and Wednesday, June 12 and 13, at the Ord high school auditorium, it is announced by Director Dean S. Duncan, who returned Monday evening from Des Moines, Ia., where he attended the national band contest in which 80 bands numbering over 5,000 musicians competed for honors. Four Nebraska schools, Kearney, Hastings, Wahoo and Stanton, took part in the contest, Mr. Duncan says.

The Ord school band will rehearse at 9 a. m. next Tuesday, and the orchestra will meet at 9 a. m. Wednesday, the director announces. All students who have been studying instrumental music the past year in the schools are urged to be present. Students in intermediate band and intermediate orchestra should come on these days and enroll for group work. Interest in this work was of excellent quality last summer and Prof. Duncan hopes that more children will avail themselves of this course during June and July. A recital at the close of the summer term is anticipated. A mixed chorus will be selected and notified in the near future, Mr. Duncan says, and music work will receive much attention in Ord throughout the summer.

Mrs. Fred Kuehl Is Laid To Rest

One of Ord's Best Loved Women Answered Final Call May 29, Funeral Held Friday.

Mrs. Fritz Kuehl, a resident of Ord since 1884 and one of this community's most loved and respected women, passed away at 7:00 p. m., Tuesday, May 29, at the Ord hospital, after an illness of three years with paralysis. She was laid to rest in the family lot in Ord cemetery Friday after services in the Methodist church. Rev. L. M. Real conducting. Orville H. Sowl was the funeral director in charge of the local rites.

Pall bearers were A. S. Koupal, George Round, Ed F. Beranek, Henry Benn, Val Pullen and Dr. C. W. Taylor. A quartet composed of Madams Jos. P. Barta and Mark D. Tolen, Messrs. E. H. Petty and P. L. Blessing, sang, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. M. J. Cushing.

Born Dec. 1, 1859 in Rensburg, Germany, Sophia Kuehl was the daughter of Claus and Marie Kuehl. She came to the United States in 1875 and in May, 1876, was married at Fremont, Nebr., to Ernest Prinz, who passed away shortly after. In 1880 she became the wife of Henry Reithardt and they lived in Norfolk for a time, coming to Ord in 1884. This city was the home of Mrs. Reithardt-Kuehl from that time until her death last week.

To Mr. and Mrs. Reithardt six children were born, three of whom survive. They are Henry Reithardt, now of Wheatland, Calif., Mrs. Chas. F. Butler, now of Oakland, Calif., and Mrs. Marie Cover, now of Central City, Nebr. Deceased children were Ernest and Dora Reithardt and Mrs. Adelheit Clements.

In the early 1900's Mr. Reithardt passed away and in March, 1906, his widow was united in marriage to Frederick H. Kuehl, with whom she lived happily until her death last week.

Besides her husband and children she also is mourned by a sister, Mrs. Christina Plambeck, Fremont, Nebr., and by several grandchildren.

Confirmed in the Lutheran faith in Germany, Mrs. Kuehl became a member of the Unitarian church in 1898 and this remained her faith until the end. She was also a member of the Eastern Star Lodge.

Out-of-town relatives present for the funeral June 1 were the deceased's daughter, Mrs. Cover, a granddaughter, Mrs. Carol McHargue, and a great-grandson, Lee McHargue, all of Central City, also her sister, Mrs. Plambeck, of Fremont.

A woman who lived a busy, useful life, Mrs. Kuehl enjoyed the respect and affection of all with whom she came in contact. She was highly esteemed as a neighbor and as a friend as the large crowd present at the funeral Friday attested, and her niche in the community will not soon be filled.

CLARENCE DAVIS SPEAKS SUNDAY AT NAT'L HALL

Ord Congress Candidate and Legion Chorus Assist In Memorial Program.

Clarence Davis, Ord attorney who is a republican candidate for 5th district Congressman, was the principal speaker at memorial exercises held Sunday at the National hall and participated in by members of the Z. C. B. J. and M. W. A. lodges. It is an annual affair, held each year on the Sunday after Memorial day to honor the memory of deceased members of the lodges.

The program began with music by the band led by J. F. Lukesch, after which recitations by children and short talks by lodge members were enjoyed. Then Orville H. Sowl played two violin solos, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Kirby McGrew.

The American Legion chorus of the Ord post sang several numbers which were greatly enjoyed, it being the chorus' first appearance in the west part of Valley county.

Mr. Davis was introduced by James Visek, chairman of the Z. C. B. J. lodge, and said, in part:

"We all like to be remembered and hate to be forgotten. If we fail to remember and respect our friends who have gone before, how can we expect them to remember us? That is one of the fine things about memorial days; they rekindle the love and memory of those who have passed away before us and they should remind us to be kinder to those who still are with us. We don't know but what we may be at their graves by the next decoration day, or they at ours.

"On such days we remember our heroes by words of praise and by strewing flowers and a tear or two on their graves. They can best be remembered by doing the tasks they cannot do and by preserving the liberties for which they fought and died. Every liberty that we possess, even that of peaceably meeting today, has been purchased with the blood of thousands of brave men upon the battle fields or elsewhere. If we give up these rights, they have died in vain.

"Memorial Day reminds us of the waste of war, in men and property and should make us insistent that it should be avoided if at all possible, but it also reminds us that we should be reasonably ready to protect our land and freedom at all times. Many graves that we cover with flowers, might have been empty, had we been better prepared for the last terrible war. Such loss of life is unpardonable.

"Such days would be grim, mockeries if we did not have the faith that our dear ones still live and that sometime we may be able to join them. We cover these graves with flowers and keep their memories fresh in our hearts."

The program at National hall was followed by services at the cemetery with Wm. Waldmann, chairman of the M. W. A. lodge, presiding at memorial rites for the deceased.

ORD CLASS OF '24 ENJOYS BANQUET FRIDAY EVENING

22 Out of 49 Graduates Attend, Earl Bebee Toastmaster; Letters, Telegrams Read.

Twenty-two members of the Ord high school graduating class of 1924, many of them with their husbands, were held a ten year reunion and banquet Friday evening, June 1, at Thorne's cafe. The dining room and tables were decorated in the colors of the class—lavender and pearl—and place cards and nut cups were the same as were used in 1924. Lavender sweetpeas adorned the tables and four people were seated at each table.

Class members present were Frances Hubbard, Flora Leggett Anderson, Beulah Pullen, Inez Eberhart, Vera McClatchey, Zelta Turner Helleberg, Thelma Holloway Johnston, Gerald Dye, Opal Tedro Morrison, Marvin Crow, Martha Albers Pavek, Leonard Marks and Loree McMIndes, all of Ord; Morace Hubbard, Lexington; Earl Bebee, Grand Island, Ellamae Marks Reimers, Cleveland, O.; Leo Chaffield, Duncan; Berenice King, North Loup; Alyce Maynard Yensen, Chicago; Martha Vodehnal Lawell, Grand Island; Rosanne Perlinski, Grand Island; Ebba Olson Mattson, Kearney.

Wives and husbands of members also present included Mrs. Morace Hubbard, C. A. Anderson, John Reimers, Mrs. Lee Chaffield, Fern Johnston, Mrs. Gerald Dye, John Morrison, Lester Pavek, Mr. Lawrence, Leonard Parks and Mrs. Loree McMIndes.

The Aulse orchestra furnished music and special numbers, "Memories" and "School Days", were sung by Vera McClatchey, accompanied at the piano by Beulah Pullen. A class song composed by Inez Eberhart was sung by the group with Alyce Maynard Yensen leading.

Telegrams were received from Herbert L. Cushing, Lincoln, who was superintendent of Ord schools in 1924, and from Miss Lottie Leon, Rapid City, S. D., who was class sponsor. Miss Leon also sent a bouquet of roses. Letters were received from Hale C. Cole, Kearney, and Alyce Carter, instructors in the Ord schools in 1924. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kokes were guests at the banquet, Mrs. Kokes having taught commercial work in the Ord schools at that time.

Earl Bebee acted as toastmaster and as the class motto was "Not at the Top but Climbing", toasts were arranged from the word "Climbing" and were given by Mrs. John Reimers, Mrs. Ivan Mattson, Mrs. Fern Johnston, Miss Inez Eberhart, Loree McMIndes, Gerald Dye and Lee Chaffield.

Miss Frances Hubbard had charge of all arrangements for the banquet and at the close was presented with the bouquet of roses sent by Miss Leon.

One of the unusual features of the banquet was that five members were present who started in the kindergarten in Ord together and graduated together in 1924. They were Mrs. Reimers, Frances Hubbard, Morace Hubbard, Mrs. Mattson and Marvin Crow.

Supervisors Attend Big Relief Meeting

Several members of the Valley county board of supervisors, led by Chairman S. V. Hansen, left early Wednesday morning for O'Neill to attend a district meeting to discuss plans for emergency relief work with Rowland Haynes, federal administrator for Nebraska.

Federal funds for emergency relief work have been furnished for several months but word from Washington indicates that these funds will be withdrawn unless local subdivisions make special levies for relief work.

In the past all funds for relief work have come from the Valley county general fund. When this fund is exhausted local relief efforts halt. Now it appears that in order to secure federal funds it will be necessary for the county board to make a special tax levy and it may also be necessary for cities, villages and townships to make special levies.

How much federal money the various counties of this district are to get in the next 14 months will be worked out at the district meeting in O'Neill.

County board members had not returned when the Quiz went to press Wednesday evening.

WNU SERVICE

CHAPTER I.—On her way to a position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer, young professor of English literature and rhetoric, after receiving a letter from Gordon Haskell, proprietor of the Academy, meets on the train a young man whom she learns is Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy, as professor of mathematics and chemistry. They reach Blado, railroad station nearest to their destination, and there meet Mrs. Denver, engaged as matron of the Academy. At the school a group of students, led by an air of mystery pervading the lonely place, Haskell welcomes them. Wilton Payne, teacher of psychology, completes the faculty.

"But couldn't you turn it into what it was in the days of its glory?" "No—there's an obstacle," he said, stubbornly. He looked at his watch. "Well, any more questions?" "Do your pupils ever study by moonlight, sir?"

He turned quite pale. "Oh, I'll explain that circumstance—very slight—very odd, yet it has held up the whole situation here. Not now. It's after nine, and I think I heard the day pupils coming in the side entrance. As they cannot pay much, they tend the vegetable garden in the summer; and two are told off to look after the two furnaces, and to bring coal up to the cook in winter."

"Now it is nine, and we begin work at nine," he continued. "You take the study with the glass door, Miss Mercer; and Mr. Payne, you will turn down the hall to the right as you face the staircase; and the first door you come to will be your schoolroom; and next Mr. Fleming's. We have thirty pupils. Each of you will have ten for one hour; and teach three hours at a stretch. At noon you will have recreation until one; and the students a study hour. At one, lunch will be served here for the three of you. At two, the students, who have their lunch in another dining room, will begin three forty-five minute shifts of reciting back to you what you taught them in the morning; and you will give out tasks to be done in the evening in their homes; and by Berenice here. That will bring us to about 3:45 in the afternoon; or, allowing for inevitable delays, four o'clock; making about five teaching hours a day. From four o'clock on your time is your own."

"Where is the library?" asked Payne. "Across the hall from here. I'll show you." He led the way to a room which Janet thought gloomy in the extreme; but it was well stocked with books, which Payne examined eagerly. Then they went to their respective classrooms.

In hers, Janet found a number of boys and girls at the clumsy desks, and among them a girl she was most eager to behold—Berenice Bracebridge—who would, Janet thought, have arrested anyone's attention anywhere by her singular type of beauty. She seemed to be of those who look proudly out on life—but are not proud; a slender, aloof creature. Her features—where had Janet seen the upper lip, the thick lashes, the delicate skin, the abundant fair hair, the eyes with their expression of wanting to understand something which they could not understand? She rose gracefully as Janet entered, and looked about on her fellow students. They seemed to be nice boys and girls; and they rose rather uncertainly, following Miss Bracebridge's example.

"I think we're all here—and we are very glad to see you," she said half shyly. Janet was unaccountably nervous, and she felt a certain uneasiness in her pupils. Their eyes wandered to the corridor, even when she was sure they were most attentive. In a rather shaky voice she opened her subject, a kind of prologue of the glories of English literature from Chaucer down.

The hour came to an end quickly. As Berenice passed her desk she held out her hand. "Thank you! You made things live. It's good to make things live." Janet felt relieved, grateful, almost happy again. She left her platform and went to raise a window higher. When she returned other pupils were entering her room, and on her desk lay a folded note addressed simply "The Teacher." She slipped it into her bag, for Gordon Haskell was approaching in his quiet way which reminded her of a leopard's movements. His sleek, shining hair, his dark eyes, and rather elongated rounded nose emphasized his appearance.

"Well, how did you get along?" "Very well—thank you!" "I am glad you are not nervous. Some of my governesses have been think," he said, "of the old idea that religion and politics must not be mentioned in society—whereas, as I heard a famous man say once, they are the only subjects worth talking about. There must be a religion that swallows up all others; and a policy that dominates all other policies of government. What an extraordinary privilege to be the initiator either of that religion or that policy!"

"Not being Olympians, I am afraid I will none of us have such a privilege." When lunch was finished, Haskell rose and stood like a brown shadow against the white door of the room "One would give children an eternal playtime," he said wistfully "But that they only have when they die. You will be free at four. In your walks you will observe that the east wing, once Doctor Bracebridge's family quarters, is guarded off by a high iron fence. I live there now, and Berenice and her old nurse have the top floor. It is not necessary to visit that part of the academy," he added significantly.

"I hope we may some day see Miss Bracebridge out of study hours," Payne said boldly. The simple words seemed to arouse Haskell's anger, but he said casually, "There's not the slightest objection—if she cares to see you." To cover up Payne's silence, Janet asked: "May I see Mrs. Denver for a moment?" "Certainly. If you will go to your room I will send her to you."

Five minutes later she came in—pale, amazed, utterly unlike the little, confident woman who had arrived at Blado. She gathered Janet into her arms hungrily. "Oh, my dear, what kind of a place are we in? I've had such a morning—heaps of linen—but not a soul have I seen. He has the ordering of the meals! He keeps the keys of everything." "I was worried about you." "And I about you. Oh, my dear, such gloomy kitchens!" "Where are they?"

"In the basement at the east wing. He lives on the first floor; Miss Bracebridge and an old country woman named Martha on the top floor. Everything's very damp and dark and silent. The cook's an old woman, the wife of the man who drove us up. The sulky young man assists her; and that great, tall creature is called Balder." "Did you speak of the wax figures?" "No, but I heard the young fellow say to the cook, 'The dumplings is back again. Master was mad as a mad bull.'" "Better not speak of them, Mrs. Denver. Now I must go back to the school room. It is almost two."

CHAPTER III

FOUR o'clock came quickly. At ten minutes after, Arthur was waiting for her in the hall. She had arrayed herself in a short tweed skirt, an orange jersey and knitted cap. "Now to explore this wild land." They made their way around the west wing and skirted the vegetable garden, which stretched toward a grove of oaks; beyond these they saw the gleaming waters of Midnight lake.

A small dock was found; and to one of its posts two rowboats with locked oars were tied. Both bore the lettering, "Property of the Academy." "Shall we row across to the ravine side?" "That would be the quickest way to reach the falls." On the lake, quietly rowing, their perturbed spirits became stilled by the intense and wild loveliness of the scene. Arthur said little, only too thankful to be away with Janet Mercer—away from that sinister house.

"Look, there's an eagle." She pointed to the great bird winging its flight northward. "He doesn't have to teach in Lostland academy." "Are you beginning to feel nervous again?" "Yes—but I intend to put it through." "Of course we'll put it through." She liked the plural pronoun. He glanced at her, thinking her beauty was like some happy adventure of the spirit. He could not imagine her growing old or tired or discouraged. Always there would be the light touch, the smile over the irrevocable, the happy confidence of that rare minority who walk the world as if it were an enchanted place. She had dignity, too—that attribute rare in modern women.

"I am very lucky," he said abruptly. "Aren't we really always in luck if we only knew it?" "I wonder if Gordon Haskell is lucky." "I am sure he wants to be. Were you scholars as exemplary as mine?" "Ah, that reminds me. I have a note in my purse, addressed simply 'The Teacher.' I think this is a good time to read it." She unfolded it and as she read it gave a little startled gesture and passed the bit of paper to him. On it were the cryptic words, "Gordon Haskell is afraid of nothing but the four wax figures."

Arthur rested on his oars a moment and gazed back at the vast pile of the old academy. "That comes in very pat with the conversation I overheard. I believe those four wax figures are the crux of the whole mystery. Do you believe would ever try it except perhaps in the driest summer weather? Why, that's an awful place!"

Scarcely were the words out of his mouth than from the trees which formed at one part of the path's zigzag course a merciful barrier from the precipice below—from these trees a figure appeared; and by her copper-colored suit they recognized Berenice Bracebridge. She seemed to be admiring the scenery and taking little heed of the slippery, almost precipitous path which led to a tiny patch of rock; the most fragmentary platform above the great whirl. Arthur gesticulated wildly, and at the same instant a voice back of him cried: "Don't! Don't, Fleming, you might startle her!"

It was Wilton Payne. But as if oblivious himself of the whirling danger, he pressed forward and stood erect as an Indian on the edge of the boulder, his dark eye fixed with anxiety, admiration and fear upon the girl, who returned his gaze across the chasm with a kind of proud acceptance of his homage, and waved her hand lightly. Then she turned and went into the shelter of the trees. A moment later they saw her high above them, following the windings of the path with surefooted accuracy, though from their position it looked like a ladder against the solid rock.

"My heart almost stopped beating," Janet said. "It seemed as if the next step must be her last." "Yet she must know the dangers far better than we do," Payne commented. "I did not mean to follow you, but Haskell saw you rowing toward the ravine, and he sent me after you to warn you to be careful not to go too near the whirl. He said a whole family had been swept down into it at once—no other than the children of the last president of Lostland academy, Dr. Jethro Bracebridge—Berenice's brothers and sisters. They were playing the four of them, at Alpine climbing, and they had tied themselves together with ropes. The youngest, a girl about thirteen, lost her footing and pulled the others down before they could brace themselves. Of course, tied together as they were, they had no chance in the whirl."

"How terrible!" Janet exclaimed. "Ah, now I know—those four figures are likenesses of those children." "Precisely—memorials! I've something to tell you, but there's no use screaming it here. The roar is too hard on the vocal chords. Let us go back to the mouth of the ravine." When they reached their boats, Payne said: "Get in—but we won't row over yet. After telling me their tale, he led me to the family burial ground—on a knoll to the northwest of the house—and sure enough there were the four graves among several others, all with the same date of death the whirl gave up the bodies at last, it seemed. Then I mustered my courage. He had been talking tenderly of those lost children, for he had tutored them, and an idea had flashed through my brain. I asked him boldly about the dumplings. I said, 'Even in that fading light, sir, I could see they were wax figures.' "He turned a kind of bluish wax color himself. 'Ah,' he cried, 'I'll dine with my staff tonight and tell you the whole queer story; and you'll know then why I cannot run this place as a normal boarding school is run.'"

"They looked at each other; then at the wild scene about them. The sun was nearing its setting and long streamers of light pierced the titanic clouds; their edges, bright vermilion and gold, caught high elevations in a lavish outpouring of color which enveloped at last the huge brick pile on the farther side of the lake, so that it seemed like a monument of ruby floating on blue. Each window gave back the sun, and the trunks of the pines turned red and copper."

On the other side Arthur left them rather abruptly. "I'm not going in just yet. I'll see you at dinner." He strolled around awhile, visited the little graveyard, finally leaned up against a tree and regarded the old academy, from whose cupola high above the eaves it was probable that no bell would sound again. His thought drifted to the figures. He meant to see where they were kept. He wanted to examine them closely.

He looked about him. A basement ran under all the house, its windows facing a stone retaining wall which at one spot was broken to admit of steps going down. Arthur, examining them, saw that they led to a door which was half ajar; a door hanging by one hinge badly in need of paint. Squeezing through the narrow aperture the door's sagging position offered, he found himself in a dismal passage from which opened rooms. Cautiously opening several doors, he saw rooms of a depressing aspect—dark, moldy, the plaster or paper falling from the walls.

He went up hurriedly—and finally came to the room which he sought. It had been used, it was evident, at one time, as a supplementary schoolroom, for a blackboard covered one of the walls behind the old-fashioned teacher's desk. On it in freshly-written letters made by red chalk were four names: Jethro Bracebridge, Jr. Althea Bracebridge. Norman Bracebridge. Isabel Bracebridge.

But I Thought I Saw a Face Down There—in the Lake.

The faces of the two young girls were very lovely; sweet, frustrated faces, if one can speak so of a wax figure; the young boys are handsome fellows—very! If they came to life! Why, what is the matter?" His arm had jerked an oar until the boat fairly spun round. He laughed nervously. "I suppose that great barrack of a building has made me jumpy; but I thought I saw a face down there—in the lake." He pointed to the dark surface covering incalculable depths, "It seemed rising up to meet me, as drowned faces rise. There! The foolish fancy is over! I'm sorry I jerked the boat. Please don't think me superstitious!"

"I don't. Whatever do you gather from this note?" "That he has a secret enemy in the establishment, who wants to warn us against something." "Against what?" "He gazed at her solemnly. 'I think we are in danger of no ordinary kind. I've followed the advertisements of educational institutions for several years, and I've gotten nearly all of them because they rang true. You know in reading them that their achievements were a matter of open and honorable history. Any parent or guardian could feel reasonably satisfied that he was on the right track; but Haskell's advertisement stood out startlingly. From the first it seemed strange to me. But because he wanted teachers, not pupils, I answered it.'"

They made their way with some difficulty up the magnificent bed of the creek. As far off they heard a steady roaring which they knew proceeded from the great fall. Janet came on after him, sure-footed and graceful. "Be careful," he warned her. "The stream is not very deep, but the current is terrific. It would sweep you off your feet in an instant. Don't get too close."

A well-defined little footpath skirted the stream between its wild waters and the great immobile rocks. The ravine narrowed steadily, the cliffs rising higher and higher, and drawing closer together until they seemed almost ready to close out the sky. Then the cliffs departed from their straight line, became concave, forming a vast aperture something of an ellipse in shape. At its further end a sheet of water, thick and straight as a section of Niagara, dropped a sheer two hundred feet from an out-jutting rock and with a wild roar filled a funnel-shaped aperture at the foot of the cliff with a mad whirl of water.

"How lovely! How terrifying!" "Even nature is terrifying in this region. Oh, don't go too near." She had gone lightly on ahead of him to a vast, slippery black rock which overhung the whirl; and was gazing as if fascinated. "Don't go too near!" he roared, making a megaphone of his fist. "Nothing on earth could get you out of there if once you fell in. I'm a strong swimmer—but we'd both be drowned."

"I think," he went on, "that there must be a subterranean current at the bottom of that funnel, which, meeting the water of the fall, creates this whirl. But see. Isn't that a path coming down the cliff almost above the whirl? What idiot

Intensive Farming Is Practiced Now In Czechoslovakia, Educator Tells Round

By George Round, Jr. If some Valley county farmers think they are farming too small tracts of land, perhaps they had better go to Czechoslovakia. There they will see farmers with only small acreages. Perhaps one may farm 20 acres, 60 acres or even as little as 10 acres of land. To one never having been in that small republic which is only 54,000 miles square, such farming is unusual. It was to me. Dr. Jan Dokladal, noted educator from Brno, Czechoslovakia, told me recently about the details and how an intensified and concentrated agriculture is being carried on in his native country. Here for a study of American agriculture, he vividly contrasted farming there with the same industry in Nebraska.

WNU SERVICE

CHAPTER I—On her way to a position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer, young professor of English literature and rhetoric, after receiving a letter from Gordon Haskell, proprietor of the Academy, meets on the train a young man whom she knows as Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy, as professor of mathematics and chemistry. They reach Bladestown station nearest to their destination, and there meet Mrs. Denver, engaged as matron of the Academy. At the school the group is welcomed by an air of mystery pervading the lonely place. Haskell welcomes them. Wilton Payne, teacher of psychology, completes the faculty.

"But couldn't you turn it into what it was in the days of its glory?" "No—there's an obstacle," he said, stubbornly. He looked at his watch. "Well, any more questions?" "Do your pupils ever study by moonlight, sir?"

He turned quite pale. "Oh, I'll explain that circumstance—very slight—very odd, yet it has held up the whole situation here. Not now. It's after nine, and I think I heard the day pupils coming in the side entrance. As they cannot pay much, they tend the vegetable garden in the summer; and two are told off to look after the two furnaces, and to bring coal up to the cook in winter.

"Now it is nine, and we begin work at nine," he continued. "You take the study with the glass door, Miss Mercer; and Mr. Payne, you will turn down the hall to the right as you face the staircase; and the first door you come to will be your schoolroom; and next Mr. Fleming's. We have thirty pupils. Each of you will have ten for one hour; and teach three hours at a stretch. At noon you will have recreation until one; and the students a study hour. At one, lunch will be served here for the three of you. At two, the students, who have their lunch in another dining room, will begin three forty-five minute shifts of retreating back to you what you taught them in the morning; and you will give out tasks to be done in the evening in their homes; and by Berenice here. That will bring us to about 3:45 in the afternoon; or, allowing for inevitable delays, four o'clock; making about five teaching hours a day. From four o'clock on your time is your own."

"Where is the library?" asked Payne. "Across the hall from here. I'll show you." He led the way to a room which Janet thought gloomy in the extreme; but it was well stocked with books, which Payne examined eagerly. Then they went to their respective classrooms.

In hers, Janet found a number of boys and girls at the clumsy desks, and among them a girl she was most eager to behold—Berenice Bracebridge—who would, Janet thought, have arrested anyone's attention anywhere by her singular type of beauty. She seemed to be of those who look proudly on life—but are not proud; a slender, aloof creature. Her features—where had Janet seen the upper lip, the thick lashes, the delicate skin, the abundant fair hair, the eyes with their expression of wanting to understand something which they could not understand? She rose gracefully as Janet entered, and looked about on her fellow students. They seemed to be nice boys and girls; and they rose rather uncertainly, following Miss Bracebridge's example.

"I think we're all here—and we are very glad to see you," she said half shyly. Janet was unaccountably nervous, and she felt a certain uneasiness in her pupils. Their eyes wandered to the corridor, even when she was sure they were most attentive. In a rather shaky voice she opened her subject, a kind of prologue of the glories of English literature from Chaucer down.

The hour came to an end quickly. As Berenice passed her desk she held out her hand. "Thank you! You made things live. It's good to make things live." Janet felt relieved, grateful, almost happy again. She left her platform and went to raise a window higher. When she returned other pupils were entering her room, and on her desk lay a folded note addressed simply "The Teacher." She slipped it into her bag, for Gordon Haskell was approaching in his quiet way which reminded her of a leopard's movements. His sleek, shining hair, his dark eyes, and rather elongated rounded nose emphasized his appearance.

"Well, how did you get along?" "Very well—thank you!" "I am glad you are not nervous. Some of my governesses have been think," he said, "of the old idea that religion and politics must not be mentioned in society—whereas, as I heard a famous man say once, they are the only subjects worth talking about. There must be a religion that swallows up all others; and a policy that dominates all other policies of government. What an extraordinary privilege to be the initiator either of that religion or that policy!" "Not being Olympians, I am afraid we will none of us have such a privilege."

When lunch was finished, Haskell rose and stood like a brown shadow against the white door of the room. "One would give children an eternal playtime," he said wistfully. "But that they only have when they die. You will be free at four. In your walks you will observe that the east wing, once Doctor Bracebridge's family quarters, is guarded off by a high iron fence. I live there now, and Berenice and her old nurse have the top floor. It is not necessary to visit that part of the academy," he added significantly.

"I hope we may some day see Miss Bracebridge out of study hours," Payne said boldly. The simple words seemed to arouse Haskell's anger, but he said casually, "There's not the slightest objection—if the cares to see you."

To cover up Payne's silence, Janet asked: "May I see Mrs. Denver for a moment?" "Certainly. If you will go to your room I will send her to you."

Five minutes later she came in—pale, amazed, utterly unlike the little, confident woman who had arrived at Bladestown. She gathered Janet into her arms hungrily. "Oh, my dear, what kind of a place are we in? I've had such a morning—beeps of linen—but not a soul have I seen. He has the ordering of the meals! He keeps the keys of everything."

"I was worried about you." "And I about you. Oh, my dear, such gloomy kitchens!" "Where are they?" "In the basement at the east wing. He lives on the first floor; Miss Bracebridge and an old country woman named Martha on the top floor. Everything's very damp and dark and silent. The cook's an old woman, the wife of the man who drove us up. The sulky young man assists her; and that great, tall creature is called Balder."

"Did you speak of the wax figures?" "No, but I heard the young fellow say to the cook, 'The dummies is back again. Master was mad as a mad bull.'"

"Better not speak of them, Mrs. Denver. Now I must go back to the school room. It is almost two."

CHAPTER III

FOUR o'clock came quickly. At ten minutes after, Arthur was waiting for her in the hall. She had arrayed herself in a short tweed skirt, an orange Jersey and knitted cap. "Now to explore this wild land."

They made their way around the west wing and skirted the vegetable garden, which stretched toward a grove of oaks; beyond these they saw the gleaming waters of Midnight lake.

A small dock was found; and to one of its posts two rowboats with locked oars were tied. Both bore the lettering, "Property of the Academy."

"Shall we row across to the ravine side?" "That would be the quickest way to reach the falls."

On the lake, quietly rowing, their perturbed spirits became stilled by the intense and wild loveliness of the scene. Arthur said little, only too thankful to be away with Janet Mercer—away from that sinister house.

"Look, there's an eagle." She pointed to the great bird winging its flight northward. "He doesn't have to teach in Lostland academy."

"Are you beginning to feel nervous again?" "Yes—but I intend to put it through."

"Of course we'll put it through." She liked the plural pronoun. He glanced at her, thinking her beauty was like some happy adventure of the spirit. He could not imagine her growing old or tired or discouraged. Always there would be the light touch, the smile over the irrefragable, the happy confidence of that rare minority who walk the world as if it were an enchanted place. She had dignity, too—that attribute rare in modern women.

"I am very lucky," he said abruptly. "Aren't we really always in luck if we only knew it?" "I wonder if Gordon Haskell is lucky."

"You said the girl figures were beautiful." "Quite lovely!" "Did Haskell say there were five children?" "Yes."

"She is the only remaining one—perhaps. He said . . . many deaths; yes, many deaths?" "But if he is afraid of them," she queried, "why not have them out of the way?"

"Do you think he is actually afraid of them—or of an idea back of them?" "She mused on this. 'How could there be an idea back of them?'"

"I should like to see them closer. Were they well made?" "Startlingly well made; the work of a genuine artist, I should say."

But I Thought I Saw a Face Down There—in the Lake.

The faces of the two young girls were very lovely; sweet, frustrated faces. If one can speak so of a wax figure, the young boys are handsome fellows—very! If they came to life! Why, what is the matter?"

His arm had jerked an oar until the boat fairly spun round. He laughed nervously. "I suppose that great barrack of a building has made me jumpy; but I thought I saw a face down there—in the lake." He pointed to the dark surface covering incalculable depths. "It seemed rising up to meet me, as drowned faces rise. There! the foolish fancy is over! I'm sorry I jerked the boat. Please don't think me superstitious!"

"I don't. Whatever do you gather from this note?" "That he has a secret enemy in the establishment, who wants to warn us against something."

"Against what?" "He gazed at her solemnly. 'I think we are in danger of no ordinary kind. I've followed the advertisements of educational institutions for several years, and I've gotten nearly all of them because they range true. You know in reading them that their achievements were a matter of open and honorable history. Any parent or guardian could feel reasonably satisfied that he was on the right track; but Haskell's advertisement stood out startlingly. From the first it seemed strange to me. But because he wanted teachers, not pupils, I answered it.'"

They made their way with some difficulty up the magnificent bed of the creek. Afar off they heard a steady roaring which they knew proceeded from the great fall. Janet came on after him, sure-footed and graceful.

"Be careful," he warned her. "The stream is not very deep, but the current is terrific. It would sweep you off your feet in an instant. Don't get too close."

A well-defined little footpath skirted the stream between its wild waters and the great immobile rocks. The ravine narrowed steadily, the cliffs rising higher and higher, and drawing closer together until they seemed almost ready to close on the sky. Then the cliffs departed from their straight line, became concave, forming a vast aperture something of an ellipse in shape. At its further end a sheet of water, thick and straight as a section of Niagara, dropped a sheer two hundred feet from an out-jutting rock and with a wild roar filled a funnel-shaped aperture at the foot of the cliff with a mad whirl of water.

"How lovely! How terrifying!" "Even nature is terrifying in this region. Oh, don't go too near."

She had gone lightly on ahead of him to a vast, slippery black rock which overhung the whirl; and was gazing as if fascinated.

"Don't go too near!" he roared, making a megaphone of his fist. "Nothing on cold could get you out of there if once you fell in. I'm a strong swimmer—but we'd both be drowned."

"I think," he went on, "that there must be a subterranean current at the bottom of that funnel, which, meeting the water of the fall, creates this whirl. But, see, isn't that a path coming down the cliff almost above the whirl? What idiot would ever try it except perhaps in the driest summer weather! Why, that's an awful place!" Scarcely were the words out of his mouth than from the trees which formed at one part of the path's zigzag course a merciful barrier from the precipice below—from these trees a figure appeared; and by her copper-colored suit they recognized Berenice Bracebridge. She seemed to be admiring the scenery and taking little heed of the slippery, almost precipitous path which led to a tiny patch of rock; the most fragmentary platform above the great whirl. Arthur gesticulated wildly, and at the same instant a voice back of him cried:

"Don't! Don't, Fleming, you might startle her!" It was Wilton Payne. But as if oblivious himself of the whirling danger, he pressed forward and stood erect as an Indian on the edge of the boulder, his dark eye fixed with anxiety, admiration and fear upon the girl, who returned his gaze across the chasm with a kind of proud acceptance of his homage, and waved her hand lightly. Then she turned and went into the shelter of the trees. A moment later they saw her high above them, following the windings of the path with surefooted accuracy, though from their position it looked like a ladder against the solid rock.

"My heart almost stopped beating," Janet said. "It seemed as if the next step must be her last."

"Yet she must know the dangers far better than we do," Payne commented. "I did not mean to follow you, but Haskell saw you rowing toward the ravine, and he sent me after you to warn you to be careful not to go too near the whirl. He said a whole family had been swept down into it at once—no other than the children of the last president of Lostland academy, Dr. Jethro Bracebridge—Berenice's brothers and sisters. They were playing, the four of them, at Alpine climbing, and they had tied themselves together with ropes. The youngest, a girl about thirteen, lost her footing and pulled the others down before they could brace themselves. Of course, tied together as they were, they had no chance in the whirl."

"How terrible!" Janet exclaimed. "Ah, now I know—those four figures are likenesses of those children."

"Precisely—memorials! I've something to tell you, but there's no use screaming it here. The roar is too hard on the vocal chords. Let us go back to the mouth of the ravine."

When they reached their boats, Payne said: "Get in—but we won't row over yet. After telling me their tale, he led me to the family burial ground—on a knoll to the northwest of the house—and sure enough there were the four graves among several others, all with the same date of death—the whirl gave up the bodies at last, it seemed. Then I mastered my courage. He had been talking tenderly of those lost children, for he had tutored them, and an idea had flashed through my brain. I asked him boldly about the dummies. I said, 'Even in that fading light, sir, I could see they were wax figures.'"

"He turned a kind of bluish wax color himself. 'Ah,' he cried, 'I'll dine with my staff tonight and tell you the whole queer story; and you'll know then why I cannot run this place as a normal boarding school is run.'"

They looked at each other; then at the wild scene about them. The sun was nearing its setting and long streamers of light pierced the titanic clouds; their edges, bright vermilion and gold, caught high elevations in a lavish outpouring of color which enveloped at last the huge brick pile on the farther side of the lake, so that it seemed like a monument of ruby floating on blue. Each window gave back the sun, and the trunks of the pines turned red and copper.

On the other side Arthur left them rather abruptly. "I'm not going in just yet. I'll see you at dinner." He strolled around awhile, visited the little graveyard, finally leaned up against a tree and regarded the old academy, from whose cupola high above the eaves it was probable that no bell would sound again.

His thought drifted to the figures. He meant to see where they were kept. He wanted to examine them closely.

He looked about him. A basement ran under all the house, its windows facing a stone retaining wall which at one spot was broken to admit of steps going down. Arthur, examining them, saw that they led to a door which was half ajar; a door hanging by one hinge badly in need of paint. Squeezing through the narrow aperture the door's sagging position offered, he found himself in a dismal passage from which opened several doors. Cautiously opening several doors, he saw rooms of a depressing aspect—dark, moldy, the plaster or paper falling from the walls.

He went up hurriedly—and finally came to the room which he sought. It had been used, it was evident, at one time, as a supplementary schoolroom, for a blackboard covered one of the walls behind the old-fashioned teacher's desk. On it in freshly-written letters made by red chalk were four names:

Jethro Bracebridge, Jr. Althea Bracebridge. Norman Bracebridge. Isabel Bracebridge.

Five Little Girls at Once Big Bills Come Back Only Flew the Atlantic Cuba Remembers

Mrs. Oliva Dionne of North Bay, Ont., had five children last Sunday and "expected" another. She has ten children, her family increased by five girl babies at one birth.

Dr. A. R. Dafeo of Callander says: "The five little girls are all well and chirping. This will interest millions of women far more than NRA, the Russian-Japanese complications or the approaching home-going of congress."

Bills of large denomination, from $500 to $1,000 and $10,000, are used rarely in ordinary affairs.

When banks began closing and people became frightened, it was observed that bank customers were asking for these big bills in exchange for checks, and, before long, millions of them disappeared. The federal reserve considers it a good sign that they are coming out from hiding.

Just before the bank crisis the amount of big bills in hiding rose to one billion nine hundred millions. Of these large bills, three hundred and fifty millions have recently returned to the United States treasury and to reserve banks, which, according to the federal reserve, indicates "better times."

Two French flyers, Capt. Maurice Rossi and Lieut. Paul Codos, landed on Long Island after an attempt to fly nonstop from Paris to California, 8,000 miles. The two Frenchmen are said to be greatly humiliated by their inability to fly on and reach California, where a glorious reception awaited them.

It would seem that flying the Atlantic westward, infinitely more difficult than going the other way, is a sufficient accomplishment, considering that less than twenty-five years ago Lord Northcliffe was offering ten thousand pounds to any man that would fly across the little English channel.

The day is not far away when men will fly nonstop from Paris to San Francisco as a matter of course, and from anywhere on earth to any other spot on earth.

The people and government of Cuba are trying to find four assassins accused of attempting to murder Jefferson Caffery, United States ambassador. The real Cubans, intelligent people, seek no quarrel with the United States. They "remember the Maine" and what happened to Spain after that ship was sent to the bottom. Spain was driven out of Cuba and all the way home across the Atlantic and out of the Philippines as well.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, an able, energetic and kind-hearted woman, went to Alderson, W. Va., to inspect the federal prison for women and speak to the 400 inmates. For such an address, or any address to any prisoners, the best text is the well-known remark of the Bohemian John Huss, looking at a poor drunkard in the gutter: "But for the grace of God there lies John Huss."

Mrs. Roosevelt talks over the radio, and for doing so is paid $500 a minute. Others do the same and are paid as much or even more, but Mrs. Roosevelt gives all her radio receipts to charity. Not many of the others do that.

Mussolini, observing world-wide preparation for war, and no disarmament, says, "If I must fight, I must," and gets ready, wastes no time sobbing or sighing.

Before 1940, beginning at once, he will spend one thousand million lire on fighting surface ships and the same huge sum on fighting airships.

The "Century of Progress" exposition is opened for the second year with a success big enough to please even Chicago. Anything must be big to satisfy Chicago.

Already it is apparent that this year's greater and better exposition will eclipse the first year, in attendance and in every other way.

Henry Ford was there to inspect his new exposition buildings. Before he realized it, half a dozen young Americans, twelve to fifteen years old, had recognized him, appointed him their guide, without pay, and kept him busy for an hour explaining everything to them, while his distracted secretaries tried to remind him of important business appointments.

Mr. Ford told them: "These boys are more important. There is nothing serious the matter with a country where the young people are interested in new ideas."

Do not fail to visit Chicago's wonderful "Century of Progress" exposition this summer. See what has been done in the past century of progress. See your country, coming and going, and ask yourself what the next century of progress will accomplish, when this little depression stomach ache shall have been forgotten.

President's Memorial Day Address at Gettysburg; Major Labor Disputes Trouble Administration; Attempt to Assassinate Ambassador Caffery in Havana.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

BEFORE a vast multitude of persons gathered at Gettysburg battlefield President Roosevelt delivered a Memorial Day address that was in effect a vigorous attack on critics of his plans for national recovery.

President Roosevelt

Introduced by Governor Pinchot as "the first citizen of the world," Mr. Roosevelt first paid eloquent tribute to the men of the North and South who fought bravely on that historic field, and described how the sections of the nation had been welded into one, its unity being aided by foreign wars, until now all sectionalism has disappeared. He continued:

"We are all brothers now in a new understanding. The grain farmers of the West do not set themselves up for preference if we seek at the same time to help the cotton farmers of the South; nor do the tobacco growers complain of discrimination if, at the same time, we help the cattle men of the plains and mountains.

"In our planning to lift industry to normal prosperity the farmer upholds our efforts. And as we give the farmer a long sought equality the city worker understands and helps. All of us share in whatever good comes to the average man. We know that we all have a stake—a partnership in the government of our country.

"Today we have many means of knowing each other—means that have sounded the doom of sectionalism. It is, I think, as I survey the picture from every angle, a simple fact that the chief hindrance to progress comes from three elements which, thank God, grow less in importance with the growth of a clearer understanding of our purposes on the part of the overwhelming majority.

"These groups are those who seek to stir up political animosity or to build political advantage by the distortion of facts; those who, by declining to follow the rules of the game, seek to gain an unfair advantage over those who live up to the rules; and those few who still, because they have never been willing to take an interest in their fellow Americans, dwell inside of their own narrow spheres and still represent the selfishness of sectionalism which has no place in our national life."

GOING from Gettysburg to New York, the President embarked on the cruiser Indianapolis, put out to sea and reviewed the American fleet, which, as assistant secretary of the navy, he helped to command during the World War and in which he maintains the warmest interest. With him were Secretary Swanson and Josephus Daniels, the war-time navy secretary. There were some other distinguished guests, but members of congress tried in vain to get aboard.

The Indianapolis was anchored about a mile from Ambrose lightship, and 88 fighting ships passed proudly in review. The Pennsylvania, flying the four-starred flag of Admiral David E. Sellers, commander of the fleet, led the parade and then, with the Louisville, turned out of line and anchored near the Indianapolis. It was an imposing spectacle, such as had not been witnessed since the early days of President Coolidge's administration.

AT THE annual exercises at the United States Navy academy 463 midshipmen were graduated. A total of 332 were commissioned ensigns in the navy, 25 lieutenants in the marine corps, one lieutenant in the Philippine scouts and 103 will resign.

UNDER the present administration the navy is doing quite well, but the army feels it is neglected. Secretary of War Dern and Newton D. Baker, who held the portfolio during the war, appeared before the house committee and urged the passage of the Thompson bill, which would increase the strength of the army to 105,000 enlisted men and 14,000 officers. That the present regular army is inadequate in the face of present disturbed world conditions was declared by both gentlemen.

The American army as now manned would not simultaneously protect our outlying possessions, train civilians, and repel "any sudden invaders," Secretary Dern insisted. A more satisfactory army would cost the nation $35,000,000 annually, he said in explaining that he had not suggested an increase to President Roosevelt because of the President's desire to balance the budget.

Mr. Baker could not "imagine an army less than five times the present size of ours having the slightest effect on the military policy of any other nation." Of course, he did not advocate any such increase; he said that four divisions, one in each section of the country, with a fifth free to train civilians, would suffice.

THOUGH administration leaders have asserted that labor troubles are to be expected in a time of recovery and that they are not alarmed by the strikes that are now in effect or are threatened for the near future, it was evident in Washington that these optimists were disturbed by the prospect of general strikes in the cotton textile and steel industries. It was believed President Roosevelt would have to intervene in the effort to bring about peace.

As General Johnson refused to change the order permitting cotton mills to reduce their output by 25 per cent for twelve weeks, the United Textile Workers of America summoned all cotton mill employees to quit their machines, and it was predicted that 800,000 would respond. The workers claim the reduction would amount to 25 per cent cut in their wages, and say they will not stand for this. They also demand a 30-hour week with no reduction of pay.

Fighting for recognition of non-company unions, a point on which the steel masters will not yield, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers announced that a general strike would be called in mid-June unless its members win the right to choose spokesmen freely for collective bargaining.

The union leaders, who contend the collective bargaining guaranty in the NRA has been violated by employers, asked:

"Is the American Iron and Steel Institute more powerful than the President of the United States?"

CUBA is now entirely freed from United States suzerainty, through a treaty which was signed at the State department by plenipotentiaries of both countries and ratified by the senate. The pact abrogates the Platt amendment providing for the maintenance of the independence and territorial and financial integrity of the island republic and authorizing the United States to intervene therein for the protection of the country and the preservation of order. In the new treaty the United States retains the lease of Guantanamo as a naval base.

The people of Cuba rejoiced exceedingly over the abrogation of the Platt amendment, and President Menditea declared a three days national holiday.

HAVANA police learned that there was a plot to assassinate Jefferson Caffery, American ambassador to Cuba, and to destroy American property on the island. They took extraordinary precautions to protect Mr. Caffery, but despite the presence of soldiers at the entrance to his home some unidentified assassins drove by in a car and poured a stream of bullets from sawed-off shotguns just at the time Mr. Caffery usually leaves for the club. He was not injured but one of the soldiers was grievously wounded, his right leg being torn off by an explosive bullet. Mr. Caffery went on to the yacht club calmly and refused to say who he thought the assassins might be.

J. Caffery

Cuban government officials were greatly excited by the attempt on the ambassador's life, and there was an inclination to blame the Communists, but leaders of that party denied their followers had anything to do with it. In recent demonstrations the radicals have attacked Mr. Caffery in their speeches. Presumably the sole purpose is to stir up trouble between the governments of the United States and Cuba.

ENDEAVORING to learn what small business throughout the country thinks about the NRA, the national industrial conference board has been conducting a survey that has not brought definite results. Tabulating these results as best it can, the board states it found that 34.4 per cent favored the NRA as a whole; another 12.8 per cent favored it with some reservations; 39 per cent were definitely opposed to it, while 8.4 per cent could not see that it made much difference.

DELEGATES from the five New England states, New York and Pennsylvania have now signed a solemn pact for the protection of women and minors in industry, which has been under negotiation for several years.

The compact, which must be ratified by the legislatures of the several states, contemplates minimum standards of wages for women and minors and contains a provision that "no employer shall pay a woman or a minor an unfair or oppressive wage." State boards are to be set up with authority to investigate pay rolls and require compliance.

CHARGES are made by the house agriculture committee that joint stock land banks have been using federal funds made available under the 1933 farm loan act to buy in their own bonds at 35 cents on the dollar while pressing foreclosures on their debtors.

The committee approved the Fulmer bill to authorize farmers who have obtained loans from joint stock land banks to buy on the open market joint stock land bank bonds, tendering same to the joint stock land banks in payment of their indebtedness. The bill would also enable farmers to repurchase their lands that have been previously foreclosed if said lands are still in the possession of these banks.

THE Irish Free State took another step toward becoming a republic when the dall eireann passed a bill abolishing the senate. After this action had been taken President Eamon de Valera said:

"We want England to get out. We do not want to have anything to do with Britain. If there is to be any form of association, it must be in the common interest of both. We must be the judges of whether it is to our advantage or not."

No definite plan was mentioned, and none is expected to be put forward before March, 1935, when abolition of the senate will become effective. Until that date any action of the dall would have to have senate approval.

It is apparent that De Valera no longer hopes that Ulster will be included in any Irish republic.

STATESMEN from many nations met in Geneva and reopened the sessions of the disarmament conference, with a full realization of the fact that their failure may mean the renewal of war in Europe in the not far future, and possibly the end of the League of Nations. Such hope as they had of breaking the impasse seemed to rest on the plan which Foreign Commissar Litvinov of Russia said he was ready to offer. It was believed he would concentrate on a policy of political security as a basis for disarmament. Norman H. Davis, American ambassador-at-large, presented the views of President Roosevelt, urging an accord emphasizing supervision of arms and a more rigid control of international traffic in arms.

Louis Barthou, foreign minister of France, showed no inclination to yield to the German demands for rearmament. The French are said to believe Hitler is due soon to run up against domestic troubles that will tie his hands; they will continue to promote their defensive alliances until the German chancellor gives in, and just now are counting on a pact of mutual assistance with Russia and the little entente which will be signed if, as expected, Russia enters the League of Nations. The French also are hoping for an accord with Italy.

Premier Mussolini of Italy, in a speech before the chamber of deputies, said that disarmament talk was foolish and in so many words suggested that war was the only way out of the economic adversities that beset Italy and Europe generally.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed the joint resolution of congress empowering him to stop arms shipments destined for countries at war, and immediately proclaimed an embargo against shipments of arms or munitions from the United States to Bolivia and Paraguay. His action was the first of its kind in American history. Because of existing treaties he could not forbid actual shipment of arms but he did prohibit their sale in the United States to the warring countries.

Costa Durels, Bolivian representative in Geneva, before an open session of the League of Nations council invoked Article 13, the arbitration clause of the league covenant, as a basis for settling the conflict with Paraguay. If his demand is granted the dispute will automatically go to the World Court of Permanent Justice for settlement. Durels said an arms embargo would mean the "finish" of Bolivia.

CODOS and Rossi, French flyers who hold the distance record, sought to better their work by making a nonstop flight from Paris to California. They got across the Atlantic ocean all right, but a weakness of one wing of their big monoplane developed and they were forced to land at Floyd Bennett field, New York.

Percy Doe Files For State Office

Percy E. Doe, well known local resident for the past 15 years, paid his filing fee Monday for democratic candidacy to the office of state representative for Valley and Garfield counties.

Prior to his coming to Arcadia, Mr. Doe spent 18 years in executive positions with commission companies, express companies and railroad companies. Since living in Arcadia he has been connected with the post office where he has had the opportunity to study the conditions and needs of the farmer and small town resident. His former executive experience together with his knowledge of our local conditions will make him a very able representative of the people of this section.

Mr. Doe fully realizes the dire circumstance of the farmer; the need for a more economical government; the demand for quicker, safer and more effective legislation.

Cattle To Sand Hills

Brandenburg and Mrs. Sorenson sent a truck load Friday, Joe Schealle and M. Milburn a truck load Saturday; Lem Richardson, Oscar Jewell and Leonard Fowler sent up a truck load on Thursday night; I. S. Davis took a truck load up Saturday and many others are planning on going but as yet have not made complete arrangements. Mr. Fowler wrote saying they had had such good rains there he could accommodate all cattle which were sent from Arcadia. Mr. Gibson, who lives north of Arcadia, took over 500 head to the sand hills last week and if the dry weather continues many more will have to be taken or sold. Everyone is hoping and praying for rain so they can keep their stock at home. There is a great shortage of milk reported all over the state.

Large Crowd Attends Fellowship Banquet

A great and happy occasion was the result of the meeting of the local Methodist church with its resident bishop here Monday evening. Over two hundred people were seated in the spacious dining room of the church, and partook of the Fellowship banquet. The ladies aid handled the serving, by the aid of local girls, and did a most efficient piece of work. The banquet was held in honor of the lifting of the interest from the church, and of the re-establishing of the loan of the remaining principle. M. L. Fries was a guest of honor and spoke effectively on "Civic Righteousness", reminiscing in his characteristic interesting manner on past civic movements and instances that have boosted righteousness along with citizenship. Rev. Hendrickson and Rev. Gaither spoke briefly of their labors on this field, and the people of the church were happy to see them again. Rev. Nye brought the possibilities of the future before the people, and Dr. Kendall spoke of the responsibilities that existed for a group who are walking on the high road to righteous accomplishment.

Bishop and Mrs. Leete were thoroughly enjoyed by all. The bishop expressed in his address, the great blessing that men have in exercising their faith to the point of great building ventures, even to the point of death. He stated that the greatest value of a community was found in its soul value, heading itself up in the christian church of that community. Regardless of the condition, he said, the church must continue to build and prepare for those who follow the present generation.

Music was furnished by Miss Rife, and the church quartet, composed of Misses Rife and Carmody, Messrs Finney and Nye, with Mrs. Finney accompanying.

Summer Bible School Underway in Arcadia

The Summer Bible School is now being held under the auspices of the Independent Fundamental church of Arcadia. The term began Monday morning, May 28th and is to continue four weeks from that date. The daily sessions begin at 8.30 every morning (except Saturdays and Sundays) and close at 11.30. This provides fifteen hours each week of intensive study of the Bible and related topics, or sixty hours for the term of four weeks. As compared with the usual half hour of class instruction in the average Sunday school, it will be seen that the term of the summer school is the equivalent of more than two years of time spent in the ordinary Sunday school class work.

The Summer Bible School differs from the Daily Vacation Bible school in a number of respects, one of them being that there is no handicraft work in the former. The real purpose is so to train the pupils in mind and heart that they will be better equipped to cope with the moral and Christian problems of life and service.

Mrs. Burleigh has been acting as superintendent, assisted by the following corps of teachers: Ross Minne, Kermit Ericson, Mrs. Orville Sell, Edith Jamison and Alma Pierson.

While the pupils necessarily change somewhat during the term on account of illness or absence from the city, the following have presented themselves for enrollment: Peggy Coons, Bessie Hope Pierson, Anna Dove Pierson, Vivian Barger, Alice Jean Owen, Shirley Owen, Florence Sell, Ronnie True, Luella Stone, Rae Jean Brown, Allen Sell, Gerald Coons, Doris Sell, Beryl Owens, Caroline Brown, Kathleen Brown, Gerald True, Hazel Rambo, Leland Finney, Corinne Gregory, Gerald Wibbels, Vesper Smith, Belva White, Mary Vanchura, Helen Vanchura, Martha Jamison, Betty Jamison, Eloise Toops, Ona Mae Toops, Robert Mather, Ruth Mather, Neva Roberts, Dixie Mae Clark, Ruth Wibbels.

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly a year for my health, and for high blood pressure and rheumatism and it helped both. My blood pressure was as high as 290 when I started to take Kruschen. I weighed 255 and now I weigh 214, that is losing 41 lbs., in about nine months and I feel fine. Wouldn't go without Kruschen Salts in the house." Mrs. W. Eckhoff, Saginaw, Mich.

Besides melting away ugly excess fat Kruschen constantly keeps the bowels regular and free from waste that is always apt to poison the system.

Fat folks should give Kruschen a month's trial—it never disappoints—you'll feel so much better after taking one inexpensive jar which you can get at any drug store in the world—keeps you cooler in hot weather.

MEAT—AND THE CONSUMER'S DOLLAR

Men who carry on in industry must eat meat for proper nourishment. You, the farmer and stockman, get a generous proportion of the money that they spend for food.

The more money you spend to purchase the products of their toil, the more meat they eat—and the higher the price they can afford to pay.

You get more money for your stock when everyone sells on the PRIMARY market. When spent, it helps the city worker. It comes back to you in the form of still higher prices for your stock—and everyone can live better.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—The expanding influence of the federal government on the lives of individuals throughout the United States suddenly has become a matter that is attracting attention, and more and more repercussions are to be noted in the National Capital. Some observers tell me they think it is an indication that the multifarious agencies that have been set up under the New Deal are at last in full operation and their effects are now reaching to the grass roots of the country. However that may be, it can be stated without equivocation that the so-called alphabetical soup (the various administrations and boards and commissions known only by initials) are making their presence felt for better or for worse in the lives of individuals.

I cannot agree with the exaggerated assertion by a leading Republican politician that "we are subject to Hitler decrees from a hundred different sources," but there seems little doubt of vast power being wielded by the various New Deal agencies.

For instance, Harry Hopkins, federal relief administrator, has decreed that there will be no drought relief funds for cattle owners supplied by the federal emergency relief administration unless the holders of any mortgages on those cattle agree not to foreclose on such mortgages. And, he it said, the mortgage holder who refuses to make such an agreement is up the well-known stump. He can take the cattle, of course, when the mortgage matures, but if the mortgages have many months to run, the cattle are liable to die of starvation in the meantime. Without attempting to decide the merit of such a policy on the part of the federal government, the illustration shows the power that is wielded from Washington.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation has been exercising its influence with banks for some time. While RFC officials insist they are not attempting to control policies of banks, it nevertheless remains as a fact that they are exercising voting power in the boards of directors of numerous banking institutions. They went so far in the case of a great Chicago bank as to insist that the man they selected be elected by the board as its chairman. In addition, through the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, the bank policies on loans are closely watched, and this is happening at a time when the President and some of his advisers are strongly urging the banks to make loans.

Under NRA and the numerous codes, various terms and conditions are laid down for business practices.

Typical of How Code Works
Here is a typical case: the code for the graphic arts industries has a provision prohibiting extension of credit for longer than two years. That is, a printing plant owner or publisher of a country newspaper or anyone else wanting to buy a linotype machine had been allowed sometimes as much as five years in which to pay for expensive equipment of that kind. Now, however, he must pay for it within two years or the manufacturer will be a code violator by selling it on a long term basis. Thus, it is to be seen that the code exerts an influence on what might be called the innocent bystander. The country publisher cannot save up gold with which to pay for the machinery because he would be a criminal to have gold under present law.

Again declaring that I am not discussing the merit of the proposition, it remains as a fact that the federal trade commission is exerting an influence on the type of investments individuals make as a result of its control over the issue and sale of shares of stocks or bonds. Of course, the commission cannot reach a corporation that is doing business only in its home state, but the larger corporations engage in business on a broader scale than that and the bulk of shares and bonds, therefore, must not be issued until the federal trade commission's securities experts have determined the facts about the corporation that offers them. It is a matter of record, of course, that numerous corporations have sold purely blue sky stock, but the point I am attempting to make is that here is another federal influence on the lives of individuals.

As we go through the month of June, another phase of the New Deal becomes effective. I refer to the development of the country's forests, privately as well as publicly, owned. While there will be no noticeable results for some time, the President's forest conservation policy has become operative nevertheless, and it is a long-range affair that is generally accepted as building for the future. The program which the President initiated when he started the Civilian Conservation corps embodies a definite scheme for restoring forests that have been cut over and constitute nothing more than waste land; it provides for selective cutting of trees in lumbering operations, and it is designed to create in the minds of citizens the necessity for sustaining our forests against the time when, at the present rate of destruction, there would be no more lumber. I was surprised when the forestry service told me that forest land was just about one-fourth of the entire area in the United States. But the forestry officials reminded me at the same time that unless there is a serious conservation movement, there is only enough timber in sight to provide lumber for about thirty years more. Originally, it will be remembered, there was about 40 per cent of the entire continent in virgin timber.

Mr. Roosevelt is proposing legislation, most of which will be ready for the session of congress meeting in January, 1935, to provide machinery for co-ordinating the efforts of the federal and state governments and for gaining the co-operation of private land owners in restoring growing trees.

A good many Washington observers are wondering how soon the federal trade commission and NRA are going to lock horns. The two agencies are certainly headed in the direction of a clash. It is generally conceded here that sooner or later General Johnson's NRA codes that establish monopolies in various fields of commerce and industry are going to be made the subject of pithy comment from federal trade commission circles. How soon it will come, or what form the disagreement will take, of course, can be only a matter of conjecture now.

It is necessary to recall the basis upon which the federal trade commission was created in order to get a clear understanding of the clash that is to be expected. First of all, the creators of the federal trade commission idea had in mind the idea of a federal agency that could be watching big business all of the time. Where it found unfair practices, smothering of the little independent units, and such other conditions as some sharp-shooting businesses use, the commission can, and does, cite them publicly. It goes after the facts in public hearings and exposes the practices. It also issues orders directing the offending businesses to eliminate the objectionable practices. If they choose to disregard the commission's orders, the matter is turned over to prosecuting officers of the government and tougher penalties may be imposed.

Now, the national recovery act and General Johnson's codes have gone a long way toward making the commission's guardianship of little business nil in its effect. The codes permit monopolies, or rather, the codes provide under the recovery act that the anti-trust laws shall not apply to those businesses signing the terms and conditions of the codes. It is seen, therefore, that the provisions of the federal trade commission act can hardly be enforced. That is to say, the commission cannot order a business to cease doing something that General Johnson's codes declare to be quite all right.

Thus far, the commission has kept reasonably quiet about the thing. It is true, however, that its members have thoughts about the situation that would make interesting reading if they were to be expressed openly. The commission has kicked about a few of the codes in a mild sort of way. Its criticisms have been tempered, it is said, by the fact that none knows exactly how to go about effecting a reconciliation of the diverse positions enacted into law in the recovery act and the federal trade commission act. Apparently there have been no instructions from the White House and so the commission is looked upon merely as drifting until such time as an administration policy is framed.

Few observers, and few important leaders as well, are willing to attempt a prediction as to the outcome. One reason is that NRA is under fire from several directions, and I believe it cannot be said to what extent the general principles of NRA are going to become imbedded in our industrial structure. Government officials are becoming more and more concerned about the growth of smuggling and bootlegging of liquor. A determined effort is being made to check the illicit trade, but the optimism expressed by officials charged with the responsibility does not ring very loud. Indeed, the talk I hear in a good many quarters is that there must be some revision downward of the import duties and the local and state taxes on liquor.

VALLEY COUNTY MUST INCREASE RELIEF EFFORTS

Supervisors Sign Agreements To Levy 1.93 Mills to Match Federal Relief Funds.

Valley county supervisors, at their meeting in August, will make a levy of one-half a mill for unemployment relief and 1.43 mills for poor relief, as result of an agreement entered into with Rowland Haynes, federal relief director for Nebraska, at a meeting held in O'Neill last Wednesday. All members of the Valley county board attended the meeting and ratified the agreement. A number of other northern and northeastern Nebraska counties also were represented.

At the meeting Relief Administrator Haynes told county officials that counties must do their share or else be dropped from federal relief rolls. He explained that government funds totaling nearly 10 million dollars were spent for relief work in Nebraska during the past year, as compared with 2 million dollars expended by counties.

The agreement county officials were asked to sign provides that the county make a levy of 1.93 mills or more for relief work, to match a similar or larger amount of federal relief money. All county and federal relief work is to be coordinated in each county under one head.

Since the CWA and FERA set-ups came into existence, Valley county has been doing very little relief work with its own funds. County money that has been expended has come from the general fund. Now, with a special levy for relief work about to go into effect, no more money for relief will be taken from the general fund.

County supervisors are hopeful that the 1935 levy will not have to be increased. By eliminating a bridge levy and cutting the general fund levy, it is thought that the special relief levy can be placed without increasing the total.

Another agreement made at the O'Neill meeting provides that Valley county must use one-fourth of its gas tax money for relief work. This does not mean that the money will be diverted into other funds, as work on county roads can be given to men on the relief roll and payment made with gasoline tax funds. The rate of pay for FERA workers was changed last week from 40c an hour to 30c per hour for both men and women.

Want Hardenbrook To Accept Filing For R. R. Commission

Petitions placing in nomination the name of Bert M. Hardenbrook for the state railway commission on the republican ticket were received early this week by Secretary of State Swanson at Lincoln, the state papers report. Petitions for Mr. Hardenbrook were received from Omaha, Alliance, Albion, Lincoln, Ord and other places, it is reported. Friends also paid the $10 filing fee required. Before Mr. Hardenbrook's name will go on the ballot he must accept the filing made on his behalf.

Questioned yesterday by a Quiz reporter, Mr. Hardenbrook said that he had not definitely made up his mind as to whether he will accept the filing. He is giving the matter careful consideration and will announce his decision in a few days.

A former president of the Nebraska County Attorneys' association and two years ago a candidate for attorney general, Mr. Hardenbrook is one of the best known lawyers in Nebraska. His work on behalf of the North Loup irrigation project further enhanced his reputation over the state and should he decide to make the race for the railway commission it is thought that he will have little difficulty in capturing the nomination.

—Dr. C. J. Miller operated Monday upon Mrs. Walter Foth at the Ord Hospital. Mrs. Foth is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Fues, Grand Island, who were here for several days. Mr. Fues says they have had several rains at the Island and that conditions are better than here.

Huge Alcohol Plant Nabbed at St. Libory

An alcohol distilling plant with an estimated capacity of between 500 and 800 gallons per day and sold by officers to be the second largest plant ever raided in Nebraska, was confiscated by federal, state and Grand Island officers Sunday afternoon. It was located on an untenanted farm 14 miles north of Grand Island.

Six vats with a capacity of 35,000 gallons of mash were part of the equipment. The plant must have cost $10,000 to install, the officers said. Three men giving their names as Jack Allen, Frank Dentice and Walter Oshlenschlager were arrested at the alcohol plant and seven more men later were taken into custody at Grand Island. Six of them had recently come there from Milwaukee.

The operators were just ready to start making the first batch of alcohol when officers swooped down upon them. The mash vats were full, fire had been started in two upright boilers and within a few hours the plant would have been manufacturing alcohol on a large scale.

Deputy State Sheriff Otto Duschus, well known in Ord, is given credit for uncovering the large still. The raiding squad Sunday was led by Federal Inspector Jesse Owens and State Sheriff Fred Benton.

Naomi Fuss Wed Sunday Evening

Popular Mira Valley Girl Becomes June Bride at Pretty Ceremony at Evangelical Church.

An attractive June wedding took place Sunday evening, June 10 at 7:30 p. m., at the St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church of Mira Valley when Miss Naomi Fuss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. R. Fuss, became the bride of Ervin Sohrweid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Sohrweid of Amherst.

To the strains of the Angelus Wedding March played by Mrs. Henry Rachuy, the bridal party took their places under an arch of wedding bells entwined with baby's breath. The altar was banked with ferns and roses and streamers. Other decorations were carried out in the color scheme of pink, green and white.

The bride was lovely in her gown of floor length white satin and wreath and veil. The bridal bouquet consisted of pink and white roses intermixed with fern and baby's breath.

The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Fuss, sister of the bride, who wore a long pink taffeta frock, and Miss Amanda Sohrweid, sister of the groom who wore a pale green flat crepe frock. They carried bouquets of pink roses and baby's breath.

The groom was attended by Oscar Hellwege and Melvin Hadwiger, the latter of Amherst.

Little Donna Beth Blum of York and Bernadine Hellwege who were flower girls wore pale pink and green frocks, respectively, trimmed with ruffles. They carried baskets of pale pink sweet peas. Kenneth Fuss, ring bearer, was dressed in a white suit.

Preceding the ceremony Misses Ella Lange and Julia Fuss sang "O Perfect Love." Rev. Wm. Bahr performed the ceremony using the double ring service.

Following the ceremony a reception for 80 guests was given at the home of the bride's parents. Pink, green and white decorations were used at the home also.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Fuss of Grand Island, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Sohrweid and family of Amherst, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Reah and family of Sumner, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blum and daughters of York, Lou Bremner and family of Scotia, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Frank and daughters and Miss Ella Holtz of Shelton.

The young couple left the first of this week for Amherst, Nebraska where they will make their home on a farm.

Government Paying 53c Per Bu. For Corn

Through County Agent C. C. Dale, chairman of the Valley county relief committee, the government has made arrangements for the purchase of corn and livestock feeds to be distributed locally. Corn will be bought from the Farmers Grain & Supply company and the initial purchase was 500 bushels at 53c per bushel. Other feeds will be bought from the Noll Seed company.

The drought relief committee has only about a half dozen applications for aid on file, Dale stated at noon Wednesday. The requirement that farmers reduce to ten units of livestock before they can be given aid is deterring applications, he says. No relief has been given yet but some corn and feed will be distributed today or tomorrow.

The drought situation grows more serious daily as rain is withheld. Cattle continue to move through Ord to sandhill pastures but such pastures are becoming overcrowded, it is claimed.

CAR THIEF SENT TO PENITENTIARY FOR FOUR YEARS

Beryl Woodworth Stole Car And Wrecked It; Was Caught At Bow, Sentenced Tuesday.

Beryl Woodworth, 22-year-old Arcadia man, was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary Tuesday morning when he pleaded guilty in district court here to a charge of robbery. Judge E. P. Clements was on the bench and George A. Munn was prosecutor.

Saturday night about 11:30 young Woodworth, who admitted that he had been drinking, stole a 1933 Chevrolet coach from Anton Sydzik, of Arcadia, whom he had employed to take him to a place in the country after more liquor.

The two young men started from town in Sydzik's car and a few miles from Arcadia Woodworth pulled a gun from his pocket, poked the end of it into Sydzik's ribs, and commanded him to get out, which Sydzik did. Woodworth then drove the car toward Ansley.

Driving at top speed, he hit loose gravel near Ansley and the car rolled over several times and was wrecked. Young Woodworth was cut and bruised but was not seriously hurt.

Attempts to "thumb" a ride to Ansley failed, he related in court, and he walked to that town and later caught a ride to Broken Bow.

There he decided to steal another car and west of the Broken Bow park found a parked car in which a couple were sitting. He stepped to the window, produced a gun and commanded the young people to get out. They did so but the girl started screaming and Woodworth, confronted with the necessity of shooting her or running, did the latter. About an hour later he was arrested by the Broken Bow marshal.

He still had the revolver, a .32 calibre that he purchased a few months ago when employed as a taxicab driver in Wichita, Kas. "I could have shot the marshal when he arrested me," he told Judge Clements. "He had a flashlight and I could see him plain. But I didn't shoot—I dropped the gun and let him arrest me."

This is not the first time the young man has been in trouble. In 1928, when he was only 14 years old, he stole a car near Arcadia and was later sentenced to the state industrial school at Kearney, where he was confined three years.

His mother passed away in 1924, he told the court Tuesday, and when his father remarried he could not get along with his step-mother and so left home.

After his release from the Nebraska Industrial school he went to Kansas and at Hutchinson stole another car in 1931, for which offense he drew a three-year term in the Kansas reformatory. He was released from this institution only ten months ago.

Asked by County Attorney Munn as to his motives in stealing the Sydzik car last week, he said that a gang in Wichita was threatening to kill him and that he learned Saturday that members of the gang were in Grand Island on their way to Arcadia. The gang suspected him of telling Kansas City police about their participation in a merchandise robbery and hence sought revenge. He was in fear of his life and sought to leave this part of the country before the gangsters found him, he told Judge Clements.

All the above story was related by Woodworth under questioning by County Attorney Munn. Asked by the prosecutor whether he had anything to say in his own behalf he answered "no," after which Judge Clements told him to stand and sentenced him to serve four years in the state penitentiary at Lincoln at hard labor and to pay costs of the action.

Sheriff George Round took him to Lincoln Tuesday.

Bandits Steal Car, Then Rob Filling Station

Heavily Armed Trio Get Away In Ford V-8 After Looting North Lopp Station.

Three young men, all heavily armed, held up the Texaco filling station in North Lopp about 1:00 p. m. Wednesday, looting the cash register of $20 and robbing the station attendant, Pat Stewart, and three young men who were loitering about the station.

The bandits were driving a Ford V-8 believed to have been stolen from the streets of Lopp City Wednesday morning. The men were said to be about 25 or 26 years old and were well dressed.

They drove into North Lopp shortly before 1 o'clock and were seen driving slowly about the streets for a few minutes. They then entered the Texaco driveway and ordered ten gallons of gas and a quart of oil, which the attendant supplied. Two of the men got out but the driver remained behind the wheel.

As soon as the car was filled with gas all three produced revolvers and ordered Stewart and the three boys who were present to go into the station, inside, one man looted the cash register, taking about $20, while the other forced Stewart, Boyd Sheldon, Pat Patterson and Dwain Schultz to produce what cash they had in their pockets. A wrist watch also was stolen from young Sheldon. All four young men were then locked in the back room of the station.

The bandits then entered their car and fled at high speed on Highway 11 toward Ord, but it is thought they turned east and crossed the river.

Sheriff Round had been notified of the car theft at Lopp City and was out after the car thieves when the robbery occurred. Deputy Sheriff Kepp started for North Lopp immediately upon receiving word of the hold-up and the two officers started a search for the bandits. Apparently they made good their escape.

The Texaco station at North Lopp is managed by Arthur Collins, who was at home for his noon meal when the hold-up took place.

PETERSON TRUCK HI-JACKED, LOSS WILL REACH $1200

Werber Held Up and Truck Looted Wednesday Eve; No Insurance on Merchandise.

The first instance in Nebraska of a truck loaded with merchandise being hi-jacked occurred near Schuyler last Wednesday evening, when a truck driven by Lloyd Werber, Ord, and owned by K. W. Peterson, Burwell, was hi-jacked by four men. The loss will be approximately $1,200 with no insurance, as insurance cannot be carried on goods in transit.

Werber had been to Omaha and was returning with a load of groceries and drygoods consigned to Ord and Burwell merchants. Near Schuyler he was overtaken by a car containing four men, who ordered him at gun point to stop. Two of the men forced Werber into their car and others drove the truck to some unknown spot and unloaded its contents. It was later located empty near Kenard, west of Schuyler. A few windmill supplies consigned to Burwell were not stolen.

Acting upon orders from Owner Peterson, Werber returned to Omaha Thursday morning and refilled his orders, reaching Ord late that night.

Mr. Peterson left for Schuyler at once and got police officers busy on the case. It is reported that some of the groceries have been located in Schuyler and arrests are momentarily expected in the case.

—Miss Mabelle Huff came from Omaha Saturday bringing Danny Huff home. He had been spending a couple of weeks with his grandparents in Omaha.

CORN-HOG CHIEFS PROTEST ORDERS OF STATE BOARD

21 Counties Meet At Grand Island Monday, Say Further Cut Is Unfair to Farmers.

Representatives of corn-hog allotment committees in twenty-one central Nebraska counties met at the court house in Grand Island Monday to protest further corn and hog reductions as ordered by the state committee. About 70 men were present, including M. J. Cushing and C. C. Dale, of Ord. The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that the state board of review accept as final the figures submitted and certified to by the various county allotment committees upon completion of this final check."

It was voted to send copies to the board of review and to the Washington, also to county committees not represented at the meeting Monday.

A storm of protest developed at the meeting against the state board of review's claim that farmers in Nebraska overstated the number of hogs sold and the amount of corn produced and ordered a check of all data and a further reduction, running from 12 to 15 per cent on hogs and from 6 to 8 per cent on corn acreage.

In Valley county the state board ordered that corn acreage be reduced from 94,346 to 87,256 and that contract figures on hogs be cut from 62,225 to 51,460. In other central Nebraska counties similar reductions were ordered.

It was alleged at the Grand Island meeting that these reductions, if made, will cost Nebraska farmers hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Committeemen alleged that they had checked and rechecked their figures several times and knew them to be correct. They further pointed out that each county was in position to know exactly its corn and hog production figures and that the government's figures were erroneous and misleading.

Pending action on this joint protest, the Valley county allotment committee is rechecking contracts but yesterday expressed despair of reducing to the extent demanded by the state board of review without resorting to a blanket reduction on all contracts.

Hugo Show Coming, Will It Rain Now?

Popular Hugo Players Usually Bring Rain Is Claim; Will Be Here Next Week.

They say it always rains when Harry Hugo's tent show comes to Ord.

Harry Hugo is coming to Ord, for one week starting Monday, June 18, and will pitch his tent on the same lot he has used on former visits, and rain has always come during his stay in Ord.

The Hugo players always receive a warm welcome in Ord and if rain comes with them the show will receive an ovation.

Harry has selected a very funny comedy drama of home life for Monday night entitled "Ever Lovin' Dudley," this comedy being one long roar of laughter and affords each member of the company an opportunity to mix up in the tangle of comedy situations, the principal comedy role being played by the inimitable comedian, Harry Hugo in person.

Nearly all of the old favorites of last season are with Harry this season along with several new faces. Harry and his Famous Hugo Players are appearing at Burwell this week. He has added new features, more music, and new singing and dancing specialties will be offered between the acts each evening.

During this engagement, Harry will as usual, offer the local boys and girls an opportunity to display their talent as singers, dancers and mimics.

The Hugos always bring a good comedy show, and it is always well patronized. This year they are showing a practically new line of plays and specialties. They come this year sponsored by the business men of Ord who are boosting for and giving merchant's tickets for the entertainment. It is an opportunity to see a good show at a minimum expense.

—Z. C. B. J. held their regular meeting Sunday with about 25 members in attendance. Madams Joe Psota, Rudolph Kerchal, Lewis Mazac, John Urban and V. J. Dobrovsky were the serving committee.

—Gould Flagg took his aunt, E. Bailey, to Burwell Tuesday. She lately arrived in Ord from California where she had spent several months. Mrs. Bailey will spend the summer at her home in Burwell.

Frank M. Blaha Is Laid To Rest

Worthy Citizen Passed June 6th After Long Illness; A Large Family Left To Mourn.

A fine and worthy citizen of Ord was laid to rest last Saturday, June 9, when funeral services were held for Frank M. Blaha, sr., 67, who passed away June 6 after an illness of about 1-2 years with heart trouble, the last four weeks of which he was bedfast. The Catholic church was the scene of the last rites and Mr. Blaha was laid to rest in St. Mary's cemetery.

Born January 19, 1867 in Bostok, Moravia, the son of Mike and Theresa Blaha, Frank M. Blaha came to the United States with them in 1875. The family home was located at St. Paul, Neb., and there he was married to Kathryn Papousek. To them were born six children. One son, Martin, died in 1920 and those left to mourn are Louis J., of Sidney; Frank, of Burwell; Mrs. Frank Lukesh, William F. and John J., of Ord. Also surviving are three brothers and four sisters. They are: Jake and Joe, of St. Paul; Charles Blaha, Mrs. Albert Horsk and Mrs. Vincent Scharck, Ord; Mrs. Mousel and Mrs. John Ambrose, St. Paul.

The deceased followed the occupation of farming until the death of his wife at Warsaw, Neb., in 1900, after which he moved to Gardner, Ia., and became a carpenter. Two years later he returned to his farm in Howard county and on March 1, 1908, moved to a farm in Valley county, which he occupied until 1921, when he established his home in Ord. This city was his home until his death.

In 1926 Mr. Blaha was married to Mrs. Louise Volek, a widow with one daughter, Mrs. Ed McCall. When the latter passed away about a year ago her children were brought to Ord and were cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Blaha until the death of the former last week.

Mr. Blaha was known in every community where he ever lived as a kind and generous father and husband and as a good neighbor. Always a hard worker when his health permitted, his life was an admirable one in every respect.

Almost all his relatives came to Ord to pay their last respects to the deceased at the obsequies Saturday. Pallbearers were all old friends and neighbors and included Novosad, Louis Penas, sr., Frank Kokes, sr., John Kokes, sr., Vaclav Kruml and W. E. Gruber.

VALLEY'S CHANCE FOR IRRIGATION IS ENCOURAGING

Dunnire Reports Approval Likely This Week But Project May Be Cut Down Slightly.

Though it is probable that cost of the North Loup power and irrigation project will be cut from $2,905,000 to $2,600,000, it is very likely that the PWA will approve the project this week, is the encouraging report received Monday evening by telephone from Engineer E. H. Dunnire, who is representing the district in Washington. The situation looks more encouraging now than it has at any time during the prolonged negotiations with PWA heads, Dunnire reports.

Elimination of one power unit from each of the project's three plants and elimination also of the emergency plant west of Ord have been tentatively decided upon, which will result in a saving of approximately $300,000.

Mr. Dunnire has for several days been working with Major C. R. Olberg and Verne L. Havens, representatives of the Engineering and Finance divisions of the PWA and no less than 12 different set-ups were worked out. These have been submitted to Mr. MacDonough, head of the PWA, and MacDonough has tentatively approved a set-up to cost $2,600,000. It must still be approved by the Finance division but since Mr. Havens helped make the set-up it is believed that Finance division approval will be forthcoming.

Water for irrigation will be available to farmers at a cost of $3.00 per acre, which includes all expense of ditch maintenance. It is planned to sell water for 32,000 acres, or about 85 per cent of the irrigable land in the valley. It will be necessary to sell about 7,000,000 kilowatt hours of electric energy annually at an average price of 1 cent, according to the set-up that is most favored. The PWA, it is thought, will allow 35 years for amortization of the loan.

Cutting down the potential electric development was insisted upon by PWA officers, it is learned, because they do not want the North Loup district competing outside of the valley with the Sutherland and Columbus projects, funds for which have already been appropriated. As planned at present, the project will produce 10,000,000 kilowatt hours per year, which is greatly in excess of the entire North Loup valley's present needs. As the valley develops and demand for electricity grows the generating units now eliminated from the three power plants can be replaced and production stepped up to 30,000,000 kilowatt hours if there is demand for this much juice.

President Hardenbrook, Secretary Barta and other officers of the district feel very hopeful at present. The battle for approval has been a prolonged one and there have been many setbacks and disappointments. There may be more of these yet, but present it looks like the project is on the verge of final approval.

Washington.—Congress did a ... of wrestling, in its closing hour ... with new ...

Debate on the housing bill, therefore, centered attention on one phase of the whole New Deal program that has caused concern in the back of many heads. Up to this time, however, apparently few of the legislators had paused to think of the trend of the course upon which the administration had embarked.

I noted in the committee hearings in the house that a number of the representatives exhibited a fear of too much new debt. Such stolid men as Luce of Massachusetts, Busby of Mississippi, and Hollister of Ohio, and some who are inclined to the inflationary side, like Goldsborough of Maryland, questioned whether the proposal was sound. Mr. Luce, for example, called attention to the old-time theory about debts, and the horror in which debt used to be held.

But, after all, there are the debts, debts on top of debts. They must either be repaid or repudiated. If they are repaid, the borrowers must pay them out of future earnings.

My own feeling coincides with the latter view. If the New Deal program for economic planning, for adjusting production to consumption, for controlling crop planting and distribution, and the other items that enter into the plan fail to operate according to the theories upon which they are based, there can be no doubt of the result. It will be just too bad. There will be millions of persons more debt ridden than now, and there will be no way out. The government will be holding the bag.

On this question of debt, there that troublesome international phase. The United States loaned something like eleven billion dollars to foreign governments to aid in prosecution of the World War against Germany. For a long time after the money was loaned, the United States got nothing at all. In the meanwhile, there was a terrific bombardment of propaganda from the borrowing nations and from some of the misguided folks in our own country calling for absolute cancellation. But cancellation could not win. It was impossible. So there followed a lot of negotiations in which commissions from foreign governments came here and conferred at length with our debt funding commission.

Settlements were eventually worked out. The debts were funded. That is, the debtor nations were given a long time in which to pay. They were given enormous concessions by our debt commission in order to get some agreement for repayment of the various loans. I know whereof I speak, regarding those concessions because it happens that I am the only newspaper correspondent in Washington who reported every one of the debt conferences, and I say unequivocally that those funding settlements represented on the average a reduction of more than one-third in the total amount which the debtors contracted originally to pay.

Now, again we are in the midst of new efforts to get something done in the way of repayment. The foreign nations are not going to pay if it can be avoided. They put up the very natural argument that they obtain with every one who is in debt and who has been hit on the chin by depression conditions. They can not raise the money, so they say. To avoid defaults, some of the foreign nations made what they called token payments a year ago at this time. Some of them have offered token payments again. But token payments amount to about the same thing as when your friend eats the apple and hands you the core. It was a nice apple to begin with, and the funding settlements were nice settlements when they were signed.

Frankly, I suspect that the United States is never going to get more than about 10 per cent of the total now due. There will be plenty of arguments, propositions and counter propositions, negotiations and hauling and filling, and after awhile some of the foreign governments will have succeeded in creating enough public sentiment among their home people to cause a national action of the same character as that taken by France a year ago.

The conditions as regards the foreign debts owing the United States, I am afraid, will be paralleled right here at home by individual and corporation and bank debts owing the federal government. Many borrowers will run into hard luck, as they always have done, and they will appeal to the politicians to save them.

When those debts become a political issue, it will be an issue too strong for politicians to withstand. They will arise on the floors of congress and weep about the plight of "those poor people."

The special senate committee is getting under way with its inquiry into the various industries that manufacture materials for war, and it appears now that it is headed into an investigation that will disclose plenty of things that will cause a stink to arise when the investigators have laid their findings before the committee headed by Senator Bye of North Dakota. I spent a couple of hours the other day with one of the wheelhorses commanding the investigating force and it was certainly his opinion that there are things awaiting revelation that will cause surprise.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—On her way to a position in Louisiana Academy, Janet Mercer, young professor of English literature and rhetoric, after receiving a letter from Gordon Haskell, proprietor of the Academy, meets on the train a young man whom she learns is Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy as professor of mathematics and chemistry. They reach Blaine, railroad station nearest to the Academy, and there meet Mrs. Denver, engaged as matron of the Academy. At the school the group is attracted by an air of mystery pervading the lonely place. Haskell welcomes them. Wilton Payne, teacher of psychology, completes the faculty.

CHAPTER II.—Vaguely disturbed, and apprehensive, Janet watches, from her window, a meeting between Haskell and a man of unexpressed appearance, but who evidently is high in Haskell's confidence. Going down to the school-room she finds a group which the teachers had supposed were scholars studying, are really highly artistic wax figures. Mystified, she informs Mrs. Denver. Next day Haskell explains the somewhat unusual circumstances connected with the conduct of the Academy. The professors take up their duties. Among Janet's pupils is Berenice Bracebridge, daughter of the late owner of the Academy, and she is attracted by her. Haskell, under her father's will, is Berenice's guardian.

He saw these names as he entered. The next moment he started violently. The four wax figures in the fading light were so real that he imagined for a moment that he had blundered into an actual study hour. Then their preternatural stillness told him that he had found the hiding place of the dummies. Janet had been quite right—they were beautifully done—the flesh tint quite natural, the grave, sweet, brooding faces of the little girls as absorbed as if some lesson of a long-ago spring had continued over the years an eternal problem. Their soft, abundant golden hair moved a little in the draught which drew in from the half-opened door. He put a finger against one curl, then quickly raised it; as if a thrill of life had been communicated. Arthur watched each figure in turn as if a danger existed, that to cease to look at one of them was to incur a harm from the rest. He jumped! Had one moved! "But I'm a fool," he commented. "The first time in my life I ever had nerves."

The golden hair on one of the figures stirred softly in the draught. He bent to look at the eyes, almost expecting to see the lashes quiver; then glanced up, and this time a kind of paralysis kept him from showing the emotion he felt. In the doorway stood an immensely tall man. Two piercing eyes regarded him from a putty-pale face. The man made no sound, but after a prolonged scrutiny turned and went down the passageway.

Again he heard steps in the passage, but they were light, like those of a woman. Berenice appeared in the doorway.

"Balder told me you were looking at the figures. I came to tell you it is not the best thing to do!" she said in her gentle voice, her beautiful eyes regarding him gravely.

"I am sorry if I have done anything out of the way or anything to hurt you, Miss Bracebridge. I admit I yielded to my curiosity."

"It doesn't hurt me," she answered. "But my guardian becomes very much disturbed if people look at the figures."

"Did he—have these figures made?"

"Oh, no! But he will tell you himself."

"I am glad you cautioned me about those figures—"

"Oh, I like you all—I want you to stay!"

"I am glad of that. I hope you will know Miss Mercer better. She is very lovely."

"I quite agree with you. They have not always been lovely."

"You mean the teachers—governesses?"

"Yes, and usually when they found out about these figures they went away. They—they were afraid of them."

"No servant will go down the corridor when they are kept after dark." She paused; then said: "Tell me, did you know Mr. Payne before you came here?"

"No."

"He has eyes that look straight through one."

"I am sure he is a good psychologist."

"I am sure of it, too. When I know him better I shall ask him many questions."

"May I ask you one?"

"Certainly."

"Why were you on the dangerous cliff path this afternoon? It was comparatively safe where we were—there's a bank; but you had nothing but air between you and that frightful whirl. I was afraid you would venture down to the little platform—the little stone ledge overhanging the whirl."

She shivered. "Oh, no; they fell from there!"

"Poor children! Were there no witnesses?"

"Yes—an old farmer coming up on the other side to fell a tree—he heard them shout and saw them just as they plunged in, their arms raised trying desperately to regain their balance. Then they all went down. Father was in such agony of mind because he had detained Mr. Haskell from going along with them to curb their adventurous spirits; he wanted Mr. Haskell to take down dictation, and they were shut up in the library all afternoon. Then came a knock on the door. It was Balder to say that while he was working in the vegetable garden a farmer, white as death, had rowed across the lake in the twilight to tell of the accident. He cried like a child, could only cry out for a while: "Doctor Jethrol! My God! I could not help them. I was on the other side."

"The farmer's name?"

"Jerry Moore. He lives about a mile from here, all alone; his people all have died."

"He's trustworthy?"

"Jerry? Oh, yes! Yes. And he adored my brothers and sisters. They were so gay and friendly with everyone."

"Was there ice forming at the time? Could they have slipped on that?"

"It was too early for ice. No, Isabel went too near, lost her balance, I suppose, fell, and dragged the others down."

"Then—the figures—were made—"

"Ah, please! He will tell you about these."

Her eyes softened as she looked at them; and he thought of a day when she would be much older than the ages represented by these mannequins; and down the long avenue of time she would still perhaps see her lost brothers and sisters in their eternal adolescence; and keep them in a playground of memory from which they could never emerge adult and weary.

"Shall I shut the door?"

"Yes; you see, there's a small circle of glass let into it—so Mr. Haskell can look in—and see that they are right—and in their places."

"But why look in—why have them around at all?"

"It was a clause in father's will," she said. "It needn't be—after I am twenty-one. Oh, Mr. Haskell will tell you."

They shut the door quietly as if not to disturb those waxen scholars, and down the corridor they went. At the foot of the staircase leading to the main hall she left him.

Arthur, full of his story, sought out Wilton. He ran him down at last in the library, examining some books.

"Hello, old fellow!"

"Hello, boy! Well, what have you found out? I can tell by your manner that you have discovered something."

"I've been talking to Berenice."

Wilton looked up jealously. "Where did you see her?"

Arthur explained. He saw that Berenice's desire to ask Wilton questions gave the latter deep satisfaction. "I don't wonder she's nervous," he commented. "Perhaps Haskell will explain everything satisfactorily this evening. He doesn't seem to have nerves."

"Oh, yes, he has! He's afraid of those wax figures."

"I should think he would be. All ways to me—and I'm rather a healthy specimen—there's something stealthy and idiotic about a wax figure—at once helpless and menacing. I don't blame him—but what I am curious to know is, why such properties have to be kept around when it would be so easy to dispose of them? Meanwhile I've made a discovery. On that shelf to the left under the—"

Yes, We Get No Money
Einstein Says Naughty
Two Pigeons, Hatching
Silver Limp's Back

Britain, owing to the United States $4,713,000,000, has decided that the best plan for this spring's installment is to pay nothing at all. They would have gladly handed in a "token," something for Uncle Sam to play with, perhaps a few silver dollars, but President Roosevelt had said: "Pay the amount due this spring, or consider yourselves in default."

The British do not like to be in default. Refusing to pay what they owe this nation would justify other nations in refusing to pay them. On the other hand, the British feel that, if they buy our dollars to pay us, they might increase the value of the dollar and diminish that of the pound.

The upshot is that our British friends decide to pay nothing, explaining with words well chosen that we ought to be grateful that Britain did not allow Germany to destroy the United States in the big war. And, anyhow, it is all our fault.

The super-learned Doctor Einstein, of relativity fame, warns the United States that "America is not innocent of Europe's misery," and in demanding payment of her debt becomes "an accomplice in the ruin of political morality and the cultivation of a revenge spirit encouraged by despair." So says an Associated Press dispatch from Paris.

It should not annoy Professor Einstein to be told that the people of the United States, delighted to receive and provide him with congenial employment when Germany put him out, feel able to form their own opinions concerning the debts. Opinions of one, however wise in mathematics, who will take no part in paying the debt and bought none of the "Liberty bonds" when the debts were contracted, do not interest the American taxpayer.

If the highly esteemed Doctor Einstein will read the foolish book that his greater predecessor, Newton, wrote, elucidating the Apocalypse, he will learn that it is possible for a scientist to make mistakes when he wanders away from science. There is no demand for a fourth dimension in international honesty.

At Morrison, Ill., two pigeons take turns trying to hatch a duck egg left in an open lane. The pigeons find it hard to cover the entire egg, but do their best, and the egg may be hatched. Farmers watch and wonder what the pigeons will do with their child after they have hatched the duckling, and what they will think when it takes to the water.

At Washington there is mamma government that may be even more surprised than those pigeons as it watches the unfolding careers of social and economic "ducklings" that it is now hatching.

We are going on a partial, limping semi-silver basis, which means having back of our money $25 worth of silver, at the nominal imaginary rate of $1.29 per ounce, for every $100 worth of gold.

The government must purchase some thirteen or fourteen hundred million ounces of silver, that will cost, with silver prices probably rising, between seven hundred and one thousand million dollars.

Interesting question: How will the government pay for this new silver? Will it pay with more interest-bearing bonds, on the assumption that the silver is really worth nothing? Or will the government issue nice new green money, saying, "There is good silver back of this?" How long is the most dangerous kind of "inflation" through interest-bearing bonds going to continue?

The British government orders Lloyd's to cease writing insurance on the life of President Roosevelt. A special list of rates had been prepared for those wishing to insure the President's life, 5 per cent for insurance against assassination or accident, 7 1/2 per cent against death from ordinary causes, 12 1/2 per cent against the President's being incapacitated.

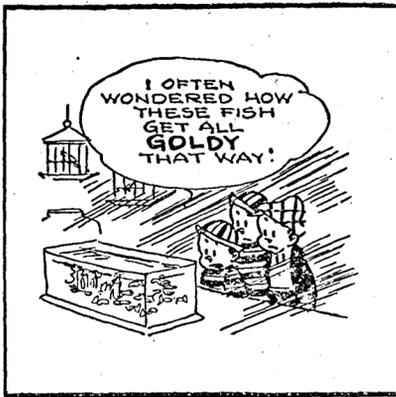

By special request, and wisely, this system of gambling on the President's life has been discontinued.

The most expensive thing in the world is carelessness. In New York state alone last year accidents to workers cost one hundred million dollars. Twenty-five million dollars were paid in compensation. The entire loss of $100,000,000 in the long run is paid by the public.

The important thing is the loss to workers and their physical suffering. There is no remedy, except greater care on the part of workers, who become careless; men that handle dynamite, for instance, often throwing the sticks about as they would throw sticks of wood.

Bill Moses grew so fast that the top of his head pushed right up through his hair.

The closer we get to primary the more old cars will run with one light or no light, front or rear. Why? Your guess is as good as mine.

And that reminds me, I wonder how hard up we will have to be before we stop buying gas to joy ride with? The fact is, we don't know yet, what hard times are. But we will.

It would have been better, even in the face of a dry year when a garden is mighty hard to raise, had a lot of fellows devoted a part of their time to trying to raise a garden, instead of devoting all their time to raising hell.

Sunday a mighty fine young man visited his parents and friends in Ord and then left for Pittsburg where he will spend a year in practical work, completing his education. He graduated from the Ord schools with honors; he has completed the state university course and a course for physicians and surgeons, taking seven years for the work.

Another year doing interne work in one of the largest hospitals in the U. S. makes 8 years and 4 years in the Ord High makes a total of 12 years devoted to getting an education to fit him for his life work. I refer to John Round, son of Sheriff and Mrs. Round. John was a poor boy and has had to work hard to get through. He has not been above washing dishes, sweeping and scrubbing, mowing lawns, chopping wood, anything to earn money to keep in school.

William F. Porter, democratic candidate for governor, was called at his office Saturday. He recalled that he was active in the legislature in the early days of populum. I take it that if elected he will be a governor of the progressive type. I noticed that his printing was done by a union shop. There are not many such in the interior of Nebraska and the things that the union stands for are mostly against the best interests of the people of central and western Nebraska.

Scottsbluff county has now had the congressman for this district for 12 years. Don't you think it is about time that some other part of this great district had the congressman? Yet Scottsbluff is asking that another man from that county be named to the place.

If the president is able to work out his ideas for old age pensions, sickness benefits and unemployment insurance for everyone, I am for him, for I am getting close to the time and age when I will be able to get in on all of them. Of course when everyone who is sick gets paid, everyone out of work gets paid and everyone past 60 gets old age insurance, someone is going to have to provide the money, but what do we care.

There was a time when I was a boy and after I was old enough to go to dances, when the Leggett family didn't even have a top buggy, which was the fine vehicle in those days. We did have what was called a light spring wagon. It was lighter than a regular farm wagon and had coil springs under the box on top of the bolsters and we used regular spring seats on the box, which was like any wagon box only lower. And that was what we used to go to dances in and I don't know but what we had just as good a time as the young folks do nowadays, though it did take longer to get to the dance, we didn't go as far and if I got home in time to feed the work horses before breakfast, I thought I was doing all right and I went back to the field to work without any sleep. And if we could all go back to that mode of travel now, we would live for a whole lot less. But it would put a lot of auto makers, garage mechanics and filling station attendants out of business.

But of course it is idle to talk of such things. We cannot go backward; we must progress, if what we are doing is really progress.

Ord has been most fortunate in recent years, in hiring city managers, in getting men who were not afraid to work. I noticed George Allen the other day, when they were going to repair the pavement, he didn't say, "You boys go and do it," but he said "Come on boys, we will do it," and then he grabbed a bar and helped do the hard work. If it was cement to move he was not afraid to grab a shovel and help move it. And Bill Walters was that way too. Julian Pulsifer used to say, about the City Way days, that there were not trees enough for the officers, let alone the privates finding one to get behind. What I mean to say, is that the boss should not be afraid to set a good example for the men.

I think I have remarked before that a family that can't dig up 50c or a dollar to pay on his subscription, is not likely to be able to dig up several dollars when it gets that far behind. My experience, even in good times, is that the loss is heavy, among subscribers who get several years behind on their subscriptions. So if your paper doesn't come and you know you are back you know the reason. It is hard work to get enough money in to pay expenses. It is the same for you as it is for me, but when I am willing to let you pay a part of a year at a time, you should try to send or bring some to apply on your subscription if it is back.

If it would rain enough the farmers of Valley county would take a chance without getting any money from Washington. Looks like they would never get it anyhow.

Terry Carpenter from this district and democratic candidate for governor this year, says he believes in municipal ownership and that the power trust can go to hell. I'll bet the power trust won't contribute to his campaign fund.

The Standard Oil company has been running a picture of its popular local manager in its ads for several weeks and I told the boys in the back office to be sure and save the cut and then, if Lloyd ever gets caught kidnapping or robbing a bank, we will have it to use in connection with the story.

Under the caption "Credit Too Good" Ase Wood of the Gering Courier prints the following: "Uncle Sam's credit is still good. Subscriptions were called for recently for $800,000,000 in 3 per cent bonds, and now the announcement made that they were oversubscribed many times, in fact seven billions were offered on the same basis. That is reassuring in that it shows we are as a nation regarded as perfectly solvent even by the money barons, and that faith in the perpetuity of the country remains unimpaired."

There is another side to it, however, which doesn't set so well. On top of the huge expenditures we are making day after day and the vast obligations the nation is piling up, that matter of interest is a needless addition. Little indication exists that the administration is planning the inflation which we believe a huge majority of the people think should come. We cannot see why much if not all the outgo could not be paid in governmental scrip, and save the interest. If this same money, so issued, was made good for public as well as private debts we would at least save the interest. The money would return to the treasury in payment of the municipal drains the public is paying—one hand would wash the other, and the big banking interests wouldn't have the needless profit, besides all which these bonds are tax free, another injustice to the ordinary citizen taxpayer."

Now that is just what I have been preaching for years, but how in thunder can an Ogdan Mills, Hoover, Bob Simmons standpatter like Ase Wood say it and not get churched by the republican party?

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Ed Holloway enjoyed having a number of relatives for dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Charley Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. Fern Johnston and little daughter, and Charley Erickson were in from the country, and other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gunnerson and son of Aurora and Mr. and Mrs. Jean Romans.

Something DIFFERENT

For some reason it is as fascinating to a crowd of awestruck citizens to watch a truckload of cement neatly dumped into the top of the big concrete mixer as it is used to be to those citizens to see Mama put a cake together when they were little fellows begging to lick the dish. A big crowd, men, children and a few housewives, watched the methodical maneuvers of the machinery and the paving gang as it proceeded to pour pavement from one end of the L street section to the other.

It was spellbinding, to see that work. But what impressed me most about it was that there were that many people in Ord who could afford not to be at work at something.

The former Miss Gertrude Colliplriest is an ambitious little lady. After teaching for years in her chosen field of kindergarten, Gertrude recently was married to a Lincoln young man and will make her home there.

Ord friends have heard she intends to go on with her university studies in Lincoln, and not content merely with being a bride and housewife and graduate, then hopes to open a pre-school age nursery for tiny children in Lincoln.

Della Benson is another girl to be admired. She has secured her university degree after years of hard work and has held down as many as three jobs at a time to do it.

Della is a girl who is full of pride, but hers was not a false pride, and Della was willing to do any honest work that would help her on her way.

She probably never would have achieved such painfully acquired education if she had not had, among other qualities, a great dissatisfaction with herself and her life, a desire to struggle for something better.

Henry Olson, young man who caused several feminine hearts of Ord to flutter and flutter, when he was employed here several years ago, is back in Ord. But this time he comes fully equipped with a brand new bride, blond and attractive, it is reported.

Mrs. Olaf Olsson is always doing something that makes news. No, she didn't bite a dog, but she did wrestle with two fighting dogs and stop what started to be a battle to the death. Not so very big, Joyce jumped in and tried to make a dog peace all by herself, while dozens of big husky paying workers did nothing more than eye the battle.

And it is rapidly getting to the point where it is no longer news when Mrs. Alice Vincent has another great-grandchild!

Some enterprising little Valley county miss should write and get acquainted with Warren Henry, 13, of Prairie Grove, Ark., Route 3. I found his name and address on the bottom of a box of strawberries, together with the notation, "high, wide and handsome". Also the crack: "only pretty girls need apply."

News, Note and Comment

Conklin and Roosevelt. The eyes of Nebraskans and of the nation to a lesser extent are being turned to the developments in the silly case of our democratic land commissioner Conklin. He is accused of perjury and graft in extracting $10 contributions monthly from his janitors in our $10,000,000 capitol building. Conklin's doings were as rotten as they were imbecile and I hope that the guilty will be punished. But his is a trivial affair after all when compared to the doings of one Franklin D. Roosevelt at Washington. During twelve years Coolidge and Hoover, by using the ordinary income of the government, reduced our Wilson war debt from twenty-six billions to fourteen billions, about one billion dollars a year. Roosevelt has been president for only about fifteen months and dictator for about the same length of time. In that brief space of time he has mercilessly increased our tax burdens and has INCREASED our national debt to thirty-one billions—an increase of 17 billions in 15 months, more than a billion dollars a month! Conklin's dinky little crookedness added a few $10 bills to the democratic campaign fund, but what has the New Deal done to you? Seventeen billion national debt increase means a debt of $136 on every man, woman and child in America—a debt that can't be paid in five generations. But you and your posterity must pay it. You may sometimes escape state and local taxes, but you can't escape a federal tax unless you go naked and hungry. The government taxes everything you eat and wear, and indirectly taxes the water you drink and the air you breathe.

This is a pretty gloomy picture, but it is not the whole picture. Roosevelt has more than two and a half years to go on with his work of destruction.

Conklin? Heck! What does Conklin amount to? Will my friend Leggett, the republican, who helped elect Roosevelt, please put this in his pipe and smoke it?

Now And Forty Years Ago. Old timers are being now frequently asked as to how the years 1894 and 1934 compare as to crop conditions. The comparison is naturally made with 1894, for that year is the nearest a famine year of which a record has been kept.

As to spring rains 1894 beat us by about 1 1/2 inches, the precipitation so far this year up to June 1 being 1.82 while 3.11 inches of rain fell before June 1, 1894. This gave the crops a chance to sprout well 40 years ago while most crops did not get a start this spring.

The condition of the soil in both years was bad as the seasons opened. The previous falls were very dry in both cases. The last good rains in 1894 and 1933 were in July followed by a very dry fall in each case. The precipitation for the last 5 months of '94 was 3.83 and last fall it was 5.63. Last winter was very mild and open so that the winter evaporation may have been more than 40 years ago, and the temperature this spring has been high, which of course makes it worse for us this season so far.

The comparison of crop conditions up to now favors 1894, but that year had August hot winds which killed all unirrigated crops and even ruined the bark of the trees, which calamity we may still hope to escape this year.

A great lot of cement crossings were torn out on L street when that street was graded for the new paving. These blocks are now littering the streets adjacent L street. What will be done with them? Don't know. But I know what some of them would be used for if I were boss. They would be dumped to that deep, deserted ditch which runs along the west side of 20th street. This ditch is not only dangerous but it is unlawful, being put there to carry flood water out of its natural course. It is doubly dangerous because it is a half width street. Some serious damage will result from the presence of this ditch some day and there will be no escape for the city paying damage. The need of the ditch is no longer extant for the flood-water sewer on L street will carry the water away. This is not the only nuisance that Ord is maintaining, but it is one that can be corrected easily, and the need for its existence is now past.

Last Friday after watching one rain cloud come up and vanish in thin air and while waiting for some other like phenomenon to be enacted, I appointed myself a committee of one to look over the paving operations in the south-east part of town and the new highway which is to be committed to N. J. Peterson's home place by cutting off its left ear. I scrambled down into the canyon where a great cement culvert has been erected and stopped to admire the excellence of the work on this job and also the skill the supervisors displayed in selecting the most expensive place to be found. Before ascending the hill on the other side I asked myself why the road was to be cut out of the hill when a slight swing to the north would save a lot of hill-carving. My report on this is that, having located the new culvert in the deepest place in the canyon, the surveyors had to take in the hill to get enough dirt to make the monstrous fill. Well, I climbed the hill and got around to the place where the new section of the highway is to leave the old section. At that point the new section is to make a grand curve to the northwest. It did not occur to the engineers that this curve could have been commenced on the knoll some twenty yards to the east of the Peterson place and so miss the Peterson place altogether. This would have saved the state $2,750 it will have to pay Peterson as a not in the least have marred the beauty of the road. I made this suggestion to one of the surveyors on the job some time ago, and received the high-bait reply that I was all wet because I am not a surveyor and am ignorant of the technique of the profession, or words to that effect, much of which I must admit to be true. But I am not writing this for the benefit of engineering highbrows nor for the 90-mille-per-hour speedsters who are killing more travelers every year than the world war cost us. I am thinking of the taxpayer and the common people who feel that in building public works some consideration should be shown the adjacent property owners, and the scars that are left after the public work is done.

It is generally admitted, I think, that the appraisers awarded Mr. Peterson a generous damage in making the appraisal. But possibly the appraisers figured that if an almighty state seeks to do a citizen wanton and unnecessary damage, it ought to pay for its fun.

One of Claude Romans' philosophies is that about every 19 years our nation is visited by adverse meteoric conditions usually resulting in drought and short crops and that as a result of this we suffer economic disasters at similar intervals. Everyone knows what political upheavals are pretty sure to follow in the wake of these things. A most noted example of all this is the early nineties, when the crop shortage, panics and hard times gave birth to the populist party in the middle west. Such political upheavals are sure to bring to the surface a lot of human dregs, just like agitating a mud puddle. One of the previous upsurges of forty years ago was W. E. Porter, who was elected by the populists to the state legislature twice and twice made secretary of state. Since then I had heard nor seen nothing of him till a few days ago he stepped into my office, extended his hand in true political fashion and wanted to know if I remembered him. "Sure," I replied, "I remember you. Have you put it back yet?" Mr. Porter is a too experienced politician to fall to enjoy the joke or to not recognize whom I was quoting.

"Well," he replied, "I have not put it back" but let me tell you that Mr. Bixby, who had lots of fun making that "put-it-back" reference, was one of the first to say nice things about me when I announced my intention of entering politics again."

Mr. Porter is now candidate for the democratic nomination for governor.

Care of The County Board, Ord, Nebr.

North Loup, Nebr. Dear Jake:-

We all turned out to the drought relief meeting at the school house. The discussion led to parley. One man offered to take ten dollars paid in advance, for all the benefits that he would receive. Another, going one better, offered to take one dollar. No one accepted. Nevertheless, we all filled out and sent in the blanks, although I dare say, that in no other district around North Loup are there fewer farm mortgages than here. At another drought meeting south of town, where the special phobia for nearly everyone is that interest that is forever due, the men assembled on the steps of the school house and held their symposium. The conclusion arrived at was that there was nothing but chicanery in the deal. As a result no one signed the blanks and none were sent in. If the government shows the same prompt and speedy action in this relief that has been shown in some other government affairs (approval of irrigation projects, or farm loans for example) it will be "dog eat dog" before any benefit arrives.

Now that we are on the subject of government operations, let me add another point. One man who lives down this way applied to the Federal Land Bank for a loan on his farm. In the course of time the loan was approved but the applicant died before the money had even arrived. We all felt that there had been ample cause for the administrator to go into the ditch that he did.

And now the drought revives the talk that the world is coming to an end. Clyde Barrett said, "it will be all right if they take us all. I would sure hate to be one of the few that are left." If present conditions continue, it will not be a flood anyway. The water is still running down the old North Loup river yet. Some people are afraid that the end will come before we get our irrigation project approved.

Sincerely, Geo. B. I CAN still use 500 watches to repair. Geo. A. Parkins Jr.

County Board Proceedings. June 4, 1934, at 1:00 o'clock p. m. Special session called to order by Chairman, with all supervisors present upon roll call. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved as read. Meeting was called for the purpose of considering and formulating future plans for Poor Relief in Valley County, previous to attending a Nebraska Federal Emergency Relief Administration, regional meeting in O'Neill, Nebraska, on Wednesday, June 6th, 1934, at 9:00 A. M. there to receive further instructions relative to conditions upon which Federal Relief Funds will be made available in Valley County, for Poor Relief. Upon motion seconded and carried, meeting recessed until June 15, 1934. Ign. Klima, Jr., County Clerk.

Thursday Mrs. E. Bailey of Burwell who had spent the winter in Los Angeles and other places in California, was to start for Nebraska. She was to visit in Ord and Grand Island before going to her home in Burwell. Mrs. G. P. Brown, who has been staying with Mrs. James Milford, will spend the summer with Mrs. Bailey.

I wish to announce my candidacy on the Democratic ticket for the office of Sheriff of Valley County, Nebraska. I was born in Liberty township, Valley county in 1893 and have lived in this township almost all my life. I am a farmer and cattle raiser and am well acquainted all over the county. I believe that I am capable of fulfilling the duties of the office of sheriff and if nominated and elected I will do my utmost to reduce expenses of the office and give every person a fair deal.

Ord Church Notes

Christian Church
Sunday morning we will observe fathers day. Every boy and girl should bring father and sit with father during the service. Evening service on U. B. church lawn. Mr. McCarthy will preach. Subject, "A Study of Jonah." Bible school at 10 a. m. Mid week Bible study Thursday evening. A fine children's day program last Sunday. Thanks to all the workers. Keep the pictures in mind for the Beautiful Ord night this fall.

Presbyterian Church Notes.
The Juniors will have church boys will join their fathers at the study next Sunday at 10 a. m. The adult church worship to commemorate Fathers Day. This program was postponed from last week. The Pioneer group will meet at 2:30 p. m. At 6:30 p. m. the young people will meet for supper at the church and they will have a service following that. Union services again on the U. B. lawn at 8 p. m. The success of the Daily Vacation Bible school is mostly due to its leaders, consisting of James Milliken, Miss Haas, Fred Cahill, Wayne Johnson and Jack Catlin. It is not too late for any children who would like to join. The session will meet tonight at the church at 8 p. m. Choir practice for the young People's group at Mrs. Flagg's, at 7:30 Friday night. Home Arts circle will meet next Wednesday afternoon.

United Brethren.
We are uniting with the other churches of the city in the observance of "Father's Day" next Sunday. Dr. A. P. Vannice of York, our conference superintendent, will be the speaker. Children's Day services morning of June 24. This promises to be an excellent program. The young people of the church are assisting.

Union services on the church lawn every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. A large crowd heard Rev. Smith's sermon based on the great love chapter, especially the portion which reads "Love envieth not."

The pastor of the church will be out of the city the remainder of the month of June visiting relatives in Kansas City and Illinois and attending Bible conference. Let everyone stand loyally by the services of the church in her absence.

Mamie J. Young, Pastor.

Christian Science Services.
"God the Preserver of Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches for Sunday, June 17.

The Golden Text is from Isaiah 31:5; "As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it; and passing over he will preserve it."

A passage from the Bible used in the lesson-sermon is from Luke 12:28: "If then God so clothe the grass, which is today in the field, and tomorrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith?"

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy reads: "In divine Science, man is sustained by God, the divine Principle of being. The carnal, at God's command, brings forth food for man's use. Knowing this, Jesus once said, 'Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink'—presuming not on the prerogative of this creator, but recognizing God, the Father and Mother of all, as able to feed and clothe man as He doth the lilies." (page 530.)

The annual Children's Day program will be given next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, in place of the regular worship service. Mrs. Chester Hackett is in charge. An interesting program has been prepared. While this Sunday is nationally observed as Father's Day perhaps nothing will appeal to fathers more than to hear a program given by their children.

The new cradle roll was unveiled last Sunday morning by Miss Inez Eberhart, with appropriate ceremonies. Pictures of the children appear with their names. A good number of parents and grandparents were present. Two children were baptized, Walter Anton Guggenmos, and Laverne Joseph Guggenmos, small sons of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Guggenmos. Little Laverne Guggenmos, six weeks old, was the youngest member of the cradle roll.

We are pleased at the large congregations attending the open air union evening services. More than a hundred were present last week, and if they continue to grow as they have, there will not be seats enough to accommodate the congregation. Miss Arvilla Benjamin added to the enjoyment of the evening with a well rendered solo. Come early next week and enjoy this service in the open. Mearl C. Smith, Minister.

Here's today's story of a woman who knew she carried too much fat and decided the right way to get rid of it—just a few words that fat folks should heed—worth reading.

"I use Kruschen Salts to reduce and it's wonderful. Take it daily and eat what I want and still lose. I did weigh 180, now 137. Want to get down to 125." Mrs. Leonard Bass, Ft Atkinson, Wis., Feb. 6, 1934.

When you take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water—you not only lose in weight but you put healthy activity into your whole body—you feel younger and look it—get it at any drug store in the world.

some precious possessions, like 'Lit the Women' and 'Treasure Island,' 'Young People's Anthology of English Verse,' and similar works. On the flyleaf in a round, boyish hand I read in one of them—wait—I think we'll not be disturbed, I'll fetch it."

He brought the book, an American History, turned back the flyleaf, and Arthur, looking over his shoulder, read:

Lives there a man with soul so dead Who never to himself hath said This is my own—my native land?

Below was carefully written: "Yes, G. H. I. His native country is Satan's. I wish he would go there, and not come back to plague us any more with his fauced learning. He made Althea cry this morning with his sternness about nothing. I hope he reads this. Then he'll know what we all think of him. N. B."

"Here's another book with a very clever caricature of Gordon Haskell drawn on the fly-leaf. It's signed quite boldly, 'Althea Bracebridge,' and has the legend written beneath: 'Art is truest to nature, then nature to Art.'"

"They must have been interesting children! Haskell told me to use the library freely; so that I had no compunction in looking at these books. In fact, I did not know I was coming upon anything significant, but these testimonies to Haskell's unpopularity with the younger members of the family are significant—justifies our own feeling about him."

The dinner bell put an end to their conference. Janet and Mrs. Denver were coming down the hall. "We've been out," the latter said. "I can breathe better out there in the garden."

"But Mrs. Denver—"

She put her finger on her lips. Haskell was approaching.

"Ah, I'm glad to see you all alive and well. I am dining with you tonight, and I've asked Mrs. Denver to join us. I want to clear up the mystery I knew you would soon find out anyway—the mystery of the four wax figures. But we won't have it for a dinner topic."

He led the way down the east wing to a rather stately room; probably once the dining room of the Bracebridge family. Its oak-paneled walls bore two portraits—one of a young woman walking in the grounds of Lostland academy, the other of the five Bracebridge children, with Berenice, a baby of two, on the grass at the feet of her sister Althea.

"The late Mrs. Bracebridge—the children," Haskell said briefly, and assigned his teachers places at the table. "I would have asked Berenice to come in—but she would not like to hear what I am to tell you. She adored her father. She was, you see, not quite thirteen when he died."

Dinner was quickly finished. Four people were too impatient to hear the story. Haskell began it quite informally, after having passed cigarettes. "Miss Mercer—or one of you—perhaps all of you had eyes keen enough to see the immobility of those scholars as we passed the schoolroom. They had no business there—to put them there while he was cleaning the other room, and then forget them. I hate to have those figures touched by profane hands. The originals were dear to me."

He paused, and seemed for a moment quite absorbed in his own thoughts. "I told Mr. Payne the dreadful story of the accident, by which Dr. Jethro Bracebridge lost four children in one terrible casualty. He was in ill health at the time, and blamed himself for having

BURT SELL HURT, NINE ARRESTED IN HOLIDAY RIOT

Loup City Scene of Big Fight As Business Interests Declare War On "Agitators."

Burt Sell, well known farmer and implement dealer of the Arcadia community, was seriously injured last Thursday in a riot at Loup City when a group of farmers and unemployed sought to incite a strike among employees of a creamery there and were dispersed by town people. Sell was in the Amick hospital for several days and is now at his home in Arcadia, where it is said that his condition is improving. A warrant for his arrest is held by Sheriff Thrallkill of Sherman county but it will not be served until he recovers.

About 150 men, among them several from the Loup City and Arcadia vicinities, were concerned in the affray. They were led by "Mother" Bloor, communist organizer from Grand Island, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Booth, Grand Island negroes, Carl Wicklund, John Squires and Harry MacDonald, Sherman county farmers, and Harry F. Smith, of Grand Island.

According to accounts of the riot in state papers, the "outside agitators" led by those named above went to Loup City Thursday afternoon to urge employees of a chicken killing plant there to go out on strike. The plant employs 40 or 50 people, mostly women and girls.

According to information furnished the Quiz, threats had been made that the creamery would be blown up if officials did not capitulate to the demands of the agitators. Early on the morning of the riot it was found that someone had drained the boilers in the creamery and only quick work in drawing the fires prevented an explosion.

After holding an outdoor meeting in which the group was harangued by "Mother" Bloor and others, committees representing the "outside agitators" conferred with officials of the produce house and an agreement was reached.

The group then adjourned to the court house where more speeches were made. About that time several hundred Loup City people, angered at the disturbance created by the "agitators" decided to drive them out of town. A general riot ensued, in the course of which Sell was injured seriously and several others received minor wounds.

Sheriff Thrallkill of Sherman county, who had been fearing a riot for some time, had summoned peace officers from other counties to help him handle the crowd in case it became disorderly. Sheriff George Round and Deputy Sheriff Keep, of Valley county, Deputy State Sheriff Otto Duchs, the Buffalo county sheriff and several special police soon quieted the disturbance.

W. H. Line, Sherman county attorney, has filed riot and unlawful assembly complaints against nine people said to be leaders of the "outside agitators." Assistant Attorney General Wm. H. Wright is in Loup City assisting Line in preparing for the trial, which has been set for June 26.

Feeling is still running high at Loup City and citizens, determined to clean up what they characterize as a "hot bed of communism," are giving careful scrutiny to all strangers. Merchants are said to have declared an informal boycott against A. E. Brunson, editor of the Peoples Standard, newspaper at Loup City that is the mouthpiece of the Farmers Holiday Association, Madison county plan. The Sherman county board of supervisors, in session Saturday, unanimously passed a resolution preventing the Holiday association from holding any more meetings in the court house or on the court house lawn.

The Holiday organization in Sherman county has long been considered the most radical such organization in the state and the Valley county organization has consistently refused to have anything to do with Holiday activities in Sherman county. No members of the Valley county Holiday association were concerned in the riot at Loup City last Thursday, according to E. S. Coats, secretary.

A riot such as this has long been predicted at Loup City as friction has existed for some time between business interests and conservative farmers and the more violent members of the Holiday group.

Monday Harry Lux, of Lincoln, state Holiday association organizer, and Charles Taylor, former Montana state senator who is now a Holiday worker, visited Ord to employ attorneys to defend Burt Sell and others June 26. They lay the entire blame for the riot upon the Fairmont Creamery company and its sympathizers at Loup City. An attorney from Chicago, employed by the International Labor Defense Council, will be in Loup City to represent those arrested, according to Lux and Taylor.

Stream-lined Truck Bought by Kleinholz

The Kleinholz Oil company, which operates filling stations in Ord, Dorchester, Friend and Lincoln, has just purchased a new Diamond T stream-lined gasoline truck that is about the finest thing in this line ever seen here.

More and more oil companies are buying trucks and transporting their own gasoline from refinery to station. Fred Buchfink, of Ord, has such a truck, as do the Asmus brothers of Ericson and Burwell and there are several others serving Ord filling stations. But the Kleinholz truck with its stream-lined construction is the newest wrinkle in hauling gasoline.

The truck is painted a brilliant red with white lettering. It bears a Columbia tank of the usual capacity, but it differs from most tank trucks in that all gauges, openings and instruments used in filling and emptying it are recessed into the tank. Even the lights are recessed and it is said to eliminate wind resistance to a high degree, thereby enabling it to travel at greater speed with less fuel consumption.

There is only one other such truck used in the United States at present, Mr. Kleinholz says, his truck being the second of this type made by the Diamond T people.

FREE 'HOPPER' POISON TO BE DISTRIBUTED

County Agent's Office Will Get Supply Next Week; No "Red Tape" to Go Through.

A carload of government grasshopper poison will arrive in Ericson next week and a fourth or more of it will be trucked to Ord for free distribution among Valley county farmers, it was stated by County Agent C. C. Dale yesterday. More will be available if needed.

Grasshoppers are presenting a serious menace in certain parts of Valley county, particularly in the northern part and in the Davis Creek area. If the drouth continues they will become even worse, it is thought.

The poison being shipped here will be distributed free and there will be no "red tape" involved in its distribution, Agent Dale states. All a farmer must do to get a supply is to report to Dale's office and estimate the amount he will need.

Even though the "hoppers" may be doing little damage now County Agent Dale advises farmers in areas where the insects are plentiful to use poison and thus prevent damage later.

Nelson's Death Due To Truck Collision

The death of Everett Nelson at Santa Barbara, Calif., last week resulted from collision of the car in which he was riding with a truck loaded with iron pipe, indicates word received from Everett's mother, Mrs. Dick Nelson, who went to California to attend funeral services held Monday.

Everett, accompanied by four other men, had been in Los Angeles to attend a boxing match and were returning to their homes in Santa Barbara when the collision occurred. The truck was being driven without lights. Everett was killed and three other men were most seriously injured.

Besides his mother, Everett is mourned by a widow and two children.

Camp Fire girls closed a very pleasant week Thursday. They had been camping at the Mortensen cabins near the river north of town. Misses Virginia VanDeCar and Edith James had accompanied the younger girls. Others to enjoy the outing were Misses Jeannette Clements, Jacqueline Meyer, Marilyn Dale, Evelyn Sharp, Lillian and Lorraine Kusek, Mary Beranek, Dorothy Aube, Armona Beth and Loretta Mae Achen, Ruth Haas, Norma Mae Snell, Betty Jean Vogelanz, Dorothy Aube and Mary Beran. After returning to Ord Thursday evening the girls all attended the picture show.

—Willington Hawk, who recently passed away in Loup City was the father of Miss Loree Hawk, who once lived in Ord and owned a beauty parlor. After her mother's death in 1927 Miss Hawk returned to Loup City and kept house for her father. The family are related to Mrs. Keith Lewis and Misses Eunice and Roberta Chase.

—Monday night Mr. and Mrs. C. J. VanBoven left for their home in Fargo, N. D. They had been visiting here for several days with the H. D. Stowell family and other relatives. A sister of Mrs. VanBoven, Miss Verna Stowell, accompanied her home for a visit of several months.

DAVIS REPORTS DEMO MEASURES ARE UNPOPULAR

Ord Candidate for Congress Says Fifth District Will Elect Republican Congressman.

Clarence Davis, republican candidate for Congress in the big 6th district, returned last Thursday night from a trip through the west and north parts of this district and reports a general and growing distrust of administration policies. He was accompanied by Alvin Jensen. This week they are again in western Nebraska.

On this trip Mr. Davis had a chance to talk with people in the potato raising sections, in the wheat districts, the sugar beet sections and in the cattle country. Most farmers and business men are highly displeased with agricultural measures passed under the present administration and fostered by Secretary Wallace and others in Washington.

Cattle raisers, who have watched with horror the workings of the hog processing tax are up in arms against the prospect of a processing tax on cattle, Mr. Davis says. Cattlemen were told by Secretary Wallace recently that he knew what was best for them, better than they did themselves, and this didn't endear Mr. Wallace to the cattlemen by any means.

"Cattlemen out there look at each day's paper, if they can still afford to take a paper, with fear that they may read that this tax has been placed upon cattle," says the Ord man. Sugar beet raisers are similarly indignant at the processing tax on sugar, which goes into effect this month, and housewives are angry because the price of sugar will be higher.

"If elected to Congress I shall seek to prevent these processing taxes and we should all protest them or it will be too late and farmers will be at the mercy of a horde of new government officials," Mr. Davis says.

Since learning the feelings of the people of this district, the Ord man predicts that whatever republican is nominated at the primary will be elected to Congress next fall.

NOTICE.

I will be gone from the office June 21 to July 4 attending a post graduate course at the Northern Illinois College of Optometry in Chicago.

Bertha Lincoln Resigns.

Miss Bertha Lincoln, of Pacific Junction, Ia., kindergarten teacher in the Ord schools, last Friday presented her resignation to the board of education and it was accepted. She has been employed to teach next year in the Blair schools and will receive a $200 salary increase. Miss Lincoln was accompanied to Ord by Floyd Wheatley, of South Dakota.

Fred Anderson Was Pleasant Visitor

Fred Andersen, of Cozad, who seeks the democratic nomination for Congressman in the big 6th district, was a pleasant Ord visitor last week and renewed acquaintance with many people whom he had known in former years.

Owner of a large and thriving department store at Cozad, Mr. Andersen received nation-wide publicity a few years ago as owner of a store doing an annual business of $100,000 in a town of less than 1,000 people. He has for years been in wide demand as a speaker and has given addresses in almost every state in the union.

Honest, aggressive and able, Mr. Andersen is making a vigorous campaign and is gaining the support of business men all over the district.

No Answer Yet On Irrigation

Although a final answer on the North Loup valley irrigation project has been expected daily and hourly for the past week, matters are still being delayed at Washington, reports Engineer E. H. Dunmire. A wire received from him Wednesday morning said a final answer was definitely promised by MacDonough on Wednesday, June 27.

Congress adjourned at 11:45 p. m. Monday and Representative E. R. Burke has promised to remain in Washington to assist Engineer Dunmire until final action on the project is taken. Since Burke is vitally interested in returning to Nebraska immediately to campaign for the democratic nomination for senator it is thought that the PWA is about ready to say the final word.

The sum of $500,000,000 was appropriated by Congress last week for PWA work, which assures that funds will be available if the project is approved.

Cannot Plant Corn On Contract Acres

The warning has been issued several times but the Valley county corn-hog allotment committee wishes to issue it again: Corn cannot be planted on contracted acres. The only crops that can be planted on contracted acres are sudan, cane, millet or similar crops and then they must be used for forage only.

On abandoned small grain land, corn may be planted for forage at any time now. But don't plant corn on contracted acres, as it constitutes an absolute violation of contract requirements.

LEGGETT FAMILY IS VACATIONING AT CULLEN LAKE

Crop Conditions Look Better In Minnesota, Says Publisher; Season Opens Tomorrow.

Jack Pine Lodge, on Middle Cullen Lake Near Niswaw, Minn., Sunday, June 17, 1934.

Dear Quiz Readers: You will be surprised to learn that I am up here. I am surprised myself. Last week when I wrote my department, I didn't know I was coming, at least so soon. Then, early in the week Foreman Harry McBeth came in to the front office and said that the job work was about cleaned up and that, unless more came in, we could dispense with some help. When I told the Missus she said, "Why can't we get ready and go to Cullen?" I asked her how long it would take her to get ready and she said all she had to do was to wash out a couple of handkerchiefs. So it was decided. Mrs. Burke hurried around and got her things packed, for she likes to fish better than anyone.

Then I remembered that I didn't have a car and I proposed to her, saying he would furnish a good car if I would bring Flora and the kids along. That suited me, for I was hesitating about going at all if those two kids had to be left home. I asked casually what car we were to drive and he said it would be a good one all right, one that would get us here without a bit of trouble, and so it proved. He gave me a red '75 Chrysler that has done something like a hundred thousand miles. I said that we would probably get about 7 miles to the gallon of gas out of the car, but he said it would do considerable better than that, so I kept track and we made exactly 16 miles to the gallon, six of us in the car and a trailer with nearly half a ton load drawn behind. And not a puncture or a bit of trouble of any kind, either.

We didn't drive hard. We left Ord Friday morning at 6:30 and just as we were leaving, down a black cat ran across the road. At the first stop to get gas I walked under a ladder to get into the filling station, still we arrived at Pipestone, Minn., before 6 p. m. that day and at our cottage here in camp Saturday at 4 p. m.

Everyone enjoyed the trip, even the two little girls. Children usually get tired on such a long trip but we had very little trouble from the children. I don't know, yet, whether the coming to Ord, of Brother Hugo brought rain or not. It looked like rain and sprinkled on us enough the first fifty miles so we had to keep the windshield wiper going most of the time and we are hoping Valley county got a good soaking.

After we left Burwell things looked good, pastures were green and there was plenty of big grass and cattle were fat. Crops looked better all the way from Burwell, some fields of corn being knee high. But the country all the way, has been plenty dry. Good rains came to South Dakota and Minnesota about two weeks ago. Most of the way they told me they had had 4 to 6 inches of rain. At Pipestone, Minn., the filling station man said it rained 5 inches in four days, all coming slow and going into the ground. Crops, I mean corn and pastures, looked fine. Most of the corn is just coming up nicely. They said many cattle had been hauled out of the country before the rains because there was nothing to feed them. Relief work is going on everywhere the same as at Ord. The small grain in this country was dried up. I only saw a few pieces of wheat or oats that looked like they might make a part of a crop and am told the small grain is a total loss. Everyone seems to be busy putting in forage crops all the way and they expect to raise a corn crop all the way.

A lady where we stayed over night Friday night told the Missus she was sorry for her when we arrived at camp, as the cottage would be full of dust. There has never been any dust to mention here and the Missus told me that the woman didn't know what she was talking about. But she was surprised when we unlocked the cottage and walked in. Every thing was a mass of dust and dirt, just like in Nebraska, and Ray Luther says they never saw such dust storms as they had here for days, the sun being obscured by the dust. So before we could even think about supper all hands had to get busy with brooms and clean house. And today, in spite of its being Sunday, we have been busy, with mop and wash cloth. All dishes had to be washed, tomorrow the curtains all have to be washed, then we will go to town for needed supplies and we will be ready to live.

Tuesday morning I start rebuilding my dock and by the time that is done my boat will be soaking up so it can be used without leaking. I got it into the water this morning and it leaked like a sieve. 24 hours will fix that however. Ray is going to paint the

Horace Boys Fall From Bucking Horse Both Break Wrists

From Horace, Nebr., comes the tale of Donald Johnson, 11, and Lyle Johnson, 5, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Johnson. One evening last week they mounted a horse bareback and rode to the pasture to bring up the family's milk cows. Their horse became unmanageable and both fell off, striking the ground at the same time. Each lad suffered a broken wrist.

Glass In Back 3 Months.

About three months ago Harley Crouch fell through a glass window and gashed his back severely. Since then he has suffered greatly and at times he has been unable to work, without knowing the cause. Tuesday evening a sliver of glass two inches long worked out of his back and he is now feeling as well as ever.

NORTH LOUP MAN, 81, DIES FRIDAY IN FRONT YARD

Fred Meyers Was Sawing Wood, Sat Down to Rest, Then Dies; Buried Monday.

North Loup, June 19.—(Special) —Funeral services were held from the Methodist church here Monday afternoon for Fred Meyers, pioneer settler of this community, who passed away suddenly at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ward Goodrich, Friday afternoon, June 15 he was 81.

A few minutes before his death Mr. Meyers had been sawing wood and sat down to rest in the front yard. It is presumed that death was caused by a heart attack.

Born in Hanover, Germany, Mar. 1, 1853, Henry Fred Meyers came to Cass county, Nebraska in 1873 and lived there until his marriage to Elizabeth Shoemaker, after which he moved to Valley county, arriving in the North Loup community in 1883.

To Mr. and Mrs. Meyers twelve children were born, three of whom preceded him in death. Soon after coming to this county, the Meyers became members of the German Evangelical church and were faithful adherents of this faith for many years.

In 1916 the family moved to Montana, where the death of Mrs. Meyers and three children occurred and in 1928 Mr. Meyers returned to Valley county and had since made his home with his children.

Left to mourn are four sons, Edward and William, of Ekalaka, Mont., Harry, of North Loup, and Fred, of Wisconsin, and five daughters, Mrs. Hulda Goodrich and Mrs. Clara Meyers, of this village, Mrs. Ida Edds and Mrs. Emma Bailey, of Casper, Wyo., and Mrs. Elizabeth Stewart, of Palmerlea, S. D. There are also 28 grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Nichols of Mira Valley, assisted by Rev. Stephens. Music was furnished by Mrs. Genevieve Hoepfner and Katherine Chadwick. Interment was in the family lot in North Loup cemetery.

At Mayo Bros. Hospital.

Dr. C. J. Miller and Dr. Henry Norris have been spending a few days in the Mayo Bros. hospital at Rochester, Minn. They left Ord Sunday and are expected to arrive in Ord today.

Sues Brother for Damages.

As the result of a fight between Will Prien and John Prien, brothers, which was stopped by the intervention of Sheriff George Round, Will Prien Tuesday filed suit in county court for $75 damages which he seeks to collect from John Prien, who is said to have been the winner in their fight. Disagreement over the ownership of farm machinery started the trouble.

Clements and Gross boats tomorrow, as those families will be here the latter part of this week. We were the first ones here this year and had the honor of officially opening the camp. For years the Simpsons have performed that duty, with her son and family, would be here the latter part of this week, also and we are told that the Mackowsky are expected any day now. They are from Des Moines and have the end cottage on the south next to Judge Clements. They expected to be here earlier but sickness in the family prevented. They did not come at all last year.

Well, the cleaning is done for today and I hear preparations for dinner so I guess I had best bring this letter to a close. The big fish stories will come later, when the season is open. I know there are still some fish in the lake because as I sat on the porch last evening I saw them, hundreds of them, jumping. I will be on the lake early the morning of the 22nd and see whether there are any bass here.

PRIMARY DROUTH AREA SUGGESTED FOR VALLEY CO.

Relief Authorities May Start Buying Cattle Here, Dale Learns at Broken Bow.

In spite of a rain ranging from 1/4 inch to 1 1/2 inches that fell over most of Valley county Saturday night, it may be necessary to designate this county as a primary or emergency drouth area, County Agent C. C. Dale learned at a drouth relief meeting held in Broken Bow Tuesday. The situation here is regarded as very serious and only immediate and copious rainfall can save it.

Valley county is now a secondary drouth area but designation as a primary area, with extension of relief cattle buying operations to this county, is likely to come soon.

L. R. Williams, state drouth relief worker, visited Ord yesterday and states that in his opinion Valley county is facing the most serious situation of any county in the state. Sherman and Custer counties likewise are hard hit.

Ordinarily this county harvests a first cutting of 25,000 tons of alfalfa hay; this year the first cutting will not total 1,000 tons. Very little prairie hay will be harvested this summer and unless plentiful rainfall comes the forage crops being planted now will make only a short crop.

The need for feed is most acute on many Valley county farms, it is thought, and the fact that other areas receiving more rainfall will raise only enough feed for their own needs makes the situation more acute locally.

Extension of the emergency order to cover this county is being urged by Dale and Williams but unless there is a demand for the government to come in here and buy distressed cattle the emergency designation will not be made. Cattle have been bought for the past three weeks in certain parts of South Dakota, Minnesota, North Dakota and other drouth states. Animals unfit for human consumption, when bought by relief authorities, are killed and buried on the farm. For these animals the following prices are paid: 2 years old and over, $12; 1 year to 2 years, $10; under 1 year, $4.00. When edible animals are bought the scale of prices is as follows: 2 years old and over, $13 to $20; 1 year to 2 years, $11 to $15; under 1 year, $5 to $8. When mortgaged cattle are bought by the government the money is divided between debtor and creditor at a certain fixed rate that County Agent Dale will be glad to explain to anyone interested.

If farmers have cattle in distress they are advised to notify Dale at once, as this is the information he is seeking to determine whether to ask for designation of this county for emergency drouth relief.

Planting of forage crops and corn is going on very generally this week, Ord seedsmen reporting the demand for this kind of seed very brisk.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

You Have Inflation But Don't Worry Flying Too Low New Way to Travel

A law will presently become the "law of the land" compelling the nation to buy fourteen hundred million ounces of silver. It is announced that the President will issue fifteen hundred million dollars of paper money to buy the silver. Conservative old fogysm yells "inflation," although it is not inflation, since the money will have silver back of it.

It will have more back of it than the government's bonds on which the nation pays interest. Back of those bonds there is nothing but a paper mill, and the government's name. There are no longer any gold bonds; you can't get any gold. Back of the silver money issued to buy silver will be at least silver, and you can always buy something with that—in China, Mexico, India—elsewhere as well as here at home.

Conservative old fogysm may as well realize that we have left the gold basis, and that a government bond is worth exactly as much as a piece of green paper with the government name on it, no more, no less. All you get for any United States government bond is pieces of green paper, when you come to sell it.

For your comfort remember that this nation, which has actually lost, according to careful statistics, more than one hundred thousand millions of dollars since the depression began, can well afford another hundred thousand millions to get out of the depression, if that amount is necessary.

This isn't any little country, or any poor country.

One hundred thousand millions to the United States is less than ten millions would be to John D. Rockefeller, and you know or you can imagine how much that would be to him.

An airplane of the "American Air Lines" was wrecked and burned in the Catskill mountains, with all on board, seven—four passengers, two pilots and the "stewardess"—dead. The government is careful about inspecting planes and testing pilots. Is it sufficiently careful about stipulating the height at which passenger-carrying planes must fly and what pilots must do in dangerous weather?

A seagoing vessel sails in "deep water." It does not skim along the tops of rocks near the surface. There is plenty of "deep water" in the atmosphere above this earth. Is there any reason why airplanes should skim as near as possible to the surface of the earth, frequently colliding with mountainsides and hills?

Mr. Ben Smith's traveling methods show what flying machines can do. He recently started around the world with his family by floating steamer. On the way, in Java, he thought he would like to see the grand national steeplechase, and flew back to England from that point, saw the race and flew back to join his family and their ship at an African port. Landing in New York, he flew to California, took another plane to British Columbia, flew back via San Francisco to New York. He thus saves months of old-fashioned "high-speed travel."

The most important document since the Civil war, more important than any act of government in the big war, is the message that President Roosevelt sends to congress, outlining plans of his administration. The government pledges itself to enable citizens to live "as Americans should live," to provide jobs for those that want to work or, failing jobs, unemployment insurance, and to guarantee "the security of the home."

Dr. James Bryant Conant, youthful and intelligent new president of Harvard university, tells graduates of the Stevens Institute of Technology that no matter what "social and economic order lies ahead of us, society will demand the luxuries and conveniences afforded by modern technology." Therefore, two professions will survive any troubles—"the engineers and the doctors." Engineers will be needed to provide what people want, and doctors to repair human machinery.

When Doctor Conant says "society will want" he means human society, the whole race, not the silly by-product commonly described as "society."

Sailors with friends on the big ship Leviathan are worried because that boat went to sea with no cat on board. To sail without a cat, according to sailors, is "the worst possible luck."

And, most curiously, the same sailors consider it bad luck to sail with a clergyman on board. Why the presence of a clergyman or the absence of a cat should be dangerous to a ship is a puzzle.

Children's Day Program.

The services at the Methodist church last Sunday morning consisted of a program put on by the cradle roll, beginners, intermediate and primary departments of the Sunday school. The entire primary department was seated in the choir loft but the cradle roll "graduates," some dozen in number, were held in the league room till after a part of the program had been put on. Then the little tots came marching down the aisle clad in black gowns and mortar boards, just as our high school graduates did a few weeks ago. This was about their first appearance as public speakers and they did a lot of childish off-program things to the great amusement of the older folks. Little Duane Sowl devoted most of his energies to wadding his handkerchief into a ball while he took second part on a solo with his sister, Roger McMindes suffered a real attack of stage fright and when he found himself being gazed at by a hundred pairs of eyes he covered his face with his gown and attempted to back up about two seats. But he braced up then and did his part creditably. Mrs. Mearl Smith, Mrs. Hackett and others must have spent a lot of time and thought in getting this program drilled and so successfully put on.

Mrs. Rose Williams has about recovered from her broken hip and was taken home this week from the hospital at Lincoln.

HHHHH
Bergdoll, the famous Philadelphia world war deserter, whom the government has given up trying to punish, reports that he is living in Germany with his wife and four children and has asked President Roosevelt for a pardon. No recent word has been had from J. Iscarlot or Benedict Arnold.

HHHHH
The bimetalists apparently assume that the present administration will add to its other follies the passage of the silver bill, now before congress, but they can't quite agree on the ratio of silver and gold in the dual standard at this writing. Why argue about the ratio? The evil is in having any sort of dual standards. When this folly is enacted let us go on and adopt several-sized bushel baskets, one for wheat, another for corn and so on. And then we might have different yardsticks for silk, cotton and woolen goods. The principal is the same in each case.

HHHHH
Geo. the Loup valley is getting famous. They have discovered the second largest still in the state right down here at St. Libory. By the way, didn't Roosevelt tell us that prohibition was responsible for there being stills and that we should repeal the 18th amendment in order to abolish the illicit stills?

Chatl Energetic Candidate.
Over in the Third district, in which Greeley county is the west line, a whirlwind campaign for the democratic nomination for congress is being made by Orville H. Chatl, of Tekamah. A lawyer, farm owner and former county judge of Burt county, Mr. Chatl filed for the democratic nomination knowing that he would have to beat the veteran Edgar Howard. Such a prospect daunted other prospective candidates but not Judge Chatl, and he is said to have an excellent chance of being the nominee and since the Third district is generally democratic nomination is tantamount to election. A young man and a fighter, Third district people are fortunate in having a candidate like Judge Chatl. We'd like to vote for him ourself.

A Correction.
In the obituary of Frank M. Blaha in last week's issue it was stated that he was married to his second wife in 1926. This should have read 1904. We are sorry to have made this error.

BACK FORTY

By J. A. KOVANDA

Oleomargarine and butter are being fed to different lots of rats as a way of demonstrating the value of vitamins in butter. The experiment is now being carried on by the Department of Dairy Husbandry at the Agricultural College of the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

The oleo fed rats are allowed ten times as much oleomargarine as the butter fed rats are given of their ration. The oleo used is of various brands, and was purchased from several different states.

Out of a drove of 75 oleo fed rats, all but 5 have died within an eight week period. A later group of oleo-fed rats appears sick and will probably perish in course of time. All butter-fed rats are in good health, and appear capable of thriving on a butter diet indefinitely.

The experiment serves to illustrate another of the many superiorities of butter. A butter wrapper used by the Holmen Cooperative Creamery of Wisconsin reads: "Do you know that this pound of butter is worth, as an energy producing food, 3 1/2 times as much as 1 lb. green peas, 12 times as much as 1 lb. broilers, 11 times as much as 1 lb. fish, 4 1/2 times as much as 1 lb. dressed fowl, 3 1/2 times as much as 1 lb. porterhouse?" It also contains the statement: "Butter is 99 per cent digestible. No other fat can take the place of butter as a food."

The wrapper could also remind folks that no other shortening is so appetizing when used for baking or frying foods. It might add that oleomargarine is made from coconut oil, a cheap product shipped in from foreign lands, that is largely to blame for the surplus of butter in storage.

THE COOK'S COL-YUM, YUM!

Now is a good time to send in canning recipes—early enough so they are sure to be seen before time to use them. Send in your pickle recipes, jelly and preserve recipes and other methods of canning now. To find a good recipe for tomato relish after you've already put up more than you need is very exasperating, you know.

Ripe Tomato Chutney.
Mix one cup chopped green peppers, four cups chopped ripe tomatoes, two cups chopped green onions, four cups vinegar, two cups sugar. Add six or eight apples cut in eighths, two red peppers (removing seeds), a few pieces of ginger root, a few pieces of horseradish root, one cup seedless raisins. Tie in a cloth sack about one-half package mixed spices. Boil gently one and one-half hours. When cooked, remove cloth sack of spices and seal in sterilized jars. Do not chop ingredients too fine.

Twelve Day Pickles.
Allow cucumbers to stand for three days in brine, one cup of salt to a gallon of water. Then for three days let them stand in cold water, changing the water once if the weather is hot. On the seventh day cut in chunks and heat in weak vinegar until heated through. Let stand for three days in the weak vinegar. Make a syrup of three pints vinegar, two pints sugar, a stick of cinnamon, one tablespoon mustard seed, one-half teaspoon whole cloves, one-half teaspoon whole allspice. Pour the hot syrup over the pickles for three mornings, re-heating syrup each time. Pack in jars and seal on the third morning. This makes crisp, dark, green pickles.

Pineapple Cake.
Beat three egg whites, smooth and light, cream one-half cup shortening, add one and one-third cups sugar. Sift two and one-third cups flour, one-half teaspoon salt, three teaspoons baking powder, add alternately with one-half cup milk. Put in one-half cup pineapple juice and one and one-half teaspoons vanilla, then last add the egg whites. Bake in a moderate oven thirty-five minutes.

Care of The County Board, Ord, Nebr.

North Loup, Nebr.

Dear Jake:
I have a penchant for garden planting. I work hard, with much enthusiasm, placing the seeds row by row. My ardor wanes at that. I despise hoeing the weeds on the hot June days, and as a result my gardens are usually ephemeral.

I have finally found, however, my ideal for such things. It is a lily pool. All that is involved is the planting of the turning on of the water and the freeing of the fan-tails. The rest of the time I just look on. No weeds to pull, no beans to pick, no bugs to spray. And the best part of it is that the whole garden is drought resisting.

Sometimes I think that our little hamlet should be rechristened Cranford. It was a startler to me when I was told that there are some fifty or sixty widows living within our boundaries besides a dozen or more old maids. Cranford was a town, you remember, in the story, where there were nothing but women.

In some ways the hold-up of the oil station was not so bad. It gives us something different to talk about down here besides the drought and high taxes, and that helps a little.

Earl Smith, our drayman, has moved to the hills. We are sort of a lonesome without him. For years his merry banter and happy laugh have been as characteristic in our streets as the town whistle. His equisitarian arguments, convictions and possessions have regaled us all. I have not seen him in weeks. He thinks so much of old doblin that not even a car graces his demesne. He has the benison of all us bums who nest in and around the oil station. We miss him in his reclusive home.

Mrs. Van Thomas is the great-grandmother to twenty-eight children, seven of which were born the last year.

QUIZ FORUM

Crop Reduction and Processing Taxes.

To the Editor of the Quiz: Valley county, excepting a very small part, is having an unprecedented drouth. Alfalfa is the only crop that seems to be able to withstand the weather conditions, and it is reduced in tonnage per acre. Wheat reduction saved the farmers of Valley county quite a sum of money in several ways:

1. By reducing the wheat acreage the farmers saved seed and expense of preparing the soil for seed, for the wheat crop that was put in last fall turned out to be a complete failure, only offering scant pasture which didn't pay for the seed alone. 2. Besides that the government paid a bonus for the acres not put to wheat. The corn crop is seriously injured by the drouth, the extent of the injury cannot yet be quoted in percent or dollars and cents, all depending on future rains or lack of rain. Surely by renting a part of the corn ground to the government that part of each farm will guarantee to pay its share of expenses. The debit side of the program is the seedling of alfalfa, or other forage or hay crop early this spring, of part of the acreage included in the corn reduction program. Such seedlings met the same fate as fall wheat and oats and barley or they may be a total loss. Balancing the crop reduction program for Valley county I think the farmer is ahead by this program alone. The man who did not join is a heavy loser. The people who buy flour pay for the wheat benefits so the exclusive wheat sections are the greatest beneficiaries from crop reduction. It seems that the wheat reduction program as sponsored by the government and supported by nature was a great success and we look for the elimination of the process tax on flour by August or September.

Process taxes—here we have an anomalous condition, for most of the corn farmers are feeders in some degree. The corn farmer who is not a feeder gets his benefits without incurring any loss. He has a guaranteed price for his produce, 45c per bu. The hog man has a promise of a bonus on his reduction program but then the unscrupulousness of rascals within the ranks of so-called farmers who bought pigs out state and collected bonus on them later and included such pigs in counting their own raising, the honest hog farmers are asked to suffer with these hog rascals and take a cut of possibly 10 percent of their total. This is one grievance. Next the process tax on wheat was passed on to the consumer without any ceremony. The process tax on hogs should have been administered the same way. The packers turned traitor and put it back on the farmer claiming that it raised the price of pork to such an extent as to decrease consumption. Should not the hog raiser be guaranteed a just profit over his cost of production like the wheat raiser, or the corn raiser. Has he not done his part in this program? Why shall the hog raiser suffer, get punished because the packers will not raise the price of pork? The packers are opposed to the process tax. So are we! But we must be patriotic, why not the packers? I would demand that pork be raised to a point when at Chicago prices of both corn and hogs the farmer could make a profit. If the consumer cannot and will not pay the price and buy the meat the program fails and the blame can easily be placed. As it is there is an evading of the issue. Another anomalous condition is that there is tax on hogs and none on beef and mutton. When they raised the price on overalls they didn't just take blue overalls, they raised the price on striped or any other kind as well and we pay twice as much for them now. The process tax on hogs is an absolute detriment in its present form at the present time. After another month or six weeks when the man without corn and without credit to buy more is out of the picture hogs will advance and the process tax will be lauded to the skies;

—Mr. G. C. Cook.

—Mr. and Mrs. Jim Sinkler and Bruce Sinkler of Loup City were in Ord Sunday.

but how about all the poor fellows losing their all in the mean time? How will they feel. They will be paying interest on their coming hog bonus and as much more besides. They have lost their bonus and possibly their home and farm equipment. They thought they were in a square game, but now they see the dice were loaded. How are anarchists, infidels and Bolsheviks made? —Thoughtful Farmer.

Answers Mr. Haskell.
North Loup, June 19.

To the Editor of the Quiz: Mr. Haskell's morbid article caught many of us unawares as it was surprising and unwarranted. Now it has always been Mr. Haskell's idea that any means justifies the end he desires, and he has always been a rank standpatter and "ferinister". But when he undertakes to put the best editor of the Quiz ever had out of business by such a malicious attack on Roosevelt and the democrats in general it is time to call a halt.

Democrats have always welcomed the idea of two strong parties, but due to corruption such as the Teapot Dome scandal, the high-handed ways of Wall Street with whom republicans always worked, and general inefficiency of the past three administrations, the republican party has broken down, and is leaderless as it deserves to be.

That the democrats are on the right track is proved by progressives who have pulled away in shame and horror of the G. O. P. record. To name a few head the list with Mr. Norris and carry on with Hiram Johnson, LaFollette, Sen. Cutting, Borah, Gov. Pinchot, Sen. Frazier, Couzens and Harry Stimson.

As to Mr. Conklin, a man is innocent until he is proven guilty

Christian Science Services.
The subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches for Sunday, June 24, is: "Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force."

The Golden Text is from I Corinthians 8:6: "To us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him."

A passage from the Bible used in the lesson-sermon is from Psalms 119:89, 104: "Forever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven."

Through thy precepts I get understanding: therefore I hate every false way."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, reads: "The divine Mind, not matter, creates all identities, and they are forms of Mind, the ideas of Spirit apparent only as Mind, never as mindless matter nor the so-called material senses . . . The mortal, erring, and finite are human beliefs, which apportion to themselves a task impossible for them, that of distinguishing between the false and the true." (page 505-6).

CHAPTER I.—On her way to a position in Lottland Academy, Janet Mercer, young professor of English literature and rhetoric, after receiving a letter from Gordon Haskell, friend of her mother's, met him on the train at a young man who she learns is Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy, as professor of mathematics and chemistry. They reach Blaine, railroad station nearest to their destination, and there meet Mrs. Dwyer, engaged as matron of the Academy. At the school the group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the lonely circumstance connected with them. Wilton Payne, teacher of psychology, completes the faculty.

CHAPTER II.—Vaguely disturbed, and apprehensive, Janet watches, from her window, a meeting between Haskell and a man of unpossessing appearance, but who evidently is high in Haskell's confidence. Going down to the school room she finds a group which the teachers had supposed were scholars studying, are reading highly artistic wax figures. Myrtle, she informs Mrs. Denver. Next day Haskell explains the somewhat unusual circumstance connected with the conduct of the Academy. The professors take up their duties. Among Janet's pupils is Berenice Bracebridge, daughter of the late owner of the Academy, and she is attracted by her, Haskell, under her father's will, is Berenice's guardian.

ing me to the library with him taking dictation, thus preventing me from accompanying the children as I had wished to do. His nervous condition soon resulted in a kind of brain fever, and his cries that his four children be brought again into his presence were pitiful indeed. We had at the time an advanced pupil whose work as a sculptor had already won recognition, and, oddly enough, he had begun his artistic career in a wax-figure studio, where the figures were made, all save the heads, which he felt more competent to do himself. Under my mother's guidance, with the aid of photographs and his own memories—for he had been a close friend of Jethro and Althea, he modeled most beautifully and truthfully in wax the heads of these children. When they were finished and dressed in clothes the originals had worn in life, desks were put in Doctor Bracebridge's sick room; and from the hour he saw these four figures of his children bending over their tasks apparently he began to improve; but his brain did not clear for many weeks. When it did, he would not have the figures destroyed and he left a clause in his will that until Berenice was twenty-one the figures should be kept in one of the schoolrooms, that she might hold her brothers and sisters in her memory. Sometimes I think the poor doctor's brain was still slightly affected—or he never would have written down such a clause—but even the eccentric wishes of the dead should be respected."

There was silence for a moment or two after Haskell ceased speaking. Then Payne said: "After all, there is an end—a terminus to the conditions of the will; and then these memorials—may be destroyed. But I think if they are proving beneficial to the success of the academy, to Miss Berenice Bracebridge's nerves—"

"Haskell was alert in an instant. "Has she been talking to you?"

"Not to me—to Mr. Fleming. She confessed to him that she was afraid of the figures when not in the room with them; but close to them she had no fear."

Gordon Haskell's round, stubborn head, which had a curious look of being carved in wood, gave a jerk, and his bright eyes moved restlessly.

"Mr. Payne, you remember we discussed upon the psychological bases of fear. I've often wondered whether the curious terror of those figures I have witnessed in more than one person may not have its origin in the fact that the four died together, and a father's pitiful and delirious grief had led to the construction of their images?"

"It may be, or it may be simply the fact that they are here—always here!"

Haskell gave a cry and put his hand to his heart, his face becoming blanched and terrible. In an instant he recovered himself. "An old trouble," he apologized with a smile. "I have a bad heart."

"I have not yet seen the figures close," Payne remarked. "Will you take me down to see them?"

Haskell stared at him angrily; then he muttered: "Well, I suppose until everyone's curiosity is fully satisfied there will be no peace. I have to give some orders to the men about tomorrow's work; so I'll call Berenice to take you into the basement."

Berenice soon appeared in the doorway. The draught moved the spun gold of her hair; she glanced toward Wilton Payne. Behind her, her cashmere shawl giving out a gleam of red where the light of the swinging lamp caught it, stood a bent old woman with a motherly brooding face of affection. As Payne and Berenice passed her, she laid a hand on Payne's arm. "You are a good man," she quavered. "Don't go away."

"You Are a Good Man," She Quavered. "Don't Go Away."

"Thank you, mother!" Berenice looked around with a quick smile. "Don't mind Mother Martha. She's old and tired, and she says just what she thinks, like children. She was nurse to all my brothers and sisters."

"All of them," came the quavering voice. "All those little chicks." "You don't mind if she comes with us? She's like Balder. She doesn't feel any fear of them."

She picked up a small rose shaded night lamp and, holding it a little higher than her head, went on before Payne. When they came to the foot of the basement stairs she motioned Payne to go on ahead of her. "It's the seventh door to the left."

He began to feel his skin pricking a little, and that unique coldness came into his breast which is a sure accompaniment of fear, yet he endeavored to laugh at his own sensation. What utter folly! He, a grown man, nervous over four wax figures representing four handsome children peacefully at study.

At the door he waited for her, turning his head so as not to look into the circular glass inset. A horrid feeling possessed him that he might see a face on the other side of the glass peering out into the passage! Berenice turned the handle and entered. Her manner seemed to change instantly, and she breathed a sigh of relief.

"Always just before opening the door I think 'perhaps they are gone, though I know it is a foolish thought—then I see them here quite and he has been acquitted. It was purely a political affair. However it was not many years ago that Mr. Haskell supported a man for several terms for County Treasurer on the republican ticket and he was not acquitted for misappropriations of funds.

Answers Mr. Haskell.

We should not put the dollar above humanity in our calculation of the U. S. debt. Who begrudges the man with a shovel his chance to make a living, the poor the right to live, a roof to cover them? It is the first time there has been legislation enacted for the poor, and that money has come to the middle west. Look at the money that has come into Valley county just for home loans. The president believes in pouring money into the bottom and letting it work up instead of pouring it in through the top as the republicans did. He also believes in an OLD Age Pension.

Our resources are greater than a year ago, commodities are up, we have the largest supply in the world, child labor has been abolished, corn is 55c instead of 15c, and all banks are safe for deposits.

Of course it is hard for one who would rather go down to destruction with a republican administration than be saved by the democrats to be yanked out of the slough by them. It must have been sharper than a serpent's tooth for Mr. Haskell to have his newspaper enterprise go down to defeat under Hoover.

Mr. Haskell will find that he will have to use new tactics. The young people of today insist on doing their own reading and thinking. He can't swing a banner labeled "Protection" and expect to find followers. They will have to clean house and begin again.

At one time evidently the seat of emotions was supposed to have been in the bowels, later in the heart, but Solomon held for the pocketbook. However, if some of these jealous and sniveling backbiters had any we would still think they were in the first mentioned place.

Yours truly, A. F.

Tugwell Confirmed by Senate Despite Bitter Attacks—Darrow Board Assails Johnson—President Roosevelt's Plans for Social Regeneration.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

R. G. Tugwell

REXFORD GUY TUGWELL'S appearance before the senate agriculture committee to be quizzed as to his fitness for the position of undersecretary of agriculture was rather farcical, even though it brought on some heated encounters among the members of the committee. The senators aired their own views freely, but learned almost nothing concerning those of Mr. Tugwell. He did tell them he believed the Constitution was flexible enough to take care of any necessary economic changes; that he was opposed to the adoption of Soviet planning by America, and that he thought his experience on his father's farm and his research qualified him for the position to which the President had appointed him. Finally the committee reported the nomination favorably, the only two opposing votes being those of "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina and Henry D. Hatfield of West Virginia.

The action of the committee assured Tugwell's confirmation by the senate, but the debate on the floor was unexpectedly long and the attacks on Tugwell were outspoken. Senator Schall of Minnesota, for instance, said: "Agriculture demands and already has experiment stations dealing in actual crops, live stock, and markets. It wants no 'bold experiments in collectivism' by a self-styled philosopher who functions like a three-card monte sharp who jumps upon a box with three shells and a pea and who entertains the public with his cry, 'Now you see it and now you don't. Who is the next guy?'"

"Tugwell's general denial, and his specific denials, in the light of his associates in the field of political writing, are absolutely worthless. They are an insult to an intelligent jury. He insults the United States senate in order to gain a high office from which he can preach 'collectivism' as a substitute for American institutions and the Constitution."

pression of small businesses or consumers. Besides suggesting the removal of Johnson, the board demanded outright that two other officials of the NRA be fired for misconduct. One is an assistant deputy administrator and the other is an employee of the lumber code authority, but the report suppressed both their names.

SENATOR ARTHUR ROBINSON of Indiana, who was renominated by the Republicans, will be opposed at the polls next fall by Sherman Minton, the selection of the Democratic state convention, Mr. Minton, a World war veteran, is now public counselor for the public service commission of the state. His nomination was a victory for Governor McNutt over the faction led by R. Earl Peters, former state chairman, who sought the nomination for himself.

IN THE Democratic run-off primary in Alabama former Gov. Bibb Graves won the nomination for governor and goes back to the executive office which he held from January, 1927, to January, 1928. Judge James E. Horton, who presided in the second trial of Heywood Patterson, one of the nine negro defendants in the "Scottsboro case," and then set aside a jury verdict of death, ran more than 2,500 behind A. A. Griffith of Cullman. George Huddleston of Birmingham retained his seat as congressman from the Ninth district, but Congressman Miles C. Allgood of the Fifth district was beaten by Maj. Joe Starnes.

still and lovely, and I am very content. But the coming here! That's dreadful!"

"That hair ribbon on Isabel's head has one end too long," Mother Martha said, and crept across the stone flagging. "Old Mother Martha can tie the ribbon better than that—can't she?" She crooned in an old, weary, but tender voice.

Berenice watched her rettle the ribbon and turned appealing eyes to Payne as if to ask his understanding of the rather pitiful action. In that moment he felt a refreshment of spirit, a receding of barriers, an opening of the paths of the sky which transmuted the scene into a tableau of enchantment. He had never dreamed that love would come to him suddenly and swiftly upsetting all his calculations, disturbing the ordered peace of his scholarship.

"She acts as if the old, happy tending of your brothers and sisters was still very real to her."

"Sometimes I think she fancies they are really alive. She is very old—and the old love the past."

"And you are very young. The past should not be allowed to grip you too heavily."

"You do not like these figures!"

"They are beautiful—quite marvelously made. But considering the circumstances—" he hesitated.

"Yes, I know—they seem morbid things. But perhaps my poor father was not wholly well when he drew up his will."

"People are afraid of them—"

"Oh, yes, they are afraid; the school grew emptier and emptier, then stopped, then, after some years, I asked my guardian to have teachers—just for me and the farmers' boys and girls. You see, I wanted the lightning dispersed a little. Oh, Mother Martha, dear—don't you know that sash is quite perfect?"

"Poor children! They ought to go to bed—who's keepin' 'em up?"

"No one, dear. There, sit on the bench; I want to show them more closely."

The proposed board also would have the authority to order production of pertinent documents and witnesses to give testimony under oath, and their orders would be enforceable by any United States court of competent jurisdiction, similar to like privileges enjoyed by the federal trade commission. Vested with authority to prescribe their own rules and regulations, the boards would be armed with a penalty clause in the new law, setting $1,000 fine or a year imprisonment, or both, for violation of their decrees.

IN ITS second report to the President the national recovery review board, headed by Clarence Darrow, loosed another blast at Administrator Johnson and in effect recommended his removal as head of the NRA. The board said Johnson had given the recovery program an un-American and dictatorial tinge that handicapped it in the war on depression; that he has arbitrarily decreed life and death for industries, and that by arbitrary modifications of codes he has helped big business concerns to oppress their smaller competitors.

"The rule of the military commander is totally unsuited to the genius, habits, traditions, or psychology of the American people, and wholly ineffectual in meeting the present national crisis," the board concluded.

The second Darrow report covered the retail dry goods, warehousing, lumber, cement, retail food, boot and shoe, electrical manufacturing, bedding, petroleum, coffee, plumbing fixtures, embroidery, and lead pencil codes. Complaints against the warehousing, electrical manufacturing, and embroidery codes were dismissed as without foundation. But in the other codes the board claimed to find op-

MOST CANDIDATES IN YEARS SEEKING COUNTY OFFICES

Valley County Ballot Will Be Long One; Filing Time Will End at 5 P. M. July 3rd.

The ballot at Valley county's primary election August 14 will be the longest in many years, if not the longest in history, prophesied County Clerk Ign. Klima Jr., yesterday as he scrutinized the long list of candidates who have already filed for county offices. Filing time ends at 5:00 p. m. next Tuesday, July 3 and it is likely that several more candidates will appear before that time.

New candidates who filed this week include L. A. Garner, who became a democratic candidate for county treasurer, and Ray Kocina, who also seeks the democratic endorsement for the same office. Garner is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Mid Garner and is a brother of John N. Garner, the republican candidate for Valley county sheriff. He graduated from Ord high school in 1924 and since then has been teaching school at Farwell and other places. He is a personable young man and appears well qualified for the position. The other candidate, Ray R. Kocina, is a resident of Ord. He is an ex-service man and most of his lifetime has been spent in clerical work. Thoroughly familiar with court records, an expert accountant and bookkeeper, Mr. Kocina will make a strong bid for the democratic nomination.

A complete list of candidates follows:

For assessor—A. W. Pierce, democrat; A. R. Brox, republican. For sheriff—Ed S. Stone, democrat; W. E. Lincoln, democrat; George S. Round, republican; John N. Garner, republican; Charles S. Burdick, democrat; Will Nelson, democrat.

For clerk—Ign. Klima, jr., democrat; Henry Holm, democrat.

For treasurer—Geo. A. Satterfield, republican; Arthur Mensing, democrat; Charley Clark, democrat; W. C. H. Noll, republican; L. A. Garner, democrat; Ray R. Kocina, democrat.

For county attorney—John P. Misko, republican; Alvin B. Lee, democrat.

For clerk of the district court—M. F. Kosmata, republican; Harry J. McBeth, republican; Alfred A. Weigard, democrat.

For county superintendent of schools—Clara M. McClatchey and Cecil A. Weddel, non-political.

For supervisor, Dist. No. 1—Morris Sorensen, democrat; Joe J. Jablonski, democrat; Jason L. Abner, republican.

For supervisor, Dist. No. 3—Jos. Vaseck, republican; Henry A. Zikmund, democrat; L. D. Milliken, republican.

For supervisor, Dist. No. 5—Grover Barnhart, democrat; J. A. Barber, republican; Charles A. Faudt, democrat.

For supervisor, Dist. No. 7—U. G. Evans, democrat; J. A. Braden, democrat; Burt Sell, democrat; Lester F. Bly, republican; S. V. Hansen, republican.

For state senator 23rd district—Alvin Blessing, republican; James P. Murray, democrat.

For state representative, 77th district—Marion J. Cushing, republican; Percy E. Doe, democrat.

Judge Carter Visits Ord. Judge E. F. Carter, of Gerding, for the past eight years district judge in the 17th judicial district, was an Ord visitor Friday. He is a candidate for Supreme court justice in this district. A comparatively young man and highly regarded as a lawyer and jurist. Judge Carter enlisted much support locally while calling on friends and acquaintances here.

Harry Coombs Is Dead. Harry Lee Coombs, of Galena, Mich., passed away June 5 at the age of 74. He was a resident of Ord for several years between 1880 and 1890 and was a brother of the late Mingson Coombs of this city. Mr. Coombs was married three times, his first two wives preceding him in death. He was married on Feb. 19, 1930 in LaPorte, Ind., to Mrs. Ada Canfield, who is left to mourn. Many old time Ordites will remember Harry Coombs.

—Mr. and Mrs. Keith Lewis and son, Kirk, returned Saturday night after spending two weeks in Ritchfield, Utah, with Mr. Lewis' parents. They were accompanied as far as Kimball by Mrs. Lewis' mother, Mrs. Chase, of Loup City, who visited her sister, Mrs. Carl Johnson and family, while the Lewis family were in the west, returning to Loup City with them Saturday.

—Piano students of Mrs. Roxie Christen will give a recital at the Christian church at 8 o'clock Friday evening. The public is cordially invited.

—Thursday Miss Louise Kokes left for Santa Monica, Calif., after three weeks stay here with numerous relatives.

Lease Hammerstein Mansion

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Fuson, famous singers and voice teachers in New York City, have leased the mansion of the late Oscar Hammerstein on St. Nicholas Avenue in New York City, according to letters received by Ord relatives. This mansion was designed and built for Mr. Hammerstein when he was riding the crest of his fame as a world figure in opera management. It is a three-story structure and will provide ample room for the rapidly expanding classes of students being taught by Mr. and Mrs. Fuson. The Fusons leave New York City for the summer on June 25 and expect to visit Ord relatives from about July 15 to August 15, filling several concert engagements enroute to Ord.

COUNTY-WIDE CLUB TO BOOST ROADS FORMED

Bowring Talks At Luncheon In Ord Monday, Valley County Joins Good Roads Ass'n.

Arthur Bowring, of Merriman, executive vice president of the Nebraska Good Roads association, was principal speaker at a luncheon held Monday in Thorne's cafe, and as a result of his visit to Ord a Valley County Good Roads association was formed with William Ramsey, Arcadia, as temporary chairman and James Ollis, Ord, as temporary secretary. Directors elected Monday included H. B. Vandecar and Archie Geweke, Ord, E. A. Holub, Elyria, and Mr. Ramsey, Arcadia. Another director will be appointed by the North Loup Community club and the board of five directors will then select a permanent chairman and secretary.

In his address Mr. Bowring outlined the need for a state-wide organization to protect Nebraska's road program. The state now has 7,825 miles of paved, graveled and bituminous mat roads in its highway system, the investment being about $65,000,000. To maintain this system and provide funds for construction of new highways to match federal aid money as it becomes available, Nebraska must raise 6 or 7 million dollars annually. The present 4c gas tax provides this amount and all efforts to decrease the gas tax to 2c or 3c must be resisted, Mr. Bowring believes.

The Good Roads association is the only organization working constructively along these lines, he says. More than 60 counties now hold membership in the Good Roads association and the number is increasing weekly.

Only 25 members are required to form a Valley county organization and almost this many joined after the luncheon Monday. The towns of Arcadia, North Loup, and Ord, as well as several rural communities, were represented. More members are being secured this week and the association plans to work for the betterment of all roads in Valley county.

Fellowship Meeting Here. About 250 people, including fifteen preachers, attended the Pentecostal fellowship meeting held in Ord Monday. Church services lasted all day and dinner and supper for the whole group were served in the Keown building south of the postoffice. Meetings are being held at the Ord Pentecostal church every night until further notice.

Esther Palser And Wilbur Rowe Married

Monday at noon at the Presbyterian parsonage at Loup City occurred the marriage of Miss Esther Palser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Palser of Davis Creek, to Wilbur Rowe, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rowe of near Loup City. Rev. Harwood performed the ceremony. The couple was attended by Florence Palser, sister of the bride, and Alvin Grey, of Litchfield, a cousin of the groom. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served in the Palser home and in the evening the wedding party was entertained at supper by Mrs. Wm. Rowe. The young people, both of whom are well known and deservedly popular in their respective communities, will live on a farm near Loup City.

FIFTY DEPUTIES PRESERVE ORDER WHILE TRIAL ON

Seven Face Charges At Loup City As Result of Riot; Burt Sell Still In Bed.

Fifty special deputy sheriffs, including four state deputies and almost the entire police force of Grand Island, are preserving order this week at Loup City, where the trial of seven people accused of rioting and unlawful assembly is in progress. None of the police carry firearms but all have "bills" and in Sheriff Thrall's office in the court house there is a large supply of tear gas bombs and sawed-off shotguns in case of emergency. Loup City is reported to be crowded but so far the trial has progressed peacefully.

The seven under arrest include Ella "Mother" Bloor, 72, of Grand Island, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Booth, negroes, of Grand Island, Carl Wicklund, Harry McDonald and John Squires, Sherman county farmers and Holiday members, and Fortius Sell, son of Burt Sell of Arcadia.

Warrants are also out for Harry F. Smith, of Grand Island, and Burt Sell, but the former has not been apprehended and Mr. Sell is still confined to his bed as result of serious injuries received in the Loup City riot June 14, when unemployed workers and Holiday farmers attempted to aid poultry pickers at the Fairmont Creamery company's plant in staging a strike.

The trial started Tuesday morning. County Judge Moehner's court but most of the first day was devoted to empanelling a jury. Miss Frances Hubbard, of Ord, was called to Loup City at noon Tuesday to take testimony in shorthand.

The alleged riot leaders are being prosecuted by W. H. Line, Sherman county attorney, with the assistance of Wm. Wright, deputy attorney general of Nebraska. The prisoners are represented by a Chicago attorney employed by the Labor Defense Council.

Governor Charles W. Bryan, who had been requested by labor leaders in various states to pardon those accused in Loup City riot declined Tuesday to intervene. He also refused requests that he declare martial law and dispatch troops to Loup City, expressing the opinion that peace officers are entirely competent to handle the situation.

YOUNG FARMER DIED JUNE 22 IN OMAHA HOSPITAL

Anton Volf Was Ill Six Weeks Before His Death; Funeral Held Monday Morning.

Funeral services were held at the Ord Catholic church at 9:00 a. m. Monday, June 25, for Anton Volf, 33-year-old Valley county farmer who passed away in an Omaha hospital last Friday, June 22, after an illness of six weeks with a kidney ailment. Father Murray, of Burwell, was the minister in charge and interment was in St. Mary's cemetery here.

Anton Volf was born Dec. 16, 1900 in Valley county, the son of Frank and Anna Volf, both of whom are deceased. He grew to young manhood here and on Oct. 14, 1924 was married at the German Catholic church to Rose Mary Moravacek. To them one child was born, Evelyn Rose, who is a year and ten months old.

The deceased was a farmer all his life and was generally respected and regarded as a good neighbor and friend by all who knew him. He was a kind and loving husband and father and his untimely death was a severe blow to his young wife and little daughter.

Other relatives left to mourn include seven brothers and four sisters. They are Jim Volf, Chicago; Charley Volf, Judith Gap, Mont.; Frank Volf, Burwell; Joe Volf, Taylor; Anna Davis, Amarillo, Tex.; Louis Volf, Comstock; John Volf, Arcadia; Albert Volf, Ord; Mary Parkos, Arcadia; Emma Volf and Agnes Volf, Denver. Mrs. Davis and the Misses Emma and Agnes Volf were here from Amarillo and Denver to attend the services Monday.

Notice to Correspondents.

Since next Wednesday is July 4th and the Quiz force wants to enjoy the holiday, correspondents who usually get their copy in on Wednesday are requested to get it in on Tuesday next week. This applies to advertisers also. We ask your cooperation.

—Miss Lillian Kokes, a graduate nurse in the Grand Island St. Francis hospital, spent a week at home. Sunday she returned to her work in the hospital.

Council Petitioned For Swimming Pool

Seven Face Charges At Loup City As Result of Riot; Burt Sell Still In Bed.

Petitions bearing the signatures of over 200 Ordites will be presented to the city council tomorrow evening, asking for construction of a swimming pool on Anderson Island. Several copies of this petition are being circulated this week and are being quite generally signed.

A swimming pool has long been needed in Ord and more so this summer than ever, due to the extremely hot weather. Swimming in the open river is unsafe for children and sooner or later there will be a drowning if the practice is continued. Moreover, many children have suffered more or less serious cuts from glass and trash in the river bottom near Ord in the past few weeks.

Advocates of the pool believe it can be constructed at a cost of from $100 to $200 of city funds. FERA labor would be utilized to remove turf and the top layers of dirt for a pool 45x100 feet on the Island, then sand and gravel could be pumped out and a natural basin formed, shallow at one end and deeper at the other. The underground flow of the river would keep the water purified and a small amount of chlorine could be added frequently to keep moss from growing and assure freedom from contamination.

The council will be asked to take immediate steps toward starting construction, in order that the pool may be enjoyed the balance of the summer.

CYCLONE STRIKES CLAYTON WARD FARM WEDN'DAY

Iver McCall Hurt As Trailer Is Destroyed By Wind; A-Type Hog Houses Damaged.

Arcadia, June 25.—(Special)—A miniature cyclone struck the Clayton Ward farm last Wednesday, destroying a brooder house and killing over fifty chicks, severely damaging a lot of A-type hog houses and outbuildings and overturning an outdoor trailer in which Iver McCall was sleeping. He was badly bruised and was cut by flying glass. Mr. and Mrs. Ward were in Colorado at the time visiting relatives and returned Friday to find their buildings in a sorry mess. No other damage was done by the twister in this locality.

No trace of the dogs has been found as yet.

The flesh was lacerated and the bone was splintered, Mrs. Long is informed, but the arm may be saved. He is in an Alliance hospital under the care of a special nurse.

Paving Work Completed.

Work of paving in Ord has been completed and this week the Peter Kiewit Sons' company, who had the contract, are moving their paving equipment out of town. Cars are being permitted to drive on portions of the new paving, although dirt placed upon it when it was wet has not yet been removed. Much work remains to be done on the approaches at either end and also on the cross streets through town, which must be reduced to grade.

DROUTH OUTLOOK BECOMING MORE SERIOUS DAILY

Temperature 106 Tuesday, No Rain In Sight; Emergency Drouth Designation Is Asked.

Blazing heat, hot winds and no rainfall! The combination is making Valley county's drouth situation more serious every day.

Tuesday the record-breaking temperature of 106 degrees was registered in Ord and Wednesday was almost as hot. For the past week the temperature has been around the 100 mark daily. A shower totalling .35 of an inch fell in Ord last Thursday night but no other moisture has fallen and there is no rain in sight, according to barometer readings taken at the government weather observatory in Lincoln.

Other sections of the state have had plentiful rainfall recently but Valley, Sherman and Custer counties, as well as the north half of Garfield and the west half of Greeley are hard hit. Prospects for a corn crop look poorer daily, with corn that sprouted after the rain of ten days ago beginning to droop and die as result of this week's blazing weather and continued drouth.

Monday County Agent C. C. Dale, drouth relief administrator for Valley county, requested designation as an emergency drouth area which means that government cattle buying will be in progress here soon.

Drouth relief efforts are going forward rapidly and grain, hay and seed for forage crops have already been distributed to about 100 farmers, according to Dale. The list of applications for relief is growing longer daily, he reports. All farmers who get relief are required to sign an agreement to do FERA work to repay cost of the feed or seed given them. Many farmers are selling their livestock already and others continue taking herds to sand hills pastures, although these are becoming well crowded.

It is still hoped that enough moisture will come in July and August to enable farmers to grow cane, millet and other forage crops, thus alleviating the fall and winter feed shortage. A carload of alfalfa hay was bought by the drouth relief committee at Cozad and arrived last week and more will be shipped in as it is needed.

Pension Story a Hoax.

At first Sheriff George Round laughed when he heard a joke to the effect that if he would serve another four years as Valley county sheriff he would be pensioned for life. But lately he isn't laughing as the joke is being taken seriously in some quarters. As a matter of fact there is no truth whatever to the pension story. No pensions are paid to county officers under any circumstances. The pension joke is now being used maliciously by certain of his opponents, Round claims.

Settlement Day For Corn Loans May Be Extended

That "settlement day" for federal corn loans, now scheduled for August 1, may be extended 60 or 90 days is the welcome news coming this week from Congressman E. R. Burke, who with other congressmen and senators from the corn states is working with officials of the Commodity Credit Corporation to bring about an extension of time. There is also a possibility that additional loans of 7c to 10c per bushel may be granted.

Many farmers are already paying off their loans and regaining title to the corn, which is worth more than 45c at the present time. Corn is now selling here for 55c and 56c per bushel and with probability that Valley county will raise the smallest corn crop in 40 years it is likely that the price will be much higher later in the summer.

Farmers who want the settlement day on corn loans extended and who desire an additional loan of ten cents per bushel are asked to write to Congressman Burke in Washington, D. C., at once.

Whitlow Baby Drowns.

Robert, 14 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Whitlow, was accidentally drowned last Thursday evening in a livestock water tank on his father's farm near Genoa, according to a story in the Grand Island Independent Friday. His lifeless body was found by his father about 6 p. m. and efforts to revive him failed, although he had apparently been dead only a short time. Robert had been playing in the yard with his two-year-old sister a short time previous. Funeral services were held at the home Saturday. The Whitlow family is well known here, as they lived northeast of Ord for several years. Robert's grandfather, Elmer Whitlow, also lived in the Ord community for several years. Both families moved to farms near Genoa in the spring of 1933.

ELYRIA TO HOLD BIG CELEBRATION FOURTH OF JULY

Parade, Speeches, Music, Picnics Will Feature Doings; Picnics At Clement's Grove.

Only one formal celebration of July 4th will be held in Valley county this year and that will be in Elyria, where plans are being made to entertain an enormous crowd with an elaborate parade, speeches, music, dancing, side-shows and all the other adjuncts of an old-time 4th of July observance, even fireworks.

The celebration will be held under the auspices of St. Mary's Social and Dramatic club, with Father Leonard Ziolkowski, popular young pastor of the Elyria Catholic church, as the general manager.

The program starts with a parade at 10:30 a. m., then comes a Polish speech at 11:30 and at 1:30 p. m. an English speech by Bert M. Hardenbrook. At 2:00 a program of foot racing and other contests in which prizes are awarded will be given and at 3:00 there will be a ball game between Elyria and the Loup City Polish Giants.

A concert of vocal and instrumental numbers comes at 7:30 and at 9:30 will come the fireworks. A dance follows, with music by Joe Fancochar's orchestra. A large number of Quiz readers will probably be in Elyria next Wednesday.

Another community gathering will be held at Clement's grove on July 4th, where the usual picnic and program of baseball and sports has been planned. Many families always spend the 4th at Clement's grove and this year will be no exception.

Floyd Bollen Files For U. S. Senator

Heeding the wishes of thousands of friends, as expressed by letters and telegrams, Railway Commissioner Floyd L. Bollen this week filed as a democratic candidate for United States senator. In a short statement issued Monday Mr. Bollen says:

"My primary platform has just three planks: 1. 'new deal' for Nebraska democrats by smashing both factional machines. 2. Support of the 'new deal' at Washington by the nomination of a democrat who has been regular as a progressive. 3. The election of a democrat U. S. senator insured by the nomination of a democrat who can be elected."

Heretofore the two factions of the democrat party in Nebraska have worked together only when Bryan and Mullen were able to agree who should be governor and who should be national committeeman. Now Governor Bryan wants to be senator and Mullen has chosen Burke. It is now a "fight to the finish," Bollen points out, and the nomination of either Bryan or Burke means election of a republican U. S. senator.

Mr. Bollen has been a real progressive all his life and if nominated will have the support of all progressives, whether democrats or republicans, at the general election in the fall.

Weller Resuming Ord Sat'day Sales

Saturday sales in Ord will be resumed this week. Col. E. C. Weller announcing that he is reopening the pavilion in order to afford farmers a market for their drouth-distressed livestock. Col. Weller also operates auction yards at Atkinson and Ewing and is interested in a pavilion at Winner, S. D. Through his acquaintance with farmers and stockmen over the sandhills area, now the bright spot of Nebraska so far as feed is concerned, he will be able to bring buyers to Ord for all the cattle offered and is willing to guarantee Valley county farmers more for their distressed cattle than they can get by shipping to Grand Island or Omaha or by selling to the government.

NO. LOUP WATER PROJECT FACING PWA REJECTION

Ickes Kills Last Hope Tuesday For PWA Funds But FERA May Give $600,000.

The last hope for immediate approval of the $2,900,000 North Loup power and irrigation project apparently was killed Tuesday when Congressman E. R. Burke and Engineer E. H. Dunmire were told by Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior, that Nebraska's quota has already been exceeded and that no further PWA projects will be approved in this state out of funds appropriated so far by Congress.

The project was not rejected, in fact it is conceded by PWA heads to be meritorious in every respect, but no further money is available for Nebraska, Secretary Ickes said.

There is one final chance of securing some irrigation. Engineer Dunmire tells local officials, and that lies in a recommendation made by the PWA to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, that this organization appropriate $600,000 for construction of irrigation works only in the North Loup valley, the work to be done as an FERA project and to require no repayment.

Burke and Dunmire are working on this possibility, this week and are holding conferences with Harry Hopkins, head of the FERA. Inasmuch as this is a drouth area and much drouth relief will have to be extended, with recipients agreeing to do FERA labor in repayment for help given them, there is a slight possibility that the proposal may be accepted. North Loup valley people are warned not to put much faith in the proposal, however, as premature publicity given the matter through unauthorized publication of a confidential letter sent to a state officer by an official of the district has hurt this possibility greatly.

Other districts, hearing that the North Loup might receive FERA funds, are said to have made application for similar aid and the whole matter is now "up in the air."

There has been some "dirty work at the crossroads" in the handling of the North Loup project's application at Washington is being hinted by district officers this week. For the past three weeks, since Secretary Ickes told PWA officials to work the North Loup project out some way, everything apparently was going smoothly and there was every prospect for approval during June. Engineer Dunmire, working with PWA engineers, made a new set-up that reduced the cost to $2,650,000 and this was approved by several PWA departments. Then, according to information given Dunmire, someone with great political influence passed out the word to "kill the North Loup project" and evidently instructions are being followed at Washington, Secretary Ickes' final ultimatum would indicate.

There is bitter feeling in the whole North Loup valley over the manner in which the project has been treated by PWA heads. Engineer Dunmire has been encouraged to stay in Washington at great expense with a promise that the project would be approved and it now appears that money spent by people of the valley in promoting the project has been entirely wasted merely because of "political pull."

PWA officials, through the daily press, denied Tuesday that the North Loup project has been rejected but all information now coming from Washington indicates that no affirmative action will be taken and that the project will be allowed to die a natural death there, at least until more PWA funds become available.

In the meantime farmers of the valley will continue to suffer from drouth conditions, year after year, and the North Loup river will continue to flow past burning crops.

And elsewhere in the United States, even in Nebraska, power projects and other projects without one-tenth of the merit that the North Loup possesses will be given more money than they need, to develop projects that are mere political grab-bags.

Dear Quiz: The Leggett family is having a fine time. The weather is all that could be asked for.

The Missus and I opened the fishing season officially for the camp this morning at 6 o'clock but fell asleep in an hour.

I go in swimming every afternoon and today it was fine. Some of the time, when it is cloudy, the water is pretty cold.

The Humphreys arrived this morning from Clarinda, Iowa, and are hurrying to get their drouth out and their boat ready.

There was big excitement in camp yesterday when the little girls discovered a strange animal ambulating down the road back of our house.

We get butter, milk, cream and eggs from the Wallin family on the hill above camp. They have 7 Guernsey cows and the milk is equal to the Coats milk.

Something DIFFERENT

Just after the North Loup filling station robbery, which made other filling station attendants pause for a serious thought on the danger of thieves, George Finch returned to his place of business one day to find his young assistant, Red Sargent, fast asleep, comfortably settled with his feet cocked high in the air.

Before long the sleeper awoke. He yawned and stretched and then noticed the big void before him, the former residence of the cash register.

He hollered and he bellowed, help, fire, police, any thing to get some attention and help him find the robbers.

Over in the courthouse there are rampant all kinds of tales as to the lengths to which our drouth has gone, in spite of two quite seemingly showers recently.

Another story related to a fellow who was plowing in a dirt storm, one of the kind so frequent here lately.

Up in the air eight or ten feet the man at the plow saw something queer just before him, something odd indeed.

H. D. Leggett is always kidding me about raising Kerry "by the book." Finally he erupted one day: "Well, I sure wish they'd had those books when my mother raised me, I might have amounted to something; maybe I wouldn't have been so spindly and puny as I am."

I thought about telling him it was probably just as well his mother didn't have a book, but I decided that would be too mean.

"It's no fun to try to cook and keep house for yourself after you've worked and saved to raise nine kids," said an old codger to me recently, as he stopped in to get a Quiz cook-book.

Alliance people, practically all of them except the undesirable, think Rev. Osborne is about all right. They know he is sincere and as honest as Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Osborne has a crowded Presbyterian church listening to him each time he speaks, and his people never leave without some new and worthwhile food for thought.

Because of a throat affliction, Mr. Osborne spent several years on a farm near Bayard, making a living for himself and his wife and four children, all of whom he is sending through college.

THE COOK'S COL-YUM, YUM!

In response to the plea in last week's paper, three or four ladies sent in about a dozen recipes, for which we are very grateful.

One woman relieved her anger by sending in an anonymous postcard saying I misspelled her recipe, putting in potatoes in place of cream, but since she was unwilling to sign her name I can't be expected to correct her recipe.

Graham Cracker Pie Take thirteen graham crackers, roll out fine, mix in a bowl with three tablespoons butter, two tablespoons sugar.

Spanish Noodles. Cook one package of egg noodles in boiling water. Fry one and one-half pounds of ground beef in hot fat, mix noodles and beef with one can tomato soup, one can vegetable soup, one can water.

Beat two eggs until thick, gradually add one cup sugar, one teaspoon vanilla, beat well. Sift one cup pastry flour, on teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, and add to the first mixture, mix well.

Congress number seventy-three goes home after appropriating for variegated spending between six thousand eight hundred million and seven thousand million dollars.

No congress ever appropriated so much in peace times. In addition to spending about seven thousand million dollars, this congress guaranteed approximately seven thousand millions more in home mortgages and farm bonds and set up a two thousand million "stabilization fund."

Obituary of Dr. Daniel R. Lee

Daniel R. Lee was born Sept. 24, 1856 in Somerset county, Pa., where he lived until the age of nine. Then, with his parents, he lived during the next four years in West Virginia and Minnesota. In the latter state his father died and when Daniel was 13 the family returned to Pennsylvania and settled near New Lexington.

The next several years were occupied with Daniel's struggle to get an education. He worked on farms and in sawmills, attending school meanwhile at Meyersdale and New Lexington, and then taught schools at Sprucedale, South Hamptonville, Berkeley Mill, and Bridgton. In the summer vacations he worked on farms and attended summer school, the last season being in Meyersdale Academy in the summer of 1880.

Then he attended college in Ashland, O., and taught school at Wooster, O., but in the spring of 1882 took a train for Iowa and secured a position teaching school at Maxwell, where he also studied medicine in the office of Dr. S. T. Goodman. To pay his tuition he kept the doctor's office clean and cared for his team of bronchos. In the fall of 1886 he began his medical course at the University of Iowa and finished in 1890.

After finishing his course he came to St. Paul, Nebr., to practice but remained only three weeks as there were already three physicians in the town. Dr. Minnich, who had been practicing in Arcadia and was leaving, advised him to locate here, which he did.

When he came to Arcadia, bringing his sister along as housekeeper, he had the sum of $35 in his pocket but he rented a house near the present Lee residence and took 1-2 months later bought the home in which the Lee family still resides.

The roads at that time consisted of trails made by wagon-wheels, leading to the various sodhouses which were widely scattered at that time. The only way to make better time was by horseback, and so he bought a pony and saddle, paying for this out of the $35 he had with him when he came. His medicine and instruments were carried in a saddlebag. As trails and roads improved he bought a cart to be pulled by the pony, and later added another horse. Still later he owned a fine team and buggy in which he took great pride. It was a familiar scene in those days to see Dr. Lee hurry to this farm or that to administer to those needing help. During his 44 years of practice 1,250 babies have been ushered into this world by the competent hands of Dr. Lee, for which during the first years he charged but did not always receive a fee of $10.

On Christmas day, 1894 he was married to Jennie Allen, who survives. To this union were born three children: Dr. Robert Lee who resides at Fort Collins, Colo.; Miles of Broken Bow and Alvin of Arcadia, who are all living. Dr. Lee died at Fort Collins, Colo., on June 18th, 1934, where he and his wife had gone to visit with his son, Dr. Robert Lee.

The incidents experienced by Dr. Lee during these years of practice would fill large volumes with stories of adventure, the honesty, kindness, sympathy, understanding and willingness to help others day by day.

"I give you my full permission to print this letter. I used Kruschen Salts for reducing. I lost 30 lbs., since I have been taking it. I praise it to everybody. I know that is fat. And I also feel 'fars younger'." Miss Edna Hann, Algiers, La.

A jar of Kruschen Salts lasts 4 weeks and the cost is trifling. Are you taking Salts to reduce or to please your palate?

Just try Kruschen for a month—besides losing fat you'll gain in physical attractiveness—skin grows clear—eyes sparkle with health. Take half a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—you feel cooler in hot weather—get it at any drug store in the world.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—On her way to a position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer, young professor of English literature and rhetoric, after receiving a letter from Gordon, proprietor of the Academy, meets on the train a young man whom she learns is Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy, as professor of mathematics and chemistry. They reach Bladg, railroad station nearest to their destination, and there meet Mrs. Denyer, engaged as matron of the Academy. In the school the group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the lonely place. Haskell welcomes them. Wilton Payne, the teacher of psychology, completes the faculty.

CHAPTER II—Vaguely disturbed, and apprehensive, Janet watches from her window, a meeting between Haskell and a man of unimpressive appearance, but who evidently is high in Haskell's confidence. Going down to the school-room, she finds a group which the teachers had supposed were students, are really highly articulate wax figures. Mystified, she informs Mrs. Denyer, who explains the somewhat unusual circumstances connected with the school. Among Janet's pupils is Berenice Bracebridge, daughter of the late owner of the Academy, and she is attracted by her. Haskell, under her father's will, is Berenice's guardian.

She held the light toward each face in turn, oddly lighting her own at the same time, so she was actually a part of that ring of radiance. Mother Martha, suddenly sleepy, as happens to the very old, nodded and drew her crimson shawl about her. Berenice put down the lamp, "Shall we sit here a few moments?"

"And may I ask a question?"

"A dozen."

"Do you like dancing, walking, riding? Would you like us for companions as well as teachers, Miss Mercer—Arthur Fleming and I?"

"Oh, so much! I've been lonely." "And I wish you'd promise me something—not to come too often to this gloomy basement room."

"Don't make me promise that! There are days when I have this strange fear of the figures—oh, it's like a black oppression, and then I have to come down and reassure myself they are really here, not stealing about the house! How foolish this must sound to you!"

Payne picked up the lamp. Berenice bent her fair face close to Mother Martha's brown and wrinkled one. "Come, dear; all the little chickens are asleep."

"The ancient woman rose obediently. "You must go to sleep, too." Berenice said: "She likes to tuck me in. She forgets I'm nineteen."

Haskell stood at the end of the passage with a lamp in his hand. "You were a very long time."

"My fault," said Wilton. "But they are amazingly well done."

"Well done! Too well done! I think I'll put a lock on that door; lock Berenice out of it. She goes there too much."

"Are there photographs of the children in that album upstairs in the drawing room?"

"There's nothing else," Haskell answered impatiently.

"May I look at them?"

"Certainly! Certainly! Let's get done with the subject once for all." Wilton thanked him and disappeared. Haskell, raising his lamp, looked long and searchingly at Berenice. "Remember, I didn't bring these teachers up here for a mere playtime."

"You are fortunate to get such nice people."

His manner changed. "Berenice, don't look at me that way." His voice sank almost to a whisper. "You know I love you. You can't expect me to be always the formal guardian. I would marry you tomorrow."

"I do not want to be married yet, Gordon. I've seen nothing! I know so little."

"Nothing you could learn could teach you to be lovelier," he said in a voice which had a note in it like reverence mingled with something more of the earth—and cruel in its way.

She started down the passage. Haskell had not followed her, but he held his lamp high until she returned; nor did he ask her where she was going. She went straight to the drawing room, where Payne was bending over the album.

"These photographs are very lovely."

"You won't mind what my guardian says, will you?"

"Certainly not! We must all endeavor to keep the peace."

"And you will not go away, whatever he does?"

"Go away!"

It was as if she had asked him if he would leave the sun road to Arcadia after a long wandering in the wrong paths. "No, I shall not go away."

"There's one thing I'd like to know very much."

"What is it?"

"Why I am always afraid in this house—oh, don't tell me that it is large, gloomy, old. Those things wouldn't make me afraid."

"We'll see—we'll watch—and see," Payne answered gently. "And promise me you won't go to the whirl too much."

"Something draws me there."

"Something will draw you away from there some day—away from these hills, out into life!"

Arthur and Janet were found in quiet contentment by a wood fire, each with a book. "Well, you've seen them," Arthur said as Wilton entered. "What does Hamlet think of them?"

"They recalled Ophelia—the drowning. I suppose! There is a queer aroma in that room, that, old and lanky as it is, has naught to do with school books! I am going some day to call on Jerry Moore."

No, there are no "wild animals" in our gasoline, as some companies advertise, nor do we claim that it will raise steamships or big buildings, nor do we talk about "foot pounds" and similar foolishness, but we do offer our customers FRESH GASOLINE—15 hours from refinery to our station.

Within 15 hours after the gasoline leaves the refinery it is in our station tanks, ready for distribution to our customers. It doesn't spend from 7 to 10 days in a railway tank car, or lay around for 30 to 60 days in a bulk plant somewhere, but instead is always "refinery fresh."

We all know that time exposure and handling cause the loss of the best qualities, which are some of the lighter and finer "ends" of gasoline.

Try "fresh gasoline." We are sure you'll like it.

for THOSE Picnic Lunches

Picnicking is the principal recreation of many families at this season and naturally the most important part of a picnic is the food. What nicer for a picnic than a cold, boiled tongue? Or a nice piece of lean beef or pork, boiled and then ground with pickles and salad dressing for sandwiches? Or a choice assortment of our cold meats, featured by boiled, sliced or minced ham, salami, summer sausage, veal loaf or whatever you like? And we're getting a lot of calls lately for cheese, especially our aged German brick. People say it goes fine with a few cold bottles of beer. Let us help you plan your picnic.

bar gate which closed the farm lane from the road. An old man was sawing wood in the bleak house yard. Wilton introduced himself, and after some preliminaries he spoke of the academy and of his new relation to it. The old man seemed at once interested and ushered him into the warm little kitchen. Wilton gradually approached the subject of the accident, and remarked: "I believe you were the only witness?"

"I was—the sole and only one. I was walking up the ravine on the other side, an ax on my shoulder, when I heard screams and saw the four clasping at each other and at the air to keep from falling into the whirl! But they were tied together, and over they went. You seen the figures, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"The father, the old professor, took on dreadful—they made them figures to keep him quiet in his long sickness."

"So I understand."

"I ain't never seen 'em myself. Folks do say they're too natural. I ain't never wanted to see 'em! I chopped off a great bough that day—and tried to hold it out over the whirl; but I was on the wrong side, and they couldn't reach it. Then I ran down a piece to cross—current knocked me over twice—and I nearly drowned myself. When I got over at last, nothin' to be seen but that poisonous black water. I was sick at my stomach. I sat down on a rock and was as sick as a drunkard—just because I hadn't been able to do nothin'. I staggered back to the academy, and the first person I see was Balder hoeing in the garden. 'Balder, I says, the first thing, 'four of 'em—the whole four of 'em—drowned.' Balder let out a screech and threw down his hoe. 'It'll kill the doctor! He's a sick man.'

"Then he went in, and I stood outside shakin' like I had the palsy. Such a screechin' and moanin' and runnin' around. I hear it yet sometimes. Mr. Haskell had been readin' to the doctor all afternoon; and he tried to quiet him, but it was no use. He got worse and worse. Folks said his brain was affected. There's an old lady over to the Herropp farm helped nurse the doctor. She used to say she didn't blame Mrs. Bracebridge for tryin' to bring those children to life in wax—it was enough to wring your heart to hear the poor old professor callin' for 'em. Folks say—"he hesitated. "Folks say the wax figures comes out of that school-room and walks the old corridors and look in the library and even go out on the grounds."

"Nonsense!"

"Well, the place has been runnin' down ever since their deaths. 'Twas a queer will—keeping the figures until she's twenty-one. She is a nice lass—brings me a roast chicken or a glass of Jell sometimes. She says she's grateful to me for tryin' to save their lives. What's the use of that if I didn't do it? My old dog—Caesar—here she is now—who's that with her?"

Fayne looked out the window. "That's her big St. Bernard."

"I didn't mean no dog. I thought I saw a girl in white walking with her." Jerry opened the kitchen door and went to meet Berenice. "The new teacher's callin' on me," he announced.

She seemed glad to see him, presented her offerings to Jerry. Fayne asked if he could go back with her. As they walked along she asked him why he had gone to see Jerry. Taken aback for a moment, he considered how he should answer her. "I like to talk with all kinds of people," he finally answered. "Ah, here is the deserted village. Does anyone know why it was deserted?" "People gave various reasons. The location was too lonely, I suppose."

"The last deserted village I saw was Nifua, in Italy. Imagine a city of towers, churches, palaces, piazzas, utterly empty except for a riot of flowers; deserted since the middle of the Eighteenth century. Why, here comes Miss Mercer and Mr. Fleming."

Janet and Arthur waved to them gaily, came up the rough road with swift eager feet.

"What do you suppose we've discovered—there are tablets in that old church; and one of them is to a Dr. Augustus Lostland, founder of Lostland academy, who died in the year 1790 aged nearly one hundred."

Janet and Berenice had clasped hands on meeting as if their vitality and youth went naturally in search of a comrade. Wilton thought he had never seen two young women who so seemed to heighten each other's beauty. The blue and brown eyes shone with mutual friendliness. Berenice's swaying grace, her etherealized look, the aura of seclusion and isolation surrounding her, blended well with Janet's warmer beauty. Its secrets to be revealed in other avenues than the long classics roads of English literature.

"You should be well educated, Miss Bracebridge," Fleming said, "with the four of us always buzzing about."

"I shall be very happy," she answered simply. "Would you like to see the old church, too?" she addressed Wilton.

AM I RIGHT?

By George Round, Jr.

Rainfall this month in many sections of the state may bring the total up more closely to normal but records for the first five months show a deficiency in all sections—even in Valley county, the popcorn producing center of the world.

Unofficial records compiled from outstate reports and released from Lincoln indicates that rainfall for the first five months of 1934 in Valley county was but 22.1 percent of normal. A total of 1.82 inches fell in comparison with a normal rainfall of 8.24 inches. But Valley county is hardly any different than other counties. The report from Garfield county indicates that precipitation for the first five months was but 13 percent normal. In Howard county it was 31.5 percent, in Custer 28.6, and in Sherman county it was but 25.1 percent normal.

But here's the Jaest "racket" being pulled in eastern Nebraska—and successfully also. Strangers posing as government agents are going around the country telling farmers they have too many hogs under the corn-hog contract. Telling them of serious consequences which may develop, they proceed to load up what they consider "surplus" animals and drive off the place. Now they are being sought. Farmers bothered with such individuals should be in touch with their county allotment committee.

And Bill Garnick has gone "pansy" on us. He is chauffering an elderly wealthy Lincoln woman around in a high powered factory made Buick. But you can bank on Bill's being back in the thick of the football scrap at the University of Nebraska next fall. . . . Lynn Beeghly is described as the best soft-baller in Ord. . . . "Dipping bees" are replacing the so-called old fashioned "husing bees" in some sections of the state. There farmers cooperatively dip their sheep to protect them from ticks. . . . Surely there is no infant in Ord like the one described in South Dakota as not seeing rain since she was born two years ago. . . .

One doesn't have to travel far in eastern Nebraska to find isolated spots where the drouth is probably as severe as it is in any part of the country. Down in southern Johnson county just recently, I personally saw farmers cutting down trees so they could feed the tops of them to their cattle. The story may sound exaggerated but, nevertheless, is accurate and true.

Some Valley county 4-H club members are probably attending the district judging day at Sargent this week. There they will get individual training in judging all kinds of 4-H projects. It won't be long before county and state fair time is here and boys and girls throughout the country are getting ready for the competition early.

AUCTION!

Weller Pavilion, Ord
Saturday, June 30, 1 p.m.
Cattle - Horses - Hogs

We are opening our pavilion in order to afford you a market for your distressed livestock. There is no use of sending your stocker cattle to Omaha or Grand Island where there is little or no more pasture than here. I have just returned from a 1500 mile rip and find he sandhills to the north of us and the northeast section of Nebraska are the real bright spots so far as feed is concerned. By reason of operating two sale pavilions in this favored territory along the Northwestern we have an extensive acquaintance among the feeders and farmers of that section and will be able to get many buyers from there to come to Ord. So we can say without fear of contradiction that "your livestock will net you more dollars thru your home auction than any place else you may go." Now a few words regarding the so-called "government buying of cattle". If you have cattle with quality their campaign is just a lot of "bologna," as the only cattle you can afford to sell them is the "junk" (old canner cows, holsteins, and jersey steers, if not too heavy and a few short yearling heifers (providing the inspector is a friend of yours". I make this statement openly regardless of politics as I know whereof I speak, having had contact with the situation in South Dakota. With the above enumerated exceptions I will personally guarantee you more dollars for your good cattle than you can procure from the government, and you'll get spot cash (no waiting 60 or 90 days for the money.)

So bring in your cattle, hogs, or horses — We'll stake our reputation that we can eat any other market.
