Convivial Ordites stopped at the Psmith home recently and called out to Mrs. Psmith: "Please pick out Psmith, Mrs. Psmith, the rest of us want to go home!"

Dean Lambert Tells Big Audience Here 'I'm Still Wary' Despite Russian Peace Entreaties

Dean Lambert, Nebraska U ag college head, capitivated an audience of over 200 persons here, Monday, with a talk on Russia.

He recently headed an unofficial American delegation of farm experts who made the journey behind the iron curtain.

Slides Aid Talk

The talk was illustrated with slides. They, and an informal clothing demonstration with Banker Crawford Mortensen as a model, were meeting highlights.

The clothing was given Lambert by town delegations encountered on the tour. He was also given several bottles of champagne in a handsome leather suitcase.

Lambert gave the champagne away. The duty to the United States, he said, cost $7 a bottle.

Lambert closed the meeting with a question and answer session.

Here are some of the queries asked by Valley countyans:

Q. Why does Russia maintain the Iron Curtain? Pictures show they are much like us.

A. Ask Kruschev. Russia is a feudal system. The Communists probably have been afraid of fomenting discontent if free exchange of ideas and information existed.

Q. What kinds of autos do Russians have?

A. Four. Two high-priced ones similar to our '49 Buicks and Packards usually used by officials. Two others, cheaper, used by ordinary people.

Q. Why don't we hear about Russian storms, drouths, hurricanes, crop failures, etc.

A. Because the Russian interpretation of what is news is different. Newspapers carry a great deal of government news and little else. They feel, what we call news, isn't important.

Q. How high is rent?

A. Reasonably low for the average worker.

Q. I see, by the slides, all Russians wear shoes?

A. Russians have shoes. They're expensive, probably aren't worn as often as yours, and probably are repaired a great deal more.

Q. What about this Russian wheat with four or five heads?

A. I was told by an ag expert branched wheat did exist but it had no economic significance.

Q. Were you permitted to see everything?

A. Yes. Of course we were shown the better things just like the Russian tour here. But we made a sizable journey. You can't hide too much on a tour like that from a trained observer.

Q. How are roads?

A. Between major cities excellent. Some are new. Away from there poor. Russian commerce depends more on a well developed system of canals.

Q. How is service in stores?

A. Prices are high but crowds are large. In state stores there were always long lines until the item was sold. In private stores lines are missing but prices are much higher. I can't see how they can afford to buy.

Q. Were you questioned by the US government when you returned?

A. We were questioned by several agencies. You can't make a tour like this and not have a lot of people wanting to know what you've learned.

Q. Now that you've seen Russia and Russians up close, what it your general attitude towards them? The delegations?'

A. I'm still suspicious and I think that goes for the delegation. But I also think we should meet them halfway.

Two Light Rains Total .21 Inches

Ord registered .21 inches of rain in two light showers Friday and Tuesday.

Both wetted streets, fogged windshields but yielded little moisture.

The week's highest temperature registered Monday when it reached 74 degrees.

Friday's 43 degrees was the week's low.

Greeley Lawsuit May Base Arguments On State Auditors Report

That Greeley county lawsuit, filed by Ord. Attorney John Sullivan for Frank Byerly and Carol Palser against Ellis Douthit, Greeley county commissioner, apparently will base arguments on a state auditor's report made this year.

The audit covered 1954 from January to December. It was compiled by Walter Lovejoy and E. Vance Eckman.

In discussing the commissioners' office, the report says:

". . . the flagrant disregard of the laws in this state is certainly evident on claims filed by certain county board members in performances of services to this (Greeley) county. We call your attention to monies drawn from the Road Fund and the Rural Mail Route Fund for the year 1954 as well as funds drawn in excess of the statutory provisions."

Report Quotes Law

The report continues:

"We refer to Section 33-128, Revised Statutes of Nebraska for 1949 and quote, "Members of county boards shall be allowed for the time they shall necessarily be employed in the performance of all duties of that office, the sum of $7.50 per day and .06 per mile to be paid out of the general fund . . . We refer to paragraph 7, of the same section," . . . in similar counties not under township organization $1,450."

On a page devoted to Mr Douthit's claims the audit indicated he worked 557 days during 1954. One hundred and seventy one were charged to the general fund; 354 charged to the road fund, and 32 charged to the mail route fund.

Douthit drew claims adding to $6,148.70, the report said. He is listed as drawing $1,282.50 from the general fund; $4,437.80 from the road fund and $428.40 from the mail route fund.

Mr. Palser and Mr. Byerly filed the suit against Mr. Douthit and the National Surety Corp. his official bondsmen last week.

Exterior Work Starts on Parochial School

A huge pile of dirt in front of St. Mary's parochial school has been removed, and the yard is being leveled.

Walks will be poured soon and gutters are being dug along the edge of the grounds.

Work is progressing rapidly on the school interior.

A new lawn was planted in front of the rectory the past week. More landscaping on the school and church yards is planned.

Children who attend school use the vacant lot back of the church as a play ground.

Consistency Pays

This is National Newspaper Week so an unusual story isn't amiss.

Two Ord business men were discussing the merits of advertising when one said:

"I've tried ads a couple of times but I've never received any results."

"How long did you court your wife?", asked another, "Did she 'buy' the first time you asked?"

Lodgepole Crash Kills Claude Montanye's

Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. Montanye, of Sargent, were killed in a car-truck crash on Highway 30 shortly before noon Wednesday at the outskirts of Lodgepole.

Mr. Montanye, 58, was killed in the crash.

Mrs. Garnet Montanye, 56, died later in Cheyenne County Memorial hospital in Sidney.

The Montanyes lived on a farm about 8 miles northwest of Sargent.

The Associated Press quoted a Safety Patrol report that the eastbound Montanye car veered sharply into the path of the westbound truck driven by Donald J. Gorbutt.

The truck was owned by Harms Bros. Trucking Company of Fleming, Colo. Gorbutt was uninjured.

The couple had one daughter, Mrs. Inez Shaffe, Atkinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Montanye were returning from a trip to California where they had gone to visit relatives.

Among survivors of Mr. Montanye is a brother, Clayton of Comstock.

Mrs. Joe Myers of Broken Bow is a sister of Mrs. Montanye.

Chamber Eyes New Street Decorations

Mulling Procurement of Plastic Panels on Nativity, Yuletide

Chamber of commerce directors here Tuesday night tentatively agreed to spend $800 for Christmas street decorations from the Holiday Co. of Lincoln.

The decorations are 2 foot x 3 foot illuminated plastic panels depicting Nativity and Christmas scenes.

The chamber hopes to purchase the decorations on a two year basis. About $400 will be paid each year.

The panels are a pole decoration. The panel bracket clamps to light poles on the square.

Have Jubilee Use

Chamber President Bill Lee said the panels may be used to publicize Ord's 75th anniversary next year. Flag clusters can be inserted.

"When Yuletide is over," he said "the plastic Christmas panels can be removed. We can then insert others for Ord's jubilee."

Lee said the chamber will make an attempt to utilize aluminum candles bought two years ago.

Candles On Highway

He said they will probably be placed on light poles leading into Ord along Highway 11 from the north and south.

The candles were bought for the square. However they failed to provide anything flashy under the mercury vaper street illumination.

Chamber directors took no such chance on the new decorations. One was installed on the square Tuesday night then viewed by some of the utility board and chamber directors.

Following the viewing the directors voted to buy the decorations ". . . if it could be accomodated in the budget."

NPPS Construction to Aid REMA Supply

Loup City - No. Loup 115,000 KV. Line Construction Told

The Nebraska Public Power System has authorized a $6½ million dollar construction program that will include a new line from Loup City to North Loup.

The Loup City-North Loup line will include a substation. It will cost about $400,000, officials announced.

Construction is planned this fall.

The announcement apparently stamps the term, "successful" on efforts here by the Loup Valley Rural Electric Membership Assn.

For months REMA officials have plugged the construction to provide power for the REMA grid north of Ord and west of Loup City.

REMA Manager Wilbert Calvin said Monday the construction will provide REMA with an adequate power source and, in addition, allow some leeway for more demands expected to soar within the next ten years. Demands increased 18 per cent last year, he said.

Will Use ⅓

Calvin said REMA will immediately use about a third of the new 115,000 KV. line's possibilities.

"The other two thirds," he said, "will guarantee us a firm source for increased farm demands that are coming with the development of irrigation, air conditioning, and other uses."

REMA has been purchasing part of its power from the Ord muny plant. Last September Ord councilmen indicated they would be happier if the REMA could be supplied elsewhere.

Calvin said, as soon as NPPS completes the Loup City-North Loup line, the REMA load will be shifted from Ord to NPPS.

Two-Way Plan

He pointed out the construction is only one phase of an idea aimed at giving REMA a two way supply.

In addition to the Loup City-North Loup line the REMA is also plugging for a line from Ord to Arcadia via Spalding.

If this drive is successful, Calvin said, it will give REMA a two way source. The latter is quite important, Calvin said, during storms.

"If one grid fails we can always shift the load to the other," he said.

REMA at present is buying some power from NPPS at a substation near Loup City. However most of the load is distributed in REMA's southwest area.

Will Aid Towns

The new construction has one other advantage. It will firm up power for Elyria, Bartlett, Erieson, North Loup and Scotia.

The five are supplied by Consumers from an old 35,000 KV line that runs east of Loup City to near Ashton then north to North Loup.

This line will probably be torn down when the new construction is finished, Calvin added.

City Caught in Squeeze; K-N Prexy Says Rate to City Plant May Be Hiked

Kansas-Nebraska's biggest man triggered the company's best shot at the Ord city council, Monday, in what appears to be the wrap-up to the long contested gas rate fight.

K-N Prexy S. D. Whiteman told the council it could either grant the home and business increase, or pay another $6,000 a year for gas to service the Ord municipal light plant.

Councilmen mulled the offer for upwards of 30 minutes then laid it over for action at a later meeting.

Whiteman's offer climaxed an hour's talk. He began by saying his job was to make ends meet.

Must Show Profit

"If I don't show a profit for stockholders they will get somebody who will," he said.

He said K-N and Ord had always enjoyed "pleasant" relations. "And," he added, "the fault probably lies with us if the foundation for the asked increase wasn't properly laid."

"But the fact is," he continued, "we can no longer afford to supply you with the service Ord's been enjoying."

Whiteman said he was aware a federal judge decided Ord's franchise was a "contract."

Asks Mercy

"So we're here tonight," he said, "to sort of throw ourselves on your mercy."

Mayor Gus Schoenstein then ed: "And what are the po ties if we don't allow th crease?"

Whiteman re[illegible] three:

First, he free service vents, adjusting pilot lights, etc.

Second, he said, th here would probably be merchandising would be on, and no advertising purchase.

Muny Rates Higher

Third, he said, K-N would terminate its present contract rate with the Ord muny plant and offer another. In the latter the rate would be the same as Northern Natural Gas charges industrial firms.

Schoenstein asked: "Would that be a higher rate for the plant?"

Whiteman said: "Yes. Your present gas bill is about $23,000. Under the new contract it would increase to about $29,000.

Whiteman said: "If you want to stay by your city franchise then we will live up to ours with the electric plant. You can either buy plant gas at the new rate, or go back to burning oil and we have the Ord load to sell somewhere else." He cited the clause under which they can notify the city 30 days in advance of a new rate.

"No Malice"

Just prior to the last Whiteman again emphasized there was no malice in his demand.

"It is simply a question of making this investment pay," he said.

Schoenstein asked: "If we grant this increase what protection do we have from further increases?"

Whiteman indicated very little. In a long description of franchises he implied they are only so many words demanded by bankers who loan utilities money.

"For instance," he said, "Chadron wants gas now. Do you suppose we could write a contract that would predict the fair price of gas 2 years from now? Or could you gentlemen, or your attorney?"

Rate Best Possible

He said the rates will be the best rate K-N can give and he wanted that on record. But he could make no guarantees.

"I can't promise a gas rate any better than I can promise the price of a loaf of bread. We'll give the best rate we can. Maybe we may be able to even make a cut. I frankly don't know."

The council then asked the K-N group to clear the room while the offer was discussed.

In the hall Whiteman told the Quiz the domestic rate increase

The Middle Loup Irrigation district of Arcadia has filed a state supreme court brief in support of North Loup.

Here Is Text of Lambert's Report Heard Here Monday

Text of a speech given by Dean William Lambert, Monday, in the high school auditorium here.

As most any American traveler will tell you, the best part of a trip abroad is the arrival home.

I feel that way about the trip I made to Russia in July and August as head of the U.S. official farm delegation which spent five weeks and traveled about 10,000 miles to inspect agricultural lands and practices behind the iron curtain.

While our group was in the Soviet Union, a delegation of Russian farm observers visited this country. I wonder if they also feel that the best part of this unexpected exchange was their return home. In a way, I hope they do. It would mean that at least in the love of home, Americans and Russians have a common meeting ground, and that if we have one, perhaps we can find others.

Let me say at once that I do not believe a few exchanges can resolve the differences between West and East. I do not believe that exchange visits give us reason to lower our guard or reduce armaments. But I do believe that through exchanges we can contribute a little toward the development of a means other than war to relieve the most dangerous conflict of philosophies that has ever threatened the peace of the civilized world.

12 Took Trip

Though our group of twelve went to Russia at the invitation of the Russian government and with the blessings of our own U.S. Departments of State and Agriculture, we were traveling as private citizens. We arranged our own financing and we carried with us all of the doubts and suspicions that the Communist isolation of Russia has created in the minds of Americans.

We entered the country mentally prepared for almost anything: slave labor, intrigue — even salt mines. We selected the areas we wished to visit and our general itinerary was worked out with the help of our own authorities in Washington. The specific installations and farms that we inspected, however, were chosen for us by the Russians. Regardless of what our imaginations might have pictured for us in advance, I can report that in our extensive travels in Russia we saw nothing to merit the conclusion that the people there are uncommonly unhappy or on the brink of revolution.

Everywhere we went people seemed most eager to catch a glimpse of these strange men from America and to make us welcome. Invariably crowds would gather outside the hotels where we stopped and cheered when we waved from windows or balconies. At Murmask, when our ship docked there were literally thousands to greet us and so many of them pushed up to give us flowers that even the captain of our vessel, to say nothing of myself, feared the gangplank would give away. It took us more than an hour to disembark.

Russian Welcome

A Russian welcome, especially in the rural areas, involves a little ceremony at which the visitors are presented with bread and salt. I have not yet had time to trace the exact significance of it, but we were told the bread and salt are tokens of sincere wishes for health and long life. I have received bread to support a giant staff of life and enough salt to qualify as a weather-beaten seadog.

If the welcomes we received were staged by Communist propaganda agents, I must say that Ringling Brothers after all these years are not the greatest showmen on earth and that ordinary Russian peasants, factory workers, and office employees have unmatched talents for acting.

There were, of course, some disturbing implications attached to some of the greetings. Occasionally we had the opportunity of appearing in market places unannounced. When the shoppers, mostly Russian housewives, saw us, they would crowd around and beg us—some of them with tears in their eyes—to tell the American people that the Russians want peace. That was the universal message.

Such demonstrations, it seems to me, indicate that the Communist propaganda mills have been quite effective in making the ordinary Russian citizen, the vast majority of whom do not hold membership in the Party, believe that Americans are bent on war. I like to think that the opportunity we gave them to see that Americans have neither horns nor tails and breath no fire, may have proved reassuring. More than that, however, I am convinced that we need to do everything we can to demonstrate America's sincere commitment to the official pronouncements of President Eisenhower and other official American spokesmen that we, too, want peace. This is not an easy task when the people who need the message most are locked behind an Iron Curtain. If our exchange visit made so much as a pin-point hole in that curtain, it was worthwhile.

Trip To Inspect

The avowed purpose of our trip, of course, was to inspect Russian agriculture. None of us claim qualifications as sociologists or political or military observers. But like any American who had the opportunity we naturally would be alert for any sign which might indicate that the people of Russia, a country two and a half times larger than the United States and at least 30 per cent more populous, are sick and tired of Communism. In honesty, I cannot report that I saw any such evidence.

My preconception of what we might see in the way of agricultural developments in Russia were, of necessity, based upon what I have seen in other foreign countries, especially in Turkey. A Russian neighbor. In several respects, Russian agriculture is further advanced than I had expected. Here are a few examples:

First, progress in improving their methods of wheat production is greater than I thought it would be.

Second, I was impressed with the emphasis that is being placed on gricultural research. It is deeper and more firmly established than I would have guessed.

Third, though Russian farm machinery is inferior to ours, the obvious rapid improvement and extended use of it exceeded my expectations.

Young Are Trained

Fourth, Russia's effort to train young people in the agricultural sciences—and, for that matter, in all fields—is more extensive than I expected. The Russians claim to have 1,000 agricultural experiment stations. They have numerous agricultural schools, institutes, and colleges. Of course, we did not see all of them but the installations we visited were well staffed and, most of them appeared to be adequately supported financially.

Lest the listing of these examples prompts the thought that Russian agricultural progress compares favorably with that which has been achieved in this country, I want to say flatly that it does not. My guess is that in practice Russian agriculture is probably 20 or 25 years behind ours. But Russian agriculture is making progress. I saw enough to convince me that the rate of progress in recent years has been very rapid and if the government continues the present emphasis it is giving to agriculture, that rate will be even faster in the immediate future.

Russia's agricultural system functions through three principal agencies, or types of operations: First, the collective farms; second, the state farms; and, third, the machine tractor stations.

The Collective Farms

Despite its vast area, Russia has little more productive agricultural land than the United States. The collective farms utilize by far the greatest part of it, about 83 per cent. Fifteen years ago there were 232,000 of these farms but through mergers and consolidations the number has been reduced to 89,000. In size they vary from about 2,000 to as many as 75,000 or more acres in exceptional cases.

All of the land, of course, belongs to the state. The collective farms are communes which occupy and operate the land. The agricultural workers make up the membership of the commune and elect a farm manager who, I feel sure, must be a member of the Communist Party or at least must have the approval of local party officials.

Plans for the year's operation are developed by the farm manager in keeping with the quotas and general requirements passed down to each cooperative farm from the Ministry of Agriculture. These plans, involving such matters as crops and acreages, livestock, and even rates of pay, are discussed and voted upon by the general membership. We had no way to determine how much authority the workers have to amend the original plan, but they do vote.

The production on most of the collective farms is diversified, including grains, potatoes, fruits, vegetables, fiber crops, sugar beets, tobacco, and cotton, depending upon the soils and climate of the region. Most of the farms also produce poultry and dairy products and some livestock, though livestock production is not as advanced in Russia, comparatively speaking, as are other agricultural endeavors.

Produce Payment

The government requires each collective farm to make obligatory payments to it in produce. These payments, of course, amount to taxes. The price allowed by the government for these payments is considerably below the free market rate. About two years ago the government made liberalizing adjustments in the rates which apply to the collective farms. As a result, the number of people willing to work on the collective farms has increased. We were told that the farm population has increased about a million and a half during the past two years. This trend is interesting considering the fact that increasing farm efficiency in our own nation continues to result in a decline in farm population.

Workers on the collective farms are paid in both cash and produce. Pay is based on a fixed "work day unit." The cash rate of pay varies from about 15 to 40 rubles, depending upon the nature of the work, the skill required, and the experience of the worker. According to the official rate of exchange, four rubles equal one dollar, but it is erroneous to assume that cash farm pay runs from $3.50 to $10 per day because, generally speaking, the purchasing power of money in Russia is much lower than in the United States.

For example, here are some Russian prices I noted in a food store in Kharkov: Fat salt pork about $4.10 a pound; beef about $2.35 a pound; eggs about a quarter each; milk about 75 cents a quart, and a dozen very small apples for 75 cents. In a state store in Odessa, print dresses were selling for between $75 to $125; men's suits $300 to $437 for the apparent equivalent of our $50 models; overcoats from $200 to $500; and, for the children, a small tricycle for about $22.

Pay Is Divided

The payments in produce which collective farm workers receive are derived from two sources. First, as a part of their pay, they receive a limited amount of produce from the general farm effort: grain, vegetables, fruit, and the like. Second, workers on collective farms, as in certain other Russian enterprises, are permitted to hold and operate individual plots of ground.

Individual plots on the collective farms vary from about an acre ... a half to about three acres. These plots provide the sites for family homes and gardens. Many families have their own cow, a few pigs, and a flock of chickens. Workers may sell or bequeath the property they develop on these plots, but not the land.

Occasionally we joked with some of our hosts about these family plot operations which, because of their free enterprise characteristics, certainly violate a true concept of communism. Actually, the result of individual incentive was very apparent in the family plot operations. I was given to understand that most families meet about 25 per cent of their living costs from their plot efforts even though the government receives a modest share in taxes.

Worker Is Resigned

By our standards, Russia's collective farm worker—and about half of them are women—has small cause for enthusiasm. But it is not by our standards that the collective farm worker lives. He seems to accept his assignment to a work brigade as a matter of course. If his brigade surpasses its quota, he shares in a bonus. If he is selected as a particularly outstanding worker, he may be awarded a hero's medal, a highly cherished honor. Besides, there are other benefits as health insurance, free vacations, and access to a recreational center, invariably called a "Palace of Culture," where concerts and local-talent entertainments are presented.

Collective farm children may be put in school at the age of two months. The little folks receive what seemed to me excellent care in nursery schools. Their working parents bring them to school in the morning and call for them in the evening. Education in Russia is compulsory through the seventh grade and each collective farm has a primary school. Many of the largervillages have secondary schools extending through the tenth grade. Pupils who finish the tenth grade may go on into higher education if they pass qualifying examinations. Incidentally, the state pays the educational expenses of students accepted for training at the college level.

Farm Home Small

The collective farm family home is usually small and without electricity or plumbing. One well often serves several homes. An open hearth commonly serves for both cooking and heating purposes. But the houses are clean and lace curtains at the windows are almost standard. The type of construction, whitewashed adobe brick or wood, varies with the region. In the colder regions, some houses are large enough to provide adjoining shelter for livestock.

Some of the larger collective farm villages have churches and I saw several churches in the cities. The buildings appeared to be in good repair in most cases but we were told that their congregations are composed mainly of old people. About all I can report is that the government permits religious services but I saw nothing to indicate that the influence of the church is great or growing.

The State Farms

As the name implies, a state farm in Russia is strictly an enterprise of the government. Their operations are directed by a manager and are usually given to specific objectives, such as the production of foundation seed, cattle, or swine to supply the needs of the collective farms. Many of the state farms are very large.

Employees of a state farm are paid in cash and in produce and also have the oportunity of operating their own individual plots which are much smaller than those available to the collective farm workers.

The plots of both state farm and factory workers are about four-tenths of an acre in size.

Machine Tractor Stations

The Machine tractor stations are also strictly governmental enterprises. They supply power machinery and crews to plow, plant, cultivate, and harvest on the collective farms. They are, however, more than a farm machinery pool. Their shops are well equipped and capable of making machine parts as well as accomplishing day-to-day maintenance and seasonal overhauls.

The machine tractor station staffs usually include several technicians: engineers, agronomists and animal husbandmen whose services are available to the collective farms. Both machine and human services supplied by the machine tractor stations must be paid for by the collective farms in the form of obligatory payments to the state.

At present the Russian government is strengthening the machine tractor stations. Through the station program the government is able to keep close control of machinery which is in short supply. Little power machinery is under control of the collectives. The station program also provides a decentralized network of very well equipped machine shops which might come in handy in event of war or other national emergency.

Red Tape Involved

It requires little imagination to picture the redtape involved in the operation of Russia's agricultural system. At the same time, however, it is a system which can be directed according to plan.

Russian agriculture faces many problems. And, in passing, I might say that we have a few problems in agriculture of our own in America.

But the problems of the two nations are completely different. Here we face the problem currently of what to do with farm surpluses. In Russia, the problem has to do with increasing farm output.

One problem in Russia has to do with increasing the efficiency of farm operations. It was apparent to all of us that there is a great waste of manpower on the collective farms -- especially when measured against our own standards. Here in America we usually figure that one farmer produces enough food for himself and at least eight others but in Russia today I doubt if one farmer produces any more than enough to feed two or three others.

In addition, the Russians face the problem of management of land in their New Lands project where they are attempting to step up production. They are attempting to produce wheat in a vast area where the rainfall is but from 10 to 12 inches annually. It was our feeling that they will have to carefully manage the land in order to prevent dust bowls from developing.

Feed Real Problem

And, one of the real problems the Russians face is stepping up the feed production for livestock. In attempting to increase their corn acreage by millions of acres, they probably will be planting corn in areas where rainfall is inadequate and where perhaps sorghums might me more practical than corn.

I am sure that you appreciate the difficulty—or, perhaps I should say, the impossibility—of presenting a clear picture of Russian agriculture under the limitations of this report. I am aware, too, that our inspection, made in haste, permitted nothing more than a surface glance at general operations. Our time was insufficient to enable us to carefully evaluate research work but I saw enough to convince me that the Russian agricultural scientists, by no means, are bumbling busybodys. The government is giving great encouragement to scientific research and training. Here is an example. The pay of a department chairman at the Agricultural Institute at Kubishev is about $1,500 a month, and ranking professors receive about $1,000 a month. Competition among students for the opportunity of entering such institutes is very keen. Only about one out of every three who applies is accepted and admission to study is a coveted prize.

Scientists Bright

Regardless of how dull we might wish Russian scientists to be, the fact remains that they are not dull. Before the Iron Curtain dropped, scientists of the world had reason to respect the quality of Russian research in many fields. At the recent Geneva conference where atomic developments were discussed and displayed, the Russians proved to the satisfaction of many of our western scientists that they know what they are about.

When we consider the Russian record in science and research, we must, it seems to me, face up to the fact that out of Russian laboratories, as out of laboratories in other countries, will come new ideas and refinements of old ones. For our own American self-interest, if for no other reason, we should know about them. As things stand, the Russians can, and undoubtedly do, keep close tab on scientific advances throughout the world. Certainly, they can order all the scientific journals from news dealers in Europe or in this country. Therefore, I am in favor of encouraging an exchange of personnel, especially in the area of science. It may be that this farm exchange of the past summer, casual as it was opens the way for development of an enduring program. At least, I believe we should pursue that possibility.

As I say, I am aware of the limitations of our inspection of Russian agriculture and I recognize the danger of over-simplifying and distorting a very complex subject.

Agriculture Moves

I can say, however, that Russian agriculture is advancing, and advancing rapidly. I believe its progress is lifting the standard of Russian farm life. One of our group, Mr. J. M. Kleiner of Nampa, Ida., is a native of Russia. He left there during World War I, and I don't think I would misrepresent his thinking by saying that he detests the communist system. Mr. Kleiner told me that despite his feelings, it was most apparent to him that the lot of the average Russian farmer today is much better than it was under the Czarist regimes.

Seen through American eyes, the lot of the Russian farmer is a sorry one. We may pity him and shake our heads over his plight. But the Russian farmer does not see himself through American eyes. The measuring stick he uses is Russian, not American. When he uses it, he undoubtedly concludes that he is better off than was his father. And I cannot believe that all the wishful thinking from Maine to California will have much influence on him.

But I came home convinced that the Russian farmer's desire for peace — and that of the rank and file—is as trong and genuine as our own.

Can't Ignore Thinking

I am convinced that Americans, representing as we do the leadership of the Western World, cannot afford to ignore either the advance of the thinking of the Russians who, whether we like it or not, represent the leadership of the Eastern World.

And I came home with the feeling that time is as much in our favor as it is in the Russians because in the long run the objective is not the production of goods but of ideas to win the minds of men. In that effort we have a selling job to do, but it is not an impossible job. It is rather, one of hope and challenge.

City Caught . . .

here, if granted, would cost Ord homes and businesses, "make it $9,000."

(About $1,800 of the amount will return to the city in franchise fees).

Service Halted

Whitman said the raise to the muny plant will gain the company about $6,000. "We'll have to pick up the remainder by curtailing services."

Interpreting the meeting offer, this is about the council's position:

If it turns down K-N's asked increase it will pay $6,000 more for muny gas. That cost will come from electric users. In addition service to gas customers here will be curtailed.

If the council allows the domestic increase Ord gas users will pay approximately $9,000 more each year. Of that the city will recover $1,800 in fees.

Which shall it be? That's the decision the council must make by next meeting time.

In other business the council agreed to furnish LP gas for the Ord airport until Jan. 1.

The administration building there is ordinarily kept just above freezing. With GOC personnel occupying the building Edward Kokes asked the city to bear the increased expense to make the building comfortable.

Kokes said the GOC was composed of over 150 Ordites ". . . all of them voters and taxpayers."

Yes, here's a way to better poultry health—and so easy! Simply add new Wazine to the drinking water. Wazine is a water wormer that works. It removes 95% or more of large roundworms. Wazine is quick (worming's done, sun to sun) yet safe (birds take Wazine-medicated water readily). So, take the work out of worming—let birds worm themselves with Wazine. No feed to mix, no tablets to give. You will toast Wazine for the way it saves you work, time, money.

Chants Squeak by Central City, 14-6

Fumbles, Breaks Mar Expected Easy Win; 800 Fans Make Trip

The Chanticleers, with a deep bow of appreciation to the Ord line and Back Ron Romans, staved off determined Central City, Friday, 14 to 6.

The squeak was the narrowest the Big Reds have encountered this season.

The Ord squad played in the hole most of the contest. Seven fumbles, and a case of mental aberration at center were blamed.

Always In Hole

So far this year the Chants have played best when threatened.

They usually flub around until the fans are frantic then amass enough points to win.

It's been that way with Holdrege, Albion and Broken Bow. Friday's contest at Central City was another link in a similar skein.

To give you an idea; Ord kicked off to the Bisons then held for downs on Bison 20.

The Bisons punted out. Ord took the punt on their own 20 then fumbled to let the Bison recover there.

So, before the opening whistle had cooled, the Chants were locked in an all out scrap to stave off a first quarter score.

The Ord line held on the 10 to erase the threat.

Example Two

Here's another example; Ord had possession on their own 40. The Chant power seemed ready to roll.

Chant Center Chuck Blaha apparently turned the ball to get it laced side up. A Bison lineman fell on the ball claiming it had been lifted.

Referee Carl Samuelson allowed the claim.

That paved the way for Central City's TD. Ron Romans nipped the threat once with an end zone interception.

But the Chants were offside. The Bisons took the penalty, sneaked over the center for a first down, then rammed across from about the four. The conversion failed.

Chants Spectacular

Ord scoring was spectacular and timely. Midway of the second quarter Ron Romans heaved an aerial to Don Kapustka.

Don took the ball over his shoulder while scampering in the Bison pay dirt. Romans made the toss while at least three Bisons hung on his neck. The play covered 30 yards.

Don's rush for the point was good. That made it Ord 7, Central City 6.

After the half Ord looked better. The offensive eleven began to gain but fumbles hurt.

In the third Ord took possession on a punt to the 19.

Eleven plays later the ball rested on the Bison 2 as the quarter ended.

Kapustka went over in the fourth with straight power. Romans added the conversion. That ended the scoring.

The Bisons broke away for one long pass in the fourth.

Virg Falter stopped the play cold on the Ord 10 with a shoe string tackle.

800 Ordites Along

An estimated 800 to 1,000 Ord fans made the trip. It was probably the largest delegation to journey out of town for a Chant contest.

In addition countless former Ordites made the trip from nearby towns.

Fans spent half the game watching the play and half shaking hands.

Ron Babcock was the leading ground gainer. Ron netted 48 yards in 8 tries. He was dazed on one try but pronounced okay after the game by Dr. Otis Miller.

Other yardage merchants were; Romans—36 yards in 7 tries; Kapustka—45 yards in 9 tries; Falter 11 yards in 3 tries; Anderson 5 yards in 1 try; Thomas 1 yard in 1 try.

Romans Intercepts 3

Romans added 20 yards on one kick return. Falter added 30 yds. with two 15 yard punt returns. Romans added three pass interceptions one killed by penalty.

Defensively Romans led the clean tackles department with 3. Darrel Conner had 8; Delmer Conner 7; Chuck Blaha 7; Virg Falter 7; Anderson and Kapustka 4 each; Bricker and Troyer 3 each; Keith Gilroy 2; Sich 2 and Thomas and Vasicek 1 each.

Homecoming Queen Wilma Vodehnal and royal party . . . the girls posed pert and pretty.

North Loup Humbles Palmer, 19 to 0 for Homecoming Thurs.

North Loup capped a successful Homecoming Day there Thursday with a one-sided six-man win over Palmer, 20 to 0.

The Challengers were never in danger. Out gunned in every quarter Palmer reeled then gave ground under the Blue onslaught.

The win was a token of sorts to the Challenger Homecoming queen North Loup could have made it more successful only by offering a Palmer head on a silver platter.

The Blues pushed across three TD's then added one conversion for 2 points.

Kick Skids Bar

The conversion offered the only doubtful moment in the game. It barely skidded across the crossbar. Otherwise it was North Loup all the way.

Scoring was by Wayne Sheldon, Edward Kolar and Gary Hawks. The first two rammed across on sheer power. Hawks snatched a Blue pass then scampered into paydirt.

Palmer was outclassed but not outfought. Although repeatedly forced to kick to gain living space Palmer shook the Challengers with vicious tackles.

Tackling Good

In fact tackling on both sides was the stiffest seen in six man play this season.

Queen Wilma . . . reigns over Challengers.

Miss Wilma Vodehnal was crowned Homecoming Queen at halftime. Her attendants were Jeanette Williams, Sharon Brown and Mary Morrow.

Martha Lee Hill, and Charles Klinger, a pint sized dressed-to-the-teeth couple, attended the queen.

Gary Hawks, apparently Mr. Football for the Challengers, crowned Miss Vodehnal just prior to the time she ascended a blue and silver dias.

Gary Hawks Rewarded

Gary was rewarded for the effort with a big moist smack. The Queen, then, in regal parade, made her way to the throne.

Pert and pretty the entourage posed for pictures, and smiled nods of recognition for spectator's applause.

The crowning ceremony followed cheers at halftime by Challenger girls in blue sweaters. The kids whooped it up for both teams then trooped off the field.

Surprizingly enough no band steamed up the ceremony. The Pep club wheeled and pirouetted to the doleful thump of a single drum.

St. Paul Spoils Scotia Homecoming

St. Paul spoiled Homecoming for Scotia, Friday, humiliating the Tigers 32 to 6.

Bebernes and Al Bredthauer were Tiger standouts although the Scotia offensive punch never developed.

Davis and Malloy drew mention for good line play.

This week Scotia journeys to Loup City to meet the unbeaten new Class B eleven.

Loup City jumped into Class B recently on the basis of new enrollment.

Ord Chix Slam Ravenna 20 - 7

Ord juniors had too much power for Ravenna here, Tuesday night, licking the Bluejay juniors, 20 to 7.

It was Ord all the way. The Chix held Ravenna scoreless until the last quarter while tallying three times. Two conversions were good.

Back Bob Linke slammed across from the 30 to score in the first quarter. Back Keith Nelson added two more in the second and third stanzas.

Nelson powered to both markers over tackle. Jensen and Linke added the conversions.

Abraham was the Ravenna standout. On one thriller he toted a reverse from the Ravenna 40 to the Ord 10.

Ord held the luck edge also. Ravenna fumbled often and drew several penalties.

Karen Ita Named Scotia Grid Queen

Karen Ita, Scotia senior, was crowned football queen last Friday night in a home game between St. Paul and Scotia. Miss Ita is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ita.

Her attendants were Doris Studnicka and Sandy Bryan, both seniors. Junior class attendants were Yvonne Brown and Dorothy Dutcher, Sophomores Peggy Wagner and Deanna Beck; Freshmen Joyce Peterson and Sandra Gydesen and Kindergarten Judy Vance and Tommy Wagner.

The ceremony was held between halves. The band led a convertible bearing the queen. At the crowning Janice Wagner, queen last year, removed her crown handing it to Ron Bebernes, captain and Dean Spencer co-captain, who in turn placed it on the head of the new queen. She will reign until 1956.

The coronation was planned by the Pep club under the direction of Sponsor Miss Shannon.

—Dr. and Mrs. Lee C. Holmes of Central City spent Sunday with the doctor's brother, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Holmes.

Duck Blind Tenants Start Squat Saturday

Season on Squawkers Opens at Dawn; Limit is 5, Possession 10

First of the major seasons for hunters begins this Saturday, October 8, one-half hour before sunrise, when the 1955 duck season opens in Nebraska.

Goose shooting will not be legal until October 15.

Unlike previous opening days, when waterfowl shooting started at noon, this year the hunters can blast away during the early hours.

The 75 day long season, longest in recent years, was the outcome of a 15 day bonus allowed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to central flyway states.

The 15 day bonus was split. Half of the days were added to the first of the season and the other half added to the end of the season.

Agreement Made

This was done in keeping with an agreement made with the organized wildlife clubs of Nebraska. This gives hunters in the east end of the state the early opening date they desire.

At the same time the hunters in the west end of the state have a late closing date so they can take advantage of the late flights.

Daily bag limit is 5 and the possesion limit is 10. Both may include one wood duck and one hooded mergansers.

Mergansers (fish ducks) are to be included in the bag and possession limits, according to federal regulations.

The season on coot is the same as ducks with 10 bag and 10 possession limits.

Geese Open Oct. 15

Goose shooting wil not be legal until October 15. The 60 day goose season will continue until December 13.

The daily hunting hours are the same as for ducks, one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

Both the daily bag and possession limit on geese is 5.

Hunters cannot have in possession more than (a) 2 Canada geese or its subspecies, or (b) 2 white-fronted geese, or (c) 1 Canada goose or its subspecies and 1 white-fronted goose.

Chants Seek Fifth Victory at Fullerton

Meet Warriors Friday There: Lynn Nelson Is Still Flu Sidelined

The Chanticleers will seek their fifth straight victory at Fullerton, Friday, at eight o'clock.

The Chants are top favorites for this one. The Warriors may take some convincing but Ord should get it done with a sizable margin.

Fullerton has yet to impress this year. They've shellacked Schuyler 33 to 7; blasted Genoa 27 to 6 and humiliated Aurora 33 to 6.

Lost To Bisons

In the only stiff contest they fell victim to Central City 13 to 0.

Meanwhile Ord has won four straight. Two wins were over Broken Bow and Central City.

The Chants make the jaunt with the same squad that met Central City. Lynn Nelson is still out with the flu.

Ord students are looking for rides to the Fullerton game. If you have room, Ordettes ask, will you call Mrs. Bill Gogan at the school. Mrs. Gogan will book a youngster to travel with you. School kids will share expense if necessary.

Chant Coach Bill Gogan is hopeful. He termed last week's game "exceptional."

"We held off Central City despite a lot of bad breaks," Gogan said.

Will Eat At St. Paul

The Chant bus will leave at 3:30 Friday. The kids will eat at St. Paul on the way down and back.

It's about a 78 mile motor jaunt to Fullerton if you travel the blacktop to St. Paul then take off east over Highway 92.

The route, Scotia—Wolbach—Fullerton, is shorter but over graveled roads.

Game time is eight o'clock.

In series play Fullerton bested Ord in 1953, 33 to 15. The Chants came back in 1954 to win 27 to 12. The series is only two years old.

Ord Reserves Down St. Paul, Mon. 27-7

Ord reserves Monday evening humbled St. Paul, 27 to 7, in a contest that indicated some nice talent will be available here next year. The game was played here.

Chant reserves, (no starters and no seniors), scored in every period then applied the clamp to hold St. Paul to a lone tally in the second.

Austin and Don Vasicek were the hot rock toters for Ord.

Austin churned across twice, from the 10 and the 4, on handoffs. The first came 3 minutes after the starting whistle.

Vasicek replied with his specialty, fullback over tackle, for two others.

Austin added three conversions. Witherwax added 1.

Pocock scored on a 25 yard scamper but the TD was called back for a clipping penalty.

Offensive nods went to Troyer, Conner, Pocock, Vasicek and Austin.

Stevens looked best on defense.

Round Robin, Bond for OHS Graduates

Seventy students of Ord high school graduated in 1946. Twenty two of these started in kindergarten and were together the entire 13 years.

Following graduation a sizeable portion went to the university and graduated in 1950.

Thirteen of the original 72 have a round robin, which was started by Mrs. Dorothy Kokes Speidel, of Lincoln. It takes a year for letters to complete the circle as the women have scattered from coast to coast.

In the Round Robin are: Mrs. Speidel, Lincoln; Mrs. Mary Travis Luhrs, Imperial; Mrs. Kathleen Clement Sibley, Linden, N.J.; Mrs. Marilyn Ollis Underberger, Wise River, Mont.; Mrs. Jean Blaha Foley, Omaha; the Wolfe twins, Mrs. Arlene Marshall, Lincoln and Mrs. Maxine Kean, Colorado Springs; Mrs. Monica Gnaster Waters, Ord; Mrs. Joan Biemond Davis, Auburn, Wash.; Mrs. Norma Long Remington, Ord; Mrs. Shirley Martin, Colonica, Oakland, Calif.; Mrs. Mary Ann Novosad Estedillo, Oakland, Calif.; and Mrs. Carolyn Anderson Gallagher, Anselmo.

80th Birthday Recalls Memories for Ordite

Eighty candles on his cake, and a wealth of memories and experiences back of him. That's the story of George Houtby, Ord, ex-farmer who celebrated his 80th brithday this week.

His family, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Houtby of Wolbach, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Sevenker (Helen), and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Prien (Frances) were present at a family dinner at Mr. Houtby's home Sunday.

Mr. Houtby was born in Winterset, Iowa. The family came to Ord, via covered wagon when he was five. A young sister, Dollie (the late Mrs. C. B. Clark) was two.

A homestead south of Ord, near the Sherman county line, was their first home. The youngsters went to school in District 47. Their teacher was Myra Weed.

Mr. Houtby remembers the trip to Nebraska. Charlie Thrasher accompanied them, driving a covered wagon. The Missouri river at Omaha was crossed by ferry.

Flat platforms were built which were pulled across the river by cables.

About three wagons were able to cross at one time. When the opposite side was reached, the platforms were pulled back by cables from the other side. The trip from Grand Island to Ord was made over a trail.

He remembers working on the first irrigation ditch in here in 1894. He was 19 years old then. He recalls the crew cook was Philo Green and his son, Jason Green assisted.

Ed Miller also was one of the workers and one of the few who are still living.

Mr. Houtby made several trips back and forth to Iowa, but came back to Nebraska to stay in 1906.

He was married twice. His first wife was Hattie Grout, who died leaving three small childrn. His second wife was Louise Neumann, who died a year ago in August.

He has six children, Mable (Mrs. Chubbuck, Morton, Wash); Lee, of Sidney; Hattie, beginning her 14th year of teaching in Winslow; Chester, a farmer in Wolbach; Helen Sevenker and Frances Prien in Ord. Frances is a teacher. Helen at present is a substitute teacher.

In Mr. Houtby's family there are 14 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

For about 18 months, Mr. Houtby conducted an implement store in North Loup, in the now Community building. From 1926 to 1931, his home was in Burwell. Eleven years ago in February he came to his present home on the edge of Ord. He moved here from a farm west of town.

Other than the 18 months spent in business, he has always farmed. Up until last year, he kept up with small scale farming on town property.

After health began to fail he gave up cows and gardening and now keeps just a few chickens.

During his life he has been greatly interested in education. He has served on numerous school boards. He saw that his children received the best education possible and now is greatly interested in seeing his grandchildren attend school.

He reads without glasses and likes to spend spare time with magazines and papers.

He is a member of the Methodist church. He lives alone. He is a total abstainer and even considers it intemperate to overeat.

There were four children in Mr. Houtby's family. Two girls have died Dollie, (Mrs. Clark) and Myrtle (Mrs. Moore).

A brother, Edgar, still lives in Los Angles and writes occasionally.

At the birthday dinner, the birthday cake was the center of attraction. Made by Mrs. Prien it carried 80 candles.

Birthdays and anniversaries mean a lot to the family.

Mrs. Chester Houtby and children came from Wolbach Friday. Chester arrived Sunday.

Two Can Live as Cheap . . .

The Nebraska Citizen's Council, (who in the heck are THEY?) has been looking into county taxes lately, and now has come up with the suggestion smaller counties combine operations to enjoy a cheaper tax.

The way the council looks at it we could share the cost of a county engineer, use the same equipment for road building, and own a joint tenancy in jails, hospitals, libraries and other similar services.

The council's supposition behind it's reasoning is the old, old fallacy: "Two can live cheaper than one."

The answer is the same old answer: "Two CAN live cheaper than one, IF one doesn't eat."

The one "that doesn't eat" is the town or village to lose the services. Trade and traffic would drop measurably.

That's one unlikable angle to the council's recommendation. Another is the possible tax savings would be small compared to the gas you'd consume trying to run the services down.

Suppose Garfield county and Valley combined to share the cost of a public library. Can you picture yourself jumping into your car to drive to Burwell every time you wanted an armload of books?

Or can you picture Burwellites doing the same?

Most of us aren't quite as conscious of local level taxes as the Nebraska Citizen's Council believes.

If local taxes become excessive we are plenty close enough we can step in and trim the fat from county budgets.

What we do worry about is state and national tax levels where we have little, if any, control.

We'd humbly suggest the council raise its sights just a little and focus them on state spending.

As far as we are concerned we feel adequate to deal with the local situation.

* * Something Just A Little Bit Different * *

Ho, hum, these colds that afflict us at the change of the seasons, when the weather looks so delightful, exactly when outdoor fall activities allure.

Where do they come from? Does the dust of summer bring them? Are our lungs full of that blowing dirt from the extra dry August?

oOo

My nose itches. It burns a little. It tingles and aches. Those monstrous sneezes begin, and that watering of the eyes.

I live with a box of kleenex (adv.) in one hand.

My head begins to ache, and the bones of my face . . . darn those sinuses anyway. I hunt the aspirin bottle to dose myself.

Better get to bed and quit exposing the rest of the family. I now ache all over. I holler for a pitcher of fruit juice and a glass and a kind child brings it. I'll drown this darned old cold, I bet you.

First I blow hot, dripping with perspiration all over and madly fling off the covers. I'm boiling. Oh, I'm hot.

Then in about ten minutes I'm shivering, I clutch the bedclothes and give them a big heave towards me as I slip into an extra pajama jacket. I'll never get warm. I sneeze and sneeze and how my head is stopped up. Can't talk so anyone can understand me though I keep trying to give orders. As usual—!

oOo

The household whirls merrily on without me. Gene takes over the cooking and sends me up beautiful trays of unlikely foods. He also brings me papers, magazines, books to read, but they don't seem inviting when my eyes water and my head swims. I cuddle down and try to sleep but can't breathe so I rear up again against half a dozen pillows.

More aspirin. More kleenex (adv.) Have I got a fever? Where's that thermometer? Some old sulfa pills in the house. I'll take those. More aspirin. Juice and juice until I get my stomach upset and resort to tums (adv.). My stomach is really protesting as it swells up, rattles and grumbles at all the liquids and aspirin.

oOo

Why can't ordinary colds be cured? Such a common misery, but how many days and hours it steals from us. I don't have many, one or two a year perhaps, but when I get one it is a good model of what a bad cold is like.

oOo

Well, two or three days is certainly time enough to spend enjoying such a dandy cold. Now my throat is getting sore, down below the voice box where it always does.

Resting this cold away hasn't seemed to work. My family are exhausted waiting for me to bounce out of that bed.

Guess I might as well step over to the doctor and let him punch me full of holes. That'll fix me!

Should have done that sooner, he will probably say.

This Is Newspaper Week

October 1 through 8 has been set aside as National Newspaper Week.

It's purpose is to focus your attention on an institution in whose operation you have a vastly greater hand than perhaps you've ever realized. It is also an appropriate time to call your attention to an effort to deprive you of that hand.

The institution is your newspaper — daily, weekly or whatever.

Let's begin by dismantling that term newspaper. It means paper, which, after due processing, comes to you covered with news. Paper is a self-evident, tangible thing. There is no disagreement as to what it is. But what of news? It is far less self-evident and deceptively intangible.

News, in fact, is all things to all men. What it is depends on who is defining it.

And it is your definition, not the editor's that matters. The paper stays in business if it does a competent job of fulfilling your definition of news. If it devotes itself just to the editor's conception of news, it soon fails.

When a newspaper man speaks of his news judgment he doesn't mean his ability to determine what really counts under some mysterious process of selection. He means, instead, his ability to surmise what you will consider news.

All readers won't agree that some particular item is news, naturally, but the editor must meet each reader's definition often enough so that every reader will feel he's getting his money's worth when he buys the paper.

Now as to the effort to take this function away from you. It lies in a growing effort by people, who are neither editors nor representatives of the readers, to decide arbitrarily which facts shall be printed—without reference to what any individual might consider news.

These people are the censor-minded. They appear in government and in pressure groups. They include those who try to conduct government behind closed doors and in secret places. They are all those who would take away free access to information which the citizen, with his individual right to say what is news, is entitled to have.

What baffles and frustrates the editor in the face of this is an attitude he not infrequently encounters among those who are being cheated of the right to decide for themselves what news is. When he talks about freedom of information, he often hears that what he really means is some undefined special privilege of his own. He is complaining, he is told, because his vanity is hurt.

What he rails against is nothing of the kind. His protests concern something he was never vain enough to do. That is, insist on deciding what news is without reference to what those who buy the news consider it to be.

On The Lee Side

Referees, Ticking Packages and Popularity Contests

It's not likely to happen, and he is far too big a man physically to let it bother him, but were a popularity contest to be run off this morning the most unpopular man in this corner of Central Nebraska would be Carl Samuelson, referee, in charge of the Ord-Central City football game, Friday.

We'd go a bit further. We'd venture to say that were such a contest held a new system of calibration would have to be invented to determine Mr. Samuelson's exact notch on the popularity peg.

Atfer minus zero comes what?

Up until game time Friday the name Samuelson was just another one might uncover in looking through a metropolitan telephone directory.

Today, were I to bear such a name, I'd be wary indeed. With the opening of duck season some guy would be sure to unload a wad of Number Six shot into my backside claiming the meanwhile he'd mistaken my hide for the pin feathers of a mallard.

And juries being what they are it's ten to one the shooter would make the alibi stick.

Juries, after all, are football fans oftener than they are talesmen.

Most of the local dislike for Mr. Samuelson originated from his reported warning to End Tom Anderson against 'rough playing."

Now there are a lot of things that you could warn Tom about. For instance you might censure him for being a close man with a dollar.

Or you might beat him about the ears for his sometimes nonchalance about football when everybody else is wound a mite too tight. Tom would much rather sell automobiles than practice.

But to tell Tom off for rough playing is like upbraiding a St. Bernard when he comes to your rescue with a pint of Jim Beam. It just isn't done, fellows.

Another factor in the current wave of Samuelson unpopularity here was his football lesson administered early in the first quarter.

Ord had possession, and in one of those wool gathering moments that strikes the most brilliant of us, the center touched, or picked up, the ball.

Central City immediately covered the ball claiming it had been moved and was, per se, a "loose" ball open to recovery.

Hulking over to the play Sam, after a moments pondering, allowed the claim.

Now Ordites aren't what we'd call a rules conscious group of fans. As such they can stand, and would probably welcome, those off beat decisions that sometimes show in demonstration what's between the pages of the referee's handbook.

But they hardly ever like such lessons offered for absorption in the middle of a crucial contest particularly when it might cost the game.

And, just in case it may have been misunderstood elsewhere, the groans that roared from the Ord stands when Sam gave Central City possession, weren't the delighted expressions of the untutored being given a nugget of enlightening knowledge for the first time. Ah me, no!

To sum up, if we were Sam, we'd be extra cautious when opening our mail the next few weeks.

Tempers being what they are who knows the day an Ord postmarked package will repose on the Samuelson doorstep.

A package that goes, "Tick, tick, tick"

1901 Ball Game Catching Fiasco

This week I have something to tell that I like. I like to recall early days, especially in the line of sports. And I am sure this time I will not be repeating myself.

The doctors tell us that repeating the same story to the same people is a sure sign of old age. Younger people have so many stories to tell they never repeat.

I have a son who must be older than I am. He gets hold of a good story then tells it to every member of the family. He was telling one of them the other day and got called for repeating.

"Yes," said he, "I told it before, but dad wasn't here then." He was technically right. I wasn't at the table, but I had heard it from the front room.

Baseball Story

But I started to tell a story. Far from repeating, I haven't told it the first time yet, and, if I run true to form, I may forget and start off on some other story before I am through.

So here goes. I failed to see an old friend of mine, one Wayne Clements, when he was visiting here a few weeks ago. I heard he was in town. But he was gone before I got to Ord.

I have known Wayne some 54 years, almost as long as I remember his uncle, H. D. Leggett. When I first met Wayne he was working in Homer's print shop.

He wasn't running the Quiz then. It was the Valley County Times. He ran the business for several years in the Odd Fellows building on the east side. He was plenty crowded.

I went in there the next to the last Saturday in August 1901, when I was in town getting what I needed to start high school.

Wayne was there running a hand press, getting out some sale bills. The printing business always fascinated me. I watched him work, wondering if I could ever learn to do such work.

He asked me who I was, and found out. He also learned that I would be coming to high school that fall. So he came right down to the point. 'Want to pitch for us at North Loup next Thursday," he asked.

He explained that he meant the high school team. He was manager. I told him I couldn't, because I was not yet in school. He said I was coming in and that he would see that it was all right.

Ord vs. North Loup

So the next Thursday I drove to North Loup, met the team there and we played a game. I asked to workout with their catcher, but time was short. They assured me that he could catch anything I could throw.

So the game started and what a game. I never knew who tried to catch, but he was completely bewildered. So were the North Loup batters. They couldn't hit my offerings, but the catcher couldn't hold them, either.

In that game I struck out 26 batters. Most of them reached first base. I struck out 5 in the fourth inning, and all of them got to first. The catcher stopped most of them, but dropped every vital strike.

We were hitting at will, and got 14 runs, enought to win nine games out of ten. But those Loupers could lope on the base paths, and they made 16 runs.

Mystery Catcher

I never knew who caught, or tried to catch. I knew it wasn't Dutch Burger, whom I knew. At one time I thought it might have been Ben Baker. Eugene thinks it could have been Wayne Clements himself.

I had a run-in with those same players a couple of years before, when they drove out in a lumber wagon to play a Mira Valley game. I was not playing then, but went to the grounds.

The boys got out and practiced. I recall that they had a yarn ball somebody had made, and with which they expected to play.

Extension Notes

Grandmothers Form

Once again we have 31 extension clubs in Valley county. A brand new club of "Grandmothers" was organized this week at the home of Mrs. Wilbur Rogers. Mrs. Elmer Zlomke was elected president, Mrs. Velma Rogers vice president and Mrs. Clayton Noll secretary and treasurer. The only decision not made was a name. It must include the word Grandmother. I am sure suggestions will be gratefully received.

Helpers Are Back

We are also happy to announce the Neighborly Helpers of Davis Creek area are again returnig to extension work. We welcome them and hope they will want to stay with us for a long time.

Pamphlets Ready

Two new pamphlets were received this week. "Soaps and Other Detergents" and "Blanket Washing Made Easy." Both leaflets give information for the homemaker. Both are available for distribution and may be had for asking. Drop a card, or stop by the office, for your copy.

All About Rice

Much is being heard about rice this year. It is plentiful and one of the most important foods. It is the basic item of the dict for more peoples than any other food. It is inexpensive.

Rice is sold in different forms—regular polished rice, brown rice, converted rice and precooked.

Regular polished rice has the hull, bran and germ removed.

Brown rice is "undermilled" with only the hull removed. It has a nutty flavor and is more nutritious than white race, but does not keep as well, and requires longer cooking time.

Converted rice is regular white rice prepared by a special process which forces into the kernels most of the B-vitamins contain-value than regular rice. It costs slightly more.

Pre-cooked rice is partially cooked before packaging.

Like other cereals, rice supplies food energy at relatively low cost.

It is largely starch. White rice is low in protein, vitamins and minerals. Foods which are high in protein, vitamins and minerals should be served with it, — meat, fish, milk, cheese or eggs, vegetables or fruit. Rice can be used in dozens of different ways— as a main dish, vegetable, in soups and salads, or as a dessert. It can be cooked separately or cooked mixed with other foods.

Vox Pop

The Quiz solicits letters for publication from its readers on subjects of general interest. All letters must be signed. Readers can however, have letters appear under a nom de plume. Unsigned letters will not be published under any circumstances. Keep letters short and to the point.

5 Lights, Not One

To the Editor of the Quiz
Dear Sir:

This is to inform you, and all the other good people of Valley county, that Elyria has 5 glowing street lights, not just one as stated in your column last week.

And we'd put in some more but we have every corner and intersection in town all lit up already.

Newspaper Week . . .

Here's Proof That Advertising Does What You Want!

When romantic 54-year-old Newcomb Chapel in New Orleans was about to be demolished, a classified ad was placed in the New Orleans newspaper to locate women who had been wed there, so they might visit it once more. Thirty-five former brides responded to the ad.

A Bridgewater, Conn., woman got results beyond her fondest dreams when she placed a classified ad seeking a used wedding dress for her cousin in Poland. The owner of a bridal shop in Bridgeport saw the ad and gave her a new satin gown trimmed with seed pearls.

Famed and beloved story-teller Hans Christian Andersen, born April 2, 1805, first saw Copenhagen as a stage-struck youth of 14. Failing to gain a theatrical role, the penniless lad took a job as cabinetmaker apprentice which he saw in the Want Ads.

A Texan put a newly purchased automobile in a private lot in Providence, R. I., while on business, then couldn't remember the location of the lot. A classified ad in the Providence newspaper quickly re-united him with his misplaced automobile.

To promote an African jungle movie, the manager of the State Theatre in Minneapolis wanted a man to live like a child of nature in the woods three days. A classified ad gave him a choice of several "Nature Boys."

Unable to contribute to a Red Cross drive for blood because of anemia, a Lincoln, Nebraska, woman placed a classified ad in the Lincoln Star and Journal offering $5 for substitutes. More than a dozen donors responded.

To secure photographs needed to complete the autobiography of famed jazz trumpeter, Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong, Prentice-Hall, New York publishers, placed classified ads in the New Orleans Times-Picayune and States and soon received many old photographs.

Its facilities taxed by a heavy influx of polio cases in the summer of 1952, a children's hospital placed classified ads in the Minneapolis Star and Tribune seeking extra cribs and received donations of 53.

Bottle Note Draws Reply from Sheriff

Last summer, Mrs. Cash Woznlak, while on a trip to Colorado left her name and address in a bottle on Grand Mesa, above Grand Junction, Colo. Saturday she received a letter. The letter was from Deputy Sheriff R. L. Frese, 286 Pine St., Grand Junction, Colo. In part he says:

"I was up on Grand Mesa, scouting around and happened to find your name and address in a bottle up there. I thought I would drop a few lines to see if you arrived home safe.

"I went to school in Ord, Nebr., years ago in the old Brick schoolhouse. I used to know a few people there, the Trompkes, and George Round, when he was sheriff. I knew a man by the name of Alvin Wells and also knew Guy Laverty, the attorney.

"How is everything in that country now? I suppose I would not know any part of it. I hope all is well."

—Mrs. Leonard Cronk gave a lecture on cosmetics to the secretarial class of the Ord high school, recently. Janet Hoon and Jeri Wilson were the demonstration subjects.

Farm - Ag Tips

Fertilizer Talk

Are you planning on seeding alfalfa next spring?

If so, this is a good time to get soil samples taken. In case lime or phosphorus is needed they can and should be applied this fall.

This is true of lime, because of its low solubility.

Phosphate gives best results when applied just prior to seeding. A summary of samples tested at the university for Valley County in 1954 and 1955, shows 6% very low; 21% low; 25% medium; 14% high and 34% very high in available phosphorous.

Almost all samples are high in available potash; 69% required no lime. 27% needed 1-2 ton per acre and 4% required over two tons.

No definite conclusions can be drawn, or applied to an individual farm or area from such a summary.

The total number of samples is too small to set any kind of pattern. The fact that 52% of samples ranged from medium downward in available phosphorous however should point up the need for testing prior to legume seeding.

October Lawns

October is also a good month to apply fertilizer on bluegrass lawns. Nitrogen fertilizer and water will permit the grass to make good fall growth and store up root reserves, ready to green up early next spring.

Fertilizer containing 30-45 per cent nitrogen, apply at rate of one lb. per square rod. Fourteen to 20% nitrogen, fertilizers at two lbs. per square rod and if nitrogen content is 6-12%, use four or five lbs. per square rod.

Above rates are the recommendations of M. D. Weldon, extension soils specialist.

Advisory Committee Seeks New Ways to Market Nebraska Wheat

Wheels were in motion to find new markets and uses for Nebraska wheat.

Governor Anderson last week named a seven-man advisory committee as outlined by the 1955 legislature. The group make general policies regarding discovery, promotion and development of markets and industries for the utilization of wheat grown in Nebraska.

Anderson appointed L. E. Welsh, Hubbell; Willard Waldo, Dewitt; Carson R. Smith, Ogallala; Earl Lester, Edison; Tellford Ewing, Gering; Berton Cunningham, Gurley, and Herbert J. Hughes, Imperial.

Money to finance the activities will come from a levy of two and a half mills on each bushel of wheat grown in the state and sold through commercial channels.

State Agriculture Director Ed Hoyt is an ex-officio member. So is W. V. Lambert, dean of the University of Nebraska college of agriculture, and Harry Clark, Omaha, president of the Nebraska Grain Improvement Association.

The first meeting of the group probably will be held this week. Members will name a chairman and "get acquainted" with the new law.

County Taxes Climb

County property taxes have taken a sharp 23 per cent climb this year.

That's the report from the Nebraska Citizens Council. The council said it was "surprised" by the increase. In 1954 only a two tenths of a cent hike was noted. This, the council said, indicated a leveling off.

The council said it based its survey on reports from 71 of 93 counties. It said it expects little change in the overall figure.

Says the council: "The huge increases in county taxes this year should provoke some studies of county government. Furthermore, the great variation among the counties in per capita tax loads calls for further inquiry."

The council said many smaller counties could operate more economically by joining with one or two others for use of the same county engineer. They could also use the same machinery and equipment for road building, professional and welfare workers.

And, added the council, under such an arrangement joint hospitals, libraries, jails and similar services could be used.

Controversial Bill

That controversial bill to license masseurs had plenty of trouble before it was passed by the legislature.

But it did not stop there. The state health department asked Attorney General C. S. Beck for an opinion. The department said it felt the bill, which became law Sept. 18, was contradictory.

Beck said the law is invalid because its provisions are "so vague and conflicting" it could not be enforced.

The bill provided for a state board of examiners.

A similar bill failed to pass in the 1953 legislature. One of the conflicting parts of the bill this time was it required the examining board be graduates of a recognized school of massage. Beck said this could not be since there are no recognized schools in the state.

Highway Relocation

The state highway commission has scheduled a special meeting Friday on the proposed relocation of highway 12, between highways 81 and 15, north of Hartington.

State Engineer L. N. Ress wants the commission to approve the relocation two miles north of its present site. Ress argues that improvements could be made at less expense. He said approval of the relocation would increase, rather than decrease business in Hartington.

But a petition signed by about 150 persons protest the relocation. The residents in the area want the present road improved. The commission discussed the matter last week.

But no action was taken because of the absence of Commissioner Merle Kingsbury, Ponca, in whose district the proposed relocation lies.

Coliseum

An old landmark in Lincoln, familiar to Nebraskans who visit the state fair, is being erased.

The fair board has given the go-ahead sign to tear down the coliseum. Secretary Edwin Schultz says a contract for construction of a new building will be let in November.

The 46-year-old coliseum will be replaced by a new structure that will seat from 4,000-7,000 persons.

Schultz says the primary factor in giving the go-ahead is the fair board's current good financial condition.

Redistricting Committee

The state board of education is going to meet Oct. 11 to name a new state school redistricting committee.

This is the result of a law passed by the 1955 legislature which requires the board appoint members, instead of the governor.

F. B. Decker, commissioner of education, says the new board might not be the same members as the old. He said an attempt might be made to get a representative on the board from a redistricting area not represented on the last board.

That is district two, composed of Douglas, Washington and Sarpy counties.

JOHN & HAL says It's a Fact!

"YE" IN OLD ENGLISH DOES NOT MEAN "YOU" OR "YOUR"

It means "the," and was so pronounced without any "y" sound. In Anglo-Saxon there was a symbol now written as "th" but which was represented by "y". In consequence the correct pronunciation of "ye" is "the."

And it's also a Fact

We do mean "YOU" when we say you need the right amount of insurance. An important part of our job is to help you plan a program . . . without obligation on your part.

On the Party Line

I love color, whether it be the red geraniums in Mrs. Rose Glover's yard, the crimson zinnias in the Romans yard, or the rows of salvia and beds of portulacas and petunias about town. I also like the new color on the C. M. Davis home, (a bright yellow), the blue and green lunch pails belonging to the Eugene Petska children, the red and white of the Ord high school band, the sweaters of the Ordettes, the bright green sweaters of the Zadina twins, the orange shirt of a certain high school lad, Mike Beran's red head, the green trees and grass and the bright, blue, sky. I repeat, I love color.

Walter Needed

A Sir Walter Raleigh would have been pleasant to have on hand last week. There were numerous places where his coat would have come in handy.

Free Lunch Passes

In days gone by the free lunch was a must at farm auctions. A sandwich, an apple, and maybe a cookie, were placed in a sack and those who "came to buy" were more often present because of the lunch. Sometimes the food was put in pans on tables. It might as well have been in troughs the way people went for the buns, and weiners. Hot coffee was served from a wash boiler. It could have been as strong as lye and often times was.

What is it about seeing a high school band that makes you choke up, not matter how hard boiled you might claim to be?

Tomato Farmers

Interesting to watch the VanHoosens from North Loup at their tomato truck Saturday afternoon. These people have what they call a "Tomato Ranch" on the edge of town. They have probably sold hundreds of bushels. Their tomatoes are good. I can remember when I thought a feast was a ripe tomato from the garden sprinkled with salt. In fact I still do!

—*—

It is pleasant to watch the children cross the streets here. Evidently they have been trained well, for they stop, look up and down carefully and wait until there is not a car in sight.

—*—

Small Kathy Williams who stays with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Rutar, and goes to kindergarten in Ord, says her name is Katinka. People say she can speak two languages, English and Czech. Her folks are moving to Ord from Loup City.

Mrs. John Mason was hurrying home Friday morning with a big piece of meat under one arm. She said she was going to make sausage. She and her husband like home made kind best.

—*—

After seeing the show of doctors and nurses shown at the Ord theatre the past week, we sort of have a new respect for our Carol, Margaret, Donna, June, and Dorothy, and all the other Ord girls who have the initials R.N. back of their names. We are proud of Phyllis Christensen, who is a beginner in nursing. She is still enthusiastic.

—*—

Impressive Picture

Incidentally another Ord girl who is working at what she likes is Marianne Gnaster. Marianne is practice teaching at Clifton Hill school of Omaha, out of Duchesne college.

From John Sullivan's witty tongue, "May the best team win, but do it by a big score, fellows."

At the pep rally, a week ago, Friday, one of the most charming actors was Cheri White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob White. Wearing the purple and gold of the town pep band, Cheri performed with her baton. She says she goes to school to Sister Florence in St. Mary's.

Helen Gzehoviak, of Helen's Dress shop, said she had an interesting vacation this summer. Helen toured Nebraska. She found many small towns she never knew existed. And strange to say, she said she always stopped at any dress shop that she could find. At the convocation for high school girls Thursday, Miss Gzehoviak wore purple. Her beaver hat was blue and adorned with the tail feathers of some past pheasant.

It really seems that Dr. George Parkins, well known optometrist is a perfect picture of sartorial art.

The Kehlers were married in the Church of God church at McCook. Mr. Kehler, a Culbertson boy, served in the armed forces during 1950. He was stationed in Germany.

Lost & Found

FOUND! A GOOD DOG — I have picked up a stray dog that apparently belongs to a farmer or stockman. The dog is mostly black, has a brown muzzle, and white feet. He is mostly German Shepherd (police) from appearances.
I believe he belongs to some farmer. The dog meets every light truck that comes to town then runs alongside and barks to be picked up. He's intelligent, housebroken, and minds well. On cattle and stock he's a good heeler.
The above indicates he's had some training and is probably missed.
If he's yours you may have him by seeing Bill Lee, Quiz editor, any day in Ord.
P.S. He's learned to fetch and carry. He's carrying his dog-food home regularly at dinner each day. 27-3tp

Gas Consumers Told K-N to Cut Services

Gas Company Takes Rate Problems Down to Consumer Level

Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Company, Inc., today advised Ord customers of its plans to reduce service. Ord refused to grant the company a rate increase asked during 1954, and the company took the matter to Federal District Court in Lincoln. On September 15, 1955, Judge John W. Delehant declared that his court did not have jurisdiction.

In a letter sent to all gas customers in Ord, Kansas-Nebraska President S. D. Whiteman said: "We met with your city council, October 3 to ask them to reconsider the matter especially in light of the fact that the judge said we are now making far less than a reasonable rate of return in Ord. Your city council has promised to think the matter over and meet with us again, November 7."

Can't Guarantee Rate

The letter continued: "We consider the franchise to obligate us to give you natural gas service, but from the beginning we have felt we would always be entitled to a reasonable return on our investment. In 1949 that return was reasonable; in 1955 it is not. We can no more guarantee the price of gas for 25 years (the term of the franchise) than your grocer can guarantee the price of bread or milk."

Mr. Whiteman's letter said that if rate relief could not be secured from the Ord council it might become necessary for Kansas-Nebraska to close its Ord office, eliminate service calls, and raise the price of gas at the Ord power plant. "This means that the Ord electric service would have to bear the increased cost of gas, but we have no other alternative if the city council refuses to recognize our need for help," Whiteman said.

St. Edward Too

In his letter to Kansas-Nebraska customers in St. Edward, Whiteman said his company met with the council, October 3 to ask them to reconsider the matter. "Unfortunately, your city council would not recognize our need for help," Whiteman said.

Whiteman continued: "It is with regret that I must notify you that effective immediately we can no longer make service calls in St. Edward. Most of the service calls we make are without charge to the customer, but under our present rate in St. Edward we cannot afford to continue to make any service calls. Service on your natural gas equipment will have to be performed by your plumber." Whiteman pointed out, however, that his company would service gas leak calls.

Commenting on this action, Mr. Whiteman said: "These steps are necessary in order to reduce our overhead to an absolute minimum. It is simply an economic solution to a problem any businessman might face when his costs increase and he cannot raise the price of his product. Furthermore, this will tend to equalize conditions between Nebraska communities which granted us the increase and those which refused. Those paying the higher rate will continue to receive the same good service they have had in the past, but we cannot afford to continue that service under the lower rate."

Two other communities, Central City and Ravenna, had also refused to grant the increase asked by Kansas-Nebraska. Company officials said that they were scheduled to meet with those city councils, October 10.

Utility Board Asks K-N Rate Be Given

Ord's board of public works, in a special meeting Tuesday, in effect, asked the city council to allow the presently disputed Kansas-Nebraska gas rate.

In proceedings, bearing the signatures of Dr. F. L. Blessing, E. S Murray, Chairman Emil Fafeita and the concurrence of City Engineer George Allen, the board said:

"The board feels under the circumstances, and the proposed retrenchment by the gas company that satisfactory measures should be taken to insure a reasonable gas rate for the light plant and good service to gas users in Ord."

Chairman Emil Fafeita told the Quiz the statement "in effect" means that the board wants the council to allow K-N its asked rate.

The full text of the proceedings for the special meeting are reproduced on Page 4.

GOC Pins Thirty-two In Wings Ceremony

Thirty two Ordites, who have completed requirements for GOC observers, were presented wings Monday night at Evelyn Sharp airfield.

The presentation climaxed an instructional meeting highlighted by a film, Operation Crossroads, shown in the administration building.

Sergeants Leonard and Chase, of the Omaha filter center, spun the film and presented wings and certificates.

Thirty five attended the ceremony.

During the presentation the army personnel praised the Ord post which has just completed its 14th week of round the clock Operation Skywatch.

Police Move to Register Bicycles

The Ord police department will register, and affix registration numbers to, all bicycles soon.

Patrolman Jim Sobon said Tuesday the city will order numbered metal plates. They will be fastened to bikes by a locking lead seal and metal wire.

Sobon said the move is to help identify bikes abandoned on town corners, in hallways, and against buildings.

Now police have to hold the bikes until they are picked up by the youngsters.

With the registration system police will know bike owners immediately, Patrolman Sobon said.

Mr. Jefferies pointed out all Boy Scout activities here is supported by public contributions.

"The success of the program for next year hinges upon the generosity of the people," he said.

School Musicians Need Instruments

Do you have an unwanted musical instrument some Ord school child could learn to play?

The expanded music program—some seventy new pupils are registering for instruction—has left the area with a shortage of second-hand instruments.

Violins would be helpful. If you have an unwanted instrument it could mean the difference between a child getting some musical instruction or none.

Jess Kovanda Honored for Teaching at Kansas City Convention

One of Nebraska's long time vocational agriculture teachers was honored this week at the national F.F.A. convention in Kansas City.

Jess Kovanda, vocational agriculture instructor here, is the first Nebraskan to receive recognition under the new plan inaugurated last year which considers over-all accomplishment.

Mr. Kovanda, who has taught agriculture for the past 32 years, has compiled an enviable record.

He started teaching at Milligan, Nebraska, in 1923, where he spent his first five years.

The remaining 27 years have been at Ord.

He is a firm believer in basing instruction on student needs at the time when results can be put into practice on the farm.

Therefore, a supervised farming program has always been the backbone of his teaching.

Convincing indications of his teaching success are the 28 state farmer and the four American Farmer degrees which have been awarded his students.

Mr. Kovanda says the key to a successful student program is the understanding and support of parents.

In recent years, he has found it easier to obtain. Some of the present day dads were once Kovanda's students.

Cousin's Salvage Exploits Listed In Nov. Argosy

Grocer Ellis Carson, and his mother Mrs. Fern Carson, are a bit puffed up this week over space accorded the exploits of a cousin.

He is Fred Devine, captain of the Salvage Chief, operating off the west coast.

Devine is the subject of a factual article in the November Argosy, a man's magazine. The magazine will be on Ord newsstands soon.

Salvages Ships

The article credits Devine with daring salvage rescues of ships that crash into rocky coasts up and down the Pacific seaboard.

In background Devine is described as a Nebraskan brought to Portland, Oregon, when he was two.

Carson Cousin Devine . . . the Salvage King

Devine started skin diving at fifteen then later shifted to deep salvage operations when he could buy his own gear.

His exploits soon won him the title "Impossible Devine."

Bought LSM

To aid efforts Devine bought and remodeled a junked LSM. He equipped the ship so it could drop an anchor then back in to beached craft.

By pulling with the LSM's propellers, and the added purchase of the LSM's winches against the sunken anchor, Devine has been able to float ships where the odds against success were 100 to 1.

He recently completed the salvage of the Yorkmar, a 10,000 ton freighter beached near Grays Harbor, Washington.

He has also salvaged a $200,000 diesel locomotive from the depths of a river.

A 106 year old relative of Mrs. Tom Zulkoski and Mrs. Joe Osentowski died, Saturday.

He moved to Sherman county in 1903. He lived in a one room house built for him on his 103rd birthday.

Until death Mr. Chudzinski was remarkably alert for his years. He visited town almost daily and his memory was excellent.

Burglars Visit Wentek's Garage

Prowlers broke into the Wentek Garage at Elyria Monday night but contented themselves with a minor haul.

Owner Philip Wentek reported $4 in cash missing. Wentek told police he came to work Tuesday morning and found two panels in the back door broken.

"Only the money was missing," Wentek said, "nothing else appeared to be touched."

The burglers apparently tried to enter the Joe Jablonski liquor store but failed.

Sheriff V. J. Beran surmised the burglars were local truants.

City Oils Roadway Near City Park

City crews were busy this week oiling and scarifying 1000 feet of roadway near the entrance to city park and west.

Superintendent George Allen said once this project is finished, he hopes weather will hold until more oiling can be completed.

He said some oiling is planned around the Sharp airfield hangars.

Ord Man Exhibits King Sized Walnuts

Oscar Hackett, 803 P street, is exhibiting some king sized black walnuts to friends.

Mr. Hackett harvested the nuts from a 15 foot tree in his yard. The tree is five years old.

Most of the walnuts are eight and one half to nine inches in circumference. Inside each hull is a king sized nut.

Hackett says she doesn't know why the nuts are so big.

"The tree is growing kinda crazy," he explained. "Branches grow all mixed up."

Greeley County Audit Wrong; Second Cites Douthit Claims Less

State Flubs the Dub; Confuses Ellis Douthit Sr. and Jr.; Apologizes

That Greeley county lawsuit filed against Commissioner Ellis Douthit by Frank Byerly and Carrell Palser has resulted in a second state audit.

The second shows Commissioner Douthit in a more favorable light.

In the first he was listed as working 557 days for Greeley county in 1954. Mr. Douthit, according to the audit, drew claims amounting to over $6,000.

State auditors this week wrote a letter of apology after a second audit was made.

The second showed Mr. Douthit worked only 195 days for the general fund and drew claims for mileage, salary, and miscellaneous expenses of $1,690.71.

He also worked 101 days for the road fund and drew claims there of $1,272.60.

The confusion in the state department came through two similar names.

Ellis Douthit sr., and his son, Ellis Douthit jr., both drew claims from Greeley county, sometimes on the same day. The county employs both men. Auditors believed both Douthit's were the same man.

Greeley county officials this week told a Quiz reporter they believe the action against the elder Douthit is "unjustified."

They said he has maintained county equipment at an unskilled labor cost when skilled labor would be much more expensive to the county.

Mr. Douthit received his letter of apology this week signed by State Auditor of Public Accounts Ray Johnson.

A Cappella Fellas Rehearse for Show

With music for some 25 new songs purchased, Ord's a cappella fellas swing into high gear Wednesday in rehearsal for a concert in December.

A half dozen new voices have joined the chorus group this fall. Membership is still open to any man in this vicinity who likes to sing.

Paul Parker, high school music instructor is directing. The a cappella fellas rehearse every Wednesday evening at 8:45 o'clock in the Presbyterian church.

School Board Moves to Submit Expansion Plan to Dist. 5 Vote

Board's First Step Seeks Fiscal Agent; Night Classes Asked

The Ord school board Monday moved to submit an estimated $320,000 school expansion program to District 5 voters sometime within the next two months.

The board made the decision after examining plans already okayed and asked for by the Ord chamber of commerce.

Board Member Hilding Pearson told the schoolmen the chamber committee was back of the project "100 per cent."

Following the vote Attorney Ralph Norman said the first sound step was to secure a fiscal agent to handle the issue if voted.

Fiscal Agent Eyed

Mr. Norman said he would "talk" to a bond firm, about hiring them. The move was approved.

Norman said he believed a bond interest rate of about two and three-fourths per cent or less could be secured. The figure was average.

Early retiring bonds draw less. Late bonds more.

Board Member O. A. Kellison said the issue should contain some needed funds to purchase land needed for the expansion. All members nodded agreement. The board has part of the amount.

The school plans to purchase land north of the present high school. Some lots are occupied.

Night Classes Asked

In other business Supt. Nels Sullivan revealed requests for two night classes.

One is practical nursing. Three quarters of the instructor's salary will be paid by the government. The other one fourth will be raised by tuition from women taking the training.

The second request was for a "fix-it" course for men. Tuition will cover instructor's salary. The school will provide shop rooms.

Sullivan told the board, "We should give these requests a try." The board agreed.

Mr. Sullivan also told the board he'd written Trans-Nebraska Conference officials asking that Ord be allowed to withdraw.

Sparring Sullivan's request is the possibility of Ord winning both the Trans-Nebraska, North, and the Central Ten conferences. Ord leads both now. (See Gregg McBride's story on sports page.)

Grade School Pupils Get Hearing Tests

Hearing tests for grade schoolers started last week with Mrs. Leslie Nash, a teacher, operating the dials of a new audiometer.

The machine is fairly simple. It broadcasts tones to a set of earphones worn by the child.

The tone can be sent at different frequencies and different volumes.

The machine tests the youngster's hearing throught the entire audio range.

Most grade schoolers enjoyed the test. When the child hears a tone he or she flashes a signal to Mrs. Nash. She then moves on to the next signal.

The testing will take place later this month on high school students.

Supt. Nels Sullivan of the Ord public school said:

"If we discover a child whose hearing appears to be below par then parents are notified. Parents then can make arrangements for an examination by the family doctor."

Orchestra Planned for Music Program

Director Paul Parker Tell Parents Kids Have Musical Talent

An accelerated, and expanded, school music program is in the making for Ord youngsters, Paul Parker, music instructor told 70 parents at the school auditorium Thursday.

Parker said additions to the music program will include a freshman chorus, a 7th and 8th grade chorus, a grade school chorus, a grade school band, and eventually a high school orchestra.

The present program includes a varsity chorus, a glee club, a varsity band and a junior band, in addition to small groups.

"We have the talent here," Parker told his audience, "and there is no reason why we shouldn't allow these children to express themselves."

Present plans call for Mrs. Leslie Nash, present grade school music instructor, to handle grade school music and assist with junior high school choral groups.

In addition she will teach the beginning class in strings, around which she and Parker plan to build the school orchestra in a year.

So far seven grade school pupils have signed up for instruction in strings, including one cello, a viola and five violins.

Lessons for these, as well as pupils studying other instruments are given during school hours without charge.

Chamber Committee Okays School Plan

Tells Board Planned Improvement Seems OK for '65 Enrollment

The chamber of commerce, Thursday, without dissent recommended a school expansion program to the Ord school board.

The school board mulled the proposition Tuesday night. The program includes a new auditorium, new classrooms, a new ag shop, dressing rooms and music rooms.

If the school board follows the chamber's lead the improvement will probably be submitted to voters sometime this month or next.

Will Need 6 Mills

The improvement is expected to cost about $320,000. To support it the school will levy about six mills. The six mill levy will include the present school bond levy of about three mills. The present bond issue will be paid off this year.

Chamber approval followed a long meeting. Ord's growing student enrollment in high school was the prime reason for approval. Projections on present grade school enrollments show Ord high school enrollment will reach 350 in ten years.

The school lists 260 students now. The increase will be about 90.

Discussion at the meeting indicated the chamber committee was quite conscious of numerous requests here for an auditorium.

Will Seat 2000

The committee carefully looked over the improvement plans which call for an auditorium with a seating capacity of 1,600 for basketball. Another 400 may be seated on the floor.

The committee believed the auditorium sufficiently large for town promotions district organizational conventions road shows, concerts, tournaments and school clinics.

In addition the auditorium will house a school lunch program beneath balcony seating.

GAA For Girls

If the plan is adopted by voters the old auditorium will be taken over by girls for athletic activities. Dressing rooms, now used by boys athletic teams will then be used by girls.

If the school board, Tuesday, approves the chamber recommendation then a final plan will be offered. Once okayed it will be published in the Quiz. Elections will follow.

To pass 55 per cent of the total vote must approve.

Fifty Farmers Hear Dairy Breeder Talk

Charles Vancura Wins Artificial Calf; Two Elected as Directors

Charles Vancura jr., won the calf produced by artificial insemination at the American Dairy Breeder's meeting held here, Tuesday.

Sidney Allison, of Scotia, was reelected to the county unit as a director. Thead Nelson was elected to represent Ord. Nelson is also a director.

In meeting Robert Koehler, ADA Nebraska manager, described efforts by the association to increase the use of dairy products.

Koehler said TV, radio and newspaper advertising was being used to focus attention on the use of milk, butter and cheese.

The advertising is supported by a self imposed producers "tax" of 2c per CWT on milk and one half cent per pound on butterfat.

This year Nebraska breeders have increased the butterfat tax for four months. Koehler spoke informally.

Stud Manager Talks

He was followed by Reuben Peterson manager of the association's Fremont stud.

Peterson showed slides on ADA proven sires then traced production records of each bull.

His comments on one, Number 229, provoked some merriment.

Peterson said the bull, a black Holstein carried "red cells."

"That doesn't make much difference unless you mate the semen from this bull with a black dam also carrying red cells. Then you might get a red Holstein. In case that happens don't blow your top and accuse the inseminator of using Guernsey stock," Peterson said.

The prize calf was from the herd managed by Glen Watts.

About 50 attended.

Children Manage to Eke Savings from Parental Allowances

Children in the fourth grade know the value of money.

Some 21 children questioned last week have an allowance. This varies from 50c to $1.00 per week. Fom this amount they go to the show buy candy and popcorn, daily milk and give to their Sunday schools. Most get all these, and some besides.

In fact, they keep rather closely to a budget, although few knew what a "budget" is.

One was not able to save. But she did give ten cents a week to Sunday school. The show took 30c, candy 10c and Sunday School 10c.

One saved 25c a week, but had no definite purpose. One put 20c a week into his bank. This was the start of his college fund. Another saved 15c a week for a "horse and a dog."

A lad who gets a dollar a week, spends 45c a week for shows, and 10 or 15c for candy. He gives a nickel to Sunday school, and saves the rest, 35c. One child says he is saving for shows.

A girl says she saves for birthday and Christmas gifts. She gets 50c a week and manages to save 35c. A boy says he goes to the show twice a week, and gives 15c to Sunday school. Now and then he buys a toy at 10c and saves 20c a week.

Another boy gets $1.00 a week, but his show money comes extra. He gives 10c to Sunday school and buys popcorn for 10c. He is saving for college.

A girl said she has saved $3.30, but does not know what for.

Several get paid for doing small chores about the home and assisting parents.

Fifth grade children are a year older. They definitely know the value of money, and most of them know what they are saving for. All have allowances, which in many cases is augmented by earned sums. Some, too, earn all spending money.

They spend their money for many of the same things that the yonger children do, shows, popcorn, candy and Sunday school. However now, these are also buying comic books, their own school things, plane models, and ice cream. One used her own money to pay Brownie Scout dues.

All seem to be putting a bit away every week. However, one said, she was saving her money but she did not know of anything special she would get with the money she was saving. Another said he was saving his for when he "got big."

One small miss was saving pennies with other savings. The fund will be used for college and an instrument for band.

Five were saving to go to college. One already had $7.

One was wavering between college and a horse.

Four, two boys and two girls, were saving for a bike. One girl says she spends 25c a week for her hobby. She is using savings for paper dolls. One frankly says she is saving her money for the "time when I might need it."

One saves a nickel every week. One is saving for a nice, big model airplane. Another is saving for a set of puppets.

Another girls says she saves her money for things that she needs, shoes, stockings, clothes.

A lad says he seldom buys candy or gum because he is saving his money for a horse or a gun.

Some grandma is going to be happy on her birthday because her fifth grade grandson is saving money for her gift.

One has already $25 in the bank. He is saving for a hobby and Christmas gifts.

One girl is saving for a vacation. Another for a puppet show. Still another puts spare money in postal savings, looking forward to the rainy day that might come into her life.

Farm Bureau Unit Okays Sales Tax

Thirty farmers passed two resolutions, but discussed ten or 12 others, at the Farm Bureau policy development meeting here Tuesday in the high school.

The two resolutions passed were:

RESOLVED: That the Valley county Farm Bureau Unit be in favor of a sales tax and/or income tax to replace the present state tax on real and personal property.

RESOLVED: That the Valley county Farm Bureau be in favor of a greater state aid to schools, on an equitable basis, such monies to be raised from such surpluses which might arise from sales and income taxes.

The first resolution passed 25 to 3. The latter was okayed 24 to 1.

Swipe At Many

In discussion the farmers took a passing swipe at a host of other subjects.

Mentioned were:

Universal military training, flexible supports for farm products, broadening of present ASC requirements, bank construction on state highways, broadening of requirements to qualify for FHA loans, irrigation and the Loup River Public Power District.

On the latter one farmer asked: "This thing, (Loup) could stand looking into. Maybe it is eating up some tax dollars."

Three Loup Cityans attended the meeting. They were Luther Harmon, Everett Harvey, Sherman county unit president, and Gaen Bratton.

Cancer

The Nebraska Division, of the American Cancer Society, held its annual meeting of instruction at Omaha last week, reports Mrs. Ed. Kokes.

Part of the program was reporting the work done in adult education on cancer.

A panel of medical men presented a symposium explaining in laymen's language the new techniques in pathology and radiology for early cancer detection.

Officers of the Nebraska Division—Dr. H. B. Hunt, chairman; Dr. J. F. Kelly, secretary; Mrs. T. L. Houlton, state commander; Fred Broadkey, campaign chairman—reported how scholarship and research funds for fighting cancer are put to work. Delegates were shown where medical science is carrying on special research; as, for instance, what work is under way right now with funds allocated to the colleges of medicine at both Nebraska and Creighton Universities.

The climax of the meetings was a report by Dr. Chauncey Bly of the University of Kansas Medical Center on his findings from a prolonged series of experiments in pathology dealing with cancer. Being the recipient of a Cancer Society scholarship, on which he was permitted to conduct this advanced study, he was an example of the accomplishment of research in our own Midwest. He illustrated his lecture with his own photographs of the study.

Frederick Wagener of Lincoln accepted the chairmanship for the 1956 Cancer Crusade.

Chants, Raiders, Both Unbeaten Meet for Clashing Game Friday

It's the battle of champions Friday night here on the Chant's field.

Ord, undefeated in five starts, meets Loup City sporting a similar record.

Both are among Nebraska's remaining 24 undefeated teams this season.

Ord has beaten Holdrege, Broken Bow, Albion, Central City and Fullerton.

Raiders Have Won 5

Loup City has overcome Burwell, Sargent, Scotia, Gibbon and Wood River.

What happens Friday is anybody's guess!

Loup City has been most impressive at Burwell and Sargent. At Burwell the Loupers were outweighed but were long on scrap.

In the Sargent tangle the Raiders met and beat, one of the better Central Nebraska minor organizations.

Loup City may not field as potent an outfit as threw a king-sized scare into the Chants last year.

Only five seniors are back. Missing is Mel Piontkowski, a rangy end, who played so much in the Ord backfield he should have worn a Chant suit.

Still the Loupers are managing to eat up most of the opposition with a combination built on Jim Paige, Marv Calloway and Jim Kowalski.

Business men, and the Joe Banana Band, will hold a business man, farmers, housewives, and everybody else football rally, Friday, about 4 p.m. on the square. Band Director Glen Auble said new additions to the band will be welcomed.

Loup City operates off the split T shifting to the single wing when it looks practical.

The Raiders are steered this year by Clarence Colvin a former coach at Arnold.

Around the circuit Colvin is known for ability to get major results from sometimes minor talent.

Chant scrimmage sessions this week have been anything but razzle dazzle. The squad is working at drills with no signs of emotion. If the gang are up for this one then they've yet to let the fans know.

Nelson Back

Ord's passing attack may be better than in former games with the return of Lynn Nelson.

Lynn sidelined by flu three weeks, was out for practice Monday and worked steadily the rest of the week.

He'll see action offensively but probably won't be a starter.

Out definitely is Jerry Ulrich. Ulrich suffered a bruised kidney in the St. Paul-Ord reserve fracas. He'll be sidelined for three weeks by physician's orders.

Ulrich will be replaced as line backer by John Brickner, a 140 pounder.

Troyer For Gilroy

There's another change in the Chant lead echelon. Troyer has come up into left tackle to replace Keith Gilroy.

Anderson, and Kapustka, both of whom suffered charley horses in the Fullerton scamper are in shape.

Summing up Ord holds a discernible edge over the Raiders. The edge could be as broad as two touchdowns but bettors better stick to one.

In the 21 years the teams have matched punts the Raiders have won 6. They won 27-7 in 1929, 6-0 in 1930, 6-0 in 1932, 12-7 in 1934, 26-0 in 1948 and 25-0 in 1953.

Five contests have been ties. The worst shellacking the Chants have been able to administer was a 60-0 rout in 1945.

The Loup City series, one of the hoariest in Chant history, has been underway since 1923.

Game time is 8 o'clock.

Ord will attempt to upset the Raider's record with its old reliable line power.

Listed ahead of Ord in the two latter sheets were (1). Cozad and (2). Crete.

Juniors Trim Aurora; Reserves Bow to BB

Broken Bow reserves skidded across for a touchdown late in the fourth period Monday to allow the Indians a win over Ord, 8 to 0.

The Indians scored two points earlier on a punt try recovered in the Ord end zone. A poor pass from the Ord center sent the ball skittering.

Ord hopes livened in the final minutes when Ken Austin reeled off a long gain.

The threat died when the Indians intercepted an Ord pass. The game ended with the ball in midfield.

Earlier in the afternoon the Ord junior high school squad stopped Aurora, 14 to 0, there.

Keith Nelson a back, scored both counters. One was a spectacular 85 yard scamper. The second was around end for 15.

Hunting Permission Important to Farmers

By Wallace Green

Each of us as hunters and sportsmen are in the midst of our favorite time of the year—the hunting season.

We take to the country, locate a likely looking place to hunt and after securing permission, go in pursuit of our quarry. Or at least that is the way we should and would like to hunt.

The disturbing thing is the part of 'securing permission." There are not many farms closed to hunting. Those that are closed are invariably closed because of very good reasons usually hunters' misconduct.

Unfortunately, each year there are a few more farms added to the total of "closed to hunting" farms. This situation is accumulative. Once a farm is closed it stays that way and the total keeps getting larger.

Hunter Irresponsible

We all claim it is the irresponsible hunter and his serious misconduct that causes these situations. We are right, up to a point. The more notorious incidents causing closed farms are surely caused by this vicious minority.

But, the little item of asking the farm operator for permission to hunt is, in itself, one of the main irritants. How many times have you gone over a fence in pursut of a pheasant and not had permission of the man farming on that particular parcel of land?

Many of us prefer not to answer this question or claim that we do this very seldom.

As unimportant as many of us consider this, particularly if we live in town, nothing causes more general ill feeling between farmers and sportsmen.

Farmers Get Mad

Talk to any Nebraska farmer about hunting and somewhere in the conversation he will say something like this: "The thing that makes me boiling mad is to look out at one of my fields and see a strange group of hunters I didn't even know were on my land."

Most of us can't do much about the more serious incidents as we're not that kind of hunter.

But we can certainly take the time to ask permission to hunt, not because it's the law, but because it is the sportsman-like thing to do.

It is also a good way to get a return invitation!

Tally Cards, Survey Asked of Hunters

Tally cards are being sent to over 7,000 Nebraska resident hunters.

At the end of the hunting season hunters will be sent questionaires on success for both upland game and waterfowl hunting.

This survey is made with the cooperation of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The 7,000 hunters, selected at random, will provide information to give an accurate sample of all of success during the 1955 seasons.

Similar surveys are being carried out in other states. Besides giving needed information for the management of waterfowl, the individual states receive valuable information for management of local wildlife.

Cairo Nips Challenger Six Man, 31-12, There

North Loup's six man football squad lost to Cairo there Thursday 31-12.

The Challengers stayed even at 12-12 until midway of the third quarter when Cairo romped to three touchdowns.

Kolar and Sheldon scored for North Loup. The Pep club journeyed to Cairo for the contest.

McBride Says: "Ord May Embarrass Self"

Gregg McBride, in a World-Herald sports column this week said Ord might embarass itself by winning two conference championships.

Here is McBride's article:

"Ord is a member of two conferences (Trans-Nebraska and Central Ten) whose programs call for post-season playoffs.

"The Chanticleers won their divisions of each league last year. This placed them in the embarrassing position of having to choose between the conferences.

"Ord elected to go after Central Ten honors and played Seward, 0-0, in the post-season showdown.

"Ord appears to be working itself into the same hot spot this season. The team is within two games (Loup City, Ravenna) of Trans-Nebraska North Division honors and one game (Aurora) of Central Ten North Division spoils.

"Only Loup City figures to give the Chanticleers much of an argument.

"Minden appears a sure bet to win the Trans-Nebraska South Division.

"Crete has practically sewed up the Central Ten East Division."

This week, Ord Superintendent Nels Sullivan announced officially that Ord was withdrawing from the Trans-Nebraska Conference.

Duck Season Opens With Two Peppered, Loup Cityan Injured

Thin Bags, Warm Weather, Mark Sat. Seasonal Opening

Two Ord hunters were peppered and a Loup Cityan reportedly lost his fore finger, as the duck season opened in Central Nebraska Saturday.

The two Ordites were Vernon Nay and Lyle Witherwax. Both took a charge of shot while seated in a blind near Brewster on Long Lake.

Nay said the shot was fired by one man in a hunting party from Omaha.

Nay said the Omaha hunter apparently blasted away at a mudhen low on the water. Nay and Witherwax were crouched in reeds opposite.

One pellet struck Nay in the temple. Witherwax's back was peppered. Neither man was injured seriously.

Nay said, following the shooting, he told the Omaha group: "Fellas, please be more careful!"

Consumer Employee Hurt

The injured Loup Cityan is Donald Lampe, a newcomer from Beatrice. He is employed by Consumers. Lampe is in the Sacred Heart hospital for treatment.

Mr. Lampe was wounded by the accidental discharge of a gun carried by a companion Bill Hancock.

The shot severed one finger, imbedded pellets in Lampe's thumb and injured other fingers.

Most hunters reported "spotty" hunting. Few flights were on the wing. Unseasonably warm temperatures marked the weekend.

Most hunters said the ducks seen were mostly "Sandhillers and locals."

Limit bags were scant. Most taken contained only a few mallards. Pintails and teal rounded out the kills.

Bill Fafeita, Keith Kovanda, Emil Fafeita and Paul Reed reported 7 mallards killed in a blind on the Calamus.

Verlin Smith reported a kill of 6 in a blind south of Ord.

Austins Get 7

Chet Austin and son reported 7 killed, and Larry Clayton killed 2 in a blind above the Vet's Grounds on the North Loup.

Roland Johnson and brother Darrel home for hunting, reported 2 killed.

Bernard Guggenmos, and a cousin Don Guggenmos, reported a kill of three, (2 mallards, one pintail) in a blind on Goose Creek.

Lyle Flynn reported a kill of 6 mallards Sunday morning and 2 more the same afternoon.

Dr. Blessing reported a kill of 3 opening day on Lake Ericson. Blessing said the lake was "black" with decoys.

A party containing Lynn Nelson, Dean Nelson, Jerry Ulrich, and Larry Nelson reported "poor" luck from a blind five miles above the Ord bridge on the North Loup river.

Greeley Humbles Blues, 44 to 8

North Loup was bested in six man play at Greeley, Tuesday, 44 to 8.

Sacred Heart held a wide margin all the way. The Challengers mustered some punch in the final quarter but ran out of time.

Sheldon scored the lone Blue tally on a pass from Cox. Sheldon also added the two point conversion.

Greeley led at the half 20 to 0.

The Blue were hampered by the absence of four gridders one a first stringer.

The boys are away at Denver.

The Challengers next contest is with Wolbach there next Thursday.

Ord Tames Fullerton 27 to 6 in Bruiser

Line Stymies Bison Until Late Quarter; Loyal Fans Chilled

Pictures at right

The Ord Chanticleers administered a stinging rebuke to Fullerton Friday, there, 27 to 6.

Ord rammed across two TD's in the first quarter, passed for another in the second, then added the climaxer in the fourth.

Fullerton, well outclassed, found paydirt only once. The Warriors recovered a Chant fumble on the Ord 8 in the last period.

A rush was good to the two. Fullerton shoved the ball across on the next play, a combination bootleg and fake handoff. The conversion failed.

Kapustka First

For Ord, Big Don Kapustka registered first. Don went over off tackle and Romans added the conversion around end.

The Kapustka drive started on the Fullerton 45.

Tom Anderson scored next on an end around from the 10. A pass, Romans to Falter converted.

Anderson's 10 yard scamper climaxed a Chant march that began on the Ord 35. Chants took over following a Warrior kick.

Ron Romans was next. Ron took a long heave from Dale Falter on the Fullerton 20.

Romans Smothered

Ron was smothered by two Warriors but caught the ball. All three stood momentarily. Then Romans legged it towards the goal. The conversion was stopped.

The play covered 43 yards from about midfield.

That ended the half with Ord leading 20 to 0.

Ord kicked to open the second half. Fullerton marched back to the Ord 13 but were stopped by an intercepted pass.

Ord drove back to the 50 and were forced to kick. The Warriors were playing what amounted to a nine man line. The quarter ended.

Both sides failed to gain and both kicked. Fullerton's boot was taken by Romans on the Ord 2.

Ord Fumbles

Romans called two plays. Fullerton took over a fumble on the Ord 8 then ran end for the counter. The conversion failed.

Ord took the Warrior kickoff on the Ord 20 then ran it back to the 50. The Chants marched the other 50 yards on straight power. Babcock went over from about the 10 for the TD. The conversion was good.

That wrapped up the evening's entertainment with Ord the winner at 27-6.

Fullerton displayed a clever passing combination. Several heaves were completed but the Chant defense was pretty nearly leak proof.

Line Stands Out

The Ord line probably can be credited with most of the bows. The line kept the Warrior offense sewed up tight leaking only slightly when the subs played in the final quarter.

Fullerton's shift to a nine man line in the second half almost stopped the Chants. Romans subsequent attempts to pass seldom reached Kapustka apparently Ron's favorite target for the evening.

Vasicek, on the other end, was open several times but was overlooked.

The evening was cool. About 250 Ord fans shivered in the moist air then took halftime advantage of car heaters.

Fans Chilled

Most stood throughout the game. Bleachers at Fullerton are thimble sized and held only a hatful. A light rain fell about an hour before the contest.

Fullerton Coach Oscar Smith paid a tribute of sorts to the Ord eleven. Following the game Smith met Coach Bill Dickey in the hall.

"I only hope I live long enough to be able to coach a line as big as Ord's," Smith told Dickey.

Mrs. Zulkoski opening a can of popcorn this week discovered the works of a man's wrist watch.

Piano Business Up This Coming Year

Not in 30 years has the piano business been so good. Piano manufacturers conservatively estimate that 125,000 of the instruments will be sold this year. The industry can thank the millions of young musicians mastering their sharps and flats. They can also thank the hundreds of school systems that now offer music lessons.

Board of Public Works

Ord, Nebr., Oct. 10, 1955

The Board of Public Works met in Special Called Session this 10th day of October, 1955, at 3 P.M., in the office of E. R. Fafeita. All members present.

After discussion and consideration of the present gas rate controversy between the Kansas-Nebraska City Council, it was unanimously voted to go on record by letter to the City Council as follows, to-wit:

Honorable Mayor and City Council:

Our attention was recently called to the probability of the increase in rate for the gas used as fuel in the Municipal light and power plant of the City of Ord. The increase to be, should the City Council refuse increase in general gas rates as asked by the Kansas-Nebaska Natural Gas Company to their customers in the City of Ord.

The Board of Public Works feels that should the City Council refuse the request for a moderate increase in gas rates and the electric light and power plant be compelled to pay an increased rate for the gas used as fuel, it might become necessary to increase the light and power rates to the people of Ord sometime in the future, since light and power rates are governed by cost of production and the matter of fuel cost is a considerable item in these costs. It is also a known fact that gas is considerably cheaper than oil.

It seems rather unfair to this board that the users of light and power should be penalized for the benefit of the users of natural gas.

While the Board of Public Works has not had the full facts in this case as has the City Council, it feels that under the circumstances and the proposed retrenchment by the gas company that satisfactory measures should be taken by the Council insuring a reasonable gas rate for the light plant and good service to the gas users in the City of Ord.

E. R. Fafeita, Chm.
F. L. Blessing
E. S. Murray

I concur in the above recommendations:
Geo. H. Allen,
City Engineer.

On motion meeting adjourned.
E. S. MURRAY, Secy.

Rebekah Kensington . . . organized in 1934 to aid oldsters.

Rebekah Kensington, Old Time Club Here, Aids York Home with Series of Project

Organized in 1921, then disbanded, then reorganized in 1935. That's the history of Rebekah Kensington, which met Friday with Mrs. Fred Appelget.

This group has many good works to its credit. The organization was started to help the IOOF home in York. Sheets and pillow cases were needed. These the ladies could sew.

During the subsequent years the women have sewed and held money making affairs.

They say they do not know how many quilts they have worked. Many they have pieced and later quilted. For some quilters received a little over $3.

One of their money making schemes was an auction.

In more recent years, however, sewing has not been needed in such quantities. A year ago pillow covers were made. But members have not been idle, in spite of the fact, each is growing older.

Last year they took names of home inmates and sent letters or cards regularly.

They have taken special interest in Mrs. Belle Taylor, wife of the late Ora Taylor. The Ord Kensington has paid the dues of Mrs. Taylor in the lodge for years. They also send her clothing and gifts for Christmas and her birthday, February 7.

Not all the money the women have made goes into the home. They have also furnished a room in the Ord hospital.

For a long time an elevator was needed in the York home. With much work, many a bake sale, and just plain gifts, this essential has been added.

Some of the older club members were Mildred McQuillan, Minnie Carlton, Martha Mutter, Opal Kellison, Nellie Clark, Nancy Covert, Ruth Wolf, Cornelia Hohn, Anna Hollaway, Anna Rowbal, Nettie Thill, Bertha Janssen, Goldie Hrebec, Myrtle Paist, Della Lashmett, Linda Round, Mildred Fales, Lorraine Ferris.

There are twelve members at present. They are Jessie Appelget, Myrtle Benson, Lorraine Ferris, Dora Hodgson, Jessie Haught, Maggie King, Sylvia Kirby, May McCune, Mae McGinnis, Ora McLain, Irma Mulligan, Jessie Roe and Hattie Kizer.

The oldest members are Mrs. Roe and Mrs. McLain, who have been members of the lodge for 55 years. Mrs. Roe's father, A. A. Ward was a charter member of the IOOF of Ord.

The Kensington meets once a month. At the meeting at Mrs. Appelget's there were nine present and two visitors. They are Mrs. Melvin Mulligan and daughter, Mary Kathleen, who are visiting at the Mulligan home.

Oficers of the organization are Mrs. Appelget president; Mrs. Benson, vice president and Miss Maggie King, secretary-terasurer.

Mrs. Guy Mulligan . . . schoolteacher turned reporter.

Mrs. Guy Mulligan Is Quiz Reporter for Haskell Creek

Mrs. Guy Mulligan, the former Irma Sinner, is the Quiz correspondent from Haskell Creek. Mrs. Mulligan was asked to write club news soon after the family moved there in 1950. From then on it was an easy step to write all news of the community.

In her reports Mrs. Mulligan described the birth of the Sinkler twins, weddings of her own daughters, tales of the service men, accidents and deaths. Some of her biggest stories were on the watershed started recently.

Her other activities include membership in the Methodist church. Circle No. 2, district deputy of the Ord Rebekah lodge, Rebekah Kensington, Happy Circle club, 4H leader, and a leader in an extension club.

Mr. and Mrs. Mulligan have a son who is in his ninth year in the United States Navy. Another son, Eldon, is a junior in the Ord high school. Three daughters live in New York, Arcadia and North Loup. She has eight grandchildren. All the Mulligan children are musical.

The Mulligans have always farmed. Before her marriage, Mrs. Mulligan taught school three years in Sherman county.

She has sent to the Quiz the golden wedding reports of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Sinner of Loup City, and of Guy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mulligan of North Loup. Both were married in 1901.

—Mrs. Joe Danczek arrived Friday from Kearney to spend a few days with Mrs. Pete Kapustka.

Prices Going Up on All Appliances

Expect to pay more for appliances this fall. Candidates for price boosts will include refrigerators, automatic coffee makers, irons, electric roasters and frying pans, cutlery and blenders. Also hi-fi sets, record players, musical instruments and perhaps washing machines, dryers and freezers. Whispered warnings that clothes will be more expensive are heard in the wholesale markets. But increases seem more probable in spring lines than in fall and winter things.

—Mrs. Glen Auble returned home Sunday from Indianapolis, where she attended the national convention of PEO, and from Chicago, where she had visited her daughter, Mrs. Don Abernethy.

A Few Gas Angles

The Ord council is facing a perplexing problem. Recently the council was told it could either allow a domestic gas rate increase, or expect a rate hike for the Ord municipal electric plant.

Facing up to the ultimatum, (and we believe that's what it amounts to) is certainly an unpleasant situation. No matter how the question is resolved it will do nothing for council popularity.

If the council allows the domestic increase it will be asked: "Why do you give in now? You won in court, didn't you?"

If the increase is denied, and the municipal plant absorbs the new rate impact then electricity users may ask: "Why should we absorb costs for gas users?"

Of course, should the latter occur the Quiz believes it will hardly be necessary to increase electrical rates. Our muny plant is out of debt. It has spent, and paid for, a half million in improvements within the past ten years. In addition it has, in round numbers, $50,000 in quick assets and is making a comfortable $50,000 a year in net profit.

But the muny plant rate increase could postpone further into the future a date when consumers here might reasonably expect a rate reduction from an apparent,ly well managed plant.

Further clouding the decision is the enticing bit of bait, an $1,800 franchise fee, which will go to the city if the council grants the increase. The $1,800 is above K-N's regular taxes and represents a percentage of monthly billings. Should the council allow the increase then take the $1,800 for the city's general fund it in effect would be shifting the tax burden from property owners to gas consumers.

The above points are only a few of the unusual angles and arguments that currently mark the gas argument. There are others.

For instance, if our memory is accurate, one started when K-N made its first request for the debated rate.

At the time it presented the council with the new rate schedule incorporated into a new franchise. The council was wary of the new franchise's clauses and regarded it with some suspicion. And in the melange of rate discussions that followed we can recall no time when K-N said: "Let the new franchise go hang. It's the new rate we're interested in."

Yet that is precisely what happened here last week when K-N President S. D. Whiteman told councilmen he was tired of being beaten over the head about the franchise and the exact phrasing wasn't important.

In fact Whiteman went further. He said franchises, as far as he was concerned, were merely permits to dig up streets and impress bankers. As far as guaranteeing a rate structure, Whiteman said, they were valueless.

That opinion spurs several questions. If a franchise isn't important why the employment of so much legal talent to draft them?

And why, once drafted, is a franchise subjected to so much careful attention even to publication from K-N prepared copy at K-N expense?

And why again, if a franchise is no guarantee of rates, did Federal Judge Delehant rule it is a contract and, as such, beyond his jurisdiction?

And who asked for the franchise agreement? The City of Ord? No! It was the gas company.

These are only a few of the strange developments that have marked the year long gas struggle. There's one more that we'd like to emphasize before the council makes its final decision.

K-N, several times during arguments, has insisted it was just a small company trying to get along as it best knew how. The arguments have wen sympathetic support from a substantial section of Ord business and informed civic leaders.

In fact even segments of the Quiz have been won to believe here was a poor little company, involved in an argument it didn't exactly understand and had little liking for, attempting to solve its financial difficulties with an opponent that held all the aces.

Since Monday's ultimatum, issued by President Whiteman, it appears any sympathetic regard can be laid aside.

Because K-N has undergone a metamorphosis from a poor little company into a well seasoned organization perfectly capable of putting into action any peculiar advantages it might hold.

That clarifies the picture. Now the other side stands revealed in clear light.

What's the best and most effective weapon we can use to meet this new opponent?

Is it condemnation? Public ownership?

In any crowd, any time, any place, you can start up a dandy conversation on the topic of food. At least I have no trouble.

Helen Gzehoviak was talking about a fine new Polish cookbook they have acquired at her parents' home. All the family are delighted with it because for years they have wanted to be able to cook like mother, but she was an experienced long-time cook who did not use recipes. And no matter what the girls made it simply wasn't up to Mothers'!

But with the new cookbook they are trying out the Polish recipes, adjusting them here and there, and soon the cooking of the younger Gzehoviaks will more closely resemble that of Mother. They are pleased!

It is too bad to see the wonderful recipes native to other lands vanish from our midst. Too few of us appreciate the excellent methods of preparing meats and pastries that older generations learned at the family hearthside. One of these days, if we aren't careful there won't be a good first-class kolache maker left in Ord.

Please teach your children these national dishes. Teach them carefully, so that every last bit of tang is left in. Teach them to make your favorite old family soup recipes. And the head cheese or the sausage . . . whatever your family likes most. Let's keep our heritage from these other countries.

I remember when Mrs. Henry Deines lived next door to me. She was in the habit of making, a couple of times each year, a fine Swedish fruit soup. I have seen a recipe or two for it, but I am not sure it was the same, thickened with tapioca, and often served cold.

We have some excellent cooks with us. I do not know if I would like sauerkraut dumplings or liver dumplings but I hear many of my Bohemian friends speak highly of them.

oOo

In Gene's family several old Pennsylvania Dutch recipes are cherished. So I duly learned to make tomato gravy and Dutch cabbage and German potato soup and they are truly wonderful full-flavored dishes. They are high on the list of family favorites.

When my mother made pototo soup it was different from most others, for at the last she rubbed with her finger tips an egg yolk with flour and seasonings, letting it drop into the soup in tiny pieces. To me this adds that wonderful touch, that different taste, so I continue to make it that way. Once they did it in some other land, I feel sure.

I only wish I knew WHAT land.

On The Lee Side

Why Meet Since The Girls Do So Much on The Phone

One of the things that amuses me a great deal, and I'll admit it takes very little these warm fall evenings when the sun glints warmly over the rooftops, is to listen to my wife set the gears in motion for a meeting.

My wife happens to be the head of an organization called, I think, the Daughters of I Will Arise and L Street Bird Watching and Bicycle Association. She holds meetings every month or so, and I can tell when the meeting date grows near because she begins to get that drawn look about the eyes, and our house begins to fill up with more than its normal clutter.

Where I used to come home and plop down on the couch, I now have to be extra careful lest I sit on and spoil some bit of adacadabra she's whipping up to spur on the membership committee.

It seems the membership committee is always in need of spurring, women members of organizations being the slow pokes they are, so my wife is continually looking for those clever ideas like membership "trains," where the number of recruits for the month is posted on a string of cars and the conductor leans from the last to holler in a bold balloon, "What's the matter with YOU, Buddy?"

I've spent the last week trying to avoid the eyes of the Conductor, as he leans from the last car, but so far the effort has been a dismal failure. Now, in the evenings instead of lying on the couch, I just go out in the tool shed and dub around until I am sure the parlor is dark enough that I can't be seen by the Conductor.

Anyway, my wife starts getting ready for her meetings early. She starts telephoning the other members of the organization about what they'll have that night, and who'll be there, and what particular group will serve the refreshments.

The conversations go on and on and as each facet of the meeting is hashed over I begin to wonder why the organization meets at all since the girls seem to get so much business done over the phone.

Three days before the meeting the membership starts calling back to my wife. It seems they've taken the information she gave them in the earlier call and now that they have the thing well in hand they want to report on what they've done.

So my wife sits on the trunk and listens, raising her head once in a while to say, "Ummm-Hmmm". Then after the committee, or whomever else it is finishes, my wife starts. She repeats everything she knows up to that particular call and I suppose the party on the other end listens and nods "Ummm-Hmmm" just like my wife does.

This busy exchange of information goes on for three or four days until the night of the meeting. I can always tell the exact meeting date because when I come in the house I find a trail of my wife's discarded clothing leading up the stairs, into the bathroom, then through the hall to the bedroom. I'll know she's in there getting ready because I can hear her grunt occasionally as she slips into her girdle.

Then I'll hear the dresser drawer bang, and the sound of scurried searching, which means she's busted the garter on her garter belt, and must sew it back on before she can tighten up her socks.

While I'm mentally plotting her progress by the sounds from the bedroom I stand by the door because I know she'll rush out in a minute or so with a mouth full of instructions which she'll just let gush forth leaving me to decipher the whole mess of sentences alone.

There's a bang of the bedroom door, a flurry of perfume and red skirts, then a lipstick smeared kiss. "Now remembertoeatyoursupperat theGrill goto the showand besuretomeetmeat thehallat elevenoclock!" With that she's off and the house suddenly grows quiet.

So I go into the front room, and since the Conductor is long gone, I lay back on the couch where I'll be every evening until its time for THAT MEETING again.

Old Time Ball Game

Last week I told about a ball game of the old days. Some of the readers were kind enough to say they liked it so here goes for some more while the World Series is still being talked, and I'm in the mood.

First of these, in age, is my first attempt to pitch against grown men. I had been practicing at school since I was eight. My cousin, Wilmer Honnold, had been catching and training me.

I couldn't have pitched an inning in those days without Wilmer. He would sign what to throw and put his glove at the place to throw it. All I had to do was throw.

Wilmer had a home-made catcher's glove more than a foot across. It made a good target. I got so I could hit it nine times out of ten.

We played Davis Creek on the prairie a quarter of a mile north of present Valleyside school. Cousin Claude Honnold pitched the first two innings, allowed four scores.

Then Ormsby Petty, southpaw, pitched the next four. He was a little more effective but the Creekers got four more runs. Meanwhile, we had not been idle and had seven runs.

Petty, the Honnolds, and Wilmore Gray held a conference between innings. Petty said: "I can't stop them," and Claude said: 'Lets give John a try. He can't lose the game now."

So I went in. Wilmer told me to throw nothing but a fast ball, and to put it exactly where he held his glove. I did just that for three innings.

I struck out nine to end the game. Not a Creeker even touched the ball. They were swinging too late. Meanwhile we got a couple more runs and won the game 9 to 8.

The future looked rosy for me. Two weeks later we played them again. The whole nine faced me in the first inning and knocked that ball all over the lot.

Hitters Practiced

They had been practicing on fast balls, and I had not learned to mix 'em up. From then on, I always had a tough time with those Davis Creek sluggers, led by Frank Trump, now of Oshkosh, Nebr.

It was that same summer that we went to Ord and played the team for which John Rockhold, now druggist of Comstock, was pitcher.

John was a good pitcher, and he had a magic eye. He always got my goat at bat.

The game went merrily on. We played on the then vacant block where they later built the first part of the present Ord Christian church.

The home plate was at the southeast corner, and the church away over in right field, ordinarily out of the way, especially for a right hand batter. Gut Schmidt batted right handed.

Gus didn't get out much to practice, so we had him out in right field. He batted last. John found out that Gus would strike at any high ball, so he was throwing them high.

We were a little behind in the ninth, but managed to get two on, two out, when Gus came to bat. We didn't have an extra man, so we had to let Gus bat. We had little hope for a hit.

In no time at all John had two strikes. It sure looked bad. But John threw Gus another well over his head. Gus reached up, caught that ball to the right of center on his bat, and gave it a ride.

It went over the right fielder's head, hit one of the windows on the church, broke through the shutter and lodged there, too high above the ground for the fielder to get it.

The two runs came to tie the score, and Gus trotted aronnd the field with the winning homerun. Gus is an old man today, but I'll bet he will remember that ball game.

I don't have room now for that third baseball story, but I will try to save it for you at some future time. Next week I plan to have something very different, and interesting to a different group of readers.

Corn Picking Toll Includes Legs, Lives

Bb Bob Perry
Valley County Agricultural Agent

We are now at the season when corn pickers will be running. Let's run corn through those machines and not hands and arms!

A recent study by Bill Lutes, safety specialist, shows if you are a farmer that takes necessary precautions to classify you as a safe operator, your chances of getting hurt on a corn picker in the next five years is one in a million.

But if you take occasional chances, such as trying to remove a loose cornstalk from the husking rolls while the picker is running, you are an average operator and you stand one chance in twenty-five of getting hurt.

The careless operator, who ignores safety rules, has a fifty-fifty chance of being seriously injured.

24 Die

In Iowa in seven years, 24 people lost lives, 1098 persons lost 10 legs, 46 arms, 242 hands and 1,723 fingers. Gruesome but needless. Accidents don't just happen—they are caused.

The worst hours for accidents seem to be 10:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. Fatigue is probably the cause. Take a "coffee break" and save an arm.

Rules for Safety

Here are some good safety rules to classify yourself as a safe operator:

1. Never attempt to unclog, oil, or adjust a machine while in motion.
2. Always shut off the picker before leaving tractor seat.
3. Keep all safety shields in place.
4. Keep your machine in good mechanical condtion and adjustment.
5. Pick corn only when weather is favorable.
6. Carry a fire extinguisher and first-aid kit on picker.
7. Wear snug fitting clothes.
8. Change off with another operator once or twice a day if possible.
9. Keep shucks cleaned away from the exhaust manifold.
10. Use a metal sediment bulb on your tractor instead of a glass one.

A new 1955 bulletin 431, Ration of Concentrates to Alfalfa Hay in Fattening Rations, for beef cattle is now available. Data covers four feeding periods. It illustrates the effect of different proportions of concentrates to roughage on costs of grain.

Homemaker Tips . . .

Self Help Plan Given Slum Area

Home owners, worried about decline in property values in their neighborhoods due to apathy as older homes are being allowed to slip into slum status, have a chance to stop this great loss.

A new non-profit national organization called ACTION, American Council to Improve our Neighborhoods, with headquarters in Radio City, New York 20, New York, will furnish a program for local communities to help themselves.

It is estimated one million homes a year are allowed to deteriorate into slum category. This is a staggering loss to the nation's economy, and can be stopped, ACTION leaders point out.

The local ACTION program will help leaders arouse pride in remodeling and salvaging of these deteriorating homes. Most of these homes are easily remodelled and modernized, for having been frame designed, they can easily be redesigned along modern lines.

Petty Pilfering is Common Here, Report Managers

Petty pilfering, shoplifting, or just plain theft is common in Ord variety stores, say managers here.

So common, both point out, losses each year may reach as high as three per cent of store volume.

Adrian Davis, for Lee Stores and Stan Absalon, of Absalon's Variety, say Ord isn't the only town to feel the shoplifter's impact.

Stores all over the country expect similar losses each year.

So far the police have never been called when pilferers have been caught. Generally the thief is taken aside and given a talking to.

Sometimes parents are notified and sometimes arrest is threatened.

Grandma Too, Sometimes

Children aren't the only culprits. Sometimes grandma just happens to forget a pair of socks or handkerchief in her shopping bag unless the clerk calls it to her attention.

Nebraska law seems to favor the shoplifter. Damage suits may be filed unless the customer is caught almost red handed.

To meet the shoplifter's continuous raids stores raise prices. The honest consumer pays the way for the dishonest.

Keeping the losses to a minimum is what makes store managers gray headed.

As stores move into the coming fall and Christmas shopping season managers must grow more wary.

100 New Families Can Upset City

What happens when a hundred new families arrive in Ord? To begin with, it means about 450 people, including 100 children, 67 in grammar school, 33 in high school.

This calls for 2.2 new rooms in grade school and 1.65 new rooms in high school. They will cost about $120,000.

Four new teachers will have to be hired. The 100 families will add about $30,000 a year to the school operating budget.

Besides teachers, the city will need four fifths of a new employe in the police department and two thirds of a new fireman, upping the police budget by $4,510 and the fire department budget by $2,820.

All sorts of extra jobs will have to be done from collecting taxes to collecting garbage. Add four new city employes at a total price of $12,000 to $15,000.

The water department must pump 10,000 gallons more each day. Traffic will be increased by 140 cars and trucks. And the city may have to add 500 new volumes to the city library, part of a visiting nurse and, yes—a fraction of a cell in the town jail!

Social Security Man Here, Thurs. Oct. 20

A representative of the Grand Island social security administration district office will be at the court house here at 11:00 a.m., Thursday, October 20.

Losses, caused by delayed filing of claims after attainment of age 65 or in the case of death, can be prevented by prompt inquiry.

Questions, in regard to the requirements for an insured status under the social security act, should be presented at that time.

Morris Hearing to be Stormy and Table-Pounding; Set for Oct. 25

An Oct. 25 hearing by the board of control, over the firing of George Morris, men's reformatory superintendent, will be stormy and table-pounding.

Last week, the board, which governs state institutions, detailed reasons why it fired Morris and set Oct. 25 to hear the ousted reformatory head.

The board said Morris made statements "derogatory" to the board. The statements, the board said, "created a situation which hampered the efficient operation of the state reformatory and other penal institutions."

Further, the board charged Morris "refused to cooperate or even consult with Penal Director B. B. Albert with reference to operation."

Then came a flurry of strong statements from Frederick Wagener, Lincoln attorney who is representing Morris, and the board.

Wagener said he will not "tolerate a kangaroo" hearing.

The attorney said the hearing will determine "whether, by statehouse standards, the right of free speech is automatically and involuntarily taken from one accepting state employment."

The board replied that Wagener is attempting to "pre-judge the hearing."

In a statement the board said it is "not interested in making a political fanfare of this hearing and will conduct it in accordance with the laws of the state and in accordance with the office of attorney general."

The board statement also made note of the fact that Wagener "was the defeated Republican candidate for governor at the last election."

Further, the board said, "misconduct, which has been used in the case of Mr. Morris" is one of the legal reasons for dismissing a board employee. It said it feels there is "ample evidence to substantiate this charge."

Contacted at Falls City, Morris said, since his dismissal, the reformatory has been converted into a "junior penitentiary."

Meanwhile, the new superintendent of the reformatory, M. L. Wimberley, said all inmates involved in the Sept. 9 riot at the institution have been cleared from the segregation building.

Anderson Announces

State Senator Lester Anderson, Aurora, says he is very much in the running for the Congressional post now held by Rep. R. D. Harrison, Norfolk.

The 60-year old Anderson, a hotel owner, presently is serving his fifth term in the legislature.

Anderson said he is a "conservative Republican." He will run against Harrison in the GOP primary next year.

Says Anderson: "I've always been interested in national politics, and I believe in the Taft policies and Taft principles."

In 1952, Anderson was a delegate to the national GOP convention. He favored nomination of the late Sen. Robert Taft.

Anderson said he opposes Foreign aid, favors national and civil defense and has nothing against Harrison personally. "He's a nice man," Anderson said.

But the Aurora senator said Harrison did not go along with bills in Congress for better highways.

Autopsy Law Inadequate?

Dr. E. A. Rogers, Nebraska's health director, says a bum, alcoholic, drifter or person without a solid background "could be bumped off without too much difficulty in Nebraska."

Rogers said lack of a law to require an autopsy into deaths unattended by physicians make it possible for "many possible murders to go undetected."

Death certificates filed with the state division of vital statistics often are open to question, Rogers said. He said: "We can many times give examples of deaths that might have been caused by foul play."

"Autopsies are expensive," Rogers said, "and a person who is found lying dead in an alley is often just pronounced dead by law enforcing authorities who make no attempt to determine the cause of death."

"Such deaths are often merely attributed to old age, a bad heart, exposure or something else," Rogers said.

The health director said autopsies are "highly desirable" when there is question on the causes surrounding a death.

"If a medical examining board could be set up to perform autopsies less expensively," he said, "we would be able to more accurately determine the cause of death in questionable cases."

Anthrax Drops

Recent rains in Nebraska have not only benefited crops. They have also helped stop the deaded cattle disease Anthrax.

That's the report from Dr. J. L. George, state veterinarian. George says as soon as the rains became general throughout the state, reports on the incidence of anthrax began to drop.

Cattle can get the disease, George said, when they are forced to eat short vegetation. The disease is caued by a soil-borne organism.

Ten cattle herds in Nebraska were reported infected before the rains came George said.

Anthrax kills rapidly, George said, "and that's why we like early reports on all animals that die suddenly, for no apparent reason."

Often, he said, it will not be known that an animal has the disease until it is found dead and an autopsy performed.

Symptoms of the disease include high fever at the outset of the attack. loss of appetite and then death.

Letter Explains Absence from Meet

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Schwarzel of Meadville, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Dart Long of Lebanon, Ore., arrived in Ord during September expecting to meet a mutual friend, Miss Jessie Ferguson, of Wheaton, Md.

Miss Ferguson failed to show up. The friends had to leave without seeing her.

A letter was received this week from Mrs. Schwarzel in which Miss Ferguson's absence was explained. She underwent a serious operation and was recovering in a hospital at the time of the meeting. She is recovering. Miss Ferguson hopes she will be able to come to Ord later.

Mrs. Schwarzel writes: "Our trip was a dream come true, we had such a wonderful time all the way. There had been no frost while we were gone and our row of tall African marigolds, (orange and lemon) are simply gorgeous. Tea roses and asters are still blooming. We will dig our winter potatoes, probably two bushels, tomorrow.

My husband stood the trip wonderfully and says we are coming back in two years.

St. Anne's Study Club

One guest, Mrs. Don Beran, and 12 members were present.

Wednesday Pitch

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Good were hosts to Wednesday Pitch which met Oct. 5. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gregory were hosts. Prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Turner and Mr. and Mrs. Gregory.

North Loup Drive-In Theatre . . . Bringing the best in films to all viewers.

North Loup Drive I Latest Unit To Join Community Business Scene

The North Loup Drive-in, owned and operated by Edward and Inez Burrows, is the newest enterprise to join the community's business group. A small drive-in built to suit the needs of its territory, it offers the best in equipment and engineering features.

The projection room, managed by Erlo (Ted) Babcock and Assistant La Vern Verzal, contains the finest Ballantyne equipment.

The modern mechanisms permit and enhance the showing of the screen's newest processes which include Vistavision, Cinemascope, Superscope, etc.

Screen Unusual

Careful planning made possible the unusual light achievement on the giant screen.

The screen is tilted forward 6 degrees to meet the 260 ft. projection beam at exact right angles. This required perfection eliminates undesirable distortion or shadow.

More than five miles of underground copper wire was used to complete the complex electrical system. Telephone wires are also underground.

Features Listed

The drive-in was planned for the pleasure of its patrons and has modern conveniences no other theatre can offer. You can—

1. Enjoy the movies in the privacy of your car, dressed as you are.
2. A fine child's playground with speakers of its own located in front of the ramp system.
3. Clean, modern restrooms.
4. Courteous ushers to help park your car and clean your windshield.
5. A modern refreshment room offers hot sandwiches, cold drinks, ice cream, crisp, hot popcorn and other delicacies.
6. Bring your baby's bottle to the refreshment room if you want it filled and heated just right.
7. Paging service. If you receive a call we will see that you get the message.
8. Got a headache — need an aspirin? Just come to the building. They are free.
9. We are equipped for minor accidents. Just come to the building if one of the youngsters skins his knee or something else.

Special Show To Come

All these services, plus the best of fine pictures, are yours at the Drive-in.

With a special midnight show Halloween night, Oct. 31st, the Drive-in is closing for the season. The Burrows say they have liked becoming one of the forty-three outdoor theaters serving Nebraska.

They hope this theater has helped make your season's entertainment more pleasant and next year they hope to see you again—at the Drive-in.

Tiresome Royalty

Personally I am wearying of so many queens. Football, 4-H, festivals, and special days. All seem to have to bring out some girl to be a queen. It might have meant something at one time, but now it seems to be a bit overdone. Just my opinion, of course.

"Carrot Top" a Disgrace?

Mrs. Dillo Troyer, a beutician here, says, at the recent convention of beauticians, one model was shown with bright orange hair. The strange coiffure was set off with a wide white streak down the middle. Another model wore purple hair. I can remember when it was almost a disgrace to have red hair, and as for dyeing hair. Well! that simply wasn't done.

Did you notice, by any chance how nice the wet leaves smelled Thursday evening after the rain.

McCalls Features Scotia

A picture of the girls' Craft club of Scotia will appear in the next issue of the McCall's Needlework magazine, on sale Oct. 22. The girls, under the direction of Mrs. R. A. Hamsa, used instructions taken from the magazine for the sleeveless slip-on sweaters they are wearing. The girls received $5.00 for the picture.

Oil Ephemeral

The Lukes sisters say that to date they have received no further word concerning an oil well that was reported to have been found on their leased property in Gering recently. They say they are getting tired of being called "Oil Magnates."

Zangger Trees

Trees grow fast, after all. It seems just a short time ago trees on the W. O. Zangger home place were small. Now they have grown so large that the house is almost hidden.

First Frost Scare

Flower growers cast anxious eyes at the sky, Thursday, then listened for frost warnings via radio. Then they went out and picked all the blooms left. As it turned out they had their trouble for nothing. The light frost that came did no harm. But just the same, some of us gained. I came back to the desk with my hands loaded. The flowering bank back of Harmony House, has been a colorful mass all fall with cosmos, salvia petunias, and mums. Mrs. Anderson gave me a bouquet. Mrs. Archie Geweke, also was generous, and gave me three lovely roses. She still had many buds, and flowers left. Of special interest, in the Geweke yard, was the bank of purple asters. These flowers resembled the small wild asters we used to find in the pastures. In fact the back wall was purple with flowers. Beautiful were her salvia, and her canna, but to my mind, the most delightful were the tiny dark blue forget-me-nots.

Goff and Co.

Every year the sale of the spotted Poland China hogs belonging to Clifford Goff is advertised. People who remember Mr. Goff as a young man remember his swine projects while a 4-H club member. Others remember how he would care for the hogs at the farms where he worked, sitting up all night to see that young ones did not get cold. Now Cliff's sons are in partnership with him and he is making a name for himself.

Thursday was Dad's Day, evidently. Early in the morning, I saw four dads on the street, each caring for a son or daughter.

Money Instead of Treats

I still think it would be nice if the children in tricks or treats forays, Halloween night, Oct. 31, would ask for money to be sent to the United Nations International Childrens Emergency fund, instead of customary candy or fruit.

It might be too early to think about Christmas, but if I were a little girl I would ask Santa for that cute baby basket and equipment seen in the window of the Ord Paint Store.

Quiz Grandma

I do not, as some believe, write the "70 Years Ago" from memory, although I am frank in saying that I am the Quiz grandmother. But with the Newspaper Week, just past, I am remembering the old days of hand set type and foot pedal presses. For, you see, I have been in the game longer than I really like to remember. Some people drift into work and remain because they're stuck there. Others know what they want, go into it, and keep at it because it is just what they wanted.

I belong to the latter.

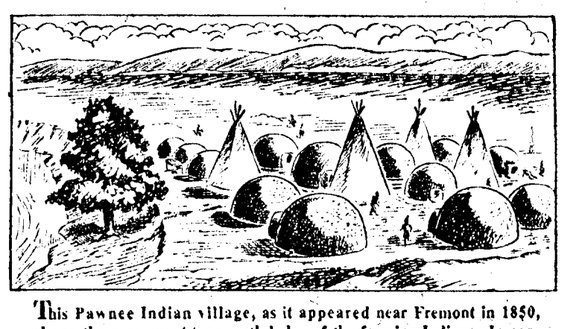
It Happened In NEBRASKA---



This Pawnee Indian village, as it appeared near Fremont in 1850, shows the permanent-type earth-lodge of the farming Indians. In contrast, the nomad tribes—chiefly hunters—lived in conical tepees which were easy to move from place to place.

Nebraska tavern operators, too, were once impermanent businessmen—here today and off to newer frontiers tomorrow. No longer! Today our tavernmen and their businesses are permanent and respected. Playing a definite part in our community way of life!

TO OUR CUSTOMERS IN ORD:

The purpose of this letter is to bring you up to date on the efforts of our company to secure rate relief in Ord.

No doubt you recall that about a year ago we asked your city council to grant us an increase because the cost of gas, labor, material and supplies has increased considerably during recent years. Most of the increase in gas costs was due to a governmental order in Kansas which we fought unsuccessfully to the Supreme Court of that state. This was the first increase in rates we had ever requested from Ord.

We asked for increases in 82 communities in Nebraska which we serve at retail. Seventy-eight of those communities gave us the help we needed; Ord was one of four towns which refused to grant the increase.

Last November we took the matter to Federal Court. Out of fairness to the 78 other towns, we had promised them that we would not increase their rates until we had approval from all towns or had taken legal action against those refusing to help us.

On September 15, 1955, Federal District Judge John W. Delehant handed down a 35 page opinion in the case. Four things that he said are important to us, and we feel that they are also important to you as our customers.

1. He said that his court did not have jurisdiction over the case.
2. He said that our franchise is a binding contract for 25 years, during which we cannot raise or lower rates except with the approval of your city council.
3. He said that the rate we are presently receiving in Ord "is not enough to be fair or reasonable, and is, therefore, confiscatory."
4. He said that even with the requested increase we would still be receiving less than a reasonable rate.

As a result of this opinion, we met with your city council on October 3 to ask them to reconsider the matter in light of the fact that the judge said we are now making far less than a reasonable rate of return in Ord.

Your city council has promised to think the matter over and meet with us again on November 7. In the meantime, we thought that you should know what we discussed with the council because these matters will vitally affect your natural gas service.

We recalled the days when delegations from Ord came to Hastings repeatedly to ask that we bring gas to them. We remembered visiting Ord and Burwell to determine whether or not we could build an expensive pipeline and related facilities to bring natural gas to your area. We said that we consider the franchise to obligate us to give you natural gas service, but from the beginning we have felt that we would always be entitled to a reasonable return on our investment. In 1949 that return was reasonable; in 1955, it is not.

We can no more guarantee the price of gas for 25 years than your grocer can guarantee the price of bread or milk. Our business is no different than others -- our costs can fluctuate with inflation so that we could be put out of business if held to a specified rate for 25 years.

Furthermore, the increase we are asking in Ord is very moderate. For example: if your monthly bill had been $4.25 it would be decreased to $4.00 under the new rate; a monthly bill of $11.95 would increase to $13.20; a monthly bill of $22.95 would increase to $26.40.

The increase asked is small to the average customer, but an important item to us. It is the difference between a reasonable return to us or a confiscatory rate. We have urged your city council to consider the seriousness of the situation with which we are faced.

Suppose the overhead in your business increased and you could not raise the price of your product. What would you do? Probably about the same as we will have to do -- cut our overhead in Ord.

This could be accomplished in several ways. We might be forced to close our office in Ord and move most of our personnel to other areas. Service calls would have to be eliminated. Most of the service calls we make are without charge to the customer, but under our present rate in Ord we cannot afford to continue to make service calls. Service on your natural gas equipment would have to be performed by your plumber.

In order to make up part of the loss which we are sustaining in Ord, it would also be necessary to raise the cost of gas at the power plant. Natural gas has been of great benefit to your electric system, but under present conditions we cannot continue to furnish gas at the prevailing rate.

This means that the Ord electric service would have to bear the increased cost of gas, but we have no other alternative if the city council refuses to recognize our need for help. Of course, an increase at the power plant and the other economies would not be necessary if the council grants our original request.

These matters are presented to you as cold, hard business facts. We feel that the fair-minded residents and businessmen of Ord will understand our problem and help us.

This matter will be before your city council again on November 7. Certainly your councilmen will appreciate knowing your feeling on this matter. If we can provide you with further information please call on us.

We hope you will help us in continuing good natural gas service in Ord.

Sincerely,,

A. D. Whiteman

Ordites See First Rainmaking Device

Albion Project Puts Silver Iodide Furnace at Leach Ser. Staton

Ordites received their first close up look at a rainmaking device this week at the Leach Frontier Service.

Simply put, the rainmaker is a coke burning furnace that consumes the fuel under forced draft.

The machine is box like. It is fashioned of gauge steel. Inside is a coke reservoir, an auger, a chute and the furnace.

To start the unit operating Mr. Leach lights the coke, starts the draft, then turns on the auger. The latter feeds fuel into the furnace a pellet at a time.

The coke is impregnated with silver iodide. The reservoir contains fuel for 16 hours operation.

That's the machine's description. The principles of rainmaking are more complex.

Rainmaking Idea

Scientists say raindrops form around tiny grains of dust called nuclei. When grains are missing no rain falls even although the cloud may be "loaded."

Some weathermen claim only 25 per cent of all possible rain falls due to this fault. The remaining 75 per cent evaporates.

Rainmakers are going after the wasted 75 per cent with the coke furnaces. Here's how:

The coke is impregnated with silver iodide. When burned millions of tiny nuclei are released into the upper atmosphere.

Nuclei To Clouds

Rainmakers hope the nuclei reaches a cloud and a raindrop forms.

When rainmakers want to make it rain in a given area the furnaces are set up 50 or 60 miles back.

That's to allow the iodide crystals time to reach the cloud, form raindrops, then fall.

That's the reasoning behind the generator here. Albion is 70 miles east. The Ord unit is one of hundreds ringing the Albion area. Albion is carrying out a rainmaking project.

Nearly a million acres are in the Albion, (Boone county) project. The try for rain is being carried on by a firm, The Cornhusker Weather Modification Corp. Boone countyans raised the $25,000 cost with a 10c per acre assessment. The latter was voluntary.

Firm In Denver

The firm headquarters in Denver. There personnel studies cloud formations and wind drifts. When both are aimed at Boone county the firm calls generator stations telling them to start making smoke.

Leach said he gets $4 a month for having the furnace around.

He gets an additional $1 an hour when it is in operation.

City Allows Leaf Burning Two Weeks

The city will allow leaf burning for two weeks starting October 20, Police Chief Jim Sobon announced.

But there are slight restrictions.

First, residents mustn't light fires until ten o'clock in the morning and the fires must be extinguished by six o'clock.

Second, fires must be attended at all times and third, you mustn't burn leaves on surfaced streets.

Sobon had one recommendation. "Don't pile the leaves in big piles. They will burn better, and smoke less, if burned in long ricks," he said.

Shotgun Case Goes Into District Court

Joseph Klat Bound Over in Preliminary; Pleads 'Not Guilty'

Joseph Klat, an elderly Ord township farmer, was bound over to district court, Friday.

Klat was charged with shooting with intent to wound, maim or kill.

The district court charge followed preliminary arraignment in county court, Friday. Klat, through Attorney Ed Vogeltanz, pleaded not guilty.

He was arraigned on information sworn by Joseph Sydzyik, a neighbor.

Sydzyik said Klat had fired a shotgun at him while Sydzyik was working in a farm field, September 14.

Sydzyik claimed he suffered a minor pellet wound.

Klat denied the charge claiming he was home reading.

The trial will probably be held in November.

Battery 'Loan' Leads to Court Conviction

Three persons were clipped in county court, Monday, one of them on a petty larceny charge.

He is Donald Paine, of Ericson, employed on a Valley county farm.

Paine was charged with taking two batteries from an irrigation engine owned by Alfred Burson.

Paine pleaded he "borrowed" the batteries. Judge Ellsworth Ball said Paine neglected to notify Burson of the "loan."

That made Paine guilty of theft in Judge Ball's book so he fined Paine $20 and costs.

John McDermott, of Omaha, was fined two violations on speeding. He was tabbed 10 and costs on the first and $15 and costs on the second.

Joseph Jantzon, of Ord, was fined $10 and costs for speeding.

Other court convictions were: Charles Zmhral, intoxication, $10 and costs; Alvin Kron, North Loup, speeding, $10 and costs; Dale Mulligan, Ord, speeding, $10 and costs; Edwin Doncheski, speeding, $15 and costs.

Direct Efforts to Area Engineer Says Highway 80 Speaker

Lloyd Chandler Tells Meeting Tie-in Projects Have Biggest Chance

"You'll stand the best chance of success if you'll tie requests for hard surface to existing hard surfaced highways," Lloyd Chandler told the Highway 80 Ass'n. meeting here, Wednesday.

Chandler said the association should pick out a section of Highway 80, that adjoins more hard surface, then concentrate efforts on getting that done.

Chandler said: "The highway department shuns isolated installations. When you can tie a project into an existing one then you increase chances."

(Highway 80 has such a strip between Bartlett and Elgin. Five miles east from Bartlett are surfaced. Then comes 15 miles of gravel From Elgin north and eastward 80 is paved all the way.)

Still Politics

Chandler said highways are still built pretty much by political pressure. It isn't as obvious as when Val Peterson was governor, Chandler indicated, but pressure still exists.

Chandler pooh-poohed the present sufficiency system.

"Two engineers go out and drive all the highways," he said, "then make up the sufficiency rating. In two more years two more engineers will go out and do the same thing."

He advised Highway 80 to "work closely with your area engineer."

"Responsibility is broken down in the highway department. One man can't possibly have it all. Therefore the place to direct efforts is to the office that has control."

Likes Commission Map

He placed faith in the highway commission map adopted by the legislature in LB 187.

"This may not be the best plan in the world," he said, "but it is sound."

(The commission map routes Highway 80 east of Ord to north of Greeley where it meets 183. South of Ord Highway 80 is shown running almost due south to five miles east of Arcadia.)

After Chandler's talk Senator LeRoy Bahensky spoke briefly. Bahensky said little of portent, but promised help.

Koll Farm Gets Well on 'Third Charm' Try

John Koll, a Mira Valley farmer, this week was making plans for irrigation next year. Koll recently completed a 1,000 gallon well on land formerly dry. His corn crop failed this year.

Koll's new well will irrigate 110 acres by gravity. He plans to use gated pipe. The well is cased with concrete pipe.

It is located on the southern edge of the Koll farm. In two week tests, Koll said, the well has been pumping about 1,000 gpm.

The well is 338 feet deep and has a static level of 98 feet. With pumping at 1,000 gpm the water level dropped to 193 feet then stayed steady.

Koll attributes the successful operation to Frank Rakosky of Ord.

"Frank was the guy who talked me into using one more length of pipe on the test well when I was ready to give up," Koll said. Two previous test holes failed. Koll said "The third time was the charm."

The well is powered by a 100 hp. Minneapolis-Moline motor. It was drilled by Don Pirnie of Broken Bow. It was witched in by Ray Albin of Greeley.

Koll figures his investment when complete will be near $15,000.

Vandals Damage Recreation Grounds

Continued vandalism at the Veterans Recreation Grounds, north of Ord, has caused the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars to post a reward of $100 for information leading to arrest and conviction of vandals.

The veterans said flood light bulbs were shot out and damage occurred to a water pump, barbecue pit, and trap shooting equipment.

The grounds are now posted as private property.

Before snow flies veterans hope to complete the erection of a sixty foot quonset on the site.

On the Party Line

Maybe some of you have read my poem, Drouth Autumn. I take it all back. The trees are taking on a beautiful yellow, and the sumac is the usual clear crimson. In fact the whole countryside is like a cover on the Saturday Evening Post for Oct. 8. Fall in Nebraska is when the sky is blue.

Plaid Jackets

I have a wonder in me? Who designs the lovely plaid jackets about town? No two alike. Or so it seems to me.

Skating

Where will children skate this winter? Or do they skate any more; or is there a pond nearby where they can hike after school on short winter afternoons; or on moonlight nights? Maybe they don't ice skate any more. It used to be fun.

Pencils Vary

Do you know that today's pupils can choose pencils from 350 types? They vary from Jumbos, liked by kindergarteners, to general purpose pencils for office and home. Pencils are made in six degrees of lead hardness, but most prefer the softest, Number 1 or 2. I can remember when it seemed wonderful to have all the pencils I wanted.

Shades of the cowboys! Now they say Frank Kruml, rancher in Garfield county and a linotype operator at the Quiz, herds calves comfortably seated in his car. At least that is what Asa Anderson, another Quiz operator, reports.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Nass robbed honey hives last week and say they gleaned 1,000 pounds. The yield was low because of the drouth. Bees worked in alfalfa and clover.

Students Sought

I am trying to discover where Valley county young folks attend college. If your son or daughter is away at school, especially one of the smaller colleges, please let me know.

And now a paragraph about dogs. In the Quiz there are two. One is the notorious Bosco who is so afraid his idol, Bill Lee, will get away, he sleeps in the doorway. Number two is a little taffy colored Cocker who has adopted Ellen Beeghly. In this issue there is an ad for a lost dog by Eddie Paul Cahill. Mrs. Lillie Coleman and her son, Don, have lost their Spitz, and Billy Wright is heart broken because his black Cocker has been gone. The town seems to be full of dogs. Two owners would gladly give up dogs that have adopted them. Three owners are sad because dogs are lost. Something seems to be balled up! By the way, who owns the pretty white and black spotted dog that slept on my porch the other night?

Now even the formerly prosaic, dull pickup trucks have gone all out for color. Note the new vehicles. They are boasting baby blue, shell pink and dainty lavender.

SPEAKING of CARDS

WHEN WASHINGTON PLAYED CARDS

Did you know that card playing was so popular at the time of the American Revolution and decks of cards were sold in such large quantities that playing cards were taxed heavily under the infamous Stamp Act?

The Stamp Act, which with other legislation aroused the wrath of the colonists to such later actions as the Boston Tea Party and the Boston Massacre, contains the following passages: "And for and upon every pack of playing cards . . . which shall be sold or used within said colonies or plantations, the several stamp duties following: for every pack of such cards, the sum of 1 shilling."

Although a tax of one shilling may not seem like much to us nowadays (it is equivalent to about 14c today) it should be remembered that at the time it was equal to the total purchase price of a deck of playing cards.

The Father of our country, General George Washington, an avid card player himself, noted in his diary on December 31, 1771: "Purchased two new decks of cards at a cost of 2 shillings." Earlier, on January 16, 1768, Washington wrote: "At home all day at cards . . . it's snowing." Other entries in Washington's Diary recorded the names of those with whom he played cards along with an exact record of games won and lost.

Another famous American of the Revolutionary era, Benjamin Franklin, was one of the first manufacturers of playing cards in the United States. Benjamin was a partner with his brother, James, in a printing firm which made maps and printed "Poor Richard's Almanac." One of the Franklin brothers' early advertisements read, "Stationery of all kinds to be sold at the Post Office and sundry other things too tedious to mention." At that time, stationery was an elastic term which included playing cards, books, and even Bibles.

One unusual effect of the American Revolution, reflecting the distaste of the colonists for the nobility, was the elimination of royalty from playing cards. A special deck, sold in Philadelphia shortly after the Revolution, has Gilbert Stuart's portrait of George Washington on the King of Hearts. The other pasteboard royalty was dethroned and temporarily replaced by such famous Americans as John Quincy Adams (King of Diamonds), Thomas Jefferson (King of Clubs) and Andrew Jackson (King of Spades).

The two most popular games played by the colonists were Whist and Quadrille. These have been replaced nowadays by such relative newcomers as Bridge, Canasta, Gin Rummy and Calypso. But a deck of playing cards, which today may cost slightly more than a shilling, remains one of the nation's favorite pastimes and continues to provide enjoyment and relaxation for more than 80 per cent of the population.

THREE FOR A CROWD

Here's a card trick that's guaranteed to get your next card party off to a rollicking start. Simple to execute, it doesn't involve any manual dexterity on your part. Just get out a full deck of playing cards and follow these instructions:

While chatting amiably with your friends, fan through the deck casually, face up, as though checking its completeness. BUT MAKE A MENTAL NOTE OF THE THIRD CARD FROM THE LEFT.

Leave the card alone but remove from the deck the other three cards of the same denomination. Thus, if the third card from the left happens to be a 9, remove the three other 9's; if a Queen, remove the three other Queens, etc.

Let's assume for this explanation that the third card is a Jack and you've removed the three other Jacks. Show the three Jacks face up briefly, and then place them face down on the table.

Put the balance of the deck (the stock) face down alongside of the Jacks. Remove the top card of the stock and place it face down to one side. On this card put a Jack from the pile of three, also face down. Then add a card from the stock, then another Jack, then another card from the stock and the last Jack—all of these, of course, face down. You have now stacked up six cards in one small pile, alternately mixing those from the stock and Jacks. It is now apparent to your audience that the three Jacks have been broken up and mixed with the top three cards from the stock.

Now pick up all six cards in the small pile and place them on the top of the stock pile.

Turn up the three top cards on the pile of six. They will all be Jacks and your audience, expecting the Jacks to be "sandwiched" in between the cards from the stock pile, will be surprised . . . perhaps slightly astounded.

Here's the explanation: the three Jacks you turn up at the end are not the same Jacks which you removed from the deck. To see just how it works, take a deck of cards right now and follow the instructions given here. You'll soon see the light.

Be sure to shuffle the deck thoroughly after each demonstration so that the key card—third from the left—is a different one each time. And don't let your audience study too closely the three cards you've removed from the deck. Otherwise, someone with a sharp eye will notice that the three cards you turn up at the end are not the same as the ones with which you started.

Workers at the Ontario Veterinary College believe they know the three chief reasons for sudden deaths in calves. The reasons are intestinal poisoning caused by a germ called Clostridium welchii, lead poisoning, and a deficiency of vitamin E which causes degeneration of the heart muscles.

Feeing two antibiotic supplements in chick rations has proved economically practical in research at Kansas State College. The two antibiotics do not improve the best results with one antibiotic, but they give good results more consistently.

Chant Power Overwhelms Raiders, 20 to 6

Three Long Drives Capped with TD's Spell Out Victory

The Chants turned on the power in three long touchdown drives here Friday to hang a convincing win on Loup City's Red Raiders 20 to 6.

The win busted the victory string for the Raiders at five. It was the sixth straight for the Chants, undefeated this year.

The game was a Trans-Nebraska Conference scrap.

Loup City drew first blood. The Raiders picked up a loose ball on the Chant 35 in the first line play after Ord received.

Jim Paige made the scoop, then rambled the remaining yardage to the opening score. The conversion failed.

Loup City fans went wild as the scoreboard posted: Loup City 6, Ord 0.

Revenge Arrives

Revenge wasn't long coming. The Chants took a Raider kick on the Ord 40. Five plays later the ball rested on the Raider 40.

Romans, fading deep, passed to Falter who scampered to a TD. The conversion was good.

That made the first quarter read Ord 7, Loup City 6.

Ord struck again in the second canto. Taking a Raider kick on the Chant 20 Ord marched steadily downfield aided with two fine pass plays.

A similar effort netted ten more yards to the Raider 2. Three plays later Joltin' Don Kapustka bulled over from the 2. The conversion failed.

Halftime scores were Ord 13, Loup City 6.

Third Scoreless

The third stanza was scoreless. Both teams churned away in midfield. Loup City was definitely in the ball game with the aid of some fine running by Jim Paige, John Lonowski and Marv Galloway.

As quarter time elapsed The Raiders opened with a pass flurry. Two completions placed the ball on the Ord 15.

A third was intercepted by Ron Romans. That set the stage for the final Ord touchdown.

The Chants broke out of dangerous territory with two fine runs by Babcock and Kapustka.

Turned Up Burners

On the Ord 40 the Chants turned up the burners and started cooking. Sixteen plays later Babcock went over from the 2. The conversion was good.

That made it Ord 20, Loup City 6.

Loup City started downfield with a minute and a half to play. They had chewed up the turf to midfield when the game ended.

That, and some excellent line backing, kept the Raiders in the game. Line play was scrappy all the way.

Power Wins

Ord survived by sheer power. Standouts were Babcock and Kapustka who delivered when yardage was critical.

Darrel Conner, Kapustka's hole opener, performed with distinction. Chuck Blaha, who experienced considerable difficulty on defense, led the tackling assignments. Chuck registered 9.

Attendance set a record. Fans paid $668 at the gate to beat the total set by the Ord-Seward conference scramble last year.

Aiding the record purse was a big contingent of partisans from Loup City. Most were hoarse at game's close.

Band Shines

The Ord marching band lent a spectacular touch to the halftime break.

Kenny Babka, attired in full dress, arrived in midfield a la convertible to lead the tooters in an opus called Liberace.

The band formed a piano outline. Girls in black and white were keys.

Liberace (Babka) then, to spotlighted prominence, played a two fingered solo, Chopsticks.

The effort drew thunderous applause.

Ord-Loup City game . . . Romans (11) evades a determined Raider tackle to rack up a conversion.

Gibbon Humbles Scotia 27 to 6

Gibbon exploded for three touchdowns in the last half to swamp Scotia, Friday, 27 to 6.

Scotia's only counter came in the second quarter. Ron Bebernes went six yards for the score.

Gibbon won the statistical edge. Scotia listed 108 yards from 8 first downs. Gibbon had 225 yards and 10 first downs.

The Gibbon melee filled an open date in the Scotia schedule.

Next Friday Scotia meets the rampaging Huskies from Arcadia unscored upon so far this year.

Huskies, at Home, Swamp Litchfield

Coach Glen Vannier's Arcadia Huskies completely swamped Litchfield Friday here, 51 to 0.

The win set the Huskies in position to cop the Loup Valley Conference crown.

In the Litchfield game the Huskies countered twice in every quarter. McDonald and Tuning paced the attack with two scoring thrusts each.

Pedrick, Coons, Elliott and Mettenbrink scored one TD each.

The Huskies scored on power and interceptions. The latter accounted for two counters.

No Geese Bagged in Seasonal Opener

Duck Kills Sparse with CAVU Weather; Flights Are High

Hunters here saw nary a close sign of geese over the weekend although shotgunning on the big birds opened Saturday.

Several flocks were sighted, but all were miles high. No hunter, as far as the Quiz could learn, successfully lured honkers within pellet range.

Sighted flocks were all Sandhillers.

Duck hunters too were suffering from chilled limbs and few ducks. Only two reported sizable kills.

Doughit Reports 27

Walt Douthit, Joe Covert and a Burwellite, reported a bag of 27 on the Calamus. The Douthit party were on a two day jaunt.

Paul Bleach and party, again scouring the Sandhills above Burwell, reported a kill of 23 on a second weekend jaunt.

Douthit told the Quiz his party's bag was featured by an oddity. Half of the kill was canvas backs, a duck breed not often seen here. Most canvas backs travel the Mississippi flyway.

"But," said Douthit, "we saw more this weekend than I've seen here in ten years."

Pair Skunked

Howard Huff and Len Cronk were skunked on the North Loup, Monday. The pair sighted seven well out of range.

Gus Schoenstein and Joe Cetak killed two teal Monday near Sumter. The pair reported seeing four.

George Dworak and Harold Christensen nailed one mallard, Monday, north of North Loup.

Jim Cetak, Hiling Pearson and Frank Kneifl, reported 7 killed Friday, 13 Wednesday and 7 killed Sunday.

The kills were mostly teal and widgeons. One mallard was taken.

At Misko's Sports Shop, the hot-stove league headquarters of the duck-minded gentry, the general news was "sparse bags."

Shop habitues blamed the nice weather. Frosty temperatures have greeted early nimrods but visibility has been unlimited.

That means waterfowl can scan landmarks from great heights.

Doctors Paul Lambert and Dale Karre reported the hardest luck. Both peppered away at a teal.

The shot killed the teal and also punctured a decoy which filled and sank.

Pheasant Reservations 'Few' Says Ord Hotel

Mrs. Dean Avers of Hotel Ord says only a few advance reservations have been made by pheasant hunters this year. None were made for the duck and geese season which opened during the past two weeks.

Mrs. Avers says she does not expect many since hunting does not begin until noon.

In past years, rooms were at a premium and private homes were opened to the hunters.

RATINGS

Monday Ron Gibson, of the Lincoln Star, rated Ord first over Cozad, Crete and Central City in that order.

Tuesday Jim Raglan, of the Lincoln Journal, rated Ord third behind Crete and Cozad.

In Wednesday's World-Herald Sportswriter Gregg McBride still listed the Chants third behind Crete and Cozad.

McBride's ratings didn't change despite Fullerton's thumping of Seward 12 to 7.

Some fans believe that should have made a shift in the McBride opinion. Here's why:

Seward 27—York 13
Crete 25—York 12

Those results indicate Seward and Crete are about even. Then this happened:

Fullerton 12—Seward 7

That indicates Fullerton is better than Seward and so better than Crete.

Ord beat Fullerton so, fans argue, Ord is better than Seward or Crete.

Pheasants Fair Game Come Saturday Noon

Commission Says Birds Are There for 'Walking Up'

Valley county scattergun toters will greet a 23 half day pheasant season here Saturday, October 22.

The bag and possession limit is three cocks.

All hunters must carry a special upland game stamp on licenses. The stamps cost $1. They may be secured from the county clerk's office in the courthouse.

The funds from sales will be used in restocking pheasants and quail.

Local game reports indicate the ringneck population is medium to light. Most birds in the Ord area have been seen below or near Highway 56 which crosses Valley county from Arcadia to North Loup.

Cover Is Medium

Cover is medium to heavy. Most corn is standing except in areas where it's been cut for silage.

Game commission reports indicate the birds are here this year. But, the commission warns, you'll have to abandon your car and walk 'em up.

The commission added: "Normal bird populations seperate the sportsman from the road hunter by making more walking, less driving, necessary."

Concurrently with pheasants the four day season on grouse opens Saturday also.

But Valley county isn't open, so forget it fellows.

Bartlett Gridder Breaks Collar Bone

Jerry Day, a Bartlett gridder, suffered a fractured collar bone in practice this week.

Jerry was hospitalized two days after the fracture had been reduced at Spalding.

"Whooper" Spotted Down Near Scotia

A whooping crane has set up temporary headquarters along the North Loup river.

Dean Hallock, of Scotia, reported the "whooper" five miles below Scotia. Hallock saw the bird while making a jaunt over farm land.

Whoopers are white, extremely large birds now almost extinct in Nebraska.

They cross this area on the way to wintering grounds in the Deep South.

They are protected.

Bird Stamp Necessity to Keep within Law

The attorney general announced here Tuesday you must buy a pheasant stamp no matter when you bought your license.

The decision was voiced through Ralph Norman, county attorney.

Norman said the question has been raised by some hunters who purchased a license this year before the $1 upland game stamp law went into effect.

Instruction Need

If Omaha newsmen start hunting in the Ord area local nimrods better take them in hand for a lesson in waterfowl identification.

This week the World-Herald printed a picture of a flight in progress. The picture's caption identified the birds as geese.

The "geese" were pelicans!

Cock-Hen Ratio Still Too Wide Says Commission

By Wally Green
Nebraska Game Commission

News for Nebraska hunters is the length of the recently set pheasant season—23 days Oct. 22—Nov. 13. Last year there was only a 10-day season. This year's season has ½ day daily sessions. But, still the total days of pheasant hunting are more than twice as long.

The main reason for this longer season is very important to all hunters—if all will believe the facts.

The main fact is that we have not been harvesting all of our surplus roosters, roosters not needed for the next spring breeding season.

You have heard many well-intentioned hunters claiming we don't have the birds to shoot. Their recommendations cover everything from closing the season to increasing the stocking operations.

Yet, if the facts reveal that we are not using the surplus roosters each season, we find that we are being too conservative. Sure, the pheasant populations are not anything like they used to be. You have to get out into the fields and work hard to get many birds, especially after the opening weekend. The man that will get out and hunt will get some birds, but not the soft cushioned road hunter.

Counts, made after the hunting season is closed show conclusively that we always have a statewide ratio of at least 60 roosters to 100 hens.

This is a surplus. Pheasants are like chickens. You only need one rooster for 10 hens. Domestic poultry men will tell you that their ratio of hens and roosters is even greater than this, yet they maintain high productivity in their flocks.

As long as we shoot only roosters, we are going to have to take more than we have been, if we are going to use all of the annual surplus as wisely and efficiently as we could.

The land cannot provide a living for all of the birds left at the end of the hunting season, particularly in the late winter. Most of the birds we don't take by hunting are lost to other causes before the spring breeding season. Only a small percentage of birds are present in the spring to rebuild the population.

It is up to you and the rest of the Nebraska hunters to accept these facts and have better hunting or reject them and continue to let nature get part of the surplus pheasants; pheasants that should be used for our recreation and relaxation.

Ord vs. Crete

To the Editor of the Quiz
Dear Sir:

Since Crete beat our pants off last Friday I am sure the play-off will not be between York and Ord, but it looks as if it may be between Ord and Crete at Crete.

I have checked to see whether there has been any date set for the play-off yet, but it hasn't been determined.

I saw York at Crete last weekend. The game should have been much closer than it was. Crete has a rough, tough, fast ball club and it is the opinion in this part of the state that they will have no trouble in handling Ord.

I find it quite difficult in defending Ord's schedule.

Estimated 2,450 Irrigation Wells Drilled Last Year, Says Geologist

Interest in using Nebraska's groundwater for irrigation reached a all-time peak in 1954, when an estimated 2,452 irrigation wells were stalled, reports State Geologist E. C. Reed.

Reed, author of an article appearing in Nebraska on the March, id the hot, dry weather of the st four years was the most imortant reason for the keen inter-st.

He stated, in his annual report hat the increment of irrigation ells in 1954 raised the state total o more than 11,500. There were ,100 wells reported at the end of 953.

Chart Shows Progress

A chart prepared by Reed shows total of an estimated 11,863 wells t the end of 1954, an increase of ,452 over 1953. In 1954, 700 housand acres of land could be rrigated by wells, as compared o 635 thousand acres in 1953.

And Reed reported there are strong indications that "there has been no let up in installation of new wells in 1955." He added: "We will probably show an increase in installations during the year over the record number installed in 1954."

The state geologist pointed out hat 1954—for the third consecuive year—had aboye normal temperatures (3 degrees) and below normal precipitation (16 per cent). Thus, we find a condition where ess water is available and more s needed."

Continuing, Reed said:

Water Table Effect

"Obviously the withdrawal of arge amounts of groundwater has some effect on water levels, but is not the controlling factor. If we assume that an averge of about 1,2 feet of water is consumptively used on all of the 700 thousand acres of land under well irrigation we can expect a total withdrawal of about 840 thousand acre feet.

"Our precipitation deficiency during 1954 amounted to 3.19 inches, or a total of more than 13 million acre feet of water. During a normal year there would be 13 million acre feet more water for the purpose of maintaining our stream and recharging our groundwater than was available in 1954."

This situation, he asserted, is primarily responsible for the greatly increased interest in groundwater use.

Referring to the effect of the weather on groundwater levels, Reed said lower "precipitation and high evaporation have resulted in lower groundwater levels, especially in the valley areas." This, he continued, has reduced the amount of water some wells can yield.

Cautions Irrigators

Reed strongly cautioned irrigators against pumping water "at rates high enough to produce large drawdowns." He asserted that excessively high-rate pumping can cause serious damage to wells.

If this happens, "the ability of the well to produce water is progressively and rapidly reduced and the effective life of a large-cost irrigation well may be shortened many fold."

A new method for measuring the age of water was also described by Reed in his Nebraska on the March article:

"This method involves the use of an isotope of hydrogen, called tritium, found in small amounts in all atmospheric water. The amount of tritium present in atmospheric water is believed to be essentially constant for a given region. Tritium is radioactive and can be measured accurately by passing the gas through a delicate radioactivity counter.

Tritium Decrease

"Moreover, the amount of tritium in a given water sample decreases progressively with time. One-half of it is dissipated in 12 and a half years. An additional half is lost in the succeeding 12 and a half years, and so forth, until the amounts remaining are too small to be measured. Thus, it is possible to measure the tritium still remaining in a sample of well water and the age of the water determined (years since the water precipitated from the atmosphere)."

Three Nebraska groundwater samples have already been tested by the tritium method. They show the following ages for water taken from wells in these areas: Southeastern Howard county, 40 years; South-central Merrick county ,14 years; and Northern York county, 61 years. Two other tests are being made.

Reed said further tritium studies "may permit us to measure more accurately than ever before" the actual rate of underflow and groundwater recharge rates in different sections of the state.

Livestock Is Safe in Dressed Pastures

Pastures may be top-dressed with superphosphate at any time without danger to livestock in the pasture.

Cattle or sheep may lick up some of the phosphate, but it is not harmful.

Actually, phosphate will supply some of the mineral that cattle need. However, superphosphate should not be used in mineral supplements for livestock because it contains some fluorine.

Stock Removed

Before nitrogen or mixed fertilizers are spread, livestock should be removed from the field and not turned in again until next day.

If there are any lumps of nitrogenous or mixed fertilizer, livestock should not be permitted in the field until these lumps disappear. Nitrate, ammonium salt, and urea are somewhat poisonous to livestock. If there are lumps of these materials in the field, the animals may lick up enough to make them sick.

But if the materials are free-flowing pellets or powder, the animals are most unlikely to get enough to harm them.

Hruska Praises Farms for Conservation Job

The extremely dry summer has renewed the faith of Nebraska farmers in water and soil conservation work, Senator Roman Hruska said this week.

"A bad year like this one reminds us that we have had dry years in the past and there will be more in the future," Hruska said. "I have been impressed with the protection soil conservation and watershed development work has given Nebraska farmers against near-drouth condtions this year."

"The whole Nebraska economy suffers in a situation like this," the senator continued. "It shows we must continue conservation efforts to alleviate adverse weather conditions."

"These are primarily 'do it yourself' programs," Hruska said, "and they pay off in more ways than one." He cited the excellent cooperation that has been achieved between farmers and their local and county governments in organizing and planning conservation projects in many areas.

"This is the democratic way of life," he said. "It is doing things together for the benefit of all."

The Senator also noted the many-pronged approach of conservation projects. Preservation and revitalization of our soil and our water supplies, he said, are helped by dozens of measures to prevent water runoff, soil erosion, and loss of fertility. "Nebraska farmers," said the Senator, "are becoming experts in the scores of tools and techniques of the trade of conservation."

Hormones Change Moulting Periods

Hormones may give poultrymen more control over price they get for eggs.

The trick is to use a hormone to get hens molting when egg prices are low, then have them come into production heavily when egg prices start to rise.

A poultry specialist at the University of Wisconsin used progesterone injections last year to make White Leghorn pullets molt in the spring, rather than in the fall.

Weight gains stopped during treatment. But, the birds stayed in good health and started gaining weight again as soon as treatment was halted.

About two-thirds of the treated hens molted completely, Successful Farming says. The rest molted about half their feathers. Molting stopped within two weeks after the last hormone injection.

Cheese Frozen in Successful Tests

Recent tests show that ten varieties of cheese can be successfully frozen at home. They are Cheddar, Brick, Port du Salut, Swiss, Provolone, Mozzarella, Liederkranz, Camembert, Parmesan and Romano. When freezing cheese, cut it in pieces no larger than one pound, and wrap each piece closely in freezer foil. Small cheeses such as Liederkranz may be left in their original packages.

Automation Becomes Farm Phrase; Gadget Gains Rural Toehold

A new era is dawning on Nebraska farms as automation, glamor word of U.S. industry, moves from factory to farm.

As a result, more and more of the state's 107,183 farmers are turning to push-button electric and electronic devices to solve their production and labor problems.

According to farm experts these robot devices can be expected to have a revolutoinary effect equaling i,f not surpassing the introduction of farm machinery.

The average Nebraska farmer (statistically speaking, he has a 442.9 acre farm valued at approximately $25,517) now has the electricity to operate such labor-saving aids as washing machines, freezers (11,063 farms have these) grain driers, feed grinders and other automatic equipment. More than 78 per cent of the farmers in the state are electrified.

A nationwide study showed that agriculture in America is moving "from the age of mechanization to the age of automation."

Trend Pushed

The trend is being pushed along by many factors: more college-trained farmers, vast research programs by colleges and the USDA and the research and engineering by industrial firms to provide farmers with labor-saving equipment.

All this is having an effect on the nature of farming in Nebraska and throughout the nation.

Typical is dairying. Clean and convenient milking "parlors" scientifically ventilated and automatically heated or cooled are replacing old-time crowded stanchions on many of the state's 85,183 farms that maintain milk cows.

Automatic milkers are becoming common with farms here using machines in place of old-fashioned methods.

Farm Buildings Heated

Some farm buildings — barns, poultry houses, milk houses and even a few farm homes — are now heated by a reverse-running refrigerator called a "heat pump" which draws heat from water or the earth and circulates it through the building. In summer it reverses the process for cooling, absorbing heat from the warm room.

Automatic barn cleaners and automatic feed mixers, which scientifically blend feed, are growing in use.

On many farms a "green-grass" diet is provided livestock from glass-lined steel silos. New thermostats and heating devices keep drinking water ice-free.

Brooders Equipped

Sensitive heat-detecting devices similar to those used in industrial furnaces automatically insure the safety of unattended brooders in hog and poultry houses. Electric chick brooders on some 18,162 farms provide controlled temperatures.

Electronics can even be a very decisive pre-natal influence in a pig's life: it is possible to record the genealogical records of hybrid sows on punched cards and have them fed into a complex business computing machine which thereupon will produce a card describing the kind of boar and sow needed to produce the healthiest and heftiest baby pigs.

Old McDonald's farm was never like this!

Three Men Volunteer for Service Enlistment

Three North Loup men have volunteered for induction, Selective Service Secretary John Sullivan announced this week.

The three are Jerome Boyce, Harold Boyce and Dwane Lane.

The three will report for duty sometime this month. Their induction will fulfill Valley county quotas until Jan. 1.

Meanwhile at Lincoln General Guy Henninger had a word for possible service inductees.

General Heninger said:

"Extension of the Selective Service Law by the recent congress for a period of four years, also extends the liability of every young man residing in Valley county to register with the nearest Selective Service Local Board within five days after his 18th birthday."

"Under the law, every male resident of the country born after August 30, 1922 should be registered with Selective Service if he has attained the age of 18, and those who attain the age of 18 hereafter are required to register then."

"Membership in the reserve or study in school does not exempt anyone from the liability for registration. The law provides an extremely heavy penalty for failure to register."

"Provision is made under the regulations for young men who are not at home at the time they reach age 18 to register at the nearest local board. Their registration will be forwarded to the local board having jurisdiction over their permanent home," Henninger explained.

—Mrs. C. A. Anderson took Mrs. Rose Pierson to Hastings Tuesday to receive medical attention for her eyes.

DDO Membership . . . gossip is banned at all meetings.

DDO, (Diligent Daughters of Ord) One of Oldest Clubs Here

One of the oldest clubs in Ord, if not the oldest in continuous organization, is DDO, or the Diligent Daughters of Ord.

This club was organized in 1912. Two charter members, Mrs. R. C. Bailey and Mrs. C. S. Jones still attend.

Other charter members were Mrs C. A. Hager, Mrs. C. C. Shephard and Mrs. D. L. Williams.

As time passed several names were added. At the present time there are thirteen members. Evidently the club is not superstitious.

Belonging now are Mrs. Fred Appelget, Mrs. R. C. Bailey, Mrs. M. B. Cummins, Mrs. Anna Holmes, Mrs. C. S. Jones, Mrs. C. J. Miller, Mrs. George Nay, Mrs. John Fahrenbruck, Mrs. C. E. Rusmissell, Mrs. Wilbur Rogers, Mrs. Keith Shepherd, Mrs. Carl Sorensen, Mrs R. J. Stoltz and Mrs. Wm. Zabloudil.

The club meets twice a month, generally for dessert luncheon. The afternoon is spent making fancywork. It has always been a rule there be no gossip. This rule is rigidly enforced. Conversations are based on home and world affairs, and the various methods of sewing. Grandchildren are always interesting topics.

Mrs. Carl Sorensen is president and Mrs. Wm. Zabloudil is secretary-treasurer. There are few dues and no fines.

The club has aided several funds when called upon. The members give to the Good Samaritan Home and the hospital at Christmas. They do not hold money making projects.

Some of the older members, or those who belonged to the club at various times were Mrs. Jim Milford, Mrs. George Allen, Mrs. Mamie Weare, Mrs. Hi Rogers, Mrs. W. W. Haskell, Mrs. Everett Williams, Mrs. Alvin Blessing, Mrs. Clarence Blessing and many others.

Wailing Quarterbacks

One of Ord high school's coming newspaper men, in a current issue of the school newspaper, The Oracle, takes issue with "The Saturday Morning Quarterback's Club."

That, in everyday English, is the group of red hot fans who gather each morning after a game to hash over what transpired the night before.

The Oracle editor says: "In this town and school we seem blessed with an abundance of these characters . . . The business man, who seems to delight in criticizing, is often the father of students, or the crony of parents. All gather at the coffee rendezvous three or four times a day and it is there they come to their striking conclusions on football or basketball."

The Oracle editor adds: "If you are one of these people 'blessed' with this malady please try to keep it under control for the sake of the sanity of the coaches and players."

At first glance the criticism seems justified. There certainly are those who take school athletics seriously enough to wail loudly when the local eleven doesn't sparkle.

And these are wont to gather in nebulous groups of a Saturday to mentally lick each others wounds for common consolation.

But generally the guy who wails on Saturday is the same guy who paid the freight at the box office Friday night.

And as long as he continues that saving gesture we must make wide allowances for him.

He wins our consideration because he's loyal.

Unloyal fans, and those who never wail, usually spend Friday nights glued to the television or radio.

That's an economic point worth printing in chalk on some class room blackboard.

* * Something Just A Little Bit Different * *

About once each year Gene and I pack up to go to Chicago to the annual fall business meeting of the National Editorial association.

He flings half a dozen neckties into his pack and I dump in half a dozen pairs of shoes and away we go. Usually we fly but the night train from Grand Island is so convenient that we have slept our way to the city the past two years. We get there in time for breakfast in the station . . . you know something? It isn't half as good as the fried eggs of dear old Home in Ord.

We rush to the hotel. Previously it has been the swanky Edgewater Beach out ten miles on the north side. This year it was a big downtown hotel, and while the meals weren't so good neither were the corridors so long and numerous.

Five hundred or more editors and wives were there from all over the country. They had only one thing in common . . . they were the cracking best editors you could find. They were live hard-working editors with an eye on the welfare of not just their individual papers, not just their town or their locality, but of their country and its people.

So they met in committees, they reported, they hashed dozens of topics pro and con. The government continues in the printing business; the high price of paper; what kind of linotype metal do you buy; where do you find good young reporters or do you develop your own; does a weekly newspaper ever really pay its way; is he sincere or only another politician; how is the new regulation about interstate shipments going to hit us; did you like his talk, didn't have anything to say, did he- and on and on.

Like all conventions we get welcomed by this one and dined by that one, and some of the speeches are wonderful, some have not too much meat in them, some are poor. In any case the editors tear them up and put them together again over and over. Editors are a fairly skeptical bunch, . . . I don't think even Abraham Lincoln could fool them much of the time.

A big disappointment this year was the talk by Senator Paul Douglas, to which we looked forward. Honest, we did. Though he is a democrat, I thought we'd learn a lot from him, thought he was a man of national stature. He was only a most ordinary and quite unskillful politician. In fact a great many editors and their wives left him to his ranting and walked out.

Saturday afternoon when it was finished Mrs. Lough of Albion and I gave ourselves a treat, one recommended by Helen Gzehoviak. We took a cab through the rain to see the beautiful new church of St. Peter and Paul. Made of a handsome rather bright tan marble, it is beautiful in its simplicity. Stations of the cross are of white marble, set high in plain rectangles. It was worth the trip.

Then we continued on to the Chicago Art Institute to see French paintings for seven centuries past. That too was delightful. There is a great deal to see in Chicago but I don't get far with my sight-seeing.

We did enjoy a glimpse of the former Alice Round the last night of our stay. She and her husband, Fred Campbell, of Lincoln, have lately purchased a handsome new home out in Wilmette. A daughter of Sheriff George Round, she grew up in our home block in Ord.

Let 'Em Alone!

We may be an old fuddy duddy but we can't see much merit in this talk of putting the kids to work Halloween Night.

The talk, as it's repeated to this scribe, is to have kids solicit funds from each house instead of treats that the householder is now asked to yield.

It would seem adults, who favor this idea, are trying to shuffle off an adult responsibility on to an age group hardly able to make the right change let alone intelligently answer any questions as to the fund's ultimate goal.

In fact, if you'll question adults as to the meaning and purpose of UNICEF, (that's where proponents hope to send the funds), you'll be greeted with blank stares and open mouths by a sizable portion of your survey group.

We have no particular quarrel with UNICEF. It may be, and probably is, an organization that merits some support.

But a campaign at the six to ten age level is hardly indicated.

If adults want to help UNICEF we suggest they trot their cute little legs off in a campaign to do so.

Meanwhile, let's let the kids alone with their fun. God knows they'll be saddled with adult responsibilities soon enough.

A teacher noticed that one little boy was drawing everything in heavy black crayon. He drew black horses, black cows and black barns. Disturbed about what was going on in his mind, she called a meeting of the little boy's parents, the principal of the school and a psychiatrist.

They finally got at the root of the trouble—it was the only crayon he had. —Reader's Digest

No Letters

For some reason or other we haven't had a word from readers for a long time.

That's strange since two current city issues, the gas rate and high school expansion, are imminent with each to have an appreciable impact on residents . . .

We know you care. And if you've read the Quiz at all closely then you must understand the fundamentals underlying both questions.

Still the Letters to the Editor department is nothing more than notices to renew subscriptions.

What do you say? How about 250 words or so expressing yourself on either question?

Sure we'll print 'em!

On The Lee Side

Stars, Constellations and The Andromeda Nebulae

My wife and I are on a celestial kick which fits in very well with our present stint at the GOC every Saturday night.

The two of us have been catapulted, (I think that is the correct word although I would have liked "kicked" better), into the study of astronomy by the simple, kindly, considerate gesture of one Paul Andreas, an instructor in the Ord knowledge box.

Occasionally I eat breakfast with Paul. During one repast I mentioned my wife and I had visited the Adler Planetarium in Chicago and we had been a bit taken by the lecture on stars.

In fact, I surmise I went a bit further. Somehow or other I must have made Paul believe I was a-thirst for star knowledge.

Because two days later he arrived at our morning repast armed with a passel of astronomy books. These he passed on to me after taking care to innoculate one of my veins with stardust when I wasn't looking.

I took the books home. And in one of those moments when my wife was doing nothing else but cutting out paper figures for the next VFW membership campaign, (By the way the theme this year is "Man the Boats!" or "Man Overboard!", or something navy) I tossed the book into her lap and said:

"Here! Amuse yourself with that for a while. It will improve your mind."

Then I settled myself on the sofa for a nap. I had hardly closed my eyes when my wife asked:

"What's the Andromeda Nebulae?"

"What's what?", I replied. "What's the Andromeda Nebulae?", she asked again, then continued, "or for that matter what's the Rosette Nebulae? And just who in the heck is Orion, The Mighty Hunter?"

"Well", I answered, "that's a pretty serious question. It will take some pretty deep thought to answer. Let me think a minute or two and I'll enlighten you."

"You don't know, do you?" said my wife. "And you are always boasting you have so much general knowledge. Okay Mr. Smarty, what's the Andromeda Nebulae?"

"Angel Breath," I replied, "I know I know what all those things are but I just can't think of them. Let me have a day or so to mull this over and I'm sure I'll recall it."

"You mean let you have a day or so to let you get down to the Ord library, don't you?" my wife said. Rather archly too, I thought.

I did go down to the library the next day but not for reasons my wife said. I returned a book and I'll swear Miss Mamie Smith just forced two or three volumes about stars on to me.

That night at GOC when it was nice and dark, and the stars were out, the wife and I snuggled down in a couple of easy chairs and blankets.

Refreshed with two hours reading in the astronomy books I slipped an arm around her and began:

"Now if you will just imagine that we are on the inside of a huge orange, with the segments running horizontally north to south, and the top, center, line the meridian, then the whole, seemingly complex study of astronomy becomes extremely easy. In the north we have Polaris, the tail of the constellation Ursa Minor. Using Polaris as a reference point we soon locate Ursa Major, Orion, The Pleiades and—"

My wife interrupted to say: "Honey?" "Yes," I answered. "Isn't the study of astronomy wonderful?" Then she cuddled down a little closer in the blanket. I waited a full minute before I answered. Then I said:

"I'm beginning to see what you mean!" And I thought very kindly of Mr. Andreas.

Right here permit me to acknowledge a letter from Mrs. Stella Grindey (Palmatier) of Chicago, with a flock of newspaper clippings. They are of considerable interest, but too general to use here.

More Baseball

I had a third story to tell about baseball last week, with no room for it. It goes back to the time when the boys had a fine team up at Joint, or Dry Cedar, and played from Burwell to Greeley.

Frank Ball pitched, He saw me in Ord one day and asked me to go to Burwell to play with them, and be on hand in case an extra pitcher was needed.

Frank was in fine fettle and pitched the entire game, allowing four or five hits and a couple of scores. Burwell had the services of a pitcher named Hockenberry from Aurora.

Hock had a good curve and a puzzling change of pace, and limited the Sandhill boys to four hits. More correctly, he limited the boys from Joint to no hits at all.

I though it did quite well that day. The pitcher had me scared to death every time at bat, and I would swing the bat and anything that came toward the place. Yet I got all four hits for the team.

I was hitting late on fast balls, and every one I hit was a short fly ball just back of first base, enabling me to get to first base, but I never got any farther. Nobody else made a hit.

I thought I had done well enough but it seems that about all I did was to make the boys sore at me for 'showing off."

It was quite a while before they had me play with them again.

Second Game

Fay Patrick recalls later I pitched a game at the fair grounds at Ord, against the Dry Cedar crowd. Fay saw the game and says I did quite a job of pitching. Neither of us knows who won.

Jason Abernethy was one of the immortals of baseball those days, and he and Frank Ball are the only boys I recall on the Joint team. Jason had a bad finger that was injured in one of those games.

Baseball Strenuous

Back 55 years baseball was more strenuous than today. The umpire was usually a large man, and he needed to be. He not only made the rules, but he enforced and interpreted them.

In other words, he was the legislative, executive and judicial branches all rolled into one.

What saved him from bodily harm sometimes was the fact that the other team would come to his defense.

Once S. J. W. (Sam) Brown was umpiring a game. He was very hard of hearing. After a while the losing team began to razz him. He said: "Yell all you want to. I can't hear a thing!"

In those days the catcher, and sometimes the first baseman, were the only players who used gloves, and the first leather covered balls were just as hard as they are today.

In my own case it came in handy not to have a glove, as I could throw the ball with either hand. I pitched either way for the first year or two, and the batters didn't like the idea.

There were no shin guards or belly protectors for the catchers. They were called just that when they first appeared. The umpire stood behind the pitcher, and couldn't be sure if the ball was over or not.

Umpire Coached

It was not unusual for the ump, who was usually a ball player himself, to coach the pitcher in case he wanted that team to win. I remember one man now long dead, who coached me.

He was umpiring behind me and he kept up a low-voiced chatter all through the game. Once I recall he got disgusted because I was trying for the corners all the time and he half way whispered in my ear:

"Dammit, cut out the fancy stuff and get them balls over. I can't call 'em strikes when they're two feet off. Get 'em in. We just got to win this one!"

The rest of the game those balls went right across the middle, and we won the game.

But somehow I always had a suspicion that I had pitched one game that was not strictly on the level.

Farm - Ag Tips

High Corn Yield

A check this week on corn yields on the Darrell Noll farm near Elyria showed some pretty interesting results.

One field checked at ten different spots and averaged showed a potential yield of 124.41 bushels per acre. The system used counted all ears that were attached to stalks regardless of size. During field picking, actual yield will be lowered somewhat due to stalks being broken over from some borer damage. Ears that have already dropped, were not counted. Moisture was corrected to 15.5 per cent, the maximum tolerance for Number 2 corn.

Two other hybrids were spot checked, not completely and yields estimated at 114.44 and 85.36 bushels per acre. Evidentally there are quite wide variations to be expected.

Of course nobody would or could rightly say that variations could be attributed to any one factor such as the kind of corn planted. We all know that many things affect the yield of any crop. However some kinds and numbers of corn do seem to consistently yield above others.

It is not the policy or function of this office or the extension service to recommend one brand of seed over another. Experiment station hybrids have been developed and are grown by individuals. Lists of the experiment station hybrids recommended for this area and lists of certified growers are available.

Box Elder Bugs

Those pesky box elder bugs are hard to control but Bob Roselle, extension entomologist, says to spray areas where bugs congregate with a 5% chlordane spray.

Make with one part of 45% chlordane to ten parts of water. Spray the foundation of homes and into the lawn several feet.

Inside homes use a regular household spray directly on insects and sweep up, or use detergent suds on them.

Ag Short Courses Offered at College

The University of Nebraska this week announced a series of short courses for farmers who want training but can't accomodate a four year university stretch.

The courses are: Selection and Maintenance of Farm Machinery, Keeping Farm Records, Fertilizers and Crop Rotation and Beef Cattle Production and Management.

For women the university offers Feeding the Growing Family and Home Relationships and Management.

The courses will be held October 31 to November 23. Each is four weeks.

Students may take two. One is in the morning the other in the afternoon.

The registration fee is $25. Enrollment for the first session is limited to 27 men and 20 women.

Enrollments should be mailed to Associate Director of Resident Instruction, 206 Ag. Hall, College of Agriculture, Lincoln, Nebraska.

Students must make own arrangements for board and room.

Hallowe'eners of Old Were Party Minded

In another week comes Hallowe'en with all the superstitions, black cats, yellow pumpkins and maybe a witch or two.

Do you remember the old time parties this season used to bring?

Do you remember baking the pumpkin pies, or a big fortune telling cake, which was loaded with money, a thimble, and charms to foretell the future?

Do you remember when householders would remove gates from the front fence, and hide every movable object?

Parties Popular

Hallowe'en parties can still be remembered by many oldsters. In those days tricks or treats were never thought of. But there were any number of parties.

Happiest were the parties held in a big old barn. In dark corners would be stacks of fodder. Now and then a witch would lurk, and reach out a skinny hand to grab a bystander.

Later the witch would emerge to be an older sister or an aunt.

Jack o' Lanterns would make a peculiar glow. Ghosts wandered at will and watched the proceedings from the haymow.

On the cleared floor there would be a big tub of water, with floating apples. The trick was to bob for an apple. Many received a good ducking.

Fortunes Told

There were many fortunes told. For instance you were supposed to learn if future mates would be rich or poor, or none at all, by placing your hand in a bowl of flour, corn meal or water.

Or you could walk down stairs backward holding a mirror. The face of the man or woman in your life would appear in the glass.

Or you could pare an apple in a long peeling which was thrown over the left shoulder. The resulting initial would be the name of your future mate.

All was not sweetness and light outside, however.

Pranksters Busy

It was the night when pranksters were out. In Quiz files there is a story of how someone placed an old cultivator on the steps of the Ord school and the janitor had trouble getting in to start the fire. The rope used to signal fires was cut.

It was no uncommon sight to see wagons on top of public buildings. Cows were discovered in churches or millinery shops. Stair wells into basements were filled with debris.

But for some reason the most fun was tipping over the Chick Sales or the outside conveniences.

Now days with tricks or treats forays, which every body expects and with Hallowe'en parades with prizes, those days are gone forever.

Two Old Bibles Here Have Strange History

The observation of Bible Week highlights two old bibles, kept in the Ord library.

Both belong to the Stara family. One is very large and is supposed to have been hidden from alien hands by being baked in a loaf of bread.

Bread, in early days in Europe, was fashioned in large round loaves and was baked on the grate.

The bible is printed in Czech with old style type. Pictures are hand painted. The Bible was printed in 1570. The text is still clear, and paintings are undimmed.

The other Bible is stained. It is said this was hidden in a manure pile at a time when the Czechs were being forced to give up religious books. This is a much smaller volume. It is also printed in Czech.

Mental Health Program Lacks Psychiatrists, Says Dr. Wittson

Nebraska's mental health program is in the news.

Dr. G. L. Sandritter, superintendent of the Hastings mental hospital, announced he quit because "I no longer care to be associated with the board of control."

Sandritter has long been a critic of board policies concerning mental health.

In his statement, Sandritter said: "We are not giving patients at the Hastings state hospital the best medical and nursing care that the medical profession knows."

Sandritter said the primary reason is lack of doctors and failure of the board to procure good doctors.

But Dr. Cecil Wittson, state mental health director, said Nebraska has a "definite, long-range mental health program" which is drawing national recognition.

The program, according to Wittson, is correlating training and research "which is enabling us to meet our basic need—personnel."

"The best way for Nebraska to get more personnel is to train them," he said. "We have only one-fifth of the psychiatrists that we need."

Wittson said the U. S. Public Health Service has "expressed confidence" in Nebraska's program by granting the state $85,000 for training.

But Wittson warns that Nebraska should not expect the program to bring "immediate results." He said the complete training of some persons in psychiatrics takes as much as six fears in addition to college and medical school training.

And, Wittson added, "money won't solve all our problems. But it will go a long way in aiding our out-state recruiting program."

Peace Crusader

The Nebraska statehouse was visited last week by a women who says she is walking 10,000 miles for world peace.

She calls herself "Peace Pilgrim." She will not disclose her age or real name but when she stopped at the statehouse she had completed 7,000 miles of the planned tour.

Kansas was next on the weary trip she started in 1953. The gray-haired woman said that Nebraska has been 'extra friendly to me."

Since being in the state, she said, "I've slept on the grass only two nights." and, she added, "I've been averaging three meals a day."

The unique trip, she said, "has inspired a lot of people to work and pray with me."

Since she started walking, the woman said, two of her three main points have materialized—peace in Korea, and an advisor to the President who studies methods of attaining peace. The third, she said, is world disarmament.

New 'Governor'

Nebraska had a new "governor" for two days last week. He was State Sen. Dwight Burney, Hartington, speaker of the legislature.

Burney, a veteran of the legislature thinking about running for lieutenant governor, filled in for Governor Anderson. Anderson attended a midwest governor's conference.

Nebraska does not have a lieutenant governor. Lt. Gov. Charles J. Warner died recently and Burney is next in line.

Important Trial

A trial in Lancaster county district court drew much attention, even though it involved only a second degree arson charge.

State officials watched the trial with interest. Before the jury was a state prison inmate, Gilbert Sagaser, 28, San Luis Obispo, Calif., charged with riot and $112,000 fire at the penitentiary.

But, Lancaster County Attorney Elmer Scheele said the real issue was whether inmates run the penitentiary, or the administration. The inmate was found guilty but it took several ballots and nine hours of deliberation.

The defense attorney, W. W. Nuerenberger, charged prison officials knew beforehand that the riot would occur but did nothing to stop it.

Education Committee

Nebraska has a new state school redistricting committee, selected by the state board of education.

The board named Walter French, Stromsburg; Allen Burkhardt, Norfolk; Mrs. Paul Morrisop, Mitchell; William Brandt, Unadilla, and Lester Harsch, Bartley.

The committee was named at the regular meeting.

Milford Supt. Lowell Welsh said it would cost about $750,000 during the next 10 years to improve facilities at the school. Morris Jacobs, board president, said: "It's disgraceful the way it is now."

Jacobs said he thought because of the increased population and demand for more technical knowledge, the Milford school could become 'one of the most important."

A committee asked the board to present a 10-year program. The board asked Welsh to 'draw up elaborate plans" on proposed recommendations and submit them.

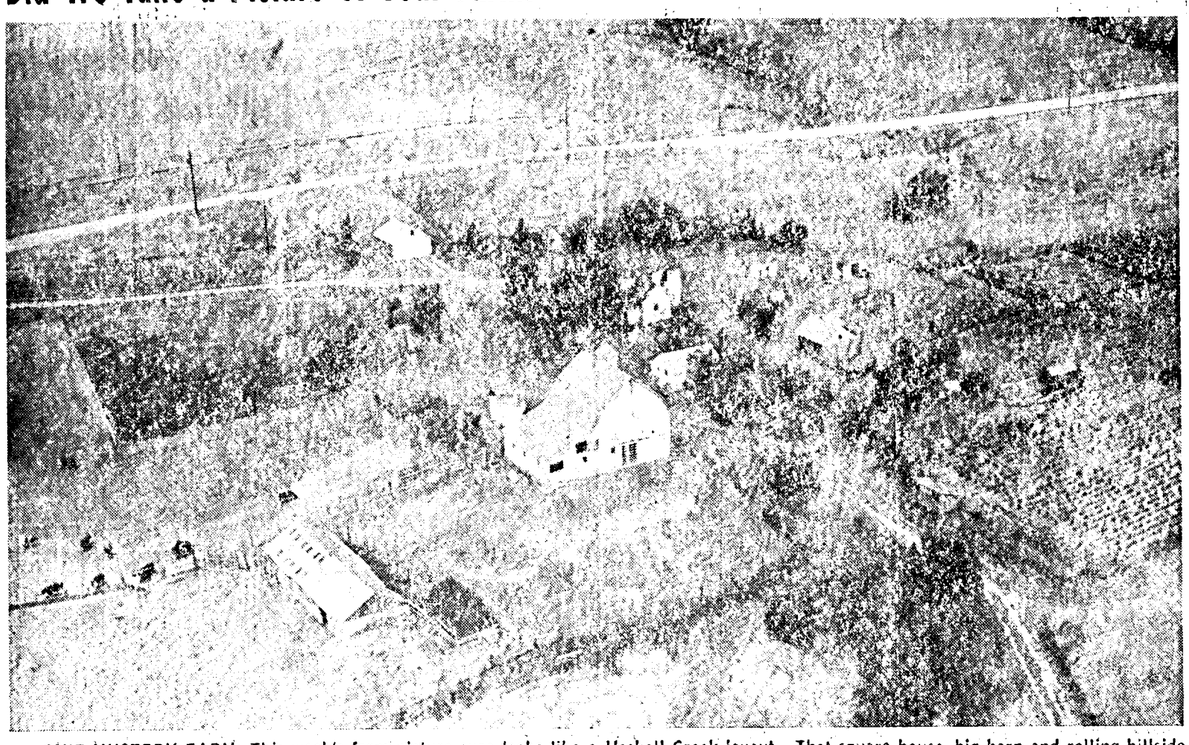
Education Salaries

The board of education ignored a request of Governor Anderson to hold up giving salary hikes until a study could be made.

The board approved salary hikes for administrative personnel ranging from $300 to $500 per year.

Commissioner of Education F. B. Decker said the hikes brought the salaries of the personnel into line with other state salaries requiring similar educational qualifications.

Did We Take a Picture of Your Farm! ——►No. 19



QUIZ MYSTERY FARM: This week's farm picture sure looks like a Haskell Creek layout. That square house, big barn and rolling hillside just might be located along the Haskell Creek road. Is it your farm? Remember, there's a free 8x10 picture waiting for the owner!

Mr. Kruml and his farm! . . a lot of grading and some leveling on the yard and feedlot.

Gravel Creek Farmer Handy with Hillsides

Joe Kruml Levels Yard and Feed Lots; Likes Duck Hunting

Joe Kruml, 39 year old owner-operator of the 160 acre layout shown above, is a handyman around the farm.

Most farmers are. That's not news. But in Joe's case it includes moving hills, filling gullies and otherwise making his farm yard one of the levelest in the hilly Gravel Creek area. The SCS helped.

Joe remembers moving to the farm in 1947. "The road was so poor the van couldn't reach the house so's we could unload."

Joe, and helpers, toted most of the furnishings up the hills with muscle power.

Yard Firm

That's been changed. Joe now has a good entry. The yard is firm with excellent drainage. His feed lot is level as a table and he's massaged down a couple of hills.

Besides the landscaping Joe has managed to build some outside structures and in general brighten up the whole place.

He gets it done when crops are in and there's a bit of slack time before spring.

Joe's farm, (incidentally he's married to the former Erma Ruzicka) lies three miles north and three miles west of Ord on the Gravel Creek road.

90 Acres Irrigated

The layout has 45 acres of alfalfa, 45 acres of corn, both irrigated by the Ord-Sumter ditch, and about 70 acres of pasture.

His livestock includes 150 steers, no hogs, four dozen chickens, a team, saddle horse and a milk cow.

Joe bought the farm from Frank Petska. It had only two owners since it was created under a railroad grant. Joe was third.

Joe formerly farmed in Eureka township where he was born. His parents were Ord pioneers.

He timbered for three yars in Oregon then farmed another seven. Then he returned to Ord to settle.

Three Youngsters

Mr. and Mrs. Kruml have three children: Diane is 11, Joyce 5 and John 18 months. The youngsters attend Dist. 12 school.

Joe's hobby is duck hunting. His wife likes to embroider. She recently bought a new sewing machine.

Joe's happy with farming except he believes feeding cattle are selling far too high.

"The price is going to break some of these guys," Joe believes.

Brucellosis Program Heard Here Thursday

A film, The Triple Threat of Brucellosis, will be shown Thursday evening to area livestockers.

The meeting will start at eight o'clock in the Ord high school.

Area cattlemen, who are now following a program of calfhood vaccination, will be told how to make this area certified brucellosis free.

The program will highlight the present state sponsored drive to eradicate brucellosis from all state herds.

Dr. George, state veterinarian, will speak. Dr. George emphasized the livestocker accepts the state program voluntarily.

The meeting is open.

—Dinner guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schaefer were Mrs. Alma Bredthauer, and son, Arvin, and Miss Jeannette Dye.

Rich Penas Heads 4-H Livestock Group

Richard Penas was elected president of the Loup Valley Livestock club at the reorganization meeting held Sept. 28 in the District 42 schoolhouse.

Larry Worrell was named vice president, David Pokraka, secretary-treasurer, and Robert Knapp, reporter.

Daing the meeting it was decided to hold a Hallowe'en party. President Penas appointed a committee in charge.

After business, the leader assisted the boys in finishing corn record books.

—Mrs. J. F. Webster returned to St. Paul Thursday morning. She had been a guest of her daughter, Mrs. Ed Gnaster. Mr. and Mrs. Gnaster and Mrs. Webster spent several days during the past week with relatives in Alliance.

Personals

—Mr. and Mrs. John Andersen left Thursday for a week's visit with relatives in Oklahoma and Texas.

—Mr. and Mrs. Lester Norton left Friday for Detroit, where they planned to spend a week or so with Mr. Norton's brother, Ernest.

—Mrs. Wm. Schauer and cousin, Leonard Marks took Miss Anna Marks to the University hospital in Omaha Tuesday. Miss Marks remained for observation. Mrs. Schauer and Mr. Marks went to Winslow for an overnight stay with relatives then returned home Wednesday.

HOW TO HUNT PHEASANTS & WATERFOWL

(Adapted)

(TRUE OF SOME HUNTERS)

1. Before leaving town, get plastered, but good. Take plenty of whiskey along (for snake bites, you know). It helps to keep you warm and steadies your aim.

2. If you have a car that will make 75 miles per hour, drive 85. You must get to the hunting area before anyone else does.

3. Drive through all the open fields you can find and don't close any gates. Even cut the fence if it is in your way. (Farmers love to have their stock out and mixed up with their neighbors). Never ask permission from a farmer, to hunt, or pay any attention to posted land. Who do they think they are, anyway?

4. Be sure to load your gun before leaving, putting a shell in the barrel. This is important. You may only have two friends to bring back when you started with three. This is the best method of helping a friend avoid his income tax that there is.

5. On with the hunt! Drive all around the lake before daylight, shining your lights over it to see if there are any ducks on it. If you see some, all jump out of the car and start shooting at once. Others who have been waiting for sunrise will be delighted.

6. If you notice someone in a good spot who is having pretty fair shooting, walk up to him and strike up a conversation. If any more ducks come in sight, empty your gun on them long before they are in range.

7. When hunting pheasants every time you return to the car, shut your birds up tight in the trunk and everybody take time off for a few snorts. It will pep you up and you'll be able to shoot much better.

8. Shoot everything that gets up in front of you. If you discover that you have shot a hen, laugh it off and get ready to again blast anything that flies up.

9. On field drives, always hurry ahead of the others. If you run, you'll get to the end of the field as soon as the birds do and you'll get all kinds of shooting. Get mad when they all fly up out of range. Make it a practice to shoot low, especially when in tall weeds, corn or brush. The rest of the fellows will duck when they hear you shoot. Besides, the doctor will appreciate all business if they don't.

10. When you get home pile the birds in a warm place and let them lie there at least overnight, preferably for a day or two. Shot up entrails give your birds a real "gamey" taste when given this treatment. Then decide you'd rather not clean them yourself and take them to the locker. They will keep well and taste real fine. The locker man will enjoy processing them for you and never has anything else to do but explain why birds are spoiled.

11. Throw the whole works in the garbage can and decide that you just don't like (duck) (pheasant), or (other game). Cross out two.

12. Isn't it lucky that only some hunters, (not you) hunt and take care of their game like this?

Repr. Miller . . . courtroom a sight to gladden politico's heart.

Jammed Courtroom Greets Repr. Miller

Turtle Creek Farmers Swell Attendance At Miller's Forum

A sight to gladden the heart of any junketing congressman greeted Dr. A. L. Miller here Wednesday.

Dr. Miller, the fourth district congressman home for a series of open forums in his district, was greeted by an audience of over 130 persons.

The crowd usurped all available seating in the district courtroom and spilled into the corridors and down the stairways.

Several times the forum was interrupted to ferret out chairs for late arrivals.

The heavy turnout, for an ordinarily lightly attended affair, apparently originated in Michigan township.

Dam Sparks Turnout

The township is where several sizable farms will be inundated if present plans for a Turtle Creek dam bear fruit.

The heavy attendance from Michigan township apparently indicated farmers there wanted Dr. Miller to hear their objections personally.

The audience asked Dr. Miller several questions. Whenever the topic bore on irrigation applause rippled over the courtroom.

One farmer said: "Instead of the government spending money on a big project like Turtle Creek dam why doesn't it loan the money to farmers for irrigation wells. That way the wells could be paid back in 3 years instead of the dam's span of 40 years."

General applause greeted the statement.

No Satisfied Farmers

Miller asked how many farmers were satisfied with the present farm program. Not a farmer raised a hand.

He then asked how many were unsatisfied. Every man raised a hand.

Miller said he favored a program where a farmer might be paid 100 per cent parity for a quota with all over production to sell at market.

He said there is no way the ASC can release corn for feeding operations at less than $1.37 a bushel.

He said promotion of irrigation does not add to surplus crops because most of the surplus was originating in states, (Iowa and Illinois) where there is no irrigation.

Surplus Vs. Arms

Besides, he said, surplus commodities aren't too important when compared with the 80 billion dollars lost by the government in out moded arms.

Anyway, he added, over production will vanish in ten years when another 35 million more acres in production will be needed to feed Americans the same as they are fed now.

To Turtle Creekers he said: "Before any dam project is backed by funds it must be studied and deemed practical. I have not seen such a study here as yet."

Miller added a vote, with the majority in favor, must be held before any irrigation project can carry.

Area Gets Wintry Taste Sunday Morn

Valley county had its first taste of winter Sunday morning.

Then a skift of snow wheeled into the area on the wings of a strong northwest wind. The fall occurred about 5 a.m.

Weatherman Horace Travis reported .18 inches of moisture. That means almost two inches of snow fell.

Thankfully, the snow didn't last. By noon, except for heavily shaded areas, the last traces were gone.

Temperatures meanwhile stayed at seasonal levels for fall. Sunday's 31 degrees was low for the week.

The high came Tuesday when 78 degrees were recorded.

Precipitation this year stands at 14.97 inches. Last year's figure for the same date is 16.68 inches.

GOC Alerted for Sneak Plane Try

TV Show Bets It Can Cross Country Unspotted by GOC's

Ord GOC observers were alerted this week to spot a cross country plane flown by Truth or Consequences, a TV program.

The plane, if it crosses this section of Nebraska, is expected over Ord sometime between last Tuesday and Thursday, (today).

Here's the background for the GOC alert:

Jack Bailey, master of ceremonies for the TV show, bet GOC brass he could fly cross continent without being spotted.

The GOC brass accepted the bet. The plane will fly New York-to-Los Angeles but the pilot may select his own route.

If spotted by a GOC post, the GOC gains ten points. For every state crossed without being spotted the pilot will get ten points.

Six Day Trip

The pilot will make the trip in six and one half days then report back to New York this Friday night for the TV program.

On the TV show he'll trace his route and the point total will be added. The winner will get some sort of a prize.

There's only a couple of rules:

1. The pilot can't fly at night.
2. The plane, a low wing monoplane, must bear distinctive markings of alternate stripes. "Truth or Consequences" is painted on the underwing.

Edward Kokes, local GOC post supervisor, said Ordites may help the local post by phoning a report to the Sharp Airfield if the plane is seen.

Seven Tabbed For Minor Offenses

County court convictions this week dwelled upon speeding and intoxication charges.

Fined were:

Boyd Gregory, of Ord, $10 and costs for intoxication.

Bernard Yax, Scotia, $10 and costs, speeding.

Elmer Wiseman, Ewing, $10 and costs, intoxication.

Gale Beals, Omaha, $15 and costs, speeding.

Joe Kvetensky, Omaha, $10 and costs, speeding.

Bernard Corrigan, Grand Island, $10 and costs, speeding.

Nash . . . a big raise at Osceola

'Les' Nash Resigns Ord Hospital Post

Will Acept Similar Position at Osceola; Wife Resigns Teaching

Leslie Nash, Ord Co-operative Hospital administrator, this week announced his resignation to the board of directors.

Nash resigned to accept a similar position with the Anne Jeffreys Memorial hospital at Osceola, Nebraska.

His resignation is effective December 1, here. He will assume charge of the Osceola unit, following a briefing period, January 1.

Nash has been head of the Ord hospital for two years. Shortly after taking over from Frank Perry in December, Nash completed training to administer anaesthetics.

He has been anaesthetist and administrator, since.

Mrs. Nash, a teacher in the Ord grade schools, also announced her resignation to the school board.

Her resignation is effective upon completion of the fall semester. She has been a music instructor in the grade school for the past three years.

Eight years ago she taught one year.

Nash's move to Osceola brought a sizable raise in pay. His salary at Osceola reportedly is $2,000 more than at Ord.

(Mrs. Richard) Bathild Schultz . . . recalls USS Benevolence disaster.

New Ord Nurse Has Exciting Background

The Ord hospital this week hired three personalities: (1) a registered nurse, (2) a linguist and (3) a shipwreck survivor.

All three are wrapped up in the buxom bounciness of Mrs. Richard (Bathild) Schultz, R.N., of Kittery Point, Maine.

Bathild's background is checkerboarded with excitement and adventure. Her survival of the shipwreck is a lifetime highlight so let's start with that.

In 1950 Bathild joined the United States Navy as a war nurse. She was immediately assigned to the USS Benevolence, a hospital ship.

While Bathild was aboard the Benevolence was rammed by a tanker then later sank. But let's let her tell it.

Ships Collide

"It was September 23, 1951," she recalls, "and about four o'clock in the afternoon. We had just gone into the ship's galley, (kitchen) for coffee. The day was exceptionally foggy."

"Suddenly I heard a loud grinding crash but felt no impact. The ship shuddered. A minute or so later water began pouring over the floor."

"I became frightened or confused. A sailor from Tennessee came in and told us the ship was sinking and to jump overboard. But I couldn't move. I remember the sailor taking me and another nurse under his arm then making his way to the side of the ship."

Unconscious 3 Weeks

Bathild says she lost conscious ness then. When she awoke it wa three weeks later. She was in ar Oakland naval hospital.

"My nose was broken. I was cut along the cheek and a new set of dentures were in my mouth. I apparently had the others knocked out. I remember coming to because my mouth tasted like cotton. That was the false teeth."

Bathild has no recollection of leaving the sinking ship or how she was injured.

She believes she may have struck a piece of flotsam when she jumped, or was thrown, overboard.

Bathild probably owes her life to the quick thinking sailor and the fact that the shipwreck occurred only four miles from San Francisco near the Golden Gate bridge.

That close to shore immediate help was available.

Other Experiences Scare

She has other experiences almost as painful and probably as frightening. In 1950 she married Richard Schultz of Scotia.

Hog Prices Sink To 13 Year Low

Farmers Caught in Over Production, Big Run: $13.50 Top

That big noise heard in Nebraska last week was the sound of hog prices crashing to the lowest figure since 1942.

Farmers figure $16 as a break even point, making allowances for corn prices.

That figure is a "fur piece" from the $13.50 top offered at the Ord livestock auction last Saturday.

That was tops for 17 head of choice light butcher, bacon type, hogs, Clerk Walt Noll says.

Another drove of 128 head, (210 ave.) went at $13.03. Grades scale down from there.

The Ord market reflects others. There's just too many porkers on the market. And this is the time of the big fall run.

$13.50 Too Wednesday

Wilson's Wednesday at noon, reported the Omaha top at $13.50. That was for animals with just a little extra quality. The market scaled to $13.00.

Wilson said: "The market sure doesn't look good. It may get lower if the heavy runs continue. Benson's $85 million purchase of hog products may help level out the price. But if will be weeks before the support is felt."

"It may be a time to make some money. Hundred pounders, bought now, could weather the drop until the upturn. Somebody's going to make a gob," Wilson said.

Two Reason's

The price drop can be attributed to two things, Wilson believed. 1) Too many hogs raised. (2) Selling panic.

"Producers see the market go off. That makes 'em wary. Many rush up to unload before the price drops further," he explained.

The farmer-producer viewpoint was the same, with this added angle. When hogs are "ready" they almost have to go.

Further holding only lowers the price. The fatter the hog the more it's graded off.

Charles Zangger said: "The market stinks. But I'd still like to buy some around a 100 pounds. A fella might just make some money.

Charles Vancura said: "Market? It could be a heck of a lot better. Feeders are bringing $12.65. That stings when you figure the break even point at $16. Benson's program may work but it will take time."

O. E. Patchen: "I think the situation is pretty rotten at the present time, and I do not see that the hog situation will be any better for some time. I think however that the government will take care of the matter and that affairs will get better, but I have no idea when. It is certain that there will be few hogs raised another year if the prices remain as they are now."

'Gunshot' Accident Is Seizure Victim

A reported gunshot accident near the Sich farm at Elyria, Saturday didn't happen, the Quiz learned Monday.

Instead a Fremont man was the victim of a mild seizure.

An Ord physician reported he had administered a mild sedative to Glen Wild, Route 2, of Fremont, Saturday.

The physician said he was called to the Sich farm location along Highway 11 to treat Mr. Wild.

Wild had apparently suffered the seizure after returning from Western Nebraska with six companions.

He continued home after treatment.

Emil Dlugosh Injures Hand

Emil Dlugosh, who lives on the Footwangler farm in Mira Valley, received injuries to his hand Thursday, while combining alfalfa.

Dlugosh's first two fingers on his left hand were lacerated. Seven stitches were taken to close the wound. Mr. Dlugosh was attempting to pull out alfalfa which was caught in the machine.

Police, Sheriff's Office Ready for Hallowe'en

Halloween mischief makers will be greeted by an augmented police force here Monday, Oct. 31.

The Ord city force, (two men), will work all night. Park Policeman Henry Stara will also be on duty.

On the county side of the enforcement picture Sheriff V. J. Beran will call all deputies into action.

Police, Wednesday, said they expected "little trouble."

"Ord kids are pretty nice," said Chief Jim Sobon. "Sure, they indulge in a few harmless pranks but that's about all."

The Ord theatre will siphon off some pre-Halloween 'teen steam with a midnight movie Saturday.

Booked is Three Dark Streets with Broderick Crawford and a cartoon, Knight and a Blonde.

The show will open at 11:30. The picture is scheduled at midnight. Admission will be a straight 50c per. No midnight show is scheduled for Monday night.

School Board Sets Date for Vote on High School Expansion for Nov. 22

The Ord school board this week voted to submit a $320,000 high school expansion program to voters, Tuesday, November 22.

Legal notices, covering the election, appear in this week's Quiz.

The board's decision came Monday after a final draft of architect's plans was approved.

The plan shows the expansion will include a combination gym-auditorium, a vocational agriculture shop, several classrooms and a band room.

The latter is a double duty section. In offtime school hours it becomes the stage for the Auditorium.

Lunch Program Added

A school lunch program, missing from the high school now, will be housed under the auditorium grandstand.

Athletic rooms for teams will be built beneath the auditorium stage.

In approving the plan the school board said it believed the plan was comprehensive enough to meet enrollment requirement for the next 20 years.

The election for the bond issue will be conducted as other city elections. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m.

Who Can Vote?

Voting will be restricted to residents of School District 3, (Ord). Voters must own property, or their spouse must own property, within the district; or they must have children of school age.

Election officials will be those used at present city elections.

A full draft of the proposed expansion is shown in the picture-plan above.

The expansion has been approved by the Ord chamber of commerce and several other Ord organizations where it has been discussed within the past four weeks.

To carry it will need approval by fifty five per cent of the total vote.

Reading this news, Ordites will ask the question. "How much will it cost me?"

Well here's a Quiz tax table. It gives two possible costs since there are two possible interest rates (highest and lowest) at which the bonds might sell.

The table is easy to use. If you paid $100 taxes last year you will pay $103 or $103.60.

You take it from there.

Youth Faces Charge of Petty Pilfering

An Ord high school senior will face charges of petty larceny in county court soon—if he can be located.

The youth is Lumir Hayek, 18, a senior at the Ord high school. In county court information Hayek is charged with pilfering a purse containing $5 from a schoolmate.

Hayek was slated for trial, before Judge Ellsworth Ball jr., Monday. When he did not appear the trial was postponed until Tuesday.

At three o'clock Tuesday Hayek still hadn't put in an appearance.

The county attorney's office hinted there may be other developments.

Other youths have been questioned, County Attorney Norman said.

Triple Tribulations Visit Neil Petersons

Troubles don't come singly for Mr. and Mrs. Neil Peterson.

Saturday night, the husband of Mrs. Hap Meade, a niece of Mrs Peterson, was killed in a truck accident near Burwell.

Early Tuesday morning the Petersons received a message reporting a son, Donald, of Greenville, Miss. was in a train-car wreck and seriously hurt. On top of all that Mrs. Doris Peterson, a daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, the wife of Donald, underwent surgery Monday.

Donald Peterson was struck by a train on his way home from work at two o'clock, Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, left at once for Grand Island accompanied by Ellis Carson who drove. At Grand Island, they chartered a plane for Greenville and left still accompanied by Carson.

Mrs. Peterson called friends Tuesday and reported some accident details.

She said both of Donald's legs were broken, one four times, the other three. He was conscious when parents arrived. Wednesday he was moved to Memphis, where he will be treated by a bone specialist.

Mrs. Peterson was not completely recovered from anaesthesia. She suffered some shock when informed of her husband's injuries.

The actual business transfer is planned for November 15. Mr. Hastings will resign his present position with the Hastings-Pearson Mortuary.

The couple said they planned only one change in the present cafe operation. They will stay open later evenings to accommodate patrons following the show and school athletic events.

Three Days Left to Renew Permits

Nebraska driver's licenses, not renewed this fall, will not be honored after October 31.

The motor vehicle operator will be required to take an examination in order to get a new one.

Sargent Dam Nearly 90 Per Cent Complete

The Sargent diversion dam, built to provide irrigation water for some 14 thousand acres of land in Central Nebraska has been stamped 87 per cent complete.

That means the 500 thousand dollar project will begin delivering water to thirsty fields sometime next summer.

In addition to the dam the first 10 miles of ditch are about 60 per cent complete.

All told there will be 40 miles of ditch and 44 miles of laterals.

The second of four gates was being installed.

Farmers who irrigate from the system will some day own 40 per cent of it—the ditches and laterals, which will be paid off in 40 years.

The government will own the dam, but after 10 years' operation the system will be the entire responsibility of the local district.

Richard was a master sergeant. He was later transferred to Korea where he disappeared in Seoul.

For a year Bathild mourned her husband as dead. Then she received a three line letter from the American Red Cross saying he was alive but a prisoner.

Richard was later released by the Reds in a prisoner exchange. His appearance was a shock to Bathild.

Richard went into the war weighing 205. When she greeted him starvation had pared him to 134.

Richard, now a discharged captain, (he won the bars the hard way), still suffers the effects of imprisonment. He is slowly recovering at Scotia.

Is Down Easter

Bathild was born at Kittery Point Maine. She was graduated from the Portsmouth, Maine, high school then started nurse's training at John Hopkins hospital at Baltimore.

Upon completion of her training she started duty at the Fairmont hospital in Jersey City where she stayed three years.

Later she nursed at a private sanitarium. Back to John Hopkins and the Phibbs Clinic, she marched in 1939 for more training.

More nursing then until she entered civil service where she was assigned to a ship based at New Orleans.

The ship, carrying high explosives, plied between St. Paul and South America.

Bathild was never curious about the ship's wartime cargo.

"They said 'high explosives' and that was enough for me!" she recalls.

Married In 1950

In 1950 Bathild met and married Richard. Later he was sent overseas.

Bathild, following her three months stay in the hospital recovering from shipwreck injuries, was assigned to the USS General Meigs, a troop transport.

She was later transferred to Okinawa where she met her husband after his release by the Reds. After several sieges in the hospital Richard and Bathild, because of Richard's Nebraska background, returned to Scotia where he has relatives.

The hospital here heard of Bathild's training so she was asked to go to work.

She started duties there Tuesday night on the "graveyard shift," (11 p.m. to 7 a.m.).

"How do you like the job," the Quiz reporter asked.

"Tres bien!" she replied in French.

P.S. Almost forgot: Bathild speaks French, Polish, Japanese and understands Italian.

St. Mary's Pupils Scan United Nations

Third, fourth and fifth grade pupils of St. Mary's school, celebrated the tenth birthday of the United Nations by discussing the organization and by starting a class club.

In conversation pupils pointed out that, although so far God has not been publicly asked for help in the United Nations, there is a special place for so called "meditation."

To make school rooms resemble the UN quarters pupils arranged desks and chairs in a semi-circle.

Veronica Belcin gave an eyewitness report of a visit to the UN headquarters. From English textbooks pupils learned how to organize a club. After nominating the candidates all voted like grown-ups by secret ballot.

The results of the election were: Veronica Beloin, president; Marita Wentek, vice-president; Robert Kapustka, secretary.

Women Sewers Aid Hospital with Covers

The Ord hospital is richer with the addition of several mattress covers donated recently by public spirited women. Those who cut the material were Mrs. John Haskell and Mrs. Ed Armstrong. Sewers included Mrs. Merle VanZandt, Mrs. F. L. Stoddard and Mrs. Robert Perry.

Hastings to California

Mr. and Mrs. George Hastings and son, Al, left Saturday for California, where they plan to remain for an indefinite length of time. They expect to visit Mr. Hastings' mother Mrs. Vashti Hastings, and their daughter, Mrs. Hal Mason, and will go to San Diego and Sacramento.

Missionary Society Carries No Money Schemes on Agenda

A missionary society that does not hold suppers, bake sales, or bazaars to raise money.

Yet a society that gives and gives generously, to foreign and home missions.

That is the Missionary Society of the Mira Valley Evangelical United Brethren church.

Organized in 1926, the group had 22 members. The idea originated with Mrs. Nathan Thomas. Her husband was pastor.

Mrs. Thomas was the first president. Ten women declared intentions of becoming members. Mrs. Will Koelling was elected vice president. Miss Florence Koelling, now Mrs. Elmer Hornickle, was elected secretary-treasurer.

The women voted to hold meetings on the third Thursday. This is till the meeting time. The women meet in the basement of the church.

At the second meeting 11 more joined the society, and the regular missionary lessons started. Some of the early lessons were on Moslem Women, Native Measures of Reform, Church Missionaries, Our Pempled Hills, Evangelical at Work. The society was then known as the Women's Missionary Society.

One of the early speakers was Dr. Grace Crandall, a returned missionary from China.

The society has kept up with offerings, dues, and special gifts They have studied missionary lessons. They have taken part in church services, arranged programs, and sent missionary boxes.

At present the officers are Mrs. Harry Foth, president; Mrs. Albert Peterson, vice president; Mrs. Will Foth, secretary and Mrs. Dan Cook, treasurer.

The name is now the WSWS, which was taken when the Evangelical church merged with the United Brethren. The letters stand for Womens Society of World Service.

They are active members of the United Council. They assist with the Lord's Acre. At Christmas time they give gifts to the Ord rest home and to the hospital. Their efforts are missionary and their main theme is giving. They prepare gifts for orphanage and give to welfare societies.

Appearing on early rolls were Lilhan, Hattie, Edna and Myra Boettger, Mrs. Will Foth, Mrs. Dan Cook, Mrs. Henry Geweke sr., Mrs. Fannie Peterson, Mrs. J. E. Prickett, Mrs. Albert Petersen, Mrs. James Cook, Mrs. Herman Koelling, Mrs. John Hornickle, Mrs. Will Koelling, Mrs. Nathan Thomas, Mrs. Scott Wolf, Mrs. Joe Cook, Mrs. Archie Geweke, Mrs. Henry Geweke jr. Mrs Will Ollis, Florence Koelling, Grandma Koelling, Irma Lenz and Mrs. Dahlin.

Through the years, the women have met regularly and have had their part in keeping up the church in the Valley. There have been several presidents, although Mrs. Thomas served several years.

The group recently started to serve lunches at the meeting. Another innovation has been to have two members care for children who accompany mothers to the meetings. Generally this nursing job is rotated.

Members on the roll at present include, Mrs. Alfred Burson, Mrs. Harry Foth, Mrs. Archie Geweke, Mrs. Fannie Peterson, Mrs. Augusta Geweke, Mrs. Edwin Lenz, Mrs. Russell Hackett, Mrs. Joe Marks, Mrs. Henry Sohl, Mrs. Lucy Koelling, Mrs. Harold Koelling, Mrs. Kenneth Koelling, Mrs. Merrill Koelling, Mrs. Elroy Cook, Mrs. Dan Cook.

Mrs. Hattie Boettger, Miss Edna Boettger, Mrs. Joe Cook, Mrs. Elmer Hornickle, Mrs. Katie Marks, Mrs. Howard Hanke, Mrs. Ed Cook, Mrs. Will Koelling, Mrs. Lydia Koelling, Mrs. Will Foth, Mrs. Bryan Peterson, Mrs. Marvin Collins, Mrs. Orville Leuck, Mrs. Lloyd Geweke, Mrs. Floyd Boilsen, Mrs George Nass. Mrs. Cecil McCall, Mrs. E. H. Sohl and Mrs. Albert Peterson.

"Let no man judge another until he has walked in the other's moccasins for two moons," was the theme used by Mrs. Russell Hackell in the Indian lesson this week.

Throughout the lesson, Mrs. Hackell and her assistants described Indian Americans, adjustments, lives, work and hardships.

Mrs. Hackell stressed the fact that Indians were getting away from the general idea of old Indian warfare, tepees, drums and blankets. They are fast becoming well known in many professions.

Several Indian articles were displayed and described by Mrs. E. H. Sohl.

Devotions were in charge of the president, Mrs. Harry Foth. Mrs. Ed Lenz played Indian music.

Hostesses to the 32 members and 24 guests present were Mrs. Elroy Cook and Mrs. Archie Geweke. Lunch featured jello tepees. Favors were tiny Indian moccasins and Indian napkins.

The twenty children, ranging in age from babies to four year olds were tended by Mrs. Thad Krason and Mrs. Mary Rachuy, who were hired for the occasion.

Ord Cub Scouts . . . The October theme was Halloween. Cubs responded with these getups for a party.

Cub Scouts Plan Hallowe'en Theme; Nov. Theme Is 'Carnival'

A cub scout carnival, sponsored by packs here, will be held during the last week of November it was announced at the regular meeting Monday by Cubmaster Max Meyer.

During the meeting, Meyer said fathers and boys will arrange games. Mothers will be asked to furnish cake, cookies and candy.

Den mothers will put up decorations for the hall.

The four dens used the October theme of Hallowe'en. Monday boys appeared in costumes made during the month. Most made their own masks.

One den, in addition, made tiny racers as a project.

Meyer said the theme to be followed during November will be carnival.

Bobcat pins were presented Monday to Kenneth Nelson and Richard John. Other awards were:

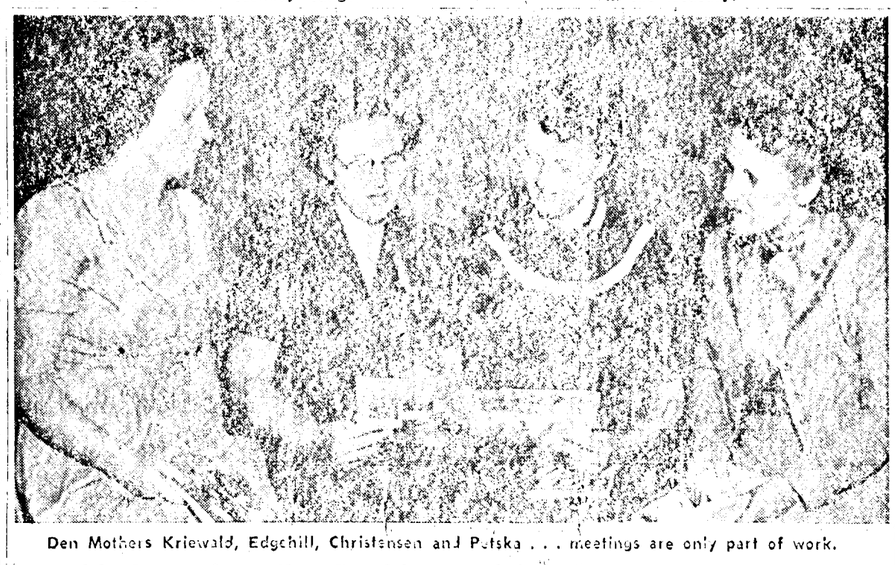
Del Shepherd received a wolf badge.

Charles Kriewald, Don Edgchill and Donnie Spooner were given arrow points.

Meyer said that the letters CUBS stood for courtesy, unity, bravery and service. Each cub pledges these qualities.

The boys, in closing, gave the law of the pack and the scout promise.

The treasurer reported $49.49 in the treasury.



Den Mothers Kriewald, Edgchill, Christensen and Petska . . . meetings are only part of work.

Den Mothers Are The Backbone of Cub Scouts and Organization

Much of the work of cub scouting falls on the shoulders of the den mothers.

In the Ord pack there are four dens. Mothers give an hour once a week to present the theme of the month.

All four Ord mothers say the hour a week is small compared to the actual time they put into jobs. One mother said she thought of cub scouting "most of the time."

Den 1 is mothered by Mrs. Harold Christensen; Den 2 by Mrs. Charles Kriewald; Den 3 by Mrs. Emanuel ePtska and Den 4 by Mrs. Bob Edgehill.

Mrs. Christensen has six boys. Ages vary from eight to ten. Cubbing is a fresh experience to her, but she likes it. The boys meet once a week for about an hour. She says it takes considerable time to get the meeting materials ready. Boys volunteer to serve the treats.

Mrs. Charles Kriewald, mother of Den 2 has been a year in cubbing and enjoys it although, she says, it does "take time."

Mrs. Emanuel Petska, mother of den 3, has seven boys. She has been in cubbing a year. Since she has four children of her own, she is exceptionally busy, but she enjoys work with the den. She finds it worth while.

Mrs. Bob Edghill, mother of Den 4, has five lads. hSe finds getting materials together time consuming but gets a thrill in seeing completed projects. She again points out the hour a week, at den meetings and the monthly pack meetings, are the least expected from den mothers. This is her first experience with cub scout work.

Edward Silver marries Bernadine Augustyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Silver Wed Tuesday

St. Mary's Catholic church of Elyria was the scene, Tuesday, Oct. 25, of the marriage of Miss Bernadine Augustyn to Edward Silver.

Miss Augustyn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Augustyn of Ord. Mr. Silver is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Silver of Comstock.

Rev. Leonard Ziolkowski performed the double ring sacrament before an altar decorated with white mums.

Mrs. Don Edwards, soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Emanuel Kapustka at the organ, sang while the bride presented a bouquet of pink carnations.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, came down the white carpeted aisle, wearing a gown of white satin, lace and net. The dress featured a lace bodice accented with a portrait neckline, trimmed with sequins and pearls. Long sleeves came to bridal points at the wrist. The voluminous skirt of net with four panel lace insertions, ended in a cathedral train. The fingertip veil fell from a beaded halo of sequins and pearls. She carried a heart shaped bouquet of red roses and gardenias and her only ornament was a single strand of pearls with matching earrings, the gift of the groom.

Miss Regina Augustyn, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Miss Margie Augustyn, another sister, was bridesmaid. Both wore identical jeweled toned gowns of baby shrimp and midnight blue. Their strapless gowns featured full tiered skirts with matching jackets. They carried bouquets of white button mums with matching ribbons. Their headbands consisted of chenille piping trimmed with net and flowers.

The flower girl, Katie Klinginsmith, friend of the bride, wore white, similar to the gown of the bride. She carried a basket of white button mums. Gary Augustyn, cousin of the bride was ring bearer.

The groom was attended by Eugene Augustyn, brother of the bride, the other attendant being Jim Foral, a friend. Ushers were Fred Dubas, a cousin of the bride and Everett Lech, a friend.

The bride's mother wore blue and the groom's mother, gray with matching accessories. Their corsages were of pink carnations.

The four tier wedding cake centered the bridal table for the noon dinner, served at the parish hall. Mrs. John Smolik, sister of the groom, cut the cake. Serving at the bridal table were the Misses Geraldine Osentowski and Ruth Wozniak. Gifts were cared for by Rita Augustyn and Jeanette Sobon. Lillian Lech was in charge of the guest book.

In the evening, the couple entertained their relatives and friends at the Elyria hall. Chelewski Brothers furnished music.

After the reception and dance Mr. and Mrs. Silver left on a short wedding trip. For traveling, the bride wore a suit of avacado green with matching accessories.

They will be at home on a farm three miles northwest of Elyria.

Mrs. Silver graduated from the Ord high school and Edens school of hairdressing of Grand Island. She has since been employed at the Wilma beauty shop in Ord. Mr. Silver is a graduate of the Loup City high school. He served with the Marine Corps for two years.

Shot Your Pheasant? Here's Cooking Tips

Ord housewives have their own idea of cooking pheasant, it seems.

However, all say if the bird is young the best way is to fry it, but use plenty of fat.

Mrs. Charles Wrightsman says she soaks her pheasant in milk before frying, then rolls it in flour. The resulting paste keeps the juices in and makes a nice brown crust.

Mrs. Glen Spooner says she soaks pheasants in salt water and then steams them in the oven until tender. She says they always skin birds.

Gib Babcock says when pheasants were more plentiful, his family used only the breasts which were fried like steaks. The legs and backs were discarded. Now however, the birds are browned in fat on top of the stove and later placed in the oven and cooked until tender.

Several Ord cooks use this same methods. Some use water for basting and some use cream.

Mrs. Ross Allen is one who browns in the frying pan then places the bird in the roaster, covers it with milk or cream and cooks slowly.

Mrs. Emil Mathouser says she flavors pheasant while roasting with garlic and sage, and a bit of carroway seed.

Mrs. Murrey Nelson cooks pheasant until tender in the pressure cooker, then browns it.

Mrs. Charles Dobrovsky boils pheasant and makes a gravy.

Miss Dolsie Waterman says that is the way she serves her pheasant and she has baking powder biscuits on the side.

Mrs. Dave Watson says a friend cooked pheasants at her home this year. The friend used wine in cooking. It gave a delightful flavor.

Mrs. Agnes Dodge says she serves old birds with a barbecue sauce. She feels her family enjoys this dish more than they do the fried young pheasant.

Mrs. Bolish Kapustka boils her pheasants for soup.

Some use vinegar water for soaking. Some use bacon or lemon for a garnish.

Mrs. Frank Benda bakes her pheasant with bacon, carrots, onions, celery, mixed spices, whole allspice, pepper and salt and a bit of vinegar. She uses butter for basting, and water to make the juice. When the bird is tender, and the vegetables are soft, she strains the juice, thickens it with flour, adds some sour cream to the gravy.

Several like the gamey taste, and leave birds as they are. Others do not relish this strong taste and soak it out with vinegar. Several add a dressing of bread sauce as for baked chicken.

'CARE Is Answer To World Unrest' Says Burwell Speaker

"All any man wants is a full stomach, a job, a place of his own, and a future for his children. If these aren't available, he will hunt until he finds them. In my opinion CARE is the answer."

Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Washington, D.C., made this statement at the meeting of the Sixth District Federation of Women's Clubs, held at Burwell, the past week. Mrs. Clapper spoke Thursday.

Representing CARE, Mrs. Clapper, recently toured the world.

"I have seen children eating mud. They had distended stomahs, fingers like pins, and legs like match sticks. I have seen coolies doing a mule's work on one bowl of rice a day."

"Millions in India live today with only the gutter as a sleeping place. Half the world's people were hungry when they went to sleep last night, are hungry tonight, and will be tomorrow night. In fact, they have always been hungry."

"Communism promises to put a stop to all this. There is plenty for all," the leaders say. So a show window is placed on the India boundary to show what China has that is better than what India can offer. Is it any wonder the people of India lean toward communism?"

"Man is naturally free. If anything better is promised then men would lean toward it. That," continued the speaker, "is where America can step in."

"Do you know the communist press is spending two billion dollars monthly for propaganda?"

"Hundreds of thousands of dollars are going into printing material for Iceland alone. Iceland a strategetic point in world combat."

"Millions of American dollars are being spent for surplus storage. Can you visualize enough food in storage in United States to feed every man, woman, child, cat, dog and bird in Chicago until the year 1998?"

Mrs. Clapper explained every package of food sent under CARE sponsorship is sent into foreign countries free from duty. The packages do not affect rationing. Every package is delivered into an American's hand, who sees to proper distribution.

Each package is labeled with the sender's name, and address.

"Villages," she explained, "need help. Maybe it is to build a road, to get out of the mud, and help villagers get their produce to market. The natives will build the road themselves, but they need shovels and wheel barrows. These can be provided by CARE."

Radios and newspapers are telling about the project and urging cooperation. Mrs. Clapper says that CARE packages sent now will be received by Christmas time.

Miss Clarabelle Wilson . . . keeps house despite affliction.

North Loup Woman Overcomes Handicap

Miss Clara Belle Wilson, although 80 years old, has never seen an automobile.

Neither has she seen an electric light, an airplane, a radio, or a vacuum sweeper.

In fact, she has never seen any thing we consider essential these days.

"But," she says, "I can tell when a plane flies over, because I can hear it. I can listen to my radio, because I know how to turn the dials."

Miss Wilson was stricken with typhoid when she was four. The illness left her sightless.

She has lived in the home of a nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Burson, in North Loup, for about 30 years.

She is independent and although sightless, well able to fend for herself. She can wash dishes, and makes her own bed.

She has reared three generations. First her nephew, then his son and daughter, and now Mr. and Mrs. Burson's grandchildren.

She dresses herself, and feeds herself. Mrs. Burson puts food on her plate and from then on Miss Wilson can manage

Miss Wilson was born June, 1871, near Fremont. She says her last recollection is seeing her father driving a yoke of oxen.

She remembers picking flowers. She also can remember colors, and says that she used to think that green was pretty. Even yet, Mrs. Burson dislikes red dresses.

Miss Wilson says she has no idea how an automobile looks. However, she can pass her hands over smaller things, her radio for instance, or a baby's face, and get a mind picture of what the radio or the baby looks like.

She has a bible printed in Braille, but the print is so small she cannot read it. She listens to radio sermons and music and enjoys them. She is a member of the Ord Methodist church.

She says he used to like to sew, and would make balls of carpet rags. She has not done much sewing recently as a stroke left her handicapped.

Her sense of hearing is keen. She stood at her window during the Popcorn festival in North Loup and heard the coronation. The Bursons live one half mile from town.

Miss Wilson has always lived in Nebraska. George Wilson of Ord is a nephew.

For a time she could distinguish between dark and light, but that is not possible any longer. She knows when the sun is shining because she can feel the heat. She often sits out of doors in the summer, but she would rather stay inside.

She does not mind staying alone. She can start her own fire, if necessary, and perks her own coffee.

Many in the same position Miss Wilson is in would feel sorry for themselves and handicapped. But not Miss Wilson.

She feels that she is leading a useful life. And she is happy in doing just that.

—Miss Ouida Murrah spent Wednesday night with Miss Ruth Mayo in Ralston, enroute to Texas.

—Mrs. Lloyd Geweke entertained Hou A Tue Tuesday evening. Mrs. Otis Miller received the high score prize.

Spotty Results Greet Weekend Hunters

Pheasants 'Good or Poor'; Wildfowl Take Better Than Formerly

Duck hunters said: "The weekend was good!"

Pheasant hunters said: "The weekend was lousy!"

And that's the general opinion of Valley county nimrods afield and afloat over Saturday and Sunday.

Most hunting pressure was directed towards Mira Valley. Shotgunners, tramping the high cornfields, kept a steady barrage of cannonading going most of the two days.

Only a few limit kills were reported. One, by Ross Allen, was a quickie. Ross had his three bird limit in the space of an hour.

Others, including Don Meyers of Norfolk, tramped all afternoon for one bird. Meyers hunted near Comstock.

"No Trouble"

Alvin Schamp and party, reported "no trouble in getting limite."

The same story came from Eldon Cetak and party.

Orel Koelling and Bill Lee reported six killed in a party of four. The wives were along. The foursome hunted along Highway 56 and the Koelling grazing land.

Birds Saturday were lively and laid in well to the gun. By Sunday they were a bit wilder.

Biting temperatures made going chilly for cornfield tramping.

"Ducks Better"

On the river the cold weather made duck hunting much better than it has been.

Apparently some northern ducks began moving. George Dworak reported 18 killed by a party in the Sandhills.

Dworak also bagged three others, a teal, pintail and blue, Monday morning.

Howard Huff and Len Cronk reported 2 mallard drakes and 2 mallard hens killed in a Monday foray.

Cronk believes the mallards were Northerners. He said the river was mildly heavy with duck traffic but the ducks were wary. Only one flock fell into their setup.

Minor Mishap

One minor mishap occurred. A gun discharged in the Dean Misko car driving the pellets through the floor boards.

The accidental discharge occurred when hunting companion, Ed Swopes, was trying to put on a jacket.

County Treasurer Lloyd Wilson reported two pheasants dead of gunshot wounds on his back porch. The birds were a gift from an unknown admirer, Wilson believes.

Alan Dobson, Lloyd Geweke and Joe Cetak reported six mallards killed. Bill Fafeita also reported six killed.

Buck Cetak and Bill Anderson killed four, (2 mallards and 2 smaller ducks).

Emil Fafeita reported a limit kill of northern mallards on the Elmer Gudmundsen ranch near Hyannis.

Fafeita said his party combed out pot holes. Northern mallards, he said, are larger than local species and have orange legs.

Scotia . . .

Mrs. Jim Grey was presented with a farewell gift Tuesday from the ladies of St. Patrick's church in Scotia.

The Altar Society met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Earl Hughes. Mrs. Gray is moving to Ord with her husband. They have purchased a cafe.

The Scotia chapter of the FHA entertained the North Loup chapter Monday night in the Home Economics room. A program relating to Home Economy was produced by Mrs. Vincent Johnson and Jackie Keep after which the Scotia girls served lunch to the entire group.

The Den Mothers and sponsors of both chapters were present.

VFW Auxiliary Dance Nets $100; More Comes

Mrs. Bill Andersen, dance chairman of the annual VFW auxiliary, announced $100 cleared at the dance Monday. Mrs. Andersen believes more will accrue from ticket turn-ins as yet incomplete.

A good crowd was present at the Bohemian hall where the dance was held. Music was by the Bobby Mills orchestra.

Mrs. Verlin Smith won the prize for selling the most tickets.

The money raised will be turned into the auxiliary community service fund.

Chants Humble Jays 32 to 6 at Ravenna

Big Red's Experience Little Difficulty in Contest Away Friday

Ord scored in every quarter Friday at Ravenna to humble the Bluejays, 32 to 6.

It was the Chanticleers all the way. Ravenna made one successful bid in the final quarter on a completed pass to the Ord 2.

The Jays rammed the next play over with Darrel Bernet carrying. The conversion failed.

Big Don Kapustka scored the first Ord TD from about the 7 on a dive buck. A long pass Falter to Nelson, completed to the 10 set the stage.

Romans scored the second TD around end from the 5. The drive started when Ord took over a punt. Babcock set up the marker with a jaunt to the 8.

Chant Power

Kapustka added the third, again on a dive buck. Romans intercepted a pass and the Chants moved downfield on straight power before Kapustka climaxed the drive with the TD.

That made the half time score 20 to 0.

Vic Thomas scored in the third on a dive through the line. Vic tallied from the 1, following Kapustka's setup.

A fumble by the Ord seconds on the Ord 20 set up the Ravenna TD in the fourth.

Ord's final tally came on a pass Papiernik to Thomas.

Ravenna Fans Absent

Football apparently isn't popular at Ravenna this fall. Bluejay stands bore only a sprinkling of fans and many of them were Ordites in search of seating.

Comparatively the Chant side was jammed with Ordites who made the trip.

Ravenna seemed conscious of the lack of home town support. The Ravenna band, one of the better high stepping organizations seen this fall, saluted the Ord side of the field only then marched away.

Here are the statistics:

	Ord	Ravenna
First Downs	9	4
Yards Rushing	201	71
Passes Attempted	6	9
Passes Completed	3	2
Yds. Passing	152	35
TOTAL YARDS	353	106
Fumbles	1	0
Opp. Recovered	0	1
Penalties	1-5 yds	2-10 yds

Scoring plays for Ord: Kapustka, line buck; Romans, end run; Kapustka, line buck; Thomas, line plunge; Thomas, pass. Conversions: Romans, run; Romans, kick.

Scoring plays for Ravenna: Bernet, line plunge.

Score by Quarters

Ord	13	6	6	32

Grid Scores News Ratings

Minden 39—Central City 0
Loup City 14—Broken Bow 31
Seward 19—Aurora 0
Ogallala 39—Gothenburg 15
Arcadia 26—Scotia 0
Cozad 26—Holdrege 7
Fullerton 32—Albion 0
York 39—Schuyler 12

Crete is leading the Central Ten, east division, with two wins.

Monday Ron Gibson, in the Lincola Star, rated Ord second in state Class B standings.

Ord was preceded by Minden who administered a 39 to 0 trouncing to Central City over the weekend.

Cozad was third, Stanton 4th, and Chadron fifth. Gibson said Ord dropped to second, (he formerly rated Ord first) on a comparison of the Minden-Ord records.

Tuesday Jim Raglan, Lincoln Journal staffer, rated Ord third behind Cozad and Minden.

Minden moved ahead of Ord by pasting Central City. "Ord," Raglan said, "had trouble edging CC. That opens a gap between Minden, (2nd) and Ord (3rd)."

Wednesday Gregg McBride, of the World-Herald, rated Ord fourth behind Cozad, Minden and Curtis.

McBride said Ord dropped a peg when Minden's Whippets laced into Central City 39 to 0. Ord barely edged C.C., 14 to 6.

Chuck Blaha, center on the Chant eleven, was cited for player of the week mention also by the World-Herald. Chuck was cited for efficient work at pivot in the Ord-Ravenna tangle.

The state rankings have nettled loyal Ord fans. Most of the anger is centered on Curtis picked ahead of Ord.

Curtis hardly rates Ord, fans say. They point out the Aggies barely edged Holdrege 7-0 and Gothenburg 14-0.

Minden has been singled out:

As one supporter put it, "The scribes are paying too much attention to the teams that play Central City. Until they were beaten by Ord the Bison didn't rate."

"Now by virtue of a thumping of Central City, Minden scampers into a top spot."

"Tain't fair!" they cry.

Oh well, as Gregg McBride used to say when criticized, "If you don't like my ratings make your own."

But, for this corner, it looks like McBride is making like a candidate anxious for execution in effigy.

Only this time we'll burn 'im! Hanging's a too easy death.

Challengers Suffer Two Sharp Defeats

North Loup's six man grid squad absorbed two defeats this week, one of them at Dad's Night at home.

Earlier this week the Blues were chastized by Wolbach 25 to 7.

Tuesday night, the Blues took a second lacing from Dannebrog 55 to 12.

Sheldon scored both counters for North Loup.

The pep band played to raise Blue fighting spirits but the effort was fruitless.

Dad's Night was held for the Dannebrog-North Loup contest. It was the last home game of the season for the Blues.

Gilbert Says Birds 'More and Scattered'

Hunters Far too Noisy When Coming into Hunting Field

Game Commission Secretary Paul Gilbert this week said pheasant hunters will find stubble ducks a little more numerous and a little better distributed this year.

And farmers will be more cooperative.

Our personal feeling is that hunters will find farmers more cooperative, with the noon opening time, Gilbert continued.

"Farmers we have visited with, I believe without exception, indicated a willingness to allow hunting on their premises, if the hunters will just ask for permission."

The fact so many corn fields are already cut over means the birds will be concentrated in weedy areas, Gilbert commented.

And with hunting not opening until noon each day, they will be in their resting areas after the morning feeding, he continued.

Hunters will have more success if they go in small groups, and they should move as quietly as possible when approaching a field.

'Far Too Noisy'

"The major error of novices when hunting pheasants is that in approaching the field they are far too noisy," Gilbert said.

Another point is to go against the wind, so the hunter's approach is not "telegraphed" to the birds by the wind.

"The hunter should be clear off of the road when he shoots, and if there is any question in his mind whether or not the bird is a cock, the safe thing to do is not to shoot," Gilbert said.

The department's field force will be doubled during the season of heaviest hunting. Biologists will accompany wardens to check the birds as to condition and age.

Chants Eye Gothenburg for Last Tilt Against Tough, Rugged, Foe

Ord encounters the last big tough foe of the season here, Friday, when the Chants match line play with the Gothenburg Swedes.

The Chants go into the fray with a slight edge. The Swedes have been nipped several times this year but only by powerful opponents.

Ord may just be strong enough to accomplish the same task.

So far Ord holds the short end of the Gothenburg-Ord series. The Chants won only in 1949 and tied in 1952.

Here's the record:

Year	Gothenburg	Ord
1949	7	12
1950	38	7
1951	46	13
1952	14	14
1953	21	7
1954	18	13

The Swedes are coached by Dutch Zorn an old steady hand who saw time at Burwell.

Zorn, incidentally, was the Burwell mentor when the Longhorns romped over Ord with Back Asa Anderson, running wild.

Spread Sized Up

Ord workouts this week have been against two favorite Swede formations, the spread and the split T.

In addition Coach Bill Gogan ran the Big Reds in long fundamentals drills.

The full Gothenburg record is hardly impressive. The Swedes have been beaten by Cozad 33-14; Ogallala 39-15; and Minden 18-13.

In the latter game there's some chance for Ord to regain top state Class B rankings.

Minden is well up in state picks. If Ord can nip the Swedes by a sizable margin then the win should make Minden's 18-13 victory less impressive.

Tied Central City

The Swedes have tied Central City 13-13 and won from Holdrege 27-26 and Lexington 35-7.

The Swede attack is geared to a pair of seniors, Peck and Litchenberg. Both are speed merchants running off the half.

Gothenburg holds a slight weight edge. The Swedes average 173 in the line, 168 in the backfield and have an overall figure of 171.

Ord lists the line at 170, the backfield at 165 and an overall average of 169.

Ord is in top shape. So, apparently from reports, is Gothenburg.

Both should deliver fans one of the tightest ball games of this season. Game time is eight o'clock.

Parker Missing

The Ord band, despite the absence of Director Paul Parker, will be on hand for halftime ceremonies.

Parker is in the Ord hospital bedded down with flu. He was reported "better" Wednesday morning.

The band is managing practice sessions. Band members are filling in for the maestro.

So far rehearsals have been impressive on streets near the school.

With band, and the team, in top shape for the game, school officials were looking towards an all time record gate.

After ALL, this is the last BIG game.

The Team Is Down

Dear Sir:

Two weeks ago Friday night circumstances were ripe for a football upset. Loup City could have easily upset Ord. Yes, I know, Ord won 20 to 6 but as someone close to the team I know a lot about how the team feels.

In fact a lot more than you outsiders or businessmen will ever know. And, frankly speaking, what I see worries me.

Let me tell you about the change that has come over the team. Perhaps, after reading this letter, there will be a little more effort on the part of business for more enthusiasm.

The team, with the aid of businessmen, started the season with all the "give 'em heck" zeal and inspiration needed to win games. They were really fired up and, the night of the opener with Holdrege, the kids were at their top. That was the reason for the 33 to 7 score.

The Chant spirit kept on climbing. It probably reached its peak in the Broken Bow fracas when the Chants won 27-0.

Now let us reflect a moment. A good 50 per cent of the teams fight and spirit came as a result of that downtown shindig and pep rally. The rally made team spirits soar. What particularly pleased all was when Coach Bill Dickey said: "Broken Bow's tackles, they say, haven't been moved this season. Well, we're going to move them tonight!"

Then something happened. The week before the Central City game the team spirit skidded faster than a plane out of control. AND THIS WAS JUST PRIOR TO A GAME THAT EVERYBODY KNEW WAS GOING TO BE QUITE IMPORTANT.

What was done for a pep rally? A LOUSY LITTLE OLD FIVE MINUTE AFFAIR AT THE SCHOOL THAT WAS SQUEEZED IN BETWEEN 11:50 AND THE NOON BELL! THERE WAS NO PEP SUPPORT FOR THE TEAM BY ANY OUTSIDERS.

From association I know the majority of the team was "down" for the Central City game. You remember the score, 14 6. I'm sure the team could have done better if there had been some kind of a big shindig for them before they left.

Yeah, I know there was a big crowd at Central City for the game but I feel it is better to have the enthusiasm before the game than during it. A big crowd helps but it isn't everything.

After the C. C. game one player said: 'Now that we are winning all their, (Ord people's) football games they don't even care enough to give us a good rouser!"

And now, as to that miserable affair last Friday when Joe Banana and his Band failed to appear. One player said: "I guess they don't care any more. Well, I wonder how they would like it if we went out there tonight against Loup City and didn't care?"

Another gripe: A bunch of Ord fans were watching the Loup City-Ord game and they were yelling like mad for Ord to get on the stick and make a score.

Yet when Ord did punch one over do you think those, (fans) would cheer? Don't be silly! You couldn't have opened their mouths with a crowbar. There was nary a peep from them.

So, I appeal to you, Bill, and say that we've got to do something to revive the team spirit before the Gothenburg game or Ord will be beaten. I can feel it and see it in the team attitude.

All know Gothenburg is a big rough, tough football team. I know they have been beaten but look who it took: Curtis and Minden.

Ord can beat Gothenburg — if they are fired up, and the fans really cheer.

In all seriousness I write this letter, Bill, and in all seriousness I close.

Please try and arrange a rally or shindig of some sort for the gang before the Ord-Gothenburg game.

If you can't get Joe Banana and his Bunch out, then some of you guys come down to the school and give the team some fire up speeches.

Our band can furnish the music.

BUT I MEAN EVERY WORD I HAVE WRITTEN AND I AM DEAD EARNEST!

A STUDENT NOT A MEMBER OF THE FOOTBALL TEAM

To the above writer.

An Apology and Promise

Sir:

On receipt of your letter, in regard to the non appearance of Joe Banana and His Bunch at the last rally, I started an investigation. This is what I've discovered:

(Incidentally we employed the same investigator who solved the sewer trouble at the Ord golf course. He found we'd made no connection at the main)

1. Two minutes before the rally was scheduled Dr. Martin, (first trumpet), gave a lock jaw shot to the village gossip. Dr. Martin just couldn't resist waiting around to witness the expected explosion.

2. Dean Misko, (saxophone), was selling a saddle and got his foot caught in a stirrup.

3. Dr. Auble, (alto horn), was testing a pair of crossed eyes and confused the date.

4. Jay Auble, (baritone horn), was busy scraping the hair off the spring of Jim Gilbert's watch. Jim had used hair oil to lubricate the time-piece

5. Bill Lee, (drums), was so busy talking that his tongue covered his eye teeth and he couldn't see what he was saying.

6. Ed. Apking, (trombone) and Bob White, (trumpet) were both busy filling out income tax returns.

However the band, (I promise you!) will be on hand for the big rally this Friday at 3 o'clock on the square.

In addition we have unearthed a strategical pass play that, if adopted by the Chanticleers, can easily win the Ord-Gothenburg game.

We solicit your attendance and forgiveness.

Sincerely,
Joe (Jay Auble) Banana and His Bunch.

Prize Winner

Gentlemen:

We are happy to inform you that Miss Edna Boettger, Route 2, Ord, Nebraska, has been chosen as one of the twelve winners in the recently conducted International Harvester Nebraska Jamboree Contest.

Miss Boettger's prize for being chosen a winner is an International Harvester 12 cubic foot refrigerator which will be delivered to her by the local dealer at Ord, Howard Huff.

The Nebraska Jamboree contest was a program open to any person living in the state of Nebraska. All that anyone needed to do to enter this program was to obtain an entry coupon from their local Harvester dealer and then write on this coupon in 25 words or less why they would like to win an International Harvester freezer, refrigerator, or air conditioner. Miss Boettger chose to write about an International Harvester refrigerator and why she should like to own one. The judges of this contest chose her coupon, based on skill, originality and etc., as one of the twelve best in the state of Nebraska, and therefore she is receiving this 12 cubic foot refrigerator as her award.

Foth Rolls 297 in League Play

Eldon Foth, of Mira Valley, rolled the highest single game on record at the Ord Bowl, Sunday, a 297.

The surpriser came in the third game of a league contest between Eldon's team, Standard Chemical, and the Ord Hardware.

Eldon's series also set a record. He knitted games of 159-199 and 297 for a sparkling 655.

The lucky pinster strung 11 straight strikes together then got only 7 pins with the last ball.

"I was pretty nervous on the 12th frame," he said, "although up until then it hadn't obthered me."

He said most hits were in the pocket. His seventh strike was thin but spilled the maples. His eighth was another thin hit but this time he was helped by a kicker that cleaned the pins.

His 12th hit left the 2-5-7 pins on the third thin hit in the string.

Foth will receive a gold membership card to the 297 Club from ABC.

He was wearing a London shirt at the time and if he'd rolled a 300 he would have won $500.

Earlier this week "Herk" Haines of Burwell posted a 268 single game. He rolls on the Caterpillar Five.

Weckbach said his list was "about 75 per cent' solicited.

Feeding Corn

We have several loads of corn to arrive early next week. Good No. 2 feeding corn can be shipped in now at a much lower price than local corn can be furnished. If you need anywhere from a truckload to a carload of good corn let us quote you a price on this corn either at our elevator or delivered to your farm. Or if you want to wait a couple of weeks for delivery, you can contract it for delivery anytime next month.

Oats

We have a small amount of heavy oats on hand at the elevator and expect more to arrive soon. Just at present feeding grains are selling at a low price compared with the past few weeks. We rather feel that this is a very good time to stock up on grains and we will furnish it to you at the lowest possible price, either delivered to your farm or at the elevator.

Protein Feed

Proteins have been somewhat weaker the past week and we feel that they are due for higher prices just as soon as we see a little cold weather. For sometime protein feeds have been selling at rather low prices compared with grain prices. There is no doubt that hay will be fairly high in price and you can cheapen your winter feed costs by carefully using some of the Nutrena Proteins. We have a nice contract on Nutrena feeds that will protect you against either advance or decline in prices.

Alfalfa Seed

The recent crop report indicates an almost unbelieveable crop of alfalfa seed this year. If the actual crop matures according to estimates we will have the largest carry over of alfalfa seed that can possibly be imagined. There was a carry over of about half million pounds last spring and now this enormous crop in the hands of the farmer makes between two and half million pounds and three million pounds of seed. This will plant the normal acreage for two years. We have a pretty good market when you consider the large crop.

Contract with County Denied Douthit Plea

Ellis Douthit, Greeley county commissioner sued for accepting money from the county for road work, this week filed an answer to the action.

In the answer Douthit admits he performed services for Greeley county, on Greeley roads, while a commissioner for which he received pay.

His answer also admitted receiving about $840 from private individuals.

But, Douthit's answer pleads, there was no contract between him and the county.

Douthit has been sued by two Greeley countyans, Frank Byerly and Carol Palser. They have named Douthit's surety bond company as co-defendant.

Byerly and Palser based the action on a provision of law which prohibits members of county boards from contracting with the county while they are board members.

Byerly and Palser have retained Atty. John Sullivan of Ord.

—Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Arthur Sunday were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Arthur.

Tuesday Services for Trucker Killed in Crash Saturday Nite

Funeral services were held from the Burwell Christian church, Tuesday, at two o'clock for Myron Criss (Hap) Meade, 49 year old ranch hand and part time trucker, who was killed instantly Saturday night in a truck crash on Highway 11.

The services were followed by interment in the Burewll cemetery.

Mr. Meade died in a truck upset five miles northeast of Burwell. Burwell Chief of Police Leonard Swanson said Meade's truck was apparently travelling close to the road shoulder.

The truck's back dual caught a bridge curb then toppled into the ditch.

Meade was crushed in the cab. He was believed to have died instantly. His body was discovered by another trucker who notified police.

Mr. Meade was well known in the Burwell area. He was born in Garfield county, Oct. 31, 1906. He was a graduate from the Nebraska University college of agriculture.

He married Juanita Sinkler in 1941 at Central City. The couple have two children, Jerry and Marletta.

Prominent Elba Man Buried at Cotesfield

Funeral services were held Tuesday at Cotesfield for Joseph Pearson, 89 year old prominent Elba man, who died at his home near there following a short illness.

Mr. Pearson was instrumental in organizing the Farmer's Mutual Telephone Co. of Cotesfield and a member of the District 48 school board many years.

He was also a member of the board of directors for both grain elevators and a board member of the Federal Land Bank.

His wife, four sons, two daughters and eight grandchildren survive.

Dollar Sign Yardstick

"To maintain the obligation of providing adequate, modern, free public instruction."

To some the above reads like a clever phrase. To those, more closely attuned to the responsibilities of an American citizen, it is the basic principle underlying the rules that govern civic responsibility.

Listening to discussions about the planned expansion program for the Ord high school leads to this surmise:

Too many of us, far too many, determine our responsibilities by measuring them with the dollar sign. We ask "How much?" instead of "How can we?"

Why, one wonders? To save more? To have more to spend on ourselves? To have more for pleasure?

It may be any, or all, of these that prompt the dollar sign approach. Only individuals can answer.

And only individuals can know, or reply, to a much greater question that will be asked by One who needs not.

His question won't be "How much did you save?" but rather "What did you do with what I gave?"

Lord Bless The Impractical

This is a pure puff to those leaders in the Ord business scene, who go outside the generally accepted pale of what is considered "practical" merchandising, to bring patrons merchandise and services comparable to what is offered in The Big City.

Ofentimes the small town editor, from his quasi-official seat on the sidelines of the passing parade, takes readers to task for spending money away from home.

Adding righteousness to the editor's flaying pen is his peculiar, and sometimes extremely confidential, knowledge of hometown business health. If a local firm is in the throes of financial difficulty then the editor is among the first to know.

Therefore he grows considerably annoyed when he sees what could be a needed transfusion of cash to a local store, spent in the Big City where its importance shrinks to just another dollar.

Consistent Big City shoppers, who ignore local outlets, dislike having disloyalty pinpointed for criticism.

When it occurs they defend themselves brazenly we'd presume, by saying: "It is my dollar, I'll spend it where I please!"

Or they attempt to shift the blame by saying: "I would like to shop at home BUT local stores won't stock the type of merchandise I want."

Against the latter there's no convincing argument. Local stores, oftentimes, are woefully short in offering new, up to the minute, merchandise. Particularly the type of merchandise the housewife is apt to stumble upon as she scans state daily newspapers.

The writer has often challenged local retailers with this fact. The retailer counters the criticism with the age old "practical" business argument: "It isn't good business to tie up money in new, untried, merchandise. We must keep our investment in "standard" items for which there is an established demand."

So Mr. Retailer continues to be a "practical" business man. And Miss Big City Shopper continues to do just that.

This stalemated position cannot be resolved, the editor finds, until one side gives way. "And," says Mr. Editor to himself, "I can't logically attack either since both positions mount seemingly valid arguments."

But every once in a while, (bless the Lord! May his tribe increase!) along comes a business man who refuses to be bounded within the "practical" limitations. Consequently your eye may be taken, and your shopping urge intensified, any day now with merchandise that, only yesterday, blossomed in the Big City.

On these occasions this writer utters a prayer that goes something like this: "Dear Lord, let this merchant enjoy a sizable response to his daring. Let his cash register ring and his sales clerks hustle. Yea, let his cash register runneth over, and may he be blessed and his tribe increase upon the earth to the hundred thousands."

* * Something Just A Little Bit Different * *

Hereby I begin a one-man campaign against so much air conditioning. I'm that one man and you're going to hear more from me.

This stuff about getting the temperature of public places down to 60 or 65 is highly uncomfortable for a number of those present. If you don't believe me watch how many women huddle into their coats, into sweaters and fur pieces.

It's cold. It's drafty. It's uncomfortable. It's expensive. It's ridiculous.

Men don't mind this air conditioning as much as their women do. Why should men mind, they are done up in lined coats of wool, long sleeved shirts, maybe a vest or sweater too.

But the more dressed up the women are the less they're wearing! Silk gowns, low cut at the neck, with skimpy sleeves, that's the way you tell it's a party dress. And nothing in any of the fashion books says that a red nose and clammy bluish skin adds to the grande effect of your partified dame, Men!

Some time I'm going to get the jump on all this early Christmas business. For several years I've considered sending out my greetings on July Fourth.

Once this was the land of the pheasant, but it seems we have pretty well hunted him out of the country.

For every dozen that used to jump up along the roadside, now there may not be even one bird to see. The pretty things.

It seems that in this land of plenty of everything . . . we are pigs. We ruin our hunting and fishing by taking too many birds and too many fish.

Fall is the loveliest time of year Nebraska can show you. But year after year, how hard it is to see the flowers frozen and blackened. Don't you long to take them all in the house, safe and potted?

And just what size house would it take to house them?

Everyone will want to congratulate Les Nash on his splendid new job at Osceola, where a modern hospital is being finished and will open soon with every newest convenience: but, in the same breath everyone will want to say, poor Ord, for what are we going to do for a hospital director?

It will be some time before we'll find a real replacement for this Nash fella.

On The Lee Side

Time, and Mr. Mean Sun Who Adds to the Muddle

Here's a bit of intelligence worth remembering by husbands since it will provide an iron clad excuse against those occasions in a man's life when he fails to meet the little woman exactly as scheduled.

Time is relative, difficult to define with exactitude, and subject to all the whimsical discrepancies that can be injected into mechanical devices by lurking gremlins.

We make this sweeping trio of charges against time since we've just completed a book, The Stars and Star Finder, written by an amateur astronomer of sorts, Henry Neely.

Neely says there are five times, each different from its neighbors by considerable margins in minutes or seconds.

First there is star time, or sidereal time as it's called, a fairly exact method of ticking off the day.

Stars cross the sky's expanse with monotonous regularity. Yet so far few devices keep time by the stars if you'll except the advertising pitch by Bulova watches. And, we suspect, Mr. Bulova only uses the novel sales appeal because it sells jewelry. Even so buyers soon upset Mr. Bulova's best laid plans. Once purchased watches are set to the town clock and the wearers are soon in a horological muddle just like everybody else.

But as Caesar said to Cleopatra, "We are not here to talk about watches." So we'll just jump right into our subject and mention again there are five distinct times: Sidereal, sun, mean sun, standard and daylight saving.

We've discussed the first so we'll move on to tell you that as a time source that lucky old sun just roams around heaven all day. And, in some of his wanderings, Mr. Sun gets as early or late as 15 minutes. Horologically speaking he's a stinker!

To offset Mr. Sun's vagaries the time experts have set up an imaginary counterpart that circles the earth at the equator exactly once every 24 hours. This steady, and much more dependable, body is called Mr. Mean Sun. And one of his attributes is to cross the Greenwich, (pronounced "Grennich" for the life of us we don't know why), zero meridian at exactly noon each day.

Of course, being imaginary, Mr. Mean Sun obligingly does this (who'd know if he WAS late) and therefore we can set our clocks by his time on meridian.

Now since Mr. Mean Sun moves exactly 15 degrees around the earth's surface each 60 minutes we can set standard hour zones every 15 degrees. So we say New York is five standard hour zones west of Grennich, (t'hell with the correct spelling)

This time zone idea is workable until you suddenly remember all of us can't live right on the hour meridian. It only seems that way when you get on a bus in Chicago or New York. Actually there are a lot of people who want to leave the meridian for the country, where they can have a little garden and maybe raise a few chickens.

For these hardy pioneers there's no such thing as exact standard time. They may go to dinner, or report for work, or do any daily chores by the clock. But actually they are doing it 30 minutes or so ahead of correct standard time for their area. Society says all clocks in the standard zone must agree with the time on the 15 degree meridian. And buddy, if you live east or west of that standard time meridian, you can just go to heck, and get up to go to work with the rest of us, so there!

That brings us around to the last category, that invention of the devil, daylight saving time.

Daylight saving time advances the clock one hour ahead from standard time. It also makes you miss trains which leave on standard time, radio programs and plane connections.

And THERE you are!

Two women were discussing home affairs when one asked: "How long have you been married?" "Twenty odd years," answered the second woman.

"Why do you call them odd?" again queried the first. The other woman answered calmly: "Wait 'til you see my husband!"

In Hometown America

Ward's What's Cookin' Column

Charlie Prien sr., had a way with farming. In fact, he had the rest of the neighborhood wondering what kind of magic he used to raise such fine crops.

He also had the knack of planting the crop most in demand. Thus he always got top price for grain or corn. He had a green thumb so far as field crops were concerned.

Once he told me his secret. That, concerning the good crops, was simple. And as true today as it was then. He always used high grade seed, and planted it in well prepared soil.

Checked Neighbors

The reason he had the crops that were in demand was because he would check neighbors and find out what they were planting. Then he would plant what they wouldn't.

Then in the fall the crops he had to sell were not so plentiful and he would get a fancy price. But Charlie and his ideas would not get far these days.

Today we have sustained farm prices and controlled crops. You plant what the program calls for. Nine of ten plant hybrid seed. To a certain extent the element of chance is taken out of farming.

There is one element in the game that the government has not as yet learned how to control, and that is the rain and snow. But the time may come when even that will be controlled.

Rain Control

Judging from recent reports, from the eastern states, rain should be controlled, if possible. The trouble with the whole plan is, a man likes to think for himself, to take a risk now and then.

Take the uncertainty from poker and nobody would play. Imagine a man slipping in a dime and getting back nine cents every time. It's the uncertainty that makes the game interesting.

Charlie Prien had his faults. To many they were grievous ones. But he was the best Mira Valley farmer in his day and the first man out there to raise 30 bushel wheat.

He had corn, nearly every year, that made 70 bushels, sometimes for four or five years in a row. If he could come back and see the corn we have today, Charlie would not know what to think.

This year has proven that government cannot guarantee a crop, regardless of price supports. What good are supports when the farmer has nothing?

Has Plans

Speaking of farming, I have my plans pretty well organized for next year. I think I will put the west eighty into grass, using about three kinds.

This year we had plenty of summer wheat grass, but the weeds came on as soon as it ripened. I never did care much for a crop of sunflowers and sandburs.

Mrs. Ward showed the way by planting her flower garden, tending it herself, and seeing there was plenty of water at the right time. She sure had the flowers.

Now she has the little cellar half full of bulbs for planting next year. If I had my choice, I'd rather have the flowers than a garden. You can't eat them, but they sure look nice.

They kept that way until near the middle of October, when the frost got everything except the petunias.

Fried Chicken

We had a fine time last week visiting the E. V. Holloways at Burwell and eating fried chicken. Before we left we gave him an order for some Stark fruit trees.

The past two weeks crappies have been biting above the dam at Lake Ericson. Catfish have been biting below. The former on small minnows, the latter on large ones.

Man from Cedar Rapids got his limit of catfish there yesterday, Oct. 18. They will average a pound, with one now and then up to two or three pounds.

Good fishing but better eating.

Extension Notes

Bb Bob Perry
Valley County Agricultural Agent

Back again from a most profitable and enjoyable trip to Seattle for the national home demonstration agents meeting. Of all the professional meetings which I have attended, I enjoyed this one most of all.

Probably one reason is because we are so royally entertained by the food and equipment companies. We were guests of the Fleishman Yeast Company, International Harvester, Corn Products, Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, Coats and Clark Simplicity Pattern Inc. at five meals during the convention. In addition to meals the Northwestern Fruit Company kept us generously supplied with all kinds of fruit to munch between meals. Nestle's served coffee at coffee break periods.

In addition we were fed much food for thought. Our speakers were from the national extension office, state offices and commercial firms. There was also time for business sessions and committee reports.

Bassett Trip Informative

I have just returned from an extension district conference held in Bassett Oct. 20-21. There we learned of a training meeting for county and vice chairman of the county council of extension clubs which is to held in Scotia in November. All club music and reading leaders will be asked to a training meeting at the same time.

Training meetings for club music and reading leaders have been held in other sections and have proven successful.

I would like to have a good representation from Valley county. Will clubs, which have not appointed music and reading leaders do so and urge them to attend this meeting.

Send names to me so notices of the meeting can be sent as soon as the date is known.

The place will be Community Center in Scotia.

Achievement Day

Those who attended the annual Achievement Program Oct. 19 felt rewarded for the time and effort. Beth Peterson of DuPont gave an interesting and informative talk on the topic "The Chemist Lends a Hand to Better Living." She presented her rather difficult subject in a simple and charming manner. And best of all she exhibited samples of dresses and suits made out of the materials she discussed. We enjoyed and appreciated her visit.

Many thanks to the North Loup Clubs for the part in making Achievement Day the great success it was.

Plentiful Foods For November

Farm - Ag Tips

The brucellosis meeting last Thursday evening had a good turnout of farmers, with 60 present. There is evidently enough interest in the program to make at least some townships in the county "certified free areas."

The program for Valley county, since we are in the brand area, is a calfhood vaccination program for three years. It can be put into effect on an area or township or county basis by petitions being signed by 75% of cattle owners representing 95% of the breeding cattle in the area.

When the necessary number of signers have been obtained, and petition filed, the Department of Agriculture and Inspection will fix a time for a hearing and advertise date of hearing for three consecutive weeks. If the hearing is satisfactory, the department may declare the area okay and begin the vaccination program.

All beef heifer calves would be vaccinated between four and twelve months and dairy heifer calves between four and eight months.

(Note: Nebraska law allows beef calves in brand area to be vaccinated up to twelve months. However, to comply with other states' regulations, it would probably be advisable to have them vaccinated between four and eight months if any possibility of interstate shipment.)

At the end of the three year vaccination program, all purebred beef herds and all dairy cattle in the area will be tested, along with 20% of the grade beef cows over three years of age.

Steers and other cattle in the feed lots are exempt from test.

Two townships, Geranium and Michigan, now have four volunteers each to circulate petitions. Four men can cover a township without any one of them having to do too much driving. Other townships that have one or two volunteers and would like to start are Davis Creek, Liberty, Noble, North Loup and Vinton.

This is a voluntary program — strictly up to you whether or not you want it. If you need further information before making a decision, the county agent will sure try and supply it. Local veterinarians are well qualified to answer questions relating to the program.

Board 'Suppressed' State Mental Report, Dr. Sandritter Charges

Nebraska's mental health program again is in the spotlight, after a flurry of developments.

The developments began with the Lincoln Journal obtaining a copy of a 1951 report by the American Psychiatric Association on Nebraska's mental hospitals.

Dr. G. L. Sandritter, resigned head of the Hastings State hospital, had charged the board of control, which governs state institutions, "suppressed" the four-year-old report.

Basically, the report said Nebraska needed desperately more psychiatrists and nurses. Also it recommended a state mental health director be named, advisory boards for each mental institution and separate treatment facilities for mentally ill prisoners and mentally ill tubercular patients.

Sandritter charged the board failed to meet the need for psychiatrists. He said the board set its requirements too high and pay scale too low to get any qualified persons and as a result patients are not being released from the mental hospitals like they should.

This, Sandritter said, forced superintendents to hire more non-skilled custodial type employes to take care of the persons who normally would have been released.

"We are running a glorified jail," Sandritter said.

But Board of Control Chairmas Thomas Dredla vigorously defended hiring policies of the board. He said the requirements were set up by Dr. Cecil Wittson, Omaha, State mental health director.

Dredla said the board had met the major points of the report, but agreed the state does not have enough psychiatrists. Neither do other states generally, Dredla said.

Wittson disagreed with one recommendation in the report. It called for a 1,800-bed new mental hospital in the Omaha vicinity. Wittson said the answer is not new large mental hospitals, but psychiatric clinics in private hospitals.

Meanwhile, Sen. George Syas, Omaha, outspoken critic of the board of control system of running state institutions, said a move to abolish the board as a system will be made in the 1957 legislature.

Syas said he thinks the effort will succeed in view of the dispute over mental hospital administration, and handling of the penitentiary and reformatory incidents.

Power Meet Delayed

Governor Anderson said he believes a meeting of state senators and power district officials for progress reports on Nov. 1 would be "premature."

Anderson made the statement in a letter to Amos Morrison, Mitchell senator. The governor said he would determine a future date for the progress report.

Meanwhile, the power problem looms large in the background. Lloyd Neil, president of the Nebraska Rural Power Assn., wrote a letter to the governor.

In the letter, Neil said Consumers Public Power District, Columbus, appears set to block all power developments in the state unless it gets its way, and it wants to set itself up as a "super power" agency.

But R. L. Schacht, general manager for Consumers, said the statements by Neil are not true. Schacht said an effective consolidation of major Nebraska power facilities is necessary "if the best interests of the majority of eastern Nebraska's electric users are to be served."

Schacht said "It should be obvious that the present arrangement cannot meet today's needs and a better one must be developed."

Polio Shots Urged

Dr. E. A. Rogers, state health director, has urged parents to make arrangements "as soon as possible" to have their children inoculated against polio.

Children should have their first and second shots soon "if they are to have maximum protection against the disease next summer," Rogers said.

The third "booster" shot of the vaccine must be given to persons within seven months after the second inoculation.

Pheasant Luck

Sportsmen will probably have to work harder to bag the game this year, but they should have better luck stalking pheasants.

That's the belief of Paul Gilbert, secretary of the state game commission. Gilbert said there appears to be an "abundant" pheasant population that is widely scattered over the state.

"This," he said, "should lessen the distance most hunters will have to travel to find game."

Gilbert said actual tracking of the birds may be more difficult than in the past because of the restriction of afternoon hunting only.

"Many birds," he said, "probably will be resting in thickly vegetated areas rather than out looking for food, which they do primarily during the morning hours."

White House Conference

Governor Anderson has named 11 civic and church leaders as Nebraska's delegation to the White House conference on education Nov. 28-Dec. 1.

Anderson said finding persons to serve as delegates was "one of the most difficult appointment jobs I've had." He said his final selection was based on what "would reap the most benefits" in terms of Nebraska school progress.

Delegates are:

Mrs. J. F. Lucas, president of the Omaha board of education.

The Rev. C. H. Lemon, Lincoln, executive secretary of the Nebraska Council of Churches.

The Rev. A. E. Egging, superintendent of Schools of the Grand Island diocese.

Richard Johnson, Lincoln, public relations director for the Nebraska State Education Association.

Morris Jacobs Omaha, President of the State Board of Education.

State Sen. Glenn Cramer, Albion, past chairman of the legislature's education committee.

Mrs. Hazel Abel, Lincoln, former U. S. Senator.

State Sen. Kathleen Foote Axtell, member of the legislature's education committee.

Mrs. A. E. Hanneman, Lincoln, former president of the Nebraska Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Dr. Earl Wiltse, Grand Island superintendent of Schools.

Dr. Frank Court, Lincoln, chairman of the Nebraska Committee for Youth.

Research Help Aids Farmers Says Hruska

Senator Roman Hruska declared this week a strong farm research and educational program is one of the soundest contributions the government can make to the American farmer.

He said research programs probably have added more to farm income over the years than any other government program, including price supports. "Nebraska farmers," he said, "know the value of high-yield hybrid corn and the development of soybeans into a billion dollar industry. These are farm research products."

The senator pointed out when farm prices slumped under the previous administration, there was no increase in Department of Agriculture research budgets. "Instead," he said, "huge surpluses piled up as futile attempts were made to shore up farm prices without attacking the causes of the price decline."

"But the Eisenhower administration has launched realistic programs to expand consumption of farm products with substantial increases in funds for farm research."

Assessment System Changes In Effect

Farmers and business men are now becoming familiar with a law passed by the last legislature which directly affects them. It is LB149. This law relates to revenue and taxation. It provides for the use of average inventories in determining the value of certain personal property for taxation.

The law requires every person, company or corporation who shall be in the business of owning, subject to his control, any personal property within the state, which shall have been purchased or produced with a view of being sold at an advanced price or profit or held for production, to make and deliver to the assessor a statemen of his personal property. He shall include in such statement the value of the personal property pertaining to his business as a merchant and shall estimate the average value thereof which he had in his possession or under his control during the year next preceding March 1.

The law means that farmers will be required to keep monthly inventories similar to what business firms have in the past. It is the average of this inventory which would determine values for taxation purposes.

The law is new and much difficulty next March can be avoided by starting a system of bookkeeping which will provide the information needed then.

Loan Values Raised for Valley Co. Farms

County average values of efficient family-type farm management units for farm ownership loans have recently been reviewed by secretary of agriculture and have been raised in accordance with recommendations submitted by local Farmers Home Administration offices.

Donald E. Krick, supervisor, said loan limitations for Valley county have been raised from $16,000 to $22,000.

The average family type farm in Valley county has been determined to be not less than 320 acres of land unless part is irrigated.

The $22,000 must buy the unit and make all necessary repairs to the buildings and any soil conservation work required.

It must also pay the necessary fees in connection with the purchase of the land, including title insurance.

There is one exception. Disabled veterans are eligible to purchase less than average size units.

Veterans are eligible to receive 100% and non-veterans 90% of the appraised valuations, providing they have no chattel property indebtedness.

Farm Machinery Lighting Needed

With the shortening of the daylight hours, farmers who have occasion to move machinery along public highways are reminded of the new vehicle laws which went into effect February 18th. Many farmers, it is pointed out, have not yet familarized themselves regarding the laws which now govern their farm machinery and they may, unwittingly, evoke a penalty and fine upon themselves if they do not conform with the law.

The law states "every farm tractor upon a highway within this state during the period from a half hour after sunset to a half hour before sunrise, and at any other time when there is not sufficient light to render clearly discernible persons or vehicles upon the highway at a distance of 500 feet ahead, shall be equipped with two or more headlamps, at the front or on opposite sides of the tractor, and with a lamp on the rear exhibiting a red light visible under normal atmospheric conditions from a distance of at least 500 feet to the rear of such tractor." In addition the law provides that farm machinery or road machinery on the highway during the hours defined above be equipped with clearance lights on the left side, both front and rear, and the front light cannot be red.

Receives Letter in Wyoming Air Crash

Mrs. Edith Fiala recently received a letter from the postoffice department containing a badly soiled envelope which was addressed to Mrs. Fiala's daughter, Mrs. Don L. Forbes, in Boise, Ida.

The letter was one of many that was on the United Air Lines plane which crashed into a mountain about 40 miles west of Laramie, Wyo.

The plane was carrying mail, which was scattered over a wide area. It was further scattered by high winds and then damaged by snow and fire.

The letter from the department which accompanied the envelope and contents says, "The enclosed piece was recovered at the crash scene. Examination discloses that you have a proprietary interest in it, and for that reason it is being forwarded to you."

Mrs. Fiala had her return address on the envelope.

The envelope was open, but the letter inside was intact.

The postoffice closed by saying the damage to the mail was regretted.

Postmaster Stoddard says most mail after crashes is found. The mail bags are weighed before taking off. The mailing department checks the weight back until the correct number is found.

The crash occurred on Oct. 6 and the letter to Mrs. Fiala was dated Oct. 11.

Nebraska Autumn

Miss Clara Belle King has not been in Nebraska at autumn for several years. She says she had actually forgotten how beautiful the trees could get. In fact she says she had sort of planned to go to Indiana this fall, but now she is glad she didn't. And by the way, have you seen the Chalk Hills these days?

——x——

Rain?

Knowing Nebraska as we do, no doubt by the time this is read, the leaves will fall and may be, (this we hope), sodden with rain.

——x——

Emilie A Queen?

Congratulations to Ord's Emilie Laursen. She was one of six fair young women from Dana College to be candidates for queen at the annual homecoming. Emilie, you may remember, is blonde. Her picture, with the five others, was shown in a recent issue of the World-Herald.

——x——

Wrong Slogan

After seeing the numerous herds of sheep about the country side, I wonder: Can Nebraska be called the Beef State.

——x——

Bittersweet Back

Bittersweet is coming back. You may remember when tiniest sprigs were carefully hoarded because of scarcity. Growth might have been stopped by dry weather, or carelessness in gathering the beautiful red and orange berries. However, those in the know say there is plenty now. That does not mean that the vines should be mulitated.

——x——

Russian Thistle Hay

In the files, not too long ago, I found an answer to some question about a certain weed, sent to the state college of agriculture. The ag prof said the enclosed sample was Russian thistle, and advised the questioner to make every effort to get rid of the pest. And that was many, many years ago. A big specimen of the weed was in front of an Ord business firm last week. Those in the know say these weeds are the first to make an appearance in drouth. Do you remember, in the Dirty Thirties, farmers stacking thistles for hay? And, by the way, they say there is a difference between Russian thistles and tumbleweeds. I supposed they were the same.

——x——

Unhappy Princess

Almost every girl has looked at the gorgeous pictures of princesses in royal robes, and secretly emitted envy. But, as someone has said, without a doubt, Princess Margaret would probably be glad to be an untitled American girl!

——x——

Club Women Old?

At the meeting of the sixth district federation of club women the other night, I thought that I had never seen so many whitehaired women. And the shades varied from snow white to blue, black and lavender rinses.

——x——

Fall Scene

Game day in Ord: Girls in red and white swishing about the streets waving pompoms. Boys sort of scared and yet looking forward to the evening. Fathers and mothers, and the remainder of the populace, all pepped up with anticipation. And the pep band! All very gay and lots of fun.

——x——

Cedar Bug War

Maybe some of you remember the late Walter Rood of the defunct North Loup Loyalist and his war against cedar bugs. His tales were many and drew much comment. Even the baseball nine named themselves The Cedar Bugs. Walking along the streets of North Loup and Ord during these past days, one is beset with the pests. In your hair, your ears, everywhere the miserable bugs are flying. One has said that they can even crawl through a pane of glass. And what earthly good are they anyway?

——x——

Bake Sales

I went to the bake sale put on by the CYO last Saturday and to the bake sale and lunch sponsored by the Danish Lutheran ladies. Many similar events will be going on the remainder of the fall and winter.

I wondered, as I ate some of the delicious cookies and doughnuts (I did not count the calories, either), what the churches would do without the gallant women who bake and cook, then often purchase their own food to take home for Sunday dinner?

——x——

I still wish there were a traffic light at the Jack and Jill corner.

——x——

You have, doubtless heard of three on a match, but did you ever see three girls on an ice cream cone?

——x——

Many club reporters are highly incensed when they find cherished stories appearing differently from what was sent in. Ted Haas, well known radio and newsman, speaking at the meeting of club women at Burwell Thursday gave some pointers.

Among other things, he said, when writing for newspapers state the climax first. To club reporters: Please get your story in early. It ceases to be news after several weeks. And please be sure to put in the time, and the place. And please tell the whole name of people involved. I have no idea, you know, who "Minnie" or "Grace" might be! I am always glad to get club news, and I am always interested. But please remember the who and what and when, where and why.

——x——

Some of the Indians who danced at the Jack and Jill last Saturday looked decidedly like breeds to me.

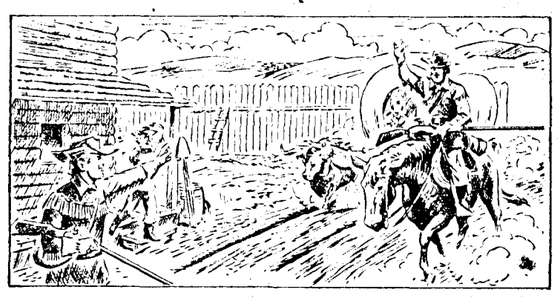
It Happened In NEBRASKA---



Sun-up on the prairie was a busy time for wagon trains. While women prepared breakfast and men rounded up the oxen, children milked the cows and folded bed covers. All was confusion before starting time for the new day's 15-mile journey!

Today there is less confusion in the public mind than ever before about Nebraska taverns. The public-spirited attitude of our tavern owners has earned a new respect for taverns, which are now well-run, respected places of business.

Williams Oil . . . another North Loup firm that's a credit to the community.

Williams Oil Has Service For Motorists Stalled Without Gas

Williams Oil Company is another business firm which is a credit to the North Loup community.

Owned and operated by Ross Williams for over a year, he feels the year has been successful.

Ross has been a farmer all his life. He was born and raised in the Union Ridge neighborhood, six miles south of North Loup.

Here he went to school and here he married Iva Whalen, also a native there.

They went to housekeeping on a farm and became known as hard working, neighborly neighbors always entering into community affairs of their district.

In the fall of 1954, Cliff Scott, then owner of the present Williams Oil Company, found it necessary to give up the station because of foot trouble. Scott put the business up at auction.

Everyone, including Scott, was surprised when Williams was high bidder. Ross took over at once and has scarcely missed a day since.

He says he likes it fine, that it is not nearly as hard work as farming, and not as much of a gamble.

There is a catch to that last statement: the Williams still live on the farm six miles south. They rent out most of the farm, but do raise some wheat and this year planted 60 acres of corn.

It was taken care of by a son, Jim, after he came home from the state university in June. This is Jim's crop. He hopes it will pay university expenses this year. He is a junior in the college of electrical engineering.

The Williams also have a daughter, Mrs. Ray Van Slyke, who lives on a farm north of Ord, and a grandson, Rodney, two years old.

At the Williams Oil company, Skelly products are available. So are Hood Tires. Wheel balancing is a Williams service as well as car washing and polishing.

Tank wagon service, with prompt delivery, is in charge of Elmer (Bud) Kearnes. Harwood Rice is another employee. All three men are in the above picture.

Just recently the three painted the station inside and out.

Stop in at the Williams Oil Company for gas, a grease job, tire service, wheel balancing or a good wash and polish job.

If you stall out of gas just call Number 8 and some one will come to your rescue.

If you need tractor fuel or fuel oil, Bud will be there as soon as he can get there.

The Williams Oil Company is located at the east end of the main business block in North Loup. You drive by it when you travel Highway 11.

Stop for the service your car needs.

Detroit Industry, Traffic Impresses Lester Nortons

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Norton returned from a vacation trip to Detroit, Mich., where they visited at the home of his brother, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Norton. They were very much impressed at the amount of industry. Ernest Norton is a foreman in one of the numerous Ford plants and Lester had the opportunity of seeing a Ford go through the assembly line. The car starts as only a chassis and in a block long assembly line, it emerges completed at the rate of one Ford every 3 minutes. The car is continuously moving as different crews do their jdobs. This plant, seen by the Nortons, covers 1200 acres and contains parking space for workers. Lester said it seemed Ford owned most of Detroit. There are blocks and blocks of office buildings, and residential areas that he has built. The traffic of Detroit is like all large cities. There was an 8-car accident on the freeway where you can't go under 55 miles per hour, and cars go only one way, four abreast. The Nortons were glad to get home although they enjoyed the trip very much.
