Environmental Problems Confront Ordites; Litter, Smoke And Smell Most Prevalent

Unretouched photo of residential area in south Ord . . . caused by "no burning" at landfill.

by Kerry Leggett

With ecology (environmental problems) being a major concern throughout the country, The Quiz spent the month of April watching — locally for anything of concern to area residents.

Foremost of Ord's problems seems to be litter. Beer cans tossed out along the road and dumped at intersections was one of the most visible signs that local citizens are showing little concern for the beauties of this area.

As evidenced by the accompanying pictures, the City of Ord seemed to be the major offender of a clean and healthful environment for its citizens.

Though the pictures could not cover the "smell," odor from the city land-fill site, the waste disposal plant on the north edge of town, and from stagnant water in the City Park, was evidenced—depending upon the direction of the wind.

Though citizens of Ord were told there would be no burning at the new city land-fill site, fires are quite frequent there and are vividly shown in two of the accompanying pictures.

One picture shows a newly-built home in south Ord where

Sewage Disposal Laws to Be Enforced in Ord Now

Proper usage of Ord sewage disposal plant facilities in the future has been assured, it was brought out at the city council meeting Monday night. Conditions the past week brought many protests to council members and expressions of concern for future economic growth of the community.

The odor of the lagoon has indicated that unnecessary disposal of products which are not degradable are being made.

Hence, any further violations of city ordinance regulations by anyone will be instantly enforced. City board of health members have power to enforce current ordinances. These members are Chief of Police James Sobon, president of the council Dr. Frank Osentowski and Dr. Otis W. Miller.

Other matters at the meeting Monday was to fix today, May 6, for a special council meeting at 10 a.m. This will open bids on the big new electric generator for the city municipal light plant. Another special meeting of the council will be Friday at 10 a.m. to

Valley Tri-Fund Drive Underway

Tri-Fund drive is progressing in Valley county with volunteers busy in many sections of the county securing funds for heart disease and cancer research and American Red Cross.

Overall chairman for county towns are Spud Kapustka, Elyria; Mrs. Pat Vogeler, North Loup; Mrs. Jean Nickle, Arcadia; and Mrs. Elma Melia, Ord. Mrs. Margaret Steinwart is overall Valley county chairman.

Fund goal is $3,820 and donations may be gien any of the three funds, or to all of them. Heart disease is primary cause of death in America, and cancer is second. Red Cross specializes basically in disaster relief.

Memorials are also solicited in memory of individuals who lost lost their lives to heart disease or cancer.

Though many volunteers are soliciting pledges, more can be used, especially in First, Second and Third wards in Ord. Individuals willing to help can contact Mrs. Steinwart.

The Tri-Fund was established about 10 years ago to avoid the need for having three separate drives in the county. The proposal was advanced by the Chamber of Commerce and Dr. F. J. Osentowski.

TWO CARS SMASHED

Two cars were totally destroyed in an accident on a county road eight miles southwest of North Loup Sunday. Bonita Larchick, Loup City and Marian L. Soper, North Loup, were the two drivers. Both were taken to Valley County Hospital in Ord, along with Collette Soper, but were released the same day.

Law Day, Loyalty Day Noted Here

Law Day and Loyalty Day were jointly observed at Ord high school Friday when attorneys Len Cronk, John Sullivan, Marv Wems and Max Mankin spoke on law and John Wozab spoke on loyalty.

All high school students were at an assembly in the Boy's gymnasium. Mr. Cronk spoke on understanding and changing laws, Mr. Sullivan on Constitutional rights and responsibilities, Mr. Weems on capital punishment, and Mr. Mankin on drugs, alcohol and driving.

Mr. Weems was chairman of Law day observance.

A survey of school students in advance brought in about 100 questions that they were interested in, and though they were very blunt, the attorneys tried to answer them.

Tour of New Elementary School Is Fascinating Experience for Writer

Editor's Note: Dedication of Ord's new elementary school was made Sunday. Here is a report of one trip made through the school earlier by a writer for the Ord high school paper, The Oracle.

By Pat Beran, Oracle Staff

Last week, as part of a journalism class "Sights and Sounds" assignment, I visited the new elementary building during schol hours. I had been in the building a few times before, but I had never been there while classes were in session. It was really quite an experience, and I would like to relate my impressions of the schol to you.

As I entered the north door, I was impressed with the homelike atmosphere that prevailed. The bright yellow walls and orange carpet provide a very cheery air, enough to make any child feel welcome.

The classroom portion of the building is divided by a media center, into two "pods": the or-

Teachers Studying New Science Plan

Five teachers from the Ord high school went to Omaha Westside school system Tuesday for a daylong study of newest methods in math and science teaching and social studies. Those going included Fred Williams, Larry Goodenough, Bob Curtright, Dale Huebner and Dan Hersh. Principal Robert Norton arranged the trip and accompanied the group.

New laboratory oriented science programs at Westside were of special interest, as was individual progress mathematics.

Schools visited included Arbor Heights Junior high, Valley View Junior high, and Westside Senior high.

"Ord's new elementary school is one of the most favorable educational facilities in America," Supt. Vaughn Phelps, superintendent of Omaha Westside public schools told the dedication audience at the school Sunday.

"Teachers and students have a facility which was built for the future, and the public has demonstrated faith in its children and their high potential in life," he added.

Though the individualized instruction — open concept plan is new, he explained, it is not untested. For Westside has had one such building for eight years, and it is twice as large as Ord's structure. However, he said the Ord media center was superior to any in his own school system.

"This building," he said, "is a challenge to administrators, teachers and students to imple-

Vo-Ag Teacher, North Loup - Scotia School

Last week the members of the North Loup - Scotia FFA Land Judging team and their advisor attended the 20th annual International Land Judging Contest at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

The team was made up of Allen DeNoyer, David Orthman, Craig Hughes and Roger Keep. Rolland Essman is the local FFA Advisor.

The team scored 771 points out of a possible 840. This put us into a tie with a team from Kansas for third place. Texas was the winning team with a score of 803 points. A team from Indiana placed second.

Our team placed first in the North Central Area which is comprised of eight states. These states are Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Nebraska.

Allen DeNoyer placed third as an individual in the FFA divison with a score of 271 points out of a possible 280.

The contest was held on the Concho Indian Reservation about forty miles northwest of Oklahoma City.

There were about thirty states represented in the FFA division with about 70 teams entered. The state coming the longest distance to compete was Oregon.

The team left from Scotia at noon on Monday the 26th of April. We drove to Perry, Oklahoma and stayed overnight. The next morning we completed the trip arriving at Oklahoma City early Tuesday morning.

Tuesday morning was spent touring the practice sites as set up by the Oklahoma Soil Conservation Service. These sites were designed to train out of state people in the method of judging in Oklahoma. They also showed us what types of soil we would encounter and how to determine these types. During the morning we managed to get through half of these sites. Samples of the soil at each site were taken to be used for further study later in the day.

Tuesday afternoon the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce sponsored a bus tour of the city. We went on this tour in order to become familiar with the city. The tour included the largest stocker and feeder sale in the world. We were

Sharon Morrow Marries Robert Otto In Methodist Ceremony at North Loup

Yellow gladiolus, green carnations and candles decked the altar of the United Methodist Church at North Loup, Apr. 24, for the wedding of Sharon Kay Morrow and Robert Wayne Otto. The marriage vows were exchanged in a private double-ring ceremony at 10 a.m., Rev. Leonard S. Clark officiating. Cynthia Bredthauer, organist, played the "Theme from Romeo and Juliet" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Gene E. Morrow of Scotia and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Otto of North Loup.

Marilyn Otto, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Mrs. Linda Patrick, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. They wore floor length dresses of soft yellow satin with chiffon over-lay. Each carried a lighted green candle accented with green carnations and streamers. Tammy Sue Morrow, sister of the bride, in a long green lace dress and carrying a miniature bouquet of yellow carnations with streamers, served as junior bridesmaid. The three attendants wore green and yellow hair streamers.

Preceding the bride and her father to the altar was ring bearer Eddie Gene Morrow, brother of the bride.

The bride appeared wearing a gown of Karate on Alonson lace. The A-line silhouette featured a Sabrina neckline and Cardinal sleeves. Lace medallions outlined the neckline and sleeves and a band of lace accented the skirt. The chapel train fell from the waist. A brilliant tiara, her FFA Sweetheart crown, held the tiers of illusion. Yellow roses and white carnations made up her bridal bouquet. Keeping with tradition, she included Something Old, New, Borrowed, Blue and a Penny with her wedding day attire.

Serving as best man was Joe Hanson. Terry Foxworthy was groomsman. Rick Foxworthy ushered the guests. The groom and his attendants wore formal attire.

Barbara Otto, sister of the groom, was at the guest book. Special guests were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Morrow of Scotia and Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Ingram of Neligh and the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Barnes of Scotia and Mrs. Anna Otto of North Loup.

The bride's parents were dinner hosts to members of the wedding party and the grandparents. The noon courtesy was held at the Elks Club in Ord. A reception for more than 200 guests followed at 2 p.m. Lighted candles made by the bride's grandmother decorated the serving tables at the Elks Club. Cynthia Bredthauer provided background piano music. The wedding cake was made and decorated by Mrs. Louis Barnes, aunt of the groom. Varied reception duties were performed by Janice Janda, Debbie Acker, Mrs. Keith Cargill, Mrs. Lyle Rasmussen, Mrs. Stanley Barr, Mrs. Marvin Gydesen, Mrs. Vic Morrow and Bill Ingram. Mr. and Mrs. William Janda of Ord and Mr. and Mrs. Pete Foxworthy of Scotia were host couples. Janet Janda and Vickie Barnes had charge of the gifts with Roxann Davis and Denise Acker as helpers.

Having returned from a short wedding trip, the couple are at home on a farm near North Loup. Both the bride and groom are graduates of the North Loup-Scotia Schools.

Rehearsal Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Otto were hosts Apr. 23 at a rehearsal lunch in Ord. Members of the wedding party and immediate family members were guests.

After a short stay in Cheyenne she was taken to Denver, Colo., by a nephew Kenneth Gavin to accompany the Leo Gavins' home. Eldon Mulligan met his mother in Wood River and brought her home Saturday evening.

Local Artist's Show At Stuhr Museum

Signatures of many visitors from our local area as well as various states and one from Japan were entered in Mrs. Beranek's guest book at her exhibit. Several paintings have already been sold from the exhibit.

Environment

the occupant is trying hard to get a new lawn started. Where the hills should be plainly visible in the background, the photographer found it more like "the foothills of Los Angeles." The hills in the background were barely visible through the smoke, swept into the southern residential area by a strong south breeze.

The second picture of the homes southwest of the old Ord Grade Schol shows the density of the smoke on the same day. A haze from the land-fill smoke covered nearly half of Ord's southern and western residential area.

Another beauty spot — for many years — has been Dane Creek, wending its way through the City Park. As anyone driving by has noticed, the creek has become a quagmire in places and the once-flowing waters are now filled with trash, litter, tree limbs, and moss-covered with slime that has accumulated.

The problems of Dane Creek are not all city problems — many of them originating upstream where wastes drain into the creek. Dams and diversion of the stream's natural course have compounded the problems of the City, of keeping the creek free-flowing relatively clean of pollutants.

Though this article can't answer the problems confronting the area ecologically, we hope the people of the area will give close study to some of the things confronting even "rural' Nebraska areas. A major effort by citizens could avoid further problems.

We hope others will point out, to The Quiz, any environmental problems they encounter in the immediate area. We will undertake to bring the problems to the people . . . in hopes of a cleaner, and healthier environment for everyone.

ment a plan which is as good as it is. Works like this, he also mentioned, shows that Ord is one of the leading communities of the state.

"The world tomorrow needs leaders in both the fields of technology and in showig nations how to live together," he also mentioned.

400 persons were present at the ceremonies in the assembly room of the school. Then, visitors went on tours of the school and regular teachers were at their stations.

These included Michael Johnson, principal; Elena Armstrong; Crystal Brockman, Inez Eberhart, Maxine Gailey, Delores Gibb, John Hyde, Irma King, Dorothy Landon, Charlene Lola, Dorothy Manning, Doris Mrsny, Ann Pocock, Connie Thompson, Nyeulah Sanders, Rachel Weinman, Alice White, and Ed Bosworth.

Members of the board of education were introduced and tribute was also paid to prior members who authorized the construction of the school. Present members are Dr. Dale Karre, Wilbert Calvin, Howard Paulsen, Leonard Kamarad, Merrill Mason, and Emanuel Vodehnal. Dr. Bill Gogan pioneered the concept of the school and introduced Supt. Phelps.

Vore-Cording Exchange Marriage Vows At Hebron; Lincoln Is Couple's Home

In an afternoon ceremony, May 1 at Grace Lutheran Church of Hebron, Delores Lee Vore, daughter of Mrs. Dolores Vore of North Loup became the bride of David Cording, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Cording of Hebron. The Rev. J. J. Minneman of Hebron solemnized the double - ring ceremony at 4 o'clock in the presence of 50 guests. Among those guests was Mrs. Agnes Vore of North Loup, grandmother of the bride.

Mrs. LaVern Krenke of Hebron, the organist, presented the nuptial music and accompanied soloist Jean Blecha of Lincoln in "The Lord's Prayer" and "Entreat Me Not To Leave Thee."

The bride was given in marriage by Keith Vore of Ord. For her wedding she selected a white crepe floor length gown with Empire waist, Juliet sleeves and small standup collar. Dainty touches of lace edged the sleeves and waistline. She carried a cascade of white roses entwined with ivy.

Patsy Cadek of North Loup as maid of honor and Barbara Freese of Grand Island were the bride's attendants. Their heliotrope linen floor length dresses patterned with short sleeves, Empire lines and round necklines were trimmed with lavender pigtail streamers.

David Zeek of Lincoln served the groom as best man. Gary Zeek also of Lincoln was groomsman. Ushers were David Korensky of Hebron and Jeff Kellogg of Lincoln. The candles were lighted by Sue Vore, sister of the bride.

A reception followed in the church basement. Servers were Chris Hanus, Joyce Thompson, Barb Dunsey, Mary Domalakes, Diane Fahr, Linda Hamilton and Jane York. Margaret Cording was at the guest book.

Both the bride and groom are students at the University of Nebraska. They will reside at 1710 G St., Apt. C, Lincoln.

Recent visitors to Wilber and Lincoln were Mr. and Mrs. John Wozab and Ann Parkos. The three were happy to visit with Mrs. Anna Wozab who sometime ago underwent surgery at which time a pacemaker was inserted.

CAROL'S CORNER by carol leggett

What is a Mother? . . . A mother is a unique mixture of patience, discipline and dedicated love. She is a general practitioner to a sick child, a "Dear Abby" to her daughter in love and a head football coach to her well-padded little son. She can whisper a delicate lullaby to a boy in her arms, or dwarf the sound of an amplifier when calling him to dinner five years later.

A mother can cry when she is happy, laugh when she is heart-broken, and work when she is ill. She can be almost everywhere at once, squeezing an enormous amount of living into her day.

She is Mama to her two-year-old, Mom to her third grader, old-fashioned to her high-school daughter. She is the one person we can always see vividly with our mind's eye whether we are 10 years or 10,000 miles away. And we can always say, with deep pride and affection: "Mom" or "Mother."

—O—

Believe it or not . . . A woman, driving an old station wagon loaded with children, almost hit a traffic policeman.

"Don't you know when to stop?" the cop said pointing his finger at a sign.

The woman's face froze. "Half of 'em belong to my neighbor," she replied frigidly.

—O—

We learn every day of new inventions, many of them to ease the work load of today's homemaker, but until someone invents a cookie bush or goodie tree we must continue to keep the cookie jar filled in the same old-fashioned way.

The next time the cookie baking mood hits, try a batch of Butterscotch Cookies. You'll need: ½ c. shortening, 1½ c. brown sugar, 2 eggs, 2½ c. flour, 1 t. baking powder, 1 t. soda, 1 c. sour cream, 1 t. vanilla and 2/3 c. chopped nuts. Mix until smooth, drop from teaspoon on greased cookie sheet and bake 10 minutes at 350 degrees F. Frost with 6 T. melted butter mixed with 1½ c. powdered sugar to stiffen.

Urbanovsky of Elyria and Paul Wadas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Wadas of Ord. Father Stanley Gorak officiated with Joey Wadas and Tim Augustyn as altar boys. The simple straight lines of the full length skirt was enhanced by a trailing chapel train. A lace petal headpiece trimmed with brilliants held the veil of silk illusion. Her bouquet was comprised of pink roses and stephanotis.

Geweke Award Honors Allen Cahill for All-Around Talents

The Geweke award, bestowed on Allen Cahill for his work in athletics and demonstration of character the past school year, was won in previous years by Loren Vancura, and by Dick Janda.

It was established in 1968 to honor Don Geweke's memory. He had graduated from Ord with hig honors in 1964 and was a college student when death came to him in an auto accident. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Geweke of Ord.

While at Ord, Don was an honors student, all conference in football and basketball, an honor band member, president of the student council in both Ninth and Twelfth grades, was a class officer, member of the "O" club, boy's Glee club, Thespian club, Senior Annual staff, and for two years, was a member of the Future Farmers of America chapter.

Allen won letters at the annual athletic banquet last Thursday night in wrestling, cross country, and also won a Senior letter. He was a miler on the track team as a freshman, and his last three years, ran the endurance event, the two mile.

In wrestling, he competed in the 120 pound class as freshman and sophomore, in the 123 pound class as a Junior, and in the 132 pound class as a Senior. He has competed in cross country running for four years.

Jeff Hruby and Bob Peterson were named honorary football team captains, Jim Andreesen and Tom Klanecky were praised as all-conference basketball lettermen; and Ed Kowalski was the most valuable wrestling letterman and team captain.

Chief address of the evening was made by Dr. Lynn Farwell, assistant athletic director of Hastings state college, who outlined the advantages of athletic training as preparation for a successful adult life.

"The awards which you athletes receive here today are a consideration for the merit you have demonstrated," he said. "Hence, it is up to you to work just as diligently for future accomplishments.

"Your continued growth in life will eventually mean as much to you as any award and you will eventually consider them challenges for the future. Excellence is the key to triumph in athletics and it is also the key for classroom success.

"I recommend you devote yourself to the achievement of worthy goals, to do your best, so that if you do not always win, you can still hold your head up in defeat and not be bitter about not really trying.

"Competition emphasises democratic principles, as you have to learn the value of team success and working on a basis of equality with others. Also, athletic team play emphasises the value of helping your mates.

"If you keep your head up and have lofty principles in life, you can easier keep heading for these goals. Don't cut corners about doing what is right. In short, think big, work hard!"

Agriculture" published by the Committee for Economic Development in 1962. The commitee was formed in the mid-50's by the National Manufacturers Association, and has no connection with any Federal agency.

The NFO speaker further quoted a conversation with Dr. Hendrik S. Houthakker of the Council of Economic Advisors that the USDA was going to eliminate the family size farm, and that all agriculture would be handled by corporate farming. I quote in part from a letter Dr. Houthakker sent to Senator Bob Dole in November 1970:

"Dear Senator Dole: I have become aware of highly misleading reports on the Administration's farm policy that are apparently being circulated by the National Farmers Organization. Several months ago I saw three representatives of the NFO, and these reports are apparently based on a completely distorted account of this conversation.

As you know, the Administration, including Secretary Hardin and myself, have long been defenders of the family farm . . . The rumor put out by NFO that the Administration wants to drive family farmers off the farm and turn the land over to corporations is the exact contrary of the truth."

ange pod, or educational area, for grades 1, 2, and 3, and the blue pod for the 4th, 5th and 6th grades.

Many of you listeners have probably heard about the absence of walls in the classroom area, and many people doubt the feasibility of such an idea. I too felt quite skeptical about it, because I thought that the noise and laughter of the students would interrupt their learning, and distract their attention.

But as I strolled through the building, all my doubts disappeared. The pods are so designed that noise is cut to a minimum. Without any walls, the area seems like one big educational "happening", and the children have a freedom they could never enjoy if they were isolated in a small classroom.

The children either sit at tables or sprawl out on the carpet as they complete an assignment or read a book.

Other children sit Indian style in a semi-circle around their teacher, their eyes and ears glued to her actions and words.

Five or six students are sitting in a corner with earphones on their heads, listening to tape recorded instructions on math problems.

As I stood watching them, they seemed engrossed in their workbooks. Then suddenly, they all got up on their knees and touched their head, elbows, feet, and earphones, whatever the tape told them to, and, just as suddenly, they were down on the carpet again, busily writing away.

One thing that really impressed me was the attitude of the students . . . in such an informal atmosphere, one might think a child would tend to loaf, forget what he was supposed to be doing. But through the careful guidance of their instructors, and through the child's own initiative, they seem to thrive on learning any new thing, and they bring in all the new ideas they encounter.

They are very relaxed, and their minds are alert to everything. Because there are so many new educational machies at their disposal, they never seem to be bored.

I interviewed over twenty of the children during my visit, and I only regret that I did not tape their answers to questions I asked concerning their new school. Their voices were so full of pride and excitement about their new building, and their enthusiasm was really something else.

Many of the students told me that the thing they liked best about their school was the media center, or, library. It divides the blue and orange pods, and is centrally located so it can easily be reached from any area.

The media center is filled with books, records, tapes, and films, and has single study areas for any student that wants to work alone.

Another favorite with the students is the little theater, where they can watch TV programs, or have their teacher read stories to them. The teachers meetings are also held there.

The gymnasium, which also doubles as a cafeteria, is located on the south side of the building. When I visited the gym, the students were playing basketball, directed by Mr. Ed Kruml. Three high school boys, who are student assistants during second period, were refereeing the games.

When gym class was over, the kids ran to either side of the gym and pulled down the tables and benches that were hidden in the wall, thus changing the gym into a dining area.

The next rrom I visited was the art and science room, where seven students were working on their projects. Two boys were studying dinosaurs, and another was viewing slides on science. Two girls across the room were using an overhead projector to enlarge a drawing of a leopard.

The kindergarteners are located in a room at the northern end of the building, and when I visited their classroom, they were watching a show on educational television. In their room, they have their own rest rooms and a drinking fountain.

I only wish I would have had more time for my visit last week to the elementary building, because there was so much to see and hear and observe.

When I left, I felt a twinge of envy for those children. They are learning in one of the most modern elemntary school buildings in the nation: in a building that is so keyed to the instruction of the children, that they live and breathe education, and don't seem to mind it a bit, because they are happy.

I think the citizens of Ord have a right to feel very proud of this new educational structure.

taken to the auction area to view the actual sale in progress. From there the tour went through the downtown area and on out the area of the state capitol. We were taken through the Oklahoma State Wildlife Building and shown a film on fishing in Oklahoma. The last stop was Lincoln Plaza where Wilson Certified Foods has their research labs. We were taken through this area and shown how foods are improved and new foods developed. At the end of the tour we were given free passes to the Oklahoma 89ers baseball game that evening.

Wednesday morning was devoted to a school designed to acquaint everyone with Oklahoma's method of land judging. The boys were taken to the research farm and put through an actual judging contest. The only difference was that score cards were not taken up. Each site was scored at the site and each boy had a chance to see where he made his mistakes. The remainder of the day was spent in going through the last half of the practice sites not covered the previous day. Wednesday evening was spent in review and going back over the soil samples taken during the training sessions.

Thursday was the actual contest. A soils contest is set up as follows. Four sites are selected for judging. Each site is evaluated as an individual site. One site is not compared with another site. The following things must be determined by each individual boy:

SURFACE TEXTURE — This refers to the size of the soil particle. There were three textures to determine and they were Sandy texture, Loamy texture and Clayey texture.

PERMEABILITY — This refers to the ease with which air and water move through the subsoil. The permeabilities were rapid, moderate, slow and very slow.

DEPTH — This refers to the depth of the soil from the surface down to a layer that would prevent root development. The various depths were deep, moderately deep, shallow and very shallow.

SLOPE — This refers to the rise or fall in feet in 100 feet of horizontal distance. The slope groups were nearly level, gently sloping, moderately sloping, strongly sloping, steep and very steep.

EROSION — This refers to the amount of topsoil that has been removed from the surface by either wind or water. The degrees of erosion were none to slight, moderate, severe and very severe.

SURFACE RUNOFF — This refers to the speed at which surface water is removed from the surface after a rainfall. The groups were rapid, moderate, slow and very slow.

From the above material the boys were able to key this out to one of the eight land capability classes. As soon as this class was determined they were then able to recommend how this piece of land should be handled in order to get the most from it and at the same time stop all erosion and soil loss from it.

Land is our most precious natural resource as all of our food, clothing and shelter can be traced to it. We think that the value of this type of training is to get the boys to appreciate the value of land, how it should be handled and treated to keep it from washing into the sea and from blowing away.

As our population increases the amount of land per person decreases. Also as we build more homes, cities, roads, etc., the actual amount of land available for farming decreases. This means that we must be able to produce more food and fiber for our increasing population from less land.

We will need to conserve every acre we have in order to meet these ever-increasing demands. This will mean that we must have trained young people who will see to it that this is done.

let the bids.

An extensive budget and fund discussion also took part. New accounting procedures are being installed in city treasurer's office and this will simply the number of funds and speed up handling and reporting of city accounting.

Dance license were granted to the Bohemian hall and Smitty's tavern. Plumber licenses were granted to Elmer Marshall, Robert Adamek, and Richard Rowbal. Electrician licenses were given Henry Janus, Eugene Augustine, Robert Knavel, and Ted T. Slobaszewski.

A fireworks ordinance was given first reading and on motion, second and final readings were given. This allows sale of sparklers, cap pistols and other small items June 25 through July 4th, to match the state regulations.

Use of regular firecrackers and other items containing large amounts of explosive material is banned. A $5 fee will be charged those who apply for sales permits. Violation of the sale or use of firecrackers can bring a misdemeanous charge and a possible fine of $25.

Reading of the new sewer district ordinance was held, and rules waived so second and third reading also could take place. This will allow $5,152 in assessments to be applied to property owners in the Woodbury addition who benefit. Ten years will be given to pay the assessment. At a public hearing at last council meeting, no objectors were present.

It was voted to repair a leak in city hall roof, which is over one of the fire department meeting rooms.

At a previous meeting, Ed Blaha asked that he be allowed to have a sidewalk at his new home on 18th and M streets built out to the curb. It was voted to keep the sidewalk aligned with the rest in the block.

Nebraska Livestock Group Has Sales Plan to Benefit Farmers

At the program development meeting of the Nebraska Livestock foundation held in Ord, on April 27, Jesse Felker, Director of the Foundation, was chief speaker. He pointed out that the Foundations program is the most dynamic ever developed for Nebraska's beef industry. He said all industry "people" are involved in developing the program which will benefit producers, feeders, and all Beef Industry segments. The meeting was in the Elks Lodge.

Mr. Felker emphatically stated that, "We are all dependent upon the consumer just like every other industry. It behooves us to promote our product to consumers, as well as develop programs to maintain consumer acquaintance with Beef. In order to enhance a favorable outlook for our industry, we, ourselves must invest; as an industry."

It was pointed out that nearly two billion pounds of Beef are produced annually in Nebraska, but that only 165 million pounds are consumed by Nebraskans. Over 91 percent of the state's annual production is consumed out of state. For this reason, half of the "investments" will be used on a nationwide basis by the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

The Foundation will be financed through a ten cent per head investment by cattlemen on every head of cattle that exchange hands. All per head investments are forwarded to the National Live Stock and Meat Board. At this point, an accounting is made and a nickel per head is returned to the Nebraska Livestock foundation for use in Nebraska. Target date for inaugurating the indus-wide ten cent per head investment was January 1, 1971.

Auction markets and packers will process investments for consignors and customers. Producers and feeders who sell privately will send their investments directly to the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Order buyers and dealers also plan to participate in the program.

Additional information on the Nebraska Livestock foundation is available from Herbert Bredthauer, Arcadia, or Jesse D. Felker, Director of Development, Nebraska Livestock Foundation, Alliance.

INDUSTRY MONTH

Governor J. James Exon has designated May as Nebraska Industry Recognition Month. This is the fourth consecutive year that this state-wide salute to industry has been celebrated. In proclaiming the month-long fete to Nebraska's industry, the Governor noted that the state's traditionally agricultural economy is greatly strengthened by a growing industrial sector. "The majority of the state's industrial growth comes from the expansion of existing industries and the establishment of new, home-grown industries," he said.

Mrs. Wilmer Nelson of Burwell and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hansen were dinner guests recently of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Tatlow. While in St. Paul they also visited Mrs. Agnes Peters and Mrs. Anton Cours at the hospital.

More Members for Hog Research Unit Asked by Carson Rogers, Area Leader

Valley County Agent

According to Carson Rogers, President of the Mid State Producers association, no one has offered any good reasons why a hog farmer should not join his local pork producers organization. "This exciting self-help organization gives the pork producer an opportunity to help the pork industry as well as himself".

Mid State association represents farmers in Custer, Greeley, Valley and Sherman counties and next meeting is tentatively scheduled for June.

Mr. Rogers lists the following reasons for getting active in the local association:

— membership dues, modest as they are, remain in your local counties to offset costs of your own pork projects.

— individual interest is more important than your membership dues. This is where the hog man can help himself with his own efforts.

— nickels invested at the market, pay for programs and projects designed to make hog farming more profitable to you.

— ideas and opinions are needed to guide, direct and control the activities of the organization at all levels.

— membership puts you "in" with other professional hog farmers. You'll benefit from their management skills. And you'll enjoy their association.

Mr. Rogers goes on to say that the National Pork Producers council has organized producers in all 25 of the important hog producing states. "There are over 50,000 members spread over 1,600 counties, which makes us the biggest membership commodity organization in all of agriculture."

He further explained that the National Pork Producers council has obtained voluntary investment of a "nickel for profit" on 18,000,000 head of market hogs in 1970. They have also started nationwide advertising and promotional campaign to increase the total demand for pork at the consumer level . . . at prices which allow the industry to profit at all levels including the farmers.

CARSON ROGERS

Here in Nebraska, Mr. Rogers points out that there are fifteen area groups with a total membership of over 3,000.

"Nickels for Profit" have funded a $5,000 grant for reproduction research at the North Platte Experiment station. Another $1,000 has been given to the Northeast station at Concord for two research facilities, and $4,500 for nutrition research at the University of Nebraska Field Laboratory at Mead. Aside from these grants to construct facilities, $5,000 has been given to the Veterinary Science Department at the University for research and study in the control and prevention of TGE.

The Nebraska Pork Producers Association has sponsored many pork cookouts as well as 4-H and FFA awards at both County and state fairs.

"Nebraska Pork nickels are working every day in the area which will get profit back into the producers pocket." "Pork is on the move," says Mr. Rogers.

The Midstate Pork Producers association was organized on December 7, 1970. The organization has as its objectives: To improve the quality and leaness of pork; To provide educational material on production problems; To promote the production of pork; To promote any program which is of the best interest to the swine producers of this area, and to promote better breding, growing, and marketing of pork.

Officers of the local association are: Carson Rogers, Ord, president; R. J. Thomas, Broken Bow, vice president; Bernard Staab, Ord, secretary-treasurer.

Serving on the board of directors are: R. J. Thomas and Lanny Dainton, Custer county; Vernon Thomas and Ron Vanosdall of Greeley county; Carl Mendyk and John Schroll of Sherman county and Carson Rogers and Jim Vodehnal of Valley county.

The picture shows Mr. Rogers with a four weeks old, three way cross pig, which has a Hampshire-York mother and a Duroc boar. He uses his own breeding stock and has two big farm operations where he rears 300 hogs in each. He is also chairman of the board, Valley county supervisors.

Out of a total population of over 200 million, 1 out of 20 Americans lives on a farm.

KERNELS & HUSKS

Valley County Agent

Have you taken a walk through your pasture rangeland or that waste area on the back 40? chances are you spotted some hardy musk thistle rosettes. You may have found a few small seedling, to.

Adaquate moisture last fall stimulated germination of these pesky weeds. Following the spring thaw and the recent rain, mother nature has provided them with all the ingredients needed to grow and grow and grow.

So you better get out the big guns and declare war on these culprits. A shovel is a good weapon to use on those scattered plants. With persistence you should hold back the advancing enemy.

For those heavy infestations you will need to call on reinforcements. Plan your attack well. Give the enemy a chance to begin growing rapidly. When the mercury reaches the 50's strike hard and fast with 2-4-D at the rate of 1½ to 2 pounds of active ingredient per acre.

Don't delay your attack too long. For best results musk thistle must be sprayed before the plant begins to shoot the flowering stock.

Cutworms In Corn

Yes, you can expect to have cutworm problem in your corn or milo if the following situations exist: 1) where idle or soil bank acres are being replanted to corn or milo, 2) where sod is being broken up for planting to row crops, 3) Low wet areas, 4) Areas that for some unknown reason have had a history of cutworm infestation in the past.

Predictions are never 100 percent correct but such areas should be given a preventive treatment for cutworm prior to or at the time of planting.

We do not recommend the routine application of chemical controls for cutworm prevention to all corn acreage, in the county.

Chemicals of choice are Diazinon, Sevin, or Dylox. There are only limited restrictions on the use of these products. They may not give as effective control and may cost a little more than the chlorinated hydrocarbon insecticides namely, Aldrin, Heplichlor and Endrin. All of these materials are restricted in use.

For the rate and application methods on the recommended materials check with your county extension agent.

When To Plant Row Crops

Optimum dates for planting do not fall the same every year. When the soil temperature at two inches reaches 50 degrees early in the morning you know you are ready for corn, at 60 degrees for soybeans, and at 70 degrees for grain sorghum.

Seds planted too early in cold soil invites trouble.

Green Thumb Tips

The first time you mow your lawn it's all right to mow to a height of two inches. The next time raise that mower to two and one half inches. About the middle of June go to three inches.

Panogen turf spray can be used to control Toadstools in the lawn. Use the product as directed on the container.

The home owner must gauge the amount of water and the frequency of watering by observing the temperature, the wind and the amount of rain received. At this be getting at least an inch of water per week. Later this summer, it will require much more.

Production Contest Open For Six Crops for Valley County Farmers

Valley County Agent

Corn, grain sorghum, soybean and wheat growers in Valley county have an opportunity to match their crop growing skills with producers throughout the state.

Valley county producers are invited to participate in the 1971 Nebraska Crop Production Contest. The contest is sponsored by the Nebraska Grain Improvement association in cooperation with Lincoln Grain exchange, The Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service, Nebraska Crop Improvement association, Nebraska Soybean association and the Nebraska Wheat division.

Growers will compete in irrigated and non-irrigated division in the corn, grain sorghum, and soybean contest. Wheat will be divided into two divisions by regions.

Trophies and bond awards will be presented to the 3 high producers in each division. Ribbons will be awarded to the 10 highest placing in each division of the contests.

Pace setting producer awards will go to contestants who achieve the following yields:

Irrigated Corn — 175 Bushels per acre or more

Non-irrigated corn — 125 bushels per acre or more

Irrigated Grain Sorghum — 150 bushels per acre or more

Soybeans — 50 bushels per acre or more

Non-irrigated grain sorghum— 100 bushels per acre

Wheat — eastern region — 60 bushels per acre or more

Wheat — Western region — 50 bushels per acre or more.

Each contest entrant must designate an area of at least five acres from a field which is at least 10 acres in size in each of the contests. If the contestant chooses, the entire field may be used for the contest.

Growers wishing to participate in the corn, grain sorghum and soybean contests should make entries by August 1 with the county agents. Wheat growers will enter in the spring of 1972. An entry fee of $2.00 will be required of each contestant.

Entry forms and rules for the contestants can be secured at County extension office. Contestant harvesting reports will be sent by the Nebraska Grain Improvement association to participants as entry forms are received.

Meeting With Peg

The third meeting of the Cloverettes 4-H Club was held Apr. 27 at Peg Worm's home. A selection of songs for this summer's song contest were discussed and Mrs. Frank Andreesen was present for the first knitting lesson. Deb Timmerman was a special guest. Refreshments were served.

The next meeting is scheduled for May 11 at Andrea Andreesen's home. Pat Augustyn, reporter.

Laurie Campbell was hostess to the Clever Cuties 4-H club Apr. 20th. The secretary took the roll of those present.

Our topic was "What would I like to learn from 4-H?" President Shannon Grove asked if any business was needed to be discussed. As there was none, we considered what we could do for the 4-H contest.

Our meeting then adjourned. Deanna Bilko, news reporter.

WHEAT COSTS

The Wheat Division financed the study which was made by the department of agricultural economics at the University.

Legislature Exerts Independence As Governor Proposals Get Low Backing

By Melvin Paul, NPA
Statehouse Correspondent

Last week probably won't be given an honored position in Gov. J. J. James Exon's memory book. The Legislature exerted its independence at the governor's expense.

First, the senators killed his bill to exempt food from the sales tax at the grocery counter. Next, they overrode his veto of a bill increasing the cigarette tax and earmarking the revenue.

Next, they killed a measure which would have created a separate environmental protection agency while Exon was telling an Omaha audience the bill was the most important ecology legislation in Nebraska's history.

And, then, the Budget Committee reported out an appropriations bill which cut the governor's recommendations for general fund — or tax dollar — expenditures and provided for increased spending by hiking cash and revolving fund totals.

That budget bill also stipulated how much each agency could spend on each of the programs it handles and how much it could use for salaries.

Exon had asked for budget legislation which would have assigned a lump sum to each agency, leaving it up to the administration to determine how the money should be allocated among programs. But the committee, under veteran chairman Richard D. Marvel of Hastings, wasn't buying that.

Let's go over Exon's week in more detail.

On the food sales tax, the governor's defeat was forecast ever since earlier in the session when he vetoed a bill which would have increased the food tax credit from $7 to $10. That per capita credit is claimed on state income tax forms.

At that time, Exon called the credit system a "gimmick" and said the "vast majority of Nebraskans" prefer to have food exempted at the grocery counter.

His bill to accomplish that, however, stuck in the Revenue Committee, where there weren't enough votes to advance it to the floor or to kill it.

Finally, the full Legislature agreed to raise the bill out of committee and consider it. But when it was put to a vote, there wasn't enough support to advance it. A kill motion was offered and it passed.

That means the credit system continues — at the same $7 per person rate. It also means the state will continue to collect the $4.8 million in revenue above the amount of refunds.

The cigarette tax bill added a nickel per package to the levy on smokes. The first $695,000 in additional revenue was ticketed for construction of an activities building at the Beatrice State Home, while the remainder was to be divided evenly between funds for the new state office building and a University of Nebraska fieldhouse.

Exon said he didn't object to the extra nickel in taxes, but he wanted the money to go into a sinking fund for unspecified construction projects and/or the general fund.

He spent two days lobbying hard in a series of private interviews with individual senators, seeking to get enough support to sustain his veto.

But he didn't get it. It took 30 votes to pass the bill over the veto and the motion received 31 votes.

On the ecology issue, Exon — as had his predecessor, Norbert Tiemann — supported the creation of a separate environmental agency. The Legislature, however, opted for a merger of the present air and water pollution control councils into a single council.

Under the plan with Exon's endorsement, an agency director would have the chief power. Under the plan the senators chose, the 16-member council — made up of representatives of specified industries and backgrounds — would have the power.

The budget bill wasn't really a defeat for Exon, but it wasn't written the way he would have prefered — especially in the area of agency flexibility.

The governor had argued that when there is a tight budget, which he said he had recommended, it was important to allow some elbow room for administrative decisions. The bill the committee sent to the floor was short on the elbow room. It also was short by about $1 million on general fund money, compared with the recommendations the governor had made in his Feb. 4 budget message.

But the committee suggested giving agencies permission to spend $2.1 million more from cash funds than Exon had in his recommendations.

Cash funds are generated from such items as tuition and charges for state services. The committee raised the tuition for the state colleges and the non-resident rates for University of Nebraska students, accounting for much of the difference between its cash fund totals and those offered by Exon.

The grand total of the committee's omnibus appropriations bill for operating state government the coming fiscal year is $511.5 million. That total includes general funds, cash funds, federal funds and revolving funds. Exon's budget message listed a grand total from all funds of $470.9 million.

The general fund comparison shows the committee recommending $183.9 million and Exon suggesting $185 million.

During this fiscal year — which ends June 30 — state government is expected to spned $182.6 million in general fund money, while the actual expenditures in fiscal 1969-70 totaled $163 million.

F.B.I. IS STRONGHOLD IN PROTECTING US

By Mrs. Esther Williams, North Loup

Since there seems to be a campaign afoot to downgrade our F.B.I. and to try to get rid of the most respected head of that department, I feel we citizens should speak out against such seeming impatriotic talk.

It is very evident that the F.B.I. is a stronghold in protecting Americans and weeding out those who would try to harm or destroy us. Its record stands any honest scrutiny.

We know what would surely happen if we did not have the protection of this department; there would be far more anarchy than is now evidenced in our country.

J. Edgar Hoover has a record of honesty and devotion to duty that surpasses almost any other current official in our government.

Representative Hale Boggs of the Congress of the United States has had his say against the F.B.I. over and over in the news lately, but his criticism is only of their doing their duty according to law.

Usually those who are against carrying out the law, and against security for American citizens, are not the ones to uphold these virtues in their actions and deeds. Just what does Mr. Boggs want and why all this campaign against Mr. Hoover, who is the symbol of security and peace in America?

Let us listen with a critical ear to those who speak out against our national security.

TAX REFORM? REDUCTION IS REAL NEED

By Newport Harbor "Ensign"

"All this talk about federal tax reform is just that—all talk, and no reform. If you have been listening closely, you know that these 'reform' proposals do not mention tax REDUCTION, but only transferring the load. There still is only one effective method of tax reform, and that is to cut down the heavy burden, and the only way to do that is to cut down on the monstrous size of government. This reform can start here at the local level, continue on at the county level, in state government, and in Washington, D.C. If our elected officials do not get this message, they can be dealt with at election time by being invited out of office—at all these levels of government."

US Law to Stop Farm Trucking!

Department of Transportation regulations on age of truck drivers have been causing widespread concern and questions among farmers, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension safety specialist said this week.

Long-standing regulations were amended and originally scheduled to become effective January 1 of this year. A delay was then granted until July 1, 1971, for regulations to take effect which apply to drivers of farm trucks. After this date, however, all drivers of farm trucks in interstate commerce must meet the following requirements.

1. Minimum age of 21.
2. Carry a certificate, executed by a physician during the preceding 24 months, evidencing fitness to drive a truck.
3. Pass a road test in truck operation.
4. Take an examination covering federal motor vehicle safety regulations.
5. If the driver is an employe of the farmer, he must supply the farmer with evidence of compliance with the four previous requirements, plus an application for employment which shall disclose traffic violations and diss position thereof, plus an annual supplementary statement relating to traffic violations.

Something Different

Could He Be Right!

Like almost everyone else I deplored the cost of the new elementary school in Ord, the tax increase looming large in my thoughts. It simply seemed like an exorbitant amount of money to spend on our young, much as I love them.

After all, look at all the brilliant adults who began their schooling in a one-room schoolhouse . . . or in a plainer square brick school with say eight classrooms and an "auditorium" or "assembly" room, plus an office for the superintendent and the principal. And little else.

But I must hand it to Superintendent Bill Gogan, who does a beautiful selling job for the fine new modular school in south Ord which is his darling.

Bill, Arcadia original, returned to Valley county from Denver, where the family left a fine home. They hated to leave Denver, but his wife Gladys grew up in Ord as Gladie Kokes, and her mother and many other relatives and friends still reside here. And, says Bill, he had a vision of creating a new school in Ord which would do so much for Valley county children.

He fought and won, and the new school had a fancy opening Sunday with speakers and guests from far and near.

Numbers of people have seen and heard Superintendent Gogan's presentation and explanation. And, I think, come away sold.

Beginning with an explanation of their goals, the head man told of the importance of having each child make his own decisions, pursue his own goals. He told of the importance of keeping the child not only interested in what he was doing, but fascinated, so fascinated that he kept himself busy.

After the short lecture, 30 or 40 minutes, visitors to the school are encouraged to wander through the classrooms, where they are little noticed. And the visitors are welcome to question any child as he works, whether he is printing at a table, whether he is matching words to find his own misspellings, whether it is a comprehension test.

Visitors may be given headphones to try on, exactly like those the children enjoy as they watch the TV lesson presented, as they sprawl or sit on the carpeted floor. The TV teacher has their complete attention as the children testify with their giggles, their occasional roars of laughter.

The old words we knew in school are gone.

There wasn't any talk of lessons, or of exams. Not even any talk of projects, or of units.

There was new fangled talk about pods . . . the first, second and third grades were the orange pod. The fourth, fifth and sixth grades were part of the blue pod. Which meant that sometimes in a pod their interests overlapped. Occasionally, one teacher's talk concerned the three grades. More often children studied in their own grade, or chose to study alone — possibly in a little side-walled wooden cubicle.

Study materials were abundant. In the "media" center . . . (never say library because this covers more than reading alone) . . . were not only books but tapes, slides, TV, every sort of audio visual help and the child was encouraged to choose and operate them, alone or with a buddy.

Mr. Gogan thought relaxation was most important. He feels that the more relaxed the child the easier it is for him to concentrate and learn painlessly.

Said he, "Look at their faces. Look at their shining eyes. They aren't bored. They're engrossed. They are relaxed and learning and loving it. None of this sitting and staring like we did when we were in classrooms. None of this boredom. These children are fascinated with learning and that's just the way we want them to be."

Could he be right?

KERRY ON

By Kerry Leggett

—world trade—

Again I've been spending more time behind the wheel of my car than I have behind my desk and I find it difficult to try to 'get in the swing' of doing a weekly column. It's become more of a weakly column—of which I'm NOT proud.

Bemoaning a desk piled high with mail, after returning from a recent business trip, I said something about it in a letter to a customer in Kansas City. The customer—wise in the ways of business—stopped me cold with his reply, asking, "How would you feel returning from a few days out of town and find NO MAIL on your desk?"

Being busy is a blessing . . . though often I complain when I should be thanking God that the business keeps coming in from all points on the face of the globe.

Todya—for example—I picked up a third customer on the island of Guam. Word seems to get around, even on that distant South Pacific atoll, that there's a printing plant in Ord, Nebraska, that tries to provide fast service at economical prices.

Last week—just two short weeks after President Nixon approved trade with Red China—an 8-page trade publication rolled off our presses containing various and sundry articles—that may appeal to American consumers—for importers interested in the new trade venture. These were shipped Air Freight to New Jersey where the international trade consultant, who orders the printing from us, then dispatched them to importers around the nation. To my knowledge, this was probably the first such printing to be disseminated in the U.S.—evolving out of the trade pact with the Red Chinese.

This week I've been on the phone much of the time, wrapping up the copy for a book that I'll be delivering to Chicago late in May. The book has us presently involved with mailings to and from the United Nations and Secretary-General U Thant. Also involved is Ole Hamann, Postmaster General of the United Nations. One of the ads in the book is coming to us directly from the British Postal Administration and another the Canadian Postal Administration.

From Ord, the programs we've printed will be mailed directly to the United Nations for application of a new 20c UN stamp depicting the Universal Postal Union Headquarters in Bern, Switzerland. They will be precancelled as First Day Covers especially for the Chicago program.

These are just a few of the happenings, here at the Quiz Graphic Arts, that keep me from knowing what's going on locally. Usually I end up having to read The Quiz to find out what's happening in my own hometown!

Parents—Know the Drug Threat

The Child You Save May Be Your Own

By CLARENCE FOX

Valley County Sheriff

TODAY'S SUBJECT: Summary of This Series

Those of you who have followed my series on drug abuse have been with me now for the past 13 weeks, and it is my sincere hope that the information I have shared with you has been helpful in learning about drugs and stimulating to the mind in making your personal determination to LEARN MORE. I can assure you that the more you know about drugs, the more benefit you will be to your children on the subject and the more you can do for your community to fight the drug curse.

Parents have long told their children not to use drugs, except under a doctor's prescription, but now you can authoritatively say WHY drugs should not be abused and the many harms that can come to those who do abuse drugs.

Most of our discussions have been on the prevention through knowledge approach to the drug problem, but here I want to state things to watch that might indicate a person is already using some type of drugs. Ten frequent signs of drug abuse are:

1. Moral ill health. Normal value changes and unusual ideas taking their place.
2. Mental ill health. Emotional extremes with a marked loss of interest in usual goals. Unusually bad grades in school, signs of a change in personality.
3. Physical ill health. Loss of weight, changes in skin color, loss of body tone, unnatural careless stance and posture.
4. Development of a fear complex. Usually convinced that someone is "after them." Suspicious about everyone around them, even family members.
5. Marked appetite extremes. No appetite at all and when this changes and they do eat, the amounts of food intake are huge, particularly in the line of sweets and liquids.
6. Extremes in disposition. Either highly stimulated and overly talkative or very sleepy.
7. Extremes in emotions. Frequent spells of crying or hysterical laughter. Very frequently showing feelings against any authority.
8. Needle marks, skin boils, sores. Scars from use of needles many times become very infected.
9. Body and breath odor very unpleasant.
10. Eyes usually very bloodshot and watery. Pupils very small, eyes often wide.

If you suspect a child is taking some form of drugs, it is probably best, for the first step, to consult your family doctor. He is very well qualified to confirm your judgment.

Here are some of the street terms you want to listen for now that you know they are definitely connected with drug use. These listed below are common to the drug scene:

MAINLINE: Using drugs by means of intravenous injection
OD: Overdose usually deadly
OUTFIT: Equipment for giving injections
PEACE PILL: A tranquilizer most usually given by Veterinarians, sometimes called a "Hog"
PUSHER: A seller of drugs
SPACED: Inability to concentrate, mentally adrift
STONED: High on drugs
TRIP: High on hallucinogens
TURNED ON: To be given drugs, to be happy or high
TURNED OFF: To quit the use of drugs entirely
BAG: A user's favorite drug
BIG C: Cocaine
BLASTED: Under the influence of some drug
BUSTED: Arrested
BURNED: Cheated on a drug purchase
CAP: A capsule containing a drug
COLD TURKEY: An abrupt stop in use of drugs in an effort to quit
FIX: An injection of drugs
GIVE WINGS Give first injection of Heroin to a friend
HIGH: Under the influence of some drug
HIT: One puff on a Marijuana cigarette
HOOKED: Dependent on drugs
TURN ON: To start a friend on drugs
JUNKIE: A Heroin addict sometimes called "Hype"

All things considered, it is not the responsibility of any one group of people, government agencies, doctors, law enforcement people, ministers, parents — to minimize the drug threat this country faces today — it is the responsibility of all of us!

National Gripe Week Proposed for First Week in May

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

It was perposed and passed unanimous aSturday night that whereas, forthwith and hereafter the first week in May is National Gripe Week. Junior Meese, that come up with the motion, was quick to tack on a amendment that Gripe Week in no way was to take away a feller's right to gripe whenever he pleases.

Junior give his reasons fer setting aside this week fer gripes. First off, with folks recovering from Federal Income Tax Day we has got the strength to git off some good gripes, and plenty of reason to fresh in our mind. Farthermore, he allowed, there allus is kind of a lull between spring and summer, and we got the time to do some serious griping without working up a sweat.

Vlad Babka was of a mind that Gripe Week will catch on all over the country. He had saw by the papers where twict as many people want to git out of this country than did two year ago. Vlad said this poll said 10 per cent want to live somewhere else, and Vlad figgered at least 90 per cent is mad, but is trying to stick it out.

The way Vlad worked it out, 10 per cent is about all that is supporting the Guvernment, and the rest is living off it. We got them that makes anywhere from $200,000 on up a year that don't pay no tax at all, and we got them that won't work and git paid fer it. Trouble is, went on Vlad, that 90 per cent is as unhappy as the 10 per cent, either cause their living standard is higher than there tax-free $200,000, or cause their welfare paymunts ain't big enuff.

When folks can sue and make New York City put em up in a hotel that's costing taxpayers $450 a week, and out in the country 137,000 farmers and ranchers can draw $3.7 billion fer not farming, we are awful turned around, was Vlad's words. On top of all this, Vlad said, he had saw where they is talk about bringing back the old CCC camps and the WPA.

Carrying on with the gripping, Chum Cummins joined in to say he was most concerned about that 10 per cent that works, pays taxes and wants to go to Australia. Onct they git over there, the 90 per cent left here will apply fer foreign aid from Australia.

Actual, said Chum, the 10 per cent has got to much invested to leave. What they don't pay in taxes is witheld from their wages fer all them fringe benefits and retirement plans. The only way a working man can expect to spend any of the money he's made is to live so long he draws it back in social security and paid up holidays.

Final, Mister Editor, Elmer Lukesh griped about the three day week being talked about now. He said that's jumping out of the pan in the fire, cause jest as shore as a feller's work week is cut back, his wife will find more things fer him to do around the house.

Yours truly,
GERANIUM JOE

Freedom For American Prisoners in Chinese Jails Concerns United States

BY PAUL SCOTT
Former Greeley Resident

The fate of those "forgotten Americans" languishing in Communist China's dungeons could become the first test of the soundness of President Nixon's policy of trying to improve relations with Peking.

These Americans are U.S. fighting men that Peking is illegally holding from the Korean and Vietnam wars — some of whom have undergone everything from brainwashing to torture for more than 20 years.

The highly explosive prisoner issue is being quietly raised by a group of influential members of Congress headed by Representative Cornelius E. Gallagher (D. N.J.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs' Far East Subcommittee, and Representative H. R. Gross (R. Ia.), a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The lawmakers have demanded to know what President Nixon is doing to free these men before going through with trade concessions to Red China or entertaining Peking's propaganda groups in the White House.

The unpublished demand was made during a private hearing that Gallagher's sub-committee held last week to hear testimony from State Department officials on President Nixon's new open door policy toward Communist China.

In quizzing Assistant Secretary of State Marshall Green, Representative Gallagher called on the Nixon Administration to test Communist China's intentions by demanding that American prisoners in China be released immediately.

The lawmaker reminded Green that Peking is known to be holding at least five Americans, and possibly several hundred additional U.S. fighting men from the Korean and Vietnam wars. One of those known to be a prisoner is Capt. Philip E. Smith, son of Mrs. Oscar Smith of Roodhouse, Ill.

Pentagon records list Smith as the first U.S. combatant of the Vietnam war known to have fallen into Chinese Communist hands. His F-105 Starfighter was downed on Sept. 20, 1965 while over the Tonkin Gulf. While American rescue planes stood helplessly by, Smith was picked up by a Chinese patrol boat and taken to the mainland.

Feeble diplomatic efforts by the Nixon and Johnson Administrations to obtain Smith's release so far have produced nothing. All that the State Department has been able to learn from Peking is that Smith is alive and being held in a prison in the Chinese Capital.

Although it isn't saying so in public, the State Department has hard evidence that the Chinese Communists are holding at least four more American fighting men. The Central Intelligence Agency says privately there are many more. Over the years, the CIA has gathered bits and pieces of information about a number of other "missing" U.S. military personel believed to be prisoners inside China. Most of these are prisoners from the Korean war.

Representatives Gallagher and Gross made it clear to Green that there is growing concern in Congress that President Nixon wasn't giving the prisoner issue a high enough priority in his new policy toward Peking.

The legislators warned that the President was giving away his bargaining power for the prisoners by making one-way concessions to Peking on trade without first obtaining an agreement to discuss their plight.

One subcommittee member said he couldn't understand how the President could welcome personally a delegation from Communist China without first getting assurances that Peking was ready to discuss the release of American prisoners.

"It looks like the President is conveniently forgetting the fact that the Chinese Reds are holding American prisoners of war," stated the lawmaker. "Some one must remind him that his first responsibility is to free these men; not provide the White House as a propaganda forum for Peking."

Green reportedly agreed to pass the lawmakers' warnings along to Secretary of State William Rogers and to the White House. He assured them that his views were close to theirs but could not speak for either Rogers or the President.

If past negotiations with the Chinese Communists are any indication, it will take a lot more than exchanges of ping-pong delegations to free American prisoners.

The State Department announced in August, 1955, that the U.S. had agreed to oepn the so-called "Prague-Warsaw talks" with the Chinese Reds to discuss the fate of Americans being held in China.

Those off-and-on talks have dragged on for nearly 16 years. During that time, Peking released an American, a Catholic Bishop, imprisoned after the Communists took over in China. None of the American military men captured during the Korean or Vietnam wars have been freed.

In the U.S. Senate, several members led by Senator Strom Thurmond (R. S.C.), a member of the Senate Armed Service Committee, are planning to raise the prisoner issue. They are now seeking information from the Defense Department as to the number of American men still held by the Chinese.

The Thurmond group also wants to know the exact number of Americans (believed to be more than 20) that the North Vietnamese captured during the recent military operation in Laos. Nixon Administration officials will be asked to make known their plans for obtaining the release of these men and the more than 450 Americans known to be prisoners in North Vietnam.

By linking the Vietnam and Chinese prisoners' issue, the Thurmond group hopes to bring new pressure on President Nixon to spell out to the American people how he plans to obtain the freedom of these forgotten heroes. Many members of Congress believe the time is running out for these prisoners and that the U.S. must act soon if they are ever to see freedom again.

This Week's Meditation

READ EPHESIANS 4:22-32

Be kind to one another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, as God in Christ forgave you. (Ephesians 4:32, RSV)

While I waited at the bus stop, I met a man who seemed to have the problems of the world on his shoulders. God presented this opportunity for me to witness. I witnessed, but how I did it bothered me.

As the man talked to me about his problems, I quickly detected that he had been drinking. Rather than show compassion, I was infuriated by the smell of liquor on his breath. Rather than listen or try to help with a kind word, I turned my back.

Who was I to judge him? Was I supposed to set myself apart from him? Could I not have taken a few minutes to listen to him? I could have witnessed to my faith in Christ and spoken to him of the way of salvation He offers to everyone.

What must Christ have thought of me in that moment of failing?

When I turned my back to the man, he sensed that I did not want to be bothered. He apologized. It left me disturbed — I am still disturbed.

PRAYER: Dear Father, may we always be ready to listen to others in their need. May we never miss the opportunity to point some troubled person to Thee — our Redeemer, our Savior. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Burdens of a lifetime may be eased by only a moment of Christlike concern.

North Loup Future Farmers Place Fourth in Dairy Magazine Contest

BY ROLLAND ESSMAN
Vo-Ag Teacher, North Loup-Scotia School

Word has been received that members of the North Loup - Scotia Future Farmers of America chapter has placed fourth in the 41st annual Hoard's Dairyman dairy cow judging contest.

This contest is sponsored each year by the "Hoard's Dairyman" magazine, national Farm magazine printed in Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin.

The contest consists of five classes of four animals of the five major dairy breeds. These breeds are Brown Swiss, Holstein, Guernsey, Ayrshire and Jersey.

Beginning with the January 10 issue and for four issues after one class of animals is included in the magazine, each boy in the vocational agriculture department must place each class and all placings must be sent in for scoring. This means that our department sent in 48 individual placings of five classes of animals.

The classes are pictured in the magazine and each animal is shown with a side view and rear view and a top view. From these pictures the animals can be judged in the classroom as part of class work. The official judges also judge the classes from the same pictures.

This year marked the largest number of entries in the contest. There were 111,687 individual entries from all of the 50 states and from Canada, Chile, Germany, Lebanon, Mexico, New Zealand, Okinawa, Venezuela and Vietnam.

In the FFA division, there were 1,743 Chapter entries from 49 states and Canada.

The FFA winning Chapter was from Damascus High School, Damascus, Maryland.

This placing was a team effort from all 48 members of the North Loup-Scotia FFA chapter.

Ord Buys New Generating Unit With Ten Times Capacity of Old Unit

A new gas and oil-diesel engine, shown above, will go into action in Ord to allow ten times as much generation of electric light and power as the same sized unit which will be coming out of the municipal light plant.

The new powerhouse has such capacity that it can, by itself, carry the whole load for the city. It will use gas for power, but can be switched over to diesel oil, when gas supply is low.

The city council, in special meetings May 6 and last Saturday, voted to buy the Worthington unit and a 13,800 volt generator, similar to the smaller device shown at right in picture. The engine will yield 5,000 kilowatts of power.

Cost of the unit will run $579,828 plus $22,000 extra for the 13,800 voltage generation adaptation. Funds are at hand to pay for it.

Delivery will take seven months and installation will be made after the unit gets here. Ord municipal employes will install it, and save about $75,000 installation costs.

Bids were received by the council from two firms Thursday, the other being Enterprise manufacturing company. Bids were let Saturday after ten hours of deliberation, with the council chiefly concerned in analyzing the many different capacities of the generators.

George Allen, city engineer, was acting clerk for both meetings and consultant, Fred William of Lutz, Dailey & Brain was busy aiding in the analysis. He and factory engineers will also oversee installation.

Electric Machinery of Minneapolis manufactured the generator unit.

Doctors of Central Nebraska Hear Many Virtues of Country Practice

A central Nebraska conference to explain advantages of rural priactice of medicine was held in Ord Saturday in Elks lodge with 50 persons present.

Chief speakers included Larry Cousins, Creighton university school of medicine, Marty Sears, also of Creighton; Dale Michels, University of Nebraska, Gary Carlton, University of Nebraska.

Also, Dr. Michael J. Haller, Creighton; Dr. Francis L. Land, University of Nebraska, and Dr. Clarence R. Brott, immediate past president, Nebrasko state medical association addressed the group. Moderator was Gary L. Fletcher, executive director of Central Nebraska Comprehensive Health Planning council.

Dr. Brott, who is a general practitioner now at Beatrice, in a quiet manner, gave a tremendous number of reasons why rural practice has many advantages. His listeners included many students in University of Nebraska medical college and Creighton college who will be going into practice in about thre evears.

"The clean air and clean facilities which communities in Nebraska have, is a much finer place to live than the smog and drug addiction of larger cities. One physician friend of mine recently left California when two six-year-old sons of the family next door became drug addicts.

"Ecology is becoming a big thing, even in states as remote as Colorado. Serious proposals have been made there to limit industrialization of the state. Friends of mine, who have been making high salaries in big cities, have left them for rural areas, because of the heavy traffic, smog and noise conditions.

"Many doctors think that technical equipment is lacking in smaller communities. However, I have found experience is just as useful in making a correct diagnosis as technology. Also, the distance to a specialized center may not be too great for many Nebraska communities, especially with air ambulance service."

"Medical students say they cannot earn as much in small towns, but with the advent of the high income tax, salaries lose much of their importance. And benefits for their families may be much more in smaller areas. For really, everyone has a relatively small circle of activities and friends, and one has these just as easily in small towns."

Out-migration from Nebraska is declining, he also pointed out, and this shows advantages of rural life is being more widely appreciated.

Dr. Brott served in the U.S. Army on a surgical team for five years, and also was a teacher at University of Nebraska medical school. He also has made thorough study of medical practise in Russia and satellite countries.

CAROL'S CORNER by carol leggett

Helen Beran is pleased as can be with her new little book titled "It's Apparent You're A Parent" — and a special surprise was in discovering it has been personally autographed by the author (and popular cartoonist) Bil Keane. The book was a love gift from daughter Grace O'Conner of Tempe, Ariz.

In thumbing through the pages one can't help laughing at these true-to-life funnies which proves one thing sure — it's apparent that I'm a parent, too!

In his book Mr. Kean tells It's Apparent You're A Parent . . . when your book of the month arrives and it's One Fish, Two Fish, Red Fish, Blue Fish; when you wake up with a teddy bear; when the little boy down the street greets you with "Hi, Mrs. Jeffy's mother"; when you turn on the stereo as guests arrive and blaring out is "Puff the Magic Dragon"; when your brand new TV set is knobless; when you excuse yourself from the bridge table by saying "I have to go potty"; when you open your briefcase for the big report and Tinker Toys spill out, or when you say to the waiter "We'll order Din-Din now!"

Enough said?

—O—

Overheard, she to him in a restaurant: "Well, if I had a more interesting life perhaps I might be more fun to go out with."

—O—

With the planning of graduation parties and receptions in our midst, this recipe idea may come in handy. Credit for this goes to former Ordite Mrs. Frank (Betty) Decker. It's Golden Sparkle Punch. You'll need: 6 - 7 oz. bottles of 7-Up, 1 - 46-oz. can unsweetened pineapple juice, 1/3 c. granulated sugar, 1 c. water, 1/4 c. lemon juice and cracked ice.

Chill 7-Up and pineapple juice. Mix sugar with water and lemon juice. Simmer over low heat 5 minutes. Cool. Place cracked ice in punch bowl and add pineapple and lemon juice mixture. Slowly pour in 7-Up and serve immediately. Garnish with lemon slices centered with halved maraschino cherries. Makes about 25 4-oz. punch cup servings.

Value of Hospitals Stressed In National Week Observance

Valley County Hospital is having open house May 14 and 15th as part of national hospital week, according to Duane Wolfe, administrator.

Hours will be from 2 to 4 p.m.

In commemoration of the national week, Mr. Wolfe said,

"Hospitals are places where most people are being restored to healthy lives or told what to do to stay healthy. Hospitals today are deeply involved in delivering care to the underprivileged, and are increasingly visible in community health programs.

"Recent raises in hospital workers provide proper care to 100 patients, compared with 156 workers 25 years ago. Boosts in the prices of hospital supplies are justified, but it takes even more equipment and supplies to provide the advanced clinical and diagnostic services now expected.

"Hospitals are front and foremost in the quest to control operating costs, reduce the length of stay and provide comprehensive health care prepayment. Since it is so important that a good hospital be available to any of us at a moment's notice, it behooves all of us to keep informed of hospital needs and problems."

Ord Library Joins Sandhill Region Group For Expanded Public Service

Six regional library networks are now in operation in Nebraska sharing materials and Ord will soon be a member of the Sandhills library association, according to Mrs. Ida Caselton, Ord township librarian.

Communities in the Ord region include Burwell, Arcadia, North Platte, Bedford, Arnold, Taylor, Valentine and others. Any library in the network has access to any or all materials needed from another library in the network as well as of that in the State Library Commission in Lincoln.

A library that can not afford more than basic materials and references can fill its' Patrons' requests by picking up the telephone and calling its regional TWX library. If the material is not in that library they will find out where it can be gotten and order it for loan to the requesting library. Under this system of cooperating libraries, the ones operating on small budgets can still be as proficient as the larger ones.

At a regional library meeting in North Platte, recently, Mrs. Caselton and Mrs. Mildred Gregory from Ord were present.

Basic goals outlined for Nebraska Libraries for the coming year were: more and better bookmobiles, large print and talking books to bring reading to the handicapped, better cooperation between libraries to bring about excellence in library services whether it be a small library or a large one.

Mrs. Kay Lundgren, President of the Nebraska Library association, in her address recommended that at least two members of a library board be members of the Nebraska Library Association and at least one of them and the librarian attend the Associations' convention at the Hilton Hotel in Omaha October 21 and 22 of this year.

She also encourages friends of the library to become members of the association. Membership may be obtained for a two dollar fee for one year. This membership entitles one to the Nebraska Library Association magazine, printed and mailed three times during the year.

Mrs. Caselton said, in this regard: "I could really use some friends of the library at Ord. We can really extend our services but it will take workers and plenty of effort. It is now possible to get large print books and talking books for our community. Anyone knowing of a need for either service, please get in tough with me."

Lincoln Couple Speak To Presby Women

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Staple of Lincoln were guest speakers at the Wednesday evening meeting of the Women's Association of the Ord United Presbyterian Church. Mr. Staple is field director in this area for CROP, the Community Hunger Appeal of Church World Service (CWS). CWS is an organization supported by over 30 church denominations for the purpose of providing "services" to people in need throughout the world. Mr. and Mrs. Staple discussed both the hunger and the clothing appeals of Church World Service.

Slides of their recent trip to Haiti, Brazil, and Peru were shown to help visualize and to emphasize how, why and where CWS works. Among the important facts related by the Staples it was learned that CWS is not a "dole" but, instead, an encouragement for self-help and skill training which eventually results in self-support. They also reinforced a fact that the local Presbyterian women already know because they have supported it; that is, that CWS gives immediate emergency relief in the event of national disasters.

"CWS," said Mr. Staple, "works not in competition with other relief groups but instead supplements them. As examples, slides were shown of CWS in several locations working with the Salvation Army and the Lutheran World Relief. In doing so their combined relief accomplishes a more effective program.

Through their Women's Association, the local Presbyterian women have been supporting CWS by donations of sewing and clothing supplies. They have made numerous baby layettes for use overseas and donated many blankets which are used by CWS in giving immediate relief to victims of catastrophic national disasters. For the last two years members have donated sewing notions, health articles and school items which are assembled into kits and sent to CWS for distribution. The local association has also made hospital gowns from old white shirts and bandages from old bed sheets as well as packaging several boxes of good used clothing. Presently they are preparing to send a shipment of these items to CWS.

The work of the local church women for CWS throughout the year is in addition to the mission work for their own church.

Baseball Opening Sunday

Baseball will start Sunday in Ord when St. Paul invades the territory of the Ord Mustangs. The game will be an afternoon clash, with first ball being thrown at 2:15 p.m.

Ord's team is managed by Ed Psota of North Loup, who is still working on his starting lineup. However, the Mustangs did well in a practise game with Scotia Sunday, with the zero score being tied at end of fourth inning, when rain forced cancellation. With valuable new stars coming up from American Legion play and veteran players back to add stability, Ord is expected to field a powerful squad this year.

In 1970, Ord placed fourth in Sherman - Howard league baseball. Other teams include Greeley, Boelus, Wolbach, Scotia, Wood River and Gibbon.

$218,000 Spent for Cigarettes In County; U.S. Average Gains

What have Valley County residents been doing lately about their cigarette smoking? To what extent have the campaigns conducted by the Public Health Service and others led them to cut down on their consumption or cut it out completely?

The findings are that many of them have quit permanently and many others are trying to do so. As for the large remainder, however, they are smoking as much as ever.

That is the trend in most areas. The Department of Agriculture reports that 1970 was the first year in four in which there was a rise in per capita consumption of cigarettes by adult smokers in the United States. The average was up nearly two packs annually.

According to a survey made by the National Center for Health Statistics, the ones who are cutting down on their cigarettes are the light smokers — those who use no more than 10 per day—and elderly people.

There was a marked increase, however, on the part of those who smoke one or more packs a day.

In Valley County in the past year, cigarette sales came to approximately 627,000 packs, according to a breakdown of regional figures released by the Tobacco Tax council.

According to Dr. Daniel Horn of the National Clearing House on Smoking and Health, giving up cigarettes seems to be more difficult for women than for men. And, even when they do quit, they find it harder to stay quit.

How much does the average Valley County smoker spend per year for cigarettes? Approximately $60, it is estimated. For the local community as a whole, the total is close to $218,000.

Annual Picnic of Valleyside School Sunday: 5 to Graduate

By Bertha Clement

Valleyside teachers and pupils spent Friday afternoon in Ord making a tour of Quiz Graphic Arts. School will close at Valleyside Friday and the annual picnic will be held Sunday May 16. Eighth grade graduates are Debbie Bredthauer, Eileen Foth, Connie King, Nancy Peterson and Arthur Duvall.

Babbles by Bertha

My sister and brother-in-law, Lydia and Oscar Bredthauer of Grand Island enjoyed their trip to Washington, D.C., where they attended the "Salute to Agriculture" Friday. Lydia had been visiting their son and daughter-in-law, John and Juli Bredthauer and their new baby Jessica Leigh in Houston. From there she flew to Baltimore, then went to the Capitol City and arrived about the same time as Oscar. When she registered at the hotel she turned and saw him. Besides the daytime activities they were part of the group at the White House reception which included a tour of the White House and the Presidential dinner in the evening. They enjoyed entertainer Glen Campbell, who said when he was a boy on the farm he never thought he'd be entertaining at the White House. Lydia said it was a thrilling experience.

Ervin and Naomi Sohrweid took Bertha Bremer to Church Sunday morning. This was her first outing since she began staying at LeBow's Home for Senior Citizens.

Roger Hornickel was thrilled when he and his father went fishing at Pelican Lake near Valentine Saturday night and Sunday. Rich Lola and son Jimmy were with Roger and his father Lores Hornickel. They brought home their limit of six fish each — Northern Pike.

Clare and Beulah Clement went to the wedding of Alexis Fenton and Larry Kirschmer at O'Neill Saturday. Sophie Fuss, Cheryl Peterson and I went with them. It was a pleasant drive and we all enjoyed the day. Lexie was a beautiful bride and the third and last of the Fenton girls to get married, one each year since two years ago. Their father Joe Fenton was employed by Clare some years ago and the girls attended school at Valleyside. The Fentons also have a son Jimmy, born after they moved to O'Neill. At the wedding we saw Mr. and Mrs. Ray Shotkoski of Ord.

Edgar Lange was out collecting for Tri-Fund Friday. Since it was too wet for field work he took time for a visit which I enjoyed. I hear he visited with other neighbors too.

People do read these "Babbles." Not long after the Quiz came out last week I received a telephone call asking why there were no babbles. She had missed them. Maybe there will be two sets this week. Would that do, Opal?

Don, his boys of Kearney and Ken, Charlene, Cindy and Tom were here Sunday. Rain made them decide to hurry home. Here we had .45 by Monday morning. An added .65 Monday evening brought the total to 1.10 from Sunday to Tuesday morning.

Jarrod Dale, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Wilson and Susanne Dawn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rollie Staab were baptized at the Mira Valley United Methodist Church Sunday, in their honor the babies' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Burson, entertained at dinner. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dale Wilson and Jarrod, Mr. and Mrs. Rollie Staab and family, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Staab and Mrs. Phyllis Haines and children of Berwyn and Mrs. Elsie Wilson. Vinton School will close Friday with a picnic Sunday, May 16. Eighth grade graduates are Paul Harkness, Kelven Foth, Linda Lange, Morley Koll, Bob Bruha, Kathy Burrows and Mary Huffman.

N.F.O. Asks Debate on Farm Policy Of Agricultural Advisor to Nixon

Vice-president Erhard Pfingsten of the National Farmers Organization this week challenged Congressman Dave Martin to a public debate in their differing views over statements by a farm policy adviser to President Nixon. Mr. Pfingsten spoke in Ord at the annual dinner meeting of Valley county NFO some time ago.

In attacking Pfingsten views in his weekly column sent out from Washington, Martin accused him of misrepresenting farm policy statements of Dr. Hendrik S. Houthakker of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Pfingsten had expressed alarm in speeches over Houthakker's powerful role in farm policy decisions at the White House. Houthakker was an author of the Adaptive Plan for Agriculture issued several years ago by the Committee for Economic Development.

Pfingsten quotes Houthakker as saying the Department of Agriculture's assignment is eliminating human resources from agriculture, that this has to be done through low farm prices, and that corporations and conglomerates will take over ownership of agriculture and supply its management.

"I challenge Congressman Martin to debate these statements by Dr. Houthakker before a farm audience in any public place anywhere in his district within the next 30 days," Pfingsten said. "He can pick the time and I suggest he bring Dr. Houthakker with him."

Pfingsten said he would bring sworn affidavits concerning Houthakker's statements about eliminating family farmers and would supply absolute proof that Houthakker made them.

"I also challenge Congressman Martin to explain how Dr. Houthakker came to occupy such a powerful post in the Administration," he said, "and why he was given the job of providing farm policy advice to the President."

"The Congressman's attack on me is covering up the fact that we have too low farm prices and disastrous conditions in agriculture in Nebraska and throughout the country and that nothing is done to help the farmer," he said.

Dairymen May Go to Court on Heart Association Hostility

The intense debate between the American Dairy Association and the American Heart Association over high vitality foods for the American public may reach a climax soon. A lawsuit by the dairymen may be one way of resolving the matter.

Their chief claim is that cooking temperatures negate the purpose of unsaturated fats and so hence, margarines and cooking oils have no more unsaturated fatty acids than dairy products. ports:

The American Heart Association may find itself the object of a class action suit by 500,000 dairy farmers, according to reports from a one-day meeting of dairy, livestock and poultrymen in Madison, Wis., recently.

William C. Eckles, general manager of the Pure Milk Products Co-operative at Fond du Lac, said legal action is being delayed pending help from Congress and federal agencies.

Eckles and other national figures in the agricultural industries involved want Congress, the Federal Trade Commission and Federal Drug Administration to help straighten out the record in the diet-heart controversy.

He wants FTC and FDA to stop margarine manufacturers from printing ads implying that using polyunsaturated fats, such as margarines and cooking oils, will cut the risk of heart disease.

Eckles said the group also wants a congressional hearing on the Framingham Report.

Soil Temperature Vital in Planting

Valley county farms have had a soil temperature of 46 to 49 degrees the past week, but a minimum temperature for germination is 50 degrees, according to state extension service.

Planting at temperatures up to 55 degrees increases the probability of a good stand. The temperatures should be measured at seed depth at 8 a.m.

Fertilizer should be placed properly, and not too heavy or too near the seed. Proper planter plates should be used, and correct planter speed. Soil should be moist when seeds are planted.

County agent, John Schade, has further details in his office in the basement of Ord postoffice.

U.S. Acts to Aid Income of Farms

Action to help farmers is being taken by the Nixon administration, Congressman Dave Martin stated in his latest news report. He says:

"To help offset the present low hog prices, the Department of Agriculture has already purchased over 145 million pounds of pork for its food distribution and school lunch programs. This is the highest level of pork purchases since 1956.

"President Nixon has been working diligently at improving overseas agricultural sales. The President pointed out that today we are exporting the production of approximately one acre out of every four we harvest in America. He hopes to increase the value of farm exports to $10 billion each year, and to help achieve this goal he announced an increase of $1 million in the fiscal year 1970 budget for the Foreign Agriculture Service — the Federal agency which helps our farmers expand their sales abroad.

"The President announced that he was recommending the level of farm operating loans for the FHA be increased in fiscal year '72. He has proposed legislation to allow the Farmers Home Administration to insure loans for operating expenses — as it can now do for ownership purposes.

"The President recommended an additional $7.6 million for the Agriculture Research Service and the State Agricultural Extension Stations to work on crop, plant and livestock diseases.

"He also recommended additional funds for soil and water conservation work in the amount of $12 million to provide more manpower for this valuable work.

KERNELS & HUSKS

Valley County Agent

Most of our ranges and pastures went into the winter in a critical condition because of drought. The absence of the late summer and early fall rains had resulted in close grazing with little or no opportunity for regrowth, even on properly stocked pastures and rangeland.

We have been receiving some rains these past weeks but not enough to stimulate much growth of either the introduced or native grass species. The plants in all of our grasslands are no doubt low in vigor.

Livestock producers should follow some general rules to get the best production from their pastures.

First, don't turn cattle into native pastures too early in the spring. Early grazing will make it impossible for the leaves to do a job of manufacturing plant food. Plant food is necessary for growth of the plant and for storing food in the root system and crown of the plant.

Early grazing of warm-season grass will also remove what little plant food there is in the lower stem and crown of the plant.

Secondly, don't graze the plants to close — close grazing only adds to the adverse effect of the already weakened plant.

Close grazing results in reduced root systems. If more than 50 percent of the leaves are eaten off, there is an immediate deteriation of food stored in the root system, resulting in a shallow and weak set of roots.

Under close grazing, loss of stands can be expected, especially of the shallow rooted species such as blue grama and Kentucky Blue Grass. Weeds and other undesirable species will be least affected.

Practices which lead to uniform grazing of rangelands will improve production and reduce grazing damage. Salt away from water. Install adequate fence and water to insure good distribution of grazing animals.

Use "overplanted" acreage of wheat for early spring grazing to relieve pastures.

Plant sudan or sudan sorghum crosses for emergency grazing later this year.

Reduce cattle numbers as a last resort. Gains will decline if there is not enough grass.

Cattlemen, keep a close watch on both your range and your livestock. If either appear to deteriorate you will need to make some major changes in your management practices.

Energy the Key to Reproduction

Research shows that in cows receiving low levels of energy both before and after calving, only 20 percent of the cows become pregnant in a 90 day breeding season. This poor performance was a result of only 22 percent of the cows showing heat and a low conception rate at first service.

The level of energy fed before and after calving has a marked effect on the pregnancy rate. Continuously low levels of energy are disastrous as far as reproductive performance is concerned.

Deadline for Certified Seed Field Inspection

May 20 is the deadline for submitting applications for field inspection of certified wheat, oats, barley, rye, bromegrass, heatgrass, crown vetch, sweetclover and first crop alfalfa.

Application blanks are available in the County Extension Office.

Green Thumb Tips

For control of black spot on your roses during the growing season, sprays are usually better than dusts. Phaltan is the preferred fungicide. This fungicide also controls powder mildew.

Manab, zinab and daconil 2787 also gives good control of black spot but not mildew.

You can reseed those small patches, lost to diseases or insects, in your bluegrass lawn now. Stir the soil first so black dirt is showing. Put the seed in this area and cover it lightly with soil. The important thing is to keep the area moist so that the grass has a chance to germinate. It will usually require about three weeks of regular watering to keep the grass from drying out.

Irregular brown spots on your lawn may be the first sign of sod web worm. This insect caused heavy damage to many of our lawns last year. We could have another heavy invasion again this year.

Extension Circular E.C. 71-1527 describes both the damage caused by this insect as well as it's control. Pick up your copy at the Extension Office.

Farm Set-asides Clarified Here

Valley County farmers enrolled in the feed grain or wheat programs are reminded that the acreage set-aside under each program should be as productive as the acreage normally used to produce the crop.

Robert W. Timmerman, Chairman of the Valley County ASC Committee, suggested that producers check with the county ASCS office in Ord as soon as possible if they have any doubt about their proposed set-aside acreage.

He said when producers come in to the county office to certify their set-aside acreage, they must specify precisely where the set-aside acreage is located. Final dates for certification are:

-June 7 for wheat and set-aside on wheat only farms.

-July 15 for corn and grain sorghum and set-aside on all other farms.

After a producer has certified, if a mistake is found in his set-aside acreage he could lose some or all of his farm program payment.

A farmer who is not quite sure whether his set-aside meets all requirements can request measurement service, which will give him a guarantee that he has enough set-aside acreage. Measurement service is offered by the county ASCS office at cost.

755 feed grain farms in Valley County from a total of 826 farms are signed up for 1971 in the feed grain program and 502 farms from a total of 511 farms are signed up in the 1971 wheat program.

Naitonal final signup returns for the 1971 wheat program, issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, show 1,037,446 farms enrolled. This surpasses the previous record enrollment of 981,153 farms in 1969.

Signed farms in 1971 have allotments totaling 18,219,491 acres, or 95 percent of the national domestic allotment total of 19,124,837 acres. This year, required set-aside is equal to 75 percent of a farm's 1971 domestic allotment.

The Valley County report covers a complete tally of all results for the signup which began Mar. 1 and ended Apr. 9, plus delayed enrollments through Apr. 22.

For Nebraska, results of the 1971 wheat program signup show a total of 60,068 farms signed up 1,061,307 acres wheat allotment and agreed to set aside 796,745 acres.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Budget Committee of Legislature Gets Deserved Praise of Solons

By Melvin Paul, NPA
Statehouse Correspondent

There was a rare event last week on the legislative floor. The Budget Committee was given a standing ovation. The committee had labored four months on its recommendations for appropriations to finance state government's operations during the coming fiscal year.

The bill had its initial test on the floor, and sailed through without a "no" vote. It still had two more steps to make before adoption, but there didn't appear to be any problems on the horizon.

After the bill was advanced from general file, Scottsbluff Sen. Terry Carpenter said the Budget Committee members deserved a standing ovation.

Chairman Richard D. Marvel has headed the budget committee for six sessions.

No sooner had the operations budget been given first round approval on the floor than the committee was back in session to take up the capital construction budget.

There was no way to be certain the construction recommendations would receive the same friendly treatment on the floor the operations bill had, but the committee added three projects to the 1st Gov. J. J. Exon had endorsed. That triple play was designed to forestall amendments on the floor which could have the effect of breaking the budget open.

The committee inserted appropriations for planning of a law college building at the University of Nebraska's Lincoln campus, a classroom facility on the UNO campus and an applied sciences building at Wayne State College. None of these projects had been given Exon's approval.

But there was reason to think attempts would be made on the floor to add them if the committee didn't.

Remembering what happened in 1969 when floor amendments added $11 million to the capital construction bill in a single afternoon, raising the price tag so high the bill didn't get the necessary 33 votes, the committee added the three projects itself.

The logic was that even more construction projects would be tacked on by the full legislature if the bill was breached on the floor.

Construction costs for the three buildings weren't included, but planning money was. The committee, in effect, committed itself to financing the construction in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973.

The total cost of the construction bill for this fiscal year would be a little more than $6 million under the committee plan. That's about $600,000 more than Exon had recommended in his Feb. 4 budget message.

The operations budget had been about $1 million below the Exon recommendations in general fund appropriations. Those are the funds supplied, basically, from the sales and income taxes.

In the all funds category, including general funds, federal funds, cash funds and revolving funds, the committee's bill actually called for more spending than the governor had proposed.

One of the reasons is that the committee increased tuition at the state colleges and for nonresident students at the University of Nebraska above what Exon had included in his recommendations. That action had the effect of increasing the cash fund appropriations for the colleges and the university.

Meanwhile, money matters of another type were occupying the senators as well.

Two plans for increasing the state aid to schools were on the board and the lawmakers were taking their time deciding which one to choose, if either one.

Exon has promised to veto any plan which increases the state aid program beyond the current $35 million a year currently being apportioned to the local school districts.

The last plan to get moving across the legislative board was one which would add $50 million to the present $35 million, for a total of $85 million. Ten million dollars of the additional $50 million would go to equalization payments and the other $40 million would be dealt out at a rate of $120 for each student enrolled in the school district.

The other plan, one given preliminary endorsement earlier, would increase the state aid program by $54 million. All the extra money would be ticketed for use in the equalization phase of the program.

Equalization is a system which helps those districts with high enrollements and low valuations. In other words, school districts which require extremely high mill levies to provide enough revenue to iperate the schools.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, the "father" of the school aid program launched in the 1967 Legislature, said the senators ought to conduct a study before the 1972 session begins and examine all the possible formulas for distributing the aid.

Warner said, however, it is important that a bill proposing a substantial increase in the present $35 million is passed this session so the sales and income tax rates can be adjusted to start providing the revenue to make the payments.

Once that is underway, Warner said, there still will be time to find the best method for allocating the aid. But there wouldn't be any extra money to distribute unless the tax collections start soon.

The idea behind the state aid hike is to provide identifiable relief for property taxes. There have been complaints that the $35 million now being distributed isn't enough to keep the mill levies at the local level from rising.

IGNORANCE IS NO REASON FOR ATTACKING 4-C PLAN

By Marsha Plugge, Ord

The recent Kerry On column had much to say about a so called Federal Program which was said to fit the description of Communism.

It was stated that there was to be a meeting at the Welfare Office on April 28 to discuss the 4-C program and urged us to reread the definition of Communism and attend this meeting so we could voice our opinion on the subject.

The first sentence in the April 22 article stated that you hadn't had time to dig out any facts behind the 4-C program but that did not stop you from labeling it Communistic.

I was one of a number of people who attended the meeting at the Court House. I do not pretend to be an authority on the 4-C program, but I listened eagerly to the speaker, trying to keep in mind your thoughts on the subject. However, I could not follow your line of thinking.

It was not decided at this meeting whether our community was in need of the services of this program, but it was decided that no harm could come from a further investigation. Such as a questioncer for parents of pre-school children with such questions as: how many mothers of pre-school children work outside of the home and what care do their children receive while they are gone, and how many mothers of pre-school children would work if they could find a suitable place to care for their children.

Through the 4-C Program children attending a day care center could have such services as speech therapy, hearing tests, and visual tests through cooperation with the Educational Service Unit.

Should the community decide there is a need for a day care center under the 4-C Program, there are regulations that must be met for the safety of the children. There must be an adquate amount of space and qualified personnel. If such a program was started and if the community was willing to raise some money for the program, it would be possible to have this amount of money matched 3-1 by either the Federal Government or some large corporation such as the Ford Foundation. It need not be Federal money.

Again I will say, I do not have all the facts about the program but a group of interested persons in the community are going to look into the matter further. And when we have more facts about the needs of the community and about the 4-C Program we will make a decision.

After reading your articles on the subject I was quite surprised that you were not at the meeting. I felt sure that since YOU WERE SO CONCERNED that this program would take over our community YOU WOULD AT LEAST HAVE HAD A REPRESENTATIVE AT THE MEETING TO VOICE YOUR OPINION. And since you stated in your article that you did not have all the facts on the program, it would have been an excellent time for you to have gained more information.

PUBLISHER'S NOTE: The writer wanted to attend the meeting but was out of town on business and returned a short 30-minutes before the meeting convened. We are happy Mrs. Plugge expressed enough interest to furnish us with this report.

In defense of our own actions and words we would state:

1) Business trips and up to 18-hour days are necessary so we can pay our share of the taxes to support these federal programs.

2) Does Ord need child-care under a federal program when many ladies are seeking added income by furnishing this service?

3) When 4-C programs fit youngsters one-year-old and under with hearing aids and furnish other medical services, is this not bordering on socialized medicine?

4) Matching funds STILL INVOLVE taxpayer's money. If a large corporation or foundation does not foot the bill, who does?

Credit Bureau Data Available

Provisions of a new credit protection bill have been explained by Congressman Dave Martin. It has already gone into effect.

Credit bureaus throughout the nation keep extensive files on the paying habits of practically all families. These files, heretofore, have been secret.

This new law provides that any person who has been turned down for a loan or credit due to a report from the credit bureau may challenge the credit report. The credit bureau which must then give the individual all the information in his file. If the credit bureau has controversial information in regard to an individual's credit rating, he can have the credit bureau re-investigate, and any written statement or explanation by the person concerned must be attached by the credit bureau to the report of that person's credit to the company requesting it.

Enriched Air in a Jug Is the Time to Start Worrying

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

There use to be a song that allowed "the best things in life are free." Don't you believe it. When a feller in this land of plenty has to pay as much fer water as fer milk, we're jest a short step away from putting a tax on the air we breathe.

Taking up this matter Saturday night, Clint Richardson reported where he had saw this dairy in North Carolina was delivering door to door jugs of plain well water. Clint said he knowed you could buy special drinking water from mineral springs and such, but he didn't recall where water was being advertised and sold as plain water.

Clint wasn't falting the dairy. He said the water was meeting a demand for a service, cause the dairy couldn't keep up with orders fer the water. He said it was odd to him that the same dairy that was selling plain water fast as they could pump it out of a well was having to add all kinds of chemics to their milk afore it could be sold.

The fellers was general agreed with Clint that we has come a long way down the road of store-brought everthing, but Herb Goff, fer one, was of a mind its jest the price we pay fer all we learn.

Fer instant, allowed Herb where can a feller git a plain, ordinary breakfast? Can he order a egg and sawsage and a couple of buttered biskits at home or anywhere and not git a bunch of them "additives" that suppose to make everthing better? The egg went on Herb, probable is caged, unfertilized, grade A medium, the sawsage is Guvernment inspected and the spices in it the Food and Drug Administration ain't shore won't give you cancer or heart trouble. The biskit, well, even if its fresh homemade it come from flour that's double enriched and bleached and fixed to rise by itself. They ain't no telling all that is done to store-bought butter to make it taste like anything but butter.

Practical speaking, butted in Joe Miska, they ain't no other way to pertect the health of all the folks in this country. Joe said he had saw where the price of meat is going up at a faster rate than everthing else right now, but the piece in the paper said the price the grower gits fer the meat is going down. What's eating us up, allowed Joe, is the "processing, packaging and transportation," and them costs is what's behind all the things that's happening to what we eat, drink and breathe. When you can set down to sawsage made from a hog growed 2,000 miles away, you jest can't expect it to be as plain as a hog you would kill yoreself, was Joe's words.

Personal, Mister Editor, I am agreed with Joe that we had ought to be thankful fer the "additives," but when I hear about em selling enriched air in a jug, I'm going to start worrying.

Yours truly,
GERANIUM JOE

Something Different

Use It Over and Over

Americans are noted for going overboard on everything they adopt: always we tack on "the biggest", "the greatest", "the most", "the worst", "the most beautiful".

So now we're going overboard on ecology. Not that it isn't a good thing to go overboard ON. I'm glad we're aware of the situation.

This week I saw three separate groups of youngsters cleaning out the sides of Ord streets, carrying big brown sacks. They were stuffing sacks with debris, bottles, cans, papers. It was a pleasant spring day and an enjoyable pastime, a good change from classrooms with walls and windows. And a fine demonstration of the work that littering can create.

Saving has gone out of style these last years. We waste gasoline, we waste paper, we waste water, all without thinking. (Which reminds me, one list of ecological suggestions wants us to stack a few bricks in our toilet tanks so that we won't use so much water!)

We're going to be re-running treated water as many as 13 times over, in a few years, "they" prophesy.

Aluminum cans are now being picked up and reused, and about time. Glass bottles, they now find, can be ground up and stirred into street paving materials, Omaha is trying it in two locations.

There are other ways to use cans and bottles.

A young niece who lived alone in Denver wouldn't let me worry about the prowlers in her neighborhood, as she came and went from her newspaper reporting at all hours of the day and night. I stack rows of soft drink bottles along every window sill and doorway, no one would ever come in after all the clatter it would make."

Bottles can be cut off or melted and stretched to make drinking glasses, vases, ashtrays and quite attractive they are. Bottles can be laid in rows and plastered around to build a wall. The ends of bottles make handsome window panes, that was discovered hundreds of years ago in England.

Tin cans make pretty lamps, when the ends are cut off and they are painted or papered or decorated to suit your fancy. Cut a few peek holes in the cans if you wish.

The tin cans, with the rims chopped off, make curlycuey doll furniture when they are twisted and bent around and padded with tiny velvet cushions. Big juice cans, neatly sliced with tin snips, make huge ornamental wall plaques with many-pronged borders. Douthit's Cafe displays a couple. A mirror may be installed in the center, and paint or gilt is pretty.

This time of year tin cans make good coverups for tender plants you're hopefully installing where Jack Frost can get at them.

It seems almost everything can be reused. Years ago, Nina Wilcox Putnam wrote about how the French never throw away one thing, telling how they mashed egg shells and fed them back to the chickens, how every bit of trimmings from vegetables and meat went into her soup pot.

So, we make bird houses from plastic bottles and cover our clothes hangers with ruffles made from plastic garment bags.

I just remembered.

"They" want us to quit buying colored toilet paper, saying the color adds undesirable elements to the water . . . . use white only is the word, did you know?

KERRY ON

By Kerry Leggett

—attraction—

I most certainly didn't expect every reader to say "Amen" to the Quiz article, last week, concerning the environmental problems confronting this community. Neither did I expect a direct rebuttal from the person in charge of community betterment!

Community betterment is just that! What can we do to better our community?

Instead I was raked over the coals — verbally — for putting something in the paper that might be seen by "a doctor thinking of coming to Ord." Lord knows if they visited this city they might not only SEE these things . . . they might SMELL THEM TOO! Community betterment should attune itself to the facts at hand. The contests are won by confronting the problems and following through — making sure something IS done.

Too many of life's problems are ignored . . . thinking they'll go away. Lip service is not enough. Things happen when people MAKE them happen. Yet we too frequently dismiss the biggest problems by procrastination. Good intentions are a dime a dozen.

Another reader wrote me, during the past week, on an entirely different subject. Yet one line of her letter stood out vividly when she said, "it is silly to try and tell some of these people the truth, as they don't want to believe it."

She continues, "The ones (people) who are causing all the trouble are the ones who have the most to hide, themselves." I'll have to go along with her — but know that it's human nature to try and point out another's faults in hope that same weakness may not be seen in yourself.

Whenever I see someone's weakness, a friend reminds me, I'd not recognize it if it wasn't a personal weakness. If it's easily recognized in others, I must be overly sensitive about it myself. Therefore it is probably one of my own shortcomings.

Getting back to ecology, though, yet another reader wrote — during the past week — suggesting several things. One is the use of phosphate-free detergents. At this point I'd add what the letter-writer stated. "Other manufacturers may develop detergents that are both enzyme and phosphate free, but so far Sears are the only ones that produce it."

Another good idea presented by the writer came in the form of a clipping and concerned disposal of leaves. At one time nearly everyone burned their leaves, in the fall. Now many places are burying leaves.

One of the best leaf-disposal ideas, yet, is a system used in Holland, Mjchigan. The leaves are raked to the curb or roadside and collected by vacuum equipped trucks, then stored in heaps to make compost. The compost can then be returned to earth as excellent humus, for flower beds in city parks and elsewhere.

I've deviated far from my opening subject, this week, but I hope that we can see our faults. Then — rather than denying their existence — do something corrective. THAT is the type of community that attracts people!

Kissinger Ignorance Shocks Families of American Prisoners of War

BY PAUL SCOTT
Former Greeley Resident

Families of captured American prisoners of war in Vietnam were deeply shocked recently to learn of the lack of knowledge that Henry Kissinger, the President's chief national security adviser, had on the plight of these men.

Kissinger was assigned by President Nixon to meet with a group of wives, fathers, and mothers of American POWs.

To their utter amazement, Kissinger didn't know that the North Vietnamese had signed the Geneva Convention relative to the treatment of prisoners of war which was negotiated on August 12, 1949.

The disclosure of Kissinger's ignorance came out when one of the wives of the captured American prisoners of war asked the President's number one adviser for details on what the Administration was doing to see that Hanoi was living up to the Geneva Convention.

Instead of answering the question directly, Kissinger turned to an aide and inquired: "Did Hanoi sign the Geneva Convention dealing with the treatment of prisoners of war?"

Kissinger's question brought loud gasps of "O, No!, O, No!". Nearly everyone in the room shook their heads in complete disbelief that Kissinger, who is advising President Nixon on the prisoner of war question, didn't know the answer to his own question.

The embarrassed aide never got a chance to answer Kissinger's questions. The faces of the persons present were all the answer Kissinger needed. He immediately switched the conversation. Kissinger's failure to answer his own question left the families of the POWs cold. As far as they were concerned, the remainder of the White House discussions were meaningless.

As one of the women attending the meeting remarked after leaving the White House: "God save the country, if President Nixon is relying on this man's advice. If he is so lacking in knowledge about the prisoner of war issue, how can be advise the President on the issue of Vietnam? The two are tied closely together."

Another member of the group that met with Kissinger put it in another way, stating: "Kissinger is suppose to be the great policy maker in the White House during this era of negotiations with the communists. Since he doesn't even know what treaties a government like North Vietnam has signed or what reservations Hanoi had at the time, how can be advise the President or help develop a sound policy for dealing with the issue?".

What Kissinger apparently doesn't know is that in addition to signing the Geneva Convention the government of North Vietnam expressed several reservations to the convention which could greatly effect the fate of the more than 450 American prisoners known to be held by Hanoi.

These reservations as spelled out in the English language test of the Geneva Convention as reproduced from a copy certified by the Swiss Federal Council are as follows:

"Vietnam, Democratic Republic of (North) — With respect to the Geneva Convention relative to the treatment of prisoners of war dated August 12, 1949:

"In Article 10: The request of the Detaining Power, either to a neutral State or to an organization which offers all guarantees impartiality and efficacy, to assume the duties incumbent on the Protecting Powers by virtue of the Convention shall be recognized as legal by the Democratic Republic of Vietnam only in the event that the State on which the prisoners of war depend has approved such request.

"In Article 12: The Democratic Republic of Vietnam declares that the transfer of prisoners of war by the Detaining Power to a Power which is a party to the Convention does not free the Detaining Power from its responsibility for the application of the Convention to prisoners.

"In Article 85: The Democratic Republic of Vietnam declares that prisoners of war prosecuted and convicted for war crimes or for crimes against humanity, in accordance with the principles laid down by the Nuremberg Court of Justice shall not benefit from the present Convention, as specified in Article 85."

Article 85 of the Geneva Convention states: "Prisoners of war prosecuted under the laws of the Detaining Power for acts committed prior to capture shall retain, even if convicted, the benefits of the present convention."

North Vietnam's reservation to this key provision of the Geneva Convention is of immediate significance because of that government's repeated threats to try captured Americans as war criminals. Because of the verdict in the Calley trial, the North Vietnamese are expected to again threaten to try these captured American heroes.

In signing the Geneva Convention, the U.S. made no reservations although the following statement was issued at the time: "Rejecting the reservations which States have made with respect to the Geneva Convention relative to the treatment of prisoners of war, the U.S. accepts treaty relations with all parties to that convention, except to the changes proposed by such reservations."

There are more than 20 million recreational shooters in the U.S., according to the National Shooting Sports Foundation.

Babbles by Bertha

Don and his three sons came up from Kearney Sunday. They came for dinner but had to leave early as Mother Phyllis was singing with the rest of the Coraleers in the evening. A highlight of the day was the telephone call from our grandson Charles (Chuck) Clement of West Virginia. Of course, we had a chance to talk with our son Russell, and Jeannette too.

Kay Foth took her Paul and Patty and the Gordon Foths' Debbie, Loree, Barbra and Brian fishing at their dam Sunday. What fun to catch those ten fish!

We made a quick sightseeing trip to Meixco City Monday evening. My brother and sister-in-law, Walter and Frieda Foth asked us to go with them to the Veterans Club and see slides and movies of their Coop Tour sponsored trip to Mexico City in January. Ernest Chalupa was at the projector. It brought back memories of our trip down south of the border four years ago as we saw pictures of places we had seen. Some places had undergone changes, especially at the pyramids where excavations are continually being made. After seeing Mexico we saw slides of scenic Utah. We're glad we went.

And who lost the fertilizer tank in the hills between here and Ord? It was ditched.

This Week's Meditation

Read Matthew 5:1-11

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. (Matthew 5:3)

Here is the first and most puzzling of the Beatitudes. In searching for its meaning, some have felt that Jesus was simply speaking of those poor in material things. Indeed, Jesus identified Himself with the poor in a special way when He called for self-denial and spoke of Himself as one who had no place to lay His head.

Yet, there is something deeper here. The Greek word translated "poor" actually means one who is so poor and destitute that he becomes a beggar, so desperately aware of his need that he seeks help. Thus Jesus said that those who are so aware of their spiritual poverty that they desperately seek for an answer are indeed blessed, for they open the doors to all the kingdom possibilities in their life.

So the first Beatitude is the keynote of the whole Sermon on the Mount. The ideals of the Sermon will come to those whose awareness of a spiritual vacuum drives them to urgently seek God's kingdom.

PRAYER: This day, O Lord, we crave riches of grace and life which come only from Thee. We pray through Christ our Savior, who taught us to pray, "Our Father who are in heaven . . . Amen."

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Christ fills our spiritual vacuums.

County Supervisors

May 4, 1971

The Valley County Board of Supervisors met in regular session at 10:00 A.M. with all members present.

The minutes of the April 6 and 28 metings were approved as read.

Dorsey moved that an easement for Elden C. Epley to install a 6" plastic pipe for the purpose of transfering water between the NW¼ & NE¼ of 24-18-16 be granted. This was seconded by Burson and all answered "yes" to roll call.

Discussions then followed about the care of rural cemeteries, a raise in ambulance fees, the jail, bridge damages, office budgets and the way Consumers Public Power District trim trees along roads. No definite action was taken on any of these.

Emanuel Petska reported on field driveway drainage problems, on the Broken Bow meeting about the Fort Hartstuff Project and about the Custer-Valley County line bridges.

The Board recessed at 12:10 P.M. to return at 1:00 P.M. to meet as a Board of Equalization. (See minutes elsewhere).

At 1:45 P.M. they convened again as a Board of Supervisors with all members present. Francis Walls, Chief Examiner of the State Auditor's office talked with them, answering questions on audits, budgets, funds, transfer of funds, uses of Inheritance Tax money and other items until 3:30 P.M.

County Attorney Weems presented a Resolution which Dorsey offered for adoption, seconded by Burson and unanimously adopted.

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, the County Attorney's budget for the 1970-71 fiscal year was set by the County Board pursuant to the needs and recommendations of the former County Attorney and there has been a change in administrations in the County Attorney's office since said budget was originally determined and an unanticipated increase in work load necessitating additional supplies, utilities, telephone expense and other miscellaneous expenses, and

WHEREAS, expenses for approximately the last half of May and June, 1971, are presently unprovided for in the County Attorney's budget, and there is sufficient unallocated funds in the County General Fund to permit a transfer within said General Fund to said County Attorney's budget; and

WHEREAS, it is essential to the preservation and maintenance within the County of the administration of justice and public safety that said transfer be made, as provided in Section 23-928, R.R.S. and

WHEREAS, said transfer may be made by resolution approved by majority vote of the County Board without formal hearing since the anticipated transfer will not constitute an expenditure in excess of the amounts indicated in the adopted budget statement for Valley County, Nebraska.

NOW, THEREFORE, Be It Resolved that the County Board transfer the sum of $1,000.00 from the Valley County General Fund to the County Attorney's budget as provided in said Section 23-928.

Passed and approved this 4th day of May, 1971, by the Board of Supervisors of Valley County, Nebraska, assembled in regular session pursuant to due and legal notice.

Debate on Farm Policy Asked by N.F.O. Official

National Farmers Organization vice-president, Erhard Pfingsten, who spoke in Ord at the annual banquet of Valley county NFO recently, this week asked Congressman David Martin to select the time and place for a public debate about statements concerning low farm prices and removing farmers from agriculture.

"If you do not pick a time and a place by June 1," Pfingsten said in a telegram to Martin, "I will ask the NFO congressional district chairman in your district to do so within 30 days following June 1."

Martin, in April in his weekly column sent from Washington, stated the NFO official misrepresented farm policy statements of Dr. Hendrik S. Houthakker of the Council of Economic advisers.

In replying to Martin, Pfingsten said "we have disastrous conditions in agriculture in Nebraska and throughout the country and nothing is done to help the farmer."

Pfingsten has opposed Houth-

Tractor Driving Rules for Youth

Many calls have been coming to the County Agent's office in Ord relative to a bill which allows 13 or 14 year olds to drive a tractor if they obtain an agricultural permit. The 13 year limit is set for those who work on their own parents farm while the 14 year limit is for those who work for compensation for someone else.

Applications for the permit are available from the State Department of Motor Vehicles, the License Examiner or the County Treasurer. The first license will be a temporary license and will not require any examination. All the applicant needs to do is fill out the application, get it signed by the parent and send it with $1.00 to the Department of Motor Vehicles. This temporary permit will be good for about 6 months.

Eventually, the Motor Vehicles Department will set up a testing system similar to that for obtaining a drivers license. The applicant will have to take an eye exam, written exam, and drive one of the pieces of agricultural equipment that he might conceivably drive on the highway. This license will cost $2.00 and will be in force until the person is 16 years of age.

Ord Fire Chief Nebraska Award

Chief Ivan Sorensen of the Ord fire department was given special honors at the Nebraska state fire school conducted Sunday at Grand Island.

He was one of 10 firemen in the state to receive an Ak-Sar-Ben plaque and $50 with which to pay expenses at the school. The award came to him because of his work with the Ord department.

Recommendations were made by the state fire marshall, Mayor Joe Ruzicka of Ord, Valley county judge and sheriff. The presentation of hospital equipment by the department to Valley county hospital was another factor in the award.

Committee of recommendation included Gerald Woodgate, Don Edghill, and Judge Rollin Dye.

Two state firemen were cited for heroism: Donald F. Hightree of Walthill and Victor J. Gravel of Seward. Mr. Hightree drove a quarter mile through hazardous flood water to rescue a stranded trucker, and Mr. Gravel saved the life of Bill Baker of Blue Springs who suffered a cut artery in falling through a glass door.

Ord High Commencement Diplomas to 87 Seniors

Lessons from the life of Solomon, the noted Biblical character, were cited by Rev. Ronald Graff, pastor of Evangelical Free church, at Baccalaureate services for the graduating class of 1971. Location was the athletic field, where perfect weather Sunday evening aided in making it a memorable occasion.

"Solomon tried to find happiness in life through many avenues," Mr. Graff said. "He became one of the best educated men of his time, but found wisdom alone was not enough.

"Then he sought riches, and at one time had $26 million in yearly income. But this did not bring him peace of mind. Then he sought pomp, and his court became one of the dazzling of all history.

"Then he tried power, and became head of a powerful army. Then, he sought public acclaim, and built vast public buildings and other construction projects. But he still was restless in life.

"Finally, he turned to religion and to the teachings of God, and there he found a way to peace of mind," Mr. Graff concluded.

Thus, he counseled the graduates, success in life cannot be found exclusively through material things, or selfish gratification of the body.

Others taking part in the service were Rev. P. F. Stohlmann, Jr. Music was provided by the Ord high school Swing Singers, and Rita Wojtasek.

Monday evening, class night awards were bestowed in a program, also at the athletic field stadium. Allen Cahill made the Valedictorian address, and Ann Cummins gave the Salutatorian.

Ord High Seniors Receive Diplomas

Climax of high school work for graduates of Ord high school was reached Tuesday night when, as their names were called, they filed onto the stage to receive diplomas from Dr. Dale Karre, president of the board of education. Robert Norton, high school principal, is at Dr. Karre's right, handing him the diplomas.

Annual Commencement program was held in Ord high school Tuesday evening with 87 Seniors being awarded diplomas by Dr. Dale Karre, president of the Board of Education.

Dr. O. W. Kopp, faculty of the University of Nebraska, gave the chief address of the evening and discussed, "What's Right With This Generation."

Three great challenges face the Ord graduates, Dr. Kopp said. First is the challenge of change. "Ten years from now, 75% of all the jobs in this country will be ones that do not even exist today. Space technology, educational chemicals, farming by computer, new dental techniques are just some of these," he said.

"Media imagery, or public relations, is the second great challenge. Today, many of youth are hampered by the irresponsible conduct of those who seek progress not through hard work and evolution, but through demonstrations and violence.

"Finally, there is the generation gap, which requires that both youth and their elders face problems together. Greatness consists of work, facing up to problems and tackling the difficulties that confront you," he concluded.

He paid tribute to the Ord educational school system, and stated the purpose of education is to have children learn. He said the attitude of teachers is just as important as the facilities they have with which to teach. He suggested that education is lighting a flame, so students will persevere in the pursuit of knowledge.

He also commended the people of Ord for their elementary school and stated the community has produced many educators, doctors, attorneys, and other individuals. He also praised the work of Ord athletes, such as Bob Peterson, all state-linebacker last fall, and a member of the current graduating class.

Presentation of the class was

Scotia's Swimming Pool to Be Open Soon; Dedication in June

Dedication of the new swimming pool at Scotia will be during Scotia's Barbeque Days June 7 and 8, according to Mrs. Darrell Bussell, member of the committee in charge of Scotia Community Improvement Association.

The pool is all completed and will be open Memorial weekend, large picnic area next to the pool is completed, and additional space for further recreational facilities is available.

An excellent response for funds was made by citizens of the community for the swimming pool and picnic area. The committee is working on improvement and beautification of all phases of life in the area.

Landscaping funds were raised through bond subscription and memorials. The swimming pool was constructed through bond issues and public funds. Many bake sales and fund drives, all by the citizens of Scotia, were held. The Youth Council of the Betterment Program is raising funds now to add further recreational activities at the site.

Plans are underway to landscape the recreational ground and to replant trees where 25 dead Elm trees had to be removed. In addition, 250 trees were distributed to townspeople and farmers.

Scotia's Improvement association is working not only to improve homes and business places in the village, but also has rural improvement as a project. "Keep Nebraska Green in Nebraska" is one of the objectives of the group.

At a meeting May 12 in the recreational hall at Scotia, Dr. Glenn Kruescher, director of the state department of agriculture explained how world-wide trade in agricultural products affects Nebraska farmers.

STATE TROOPER SCHARFF, ORD OFFICER LEROY SVOBODA

Area Police Attend Course in State Mobile Unit

Officers from Arcadia, Burwell and Ord took part in a six-hour course on highway safety, as given in Ord last Thursday by state trooper Vern L. Scharff.

Mr. Scharff was in Ord with a mobile home unit of the Nebraska State Patrol, educational division.

"Highway accidents are worse than last year, and it costs $200,000 per fatality," he pointed out. "Nebraska has 4.6 deaths per 100 million miles, while New Mexico, worst state in America, has 8.0 deaths per same distance.

"Connecticut in 1958 instituted a new policy, as advocated by the Governor, and imposed driver suspensions for all moving car violations. First offense requires 30 day loss of license; second offense forces six months loss, and third offense within a reasonable period may result in disallowance for life.

"This has reduced their rate to 2.6, lowest in the nation."

Mr. Scharff also indicated that of 18 deaths from motorcycle

Susan Porter, Arcadia, shown above, will receive a bachelor of arts in education degree; as will John Linke of Ord. CAROL'S CORNER by carol leggett

The Baccalaureate message given by Pastor Ron Graff was most inspiring, and numberless compliments have been expressed since the Sunday evening service — and did the Swing Singers feel a twinge of sadness as they sang so beautifully realizing their days together as a favorite OHS song group were nearly over?

—O—

It was like a fashion parade. The junior and senior girls looked lovely in dainty colored formals. For many the popular peasant gown was the favorite look this year, while others still preferred frills.

—O—

The presentation by the speech department of OHS, Thursday evening, was an obvious success. Such fine acting. Comments of one was "when the program ended, everyone left with a happy relaxed attitude." Another admitted "Each act was exceptional in it's own way."

—O—

To attend the graduation of a cousin in O'Neill was also on our list of "things to do" last week — and we did. Glea McKenny was one of the 52 graduates of St. Mary's High School. It was an impressive ceremony. The event was celebrated with a Eucharist of Thanksgiving — a guitar Mass in the large school's auditorium. I felt honored to share in the happiness and joy of this occasion.

—O—

I truly miss the sound of pounding hammers, and the friendly chatter and gay laughter that filled our home for many nights. prior to the Junior-Senior Prom. The only tell-tale signs now are a few forgotten hammers, nails galore, seven slivery boards, two smooth boards and three paint buckets plus an assortment of empty pop bottles — thus creating a very messy garage! Best of all are the memories, a highlight of the Junior year; theirs to keep forever. Yes, "Memories are made of this . . ."

—O—

The girls' gym of Ord High School was beautifully decorated for the Junior-Senior Prom, Saturday evening, and again I marveled (as I always do) at how each year that huge auditorium can be transferred into such a place of beauty.

"We've Only Just Begun" was the theme portrayed by this year's Prom.

—O—

Best Wishes to the graduates and may the future hold for you, much happiness and all the things that you are wishing for. May all the plans you're making now that graduation's here, work out just right and may you have good luck, good times, good cheer.

—O—

19 Percent of Valley Citizens Now Included in Over-65 Group

There is increasing interest in Valley County these days in the over-65 segment of its population.

The men and women in that age bracket are emerging, collectively, as a more important element in the local economy than ever before.

Proportionately, they have been expanding at a more rapid rate in the last ten years than most other age groups. Approximately 1 out of every 5.3 local residents is now in the plus-65 category.

And, because the majority of them have become more self-sufficient than their counterparts were in previous years, their status as consumers has risen.

As a result, they have become the sales targets of manufacturers and merchants who have found that they can boost their sales volumes by giving special attention to the needs and desires of the elderly.

Politically, also, they are being courted. Their influence is great, not only because of their growing size but because most of them get to the polls on election day.

In Valley County, those in the over - 65 bracket now number 1,096. Of the overall population they represent 19.0 percent. In 1960 they totaled 16.1 percent.

Throughout the United States the upper age group constitutes 9.9 percent of the total. It represents 11.7 percent in the West North Central States.

In most parts of the country women have a much better longevity record than men. This is borne out by the last census, which counted 139 women over 65 for every 100 men.

In Valley County, the number of women of that age is 589 and the number of men, 507.

Although many elderly people are having a hard time these days, financially, because of the constantly rising cost of living, the majority are holding their own by virtue of increased social security benefits, medicare and special tax reductions.

As a group, their combined purchasing power is about $45 billion a year, which is much greater than it was 10 years ago.

Boaters crossing the wake of another boat will find it relatively smooth going if they approach the wake at a 45-degree angle, according to boating experts.

Monday, the team competed in Red Raider invitational track meet at Loup City with 10 teams and Ord won second place. Loup City was not a generous host, but instead snared first.

Suminski won the 100 and 220; Allen Cahill placed second in the two mile run, Darrell Farmer was second in pole vault; Jim Andreesen was fifth in high jump and Melvin Sich tied for second in the 440. Ed Kowalski was ninth in the 880.

Ord Nine Plays Wolbach Sunday

Ord's Mustangs baseball team will play Wolbach Sunday in a game at Wolbach in the Sherman-Howard league. This is the second round of encounters, with Ord losing last Sunday to St. Paul by 10-8.

Other games Sunday will see St. Paul at Greeley, Gibbon at Scotia, and Boelus at Wood River.

Jim Lukesh famed St. Paul hitters for ten of 11 innings and also smashed a home run to drive in three runs for Ord in the opening game of the Sherman-Howard league Sunday at Ord, but the Wildcats lost in the final stanza as St. Paul scored twice.

Eight errors for Ord and numerous chances to score that that could not be capitalized on, plus many innings when the enemy had two out, but still managed to score, brought defeat.

Jim went the route, and after allowing three runs in the first, tightened up and permitted one run or less in all innings up to the fatal inning. Even then, St. Paul was two down before they punched through their victory.

Coach Ed Psota for Ord praised Jim's pitching, the catching work of Rich Psota, Jim Hulinsky's sparkling play at first base, and Loren Vancura at shortstop. He rated the batting fine for the start of the season, and commended the hard-working efforts of the players.

Considering it was their first game of the season, Coach Psota said the players did very well. Failure to get key hits was the reason he ascribed for the loss.

Ord had 11 hits, the same as St. Paul, but St. Paul made only three mis-plays in the game, and this spelled the difference.

Results of other games Sunday were Greeley three, Boelus two; Scotia nine, Wolbach two; and Wood River 16, Gibbon 0. Szynskie pitched for Wood River and shut out Gibbon.

Lineup for Ord was Vancura with zero hits and two runs; Bill Warner, third base, three hits, three runs; Lukesh one hit, three runs; Psota, one hit, one run; Hulinsky, three hits, one run; Bill Miller, right field, no hits or runs; Ron Drudik, centerfield, no hits or runs; Norm Ugai, second base, no hits or runs; Dick Janda, left field, no hits, one run; Spence Douthit, left field, no hits, one run; John Linke, second base, no hits or runs; and Leo Thompson, right field, one hit, one run.

Roman Hruska's Gift Boosts NU Library

The basis for building the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Libraries into a "select" depository of Slavonic literature, reflecting the freedom-loving heritage of the sizeable population of Czech descent in Nebraska, has been formed through a gift of a 800 volume collection to the University Foundation.

The donor is U.S. Senator Roman L. Hruska who recently acquired the valuable collection from the late Dr. Henry J. John, a Cleveland, Ohio, physician and personal friend of many native artists and authors of Czechoslovakia.

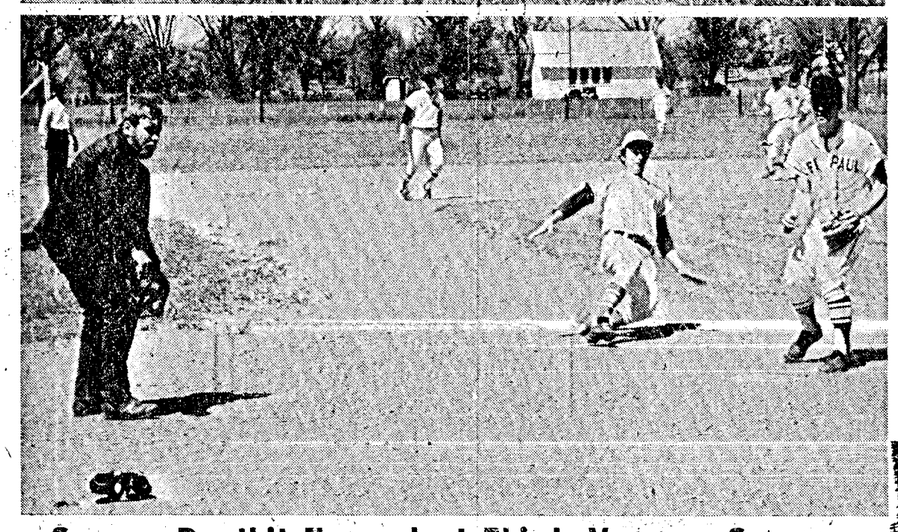
The volumes, collected over a period of at least 50 years, represent many Czech classics, along with political and historical literature during the events leading up to and immediately following the formation of the Czechoslovak Republic in 1918.

This collection is the initial one of several major collections which will help form "The Roman L. Hruska Library of Slavonic Materials." The library relates to special and dominant emphasis upon the Czechs and Slovaks.

Retaining its identity, the Henry John Collection will be one unit of the Hruska Library. It will be complemented by several other substantial collections, all of which also will retain their particular identities.

Hruska believes the Library should serve as a source of great pride to Nebraskans of Czech descent and a tribute to the proud heritage of the Czech and Slovak people. The collections will also provide invaluable source material for students of central European history. They will depict the tone and range of Czech culture going back as far as 1348 when Charles University — the oldest and one of the best-known universities in central Europe — was founded.

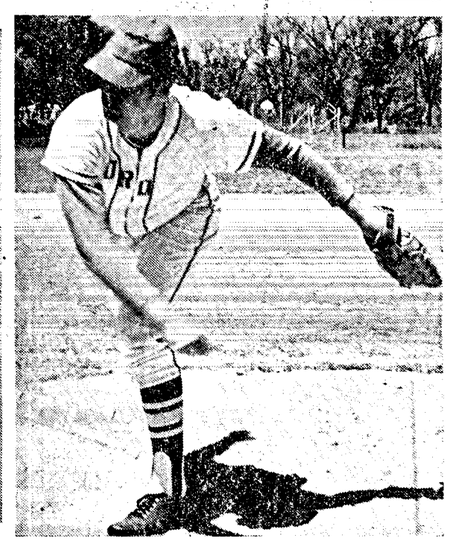
A nesting hen pheasant must have about 40 days in an undisturbed nesting site to produce a brood.



Spence Douthit Tagged at Third; Vancura Scores

Spence Douthit, leftfielder for Ord's Mustangs, comes sliding into third base in the last of the sixth inning with Coach Ed Psota on third base trying to bring him in safely. The score at that time was 5 to 4 for St. Paul as the scoreboard shows. Spence was tagged out as the third baseman for St. Paul can be seen holding the ball and waiting for him.

Bottom picture shows Loren Vancura, shortstop, scoring first for Ord, after a wild pitch by St. Paul got by the catcher. St. Paul's pitcher is covering home plate in vain, while the catcher tries to chase the ball and get it back in time. This was in the first inning.



Bowling, Baseball Stars in Action in Ord

Assistant Police Chief at Session

Ord was represented at the 1971 Nebraska Law Enforcement institute at University of Nebraska this month when assistant chief Monte Kearns spent five days there.

Shrubs, Trees, Vines, Water and Fish of Sandhills Rated Valuable

The Sand Hills is one of the few remaining large tracts of relatively undeveloped land in the United States that are not deserts, swamps, or mountains, according to a resource report published by the University of Nebraska - Lincoln Conservation and Survey Division.

C. F. Keech and Ray Bentall, U.S. Geological Survey hydrogeologists and authors of "Dunes of the Plains", state that sober thought should be given to all possible effects of proposed development in the Sand Hills region. Any development that would not harm the terrain or might tend to stabilize it, should be given serious consideration if such development should bring about greater realization of the region's potential.

The special report includes sections on the Sand Hills climate, soils, natural vegetation, tree planting, wildlife, cattle industry, geology and the occurrence of groundwater, streams, closed-basins area, suitability of water supplies for use, general features, and potential for development. Copies of Resource Report No. 5 "Dunes on the Plains" may be obtained from the Conservation and Survey Division, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Keech and Bentall state that fruit-bearing shrubs, vines, and trees can be grown successfully and that the annual fish "Take" probably could be increased substantially. However, they stressed that the greatest potential for development in the Sand Hills involves the natural facilities for storage and yield of ground water.

Present uses of water for growing hay and watering livestock in the Sand Hills area and for irrigation of cropland outside the area constitute salvage of only a small fraction of the water that otherwise would be returned to the atmosphere, according to Keech and Bentall. They add that in this day of rapidly increasing demand for water of good quality, the groundwater reservoir underlying the Sand Hills area of Nebraska stands out as a still undeveloped source of supply.

The article goes on to indicate that the recently developed center-pivot system of sprinkler irrigation could mean more corn will be grown, hay yields will increase, and cattle-feeding operations will expand within the region.

Bentall and Keech emphasize that the Sand Hills region constitutes a unique ecosystem and that one or more representative areas should be set aside as preserves for study and enjoyment by future generations.

Dr. Scott Libbey of Lincoln, conference minister of Nebraska Conference of The United Church of Christ, and Dr. C. Edd Munden III, pastor of Lincoln's First United Methodist Church, told of their experiences in being a part of a 50-person group from through out the United States who met March 20-27 with leaders of all four national delegations taking part in the Vietnam peace conference in Paris.

Double Efficiency in New Vent Tube Design by Thomas Gailey

Thomas L. Gailey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Gailey, Route two, Ord, has made important improvements on model airplanes, according to Texas A and M. University, where he is now an engineering student. He graduated from David City high school.

Mr. Gailey became interested in the fuel tank vent location and was curious to know if a better location could be secured.

"Ever since control line model aircraft came into existence, there has been a problem with fuel starvation at certain precarious attitudes of flight," Gailey said. "One way to prevent fuel starvation is to pressurize the tank by one of several systems," he added.

In some models, the designer can tap the engine crankcase to obtain fuel tank pressure. In other cases, the tank must be vented to the atomosphere.

"Modelers have used vent systems and yet provided the fuel system with some pressure," Gailey added. This was done by either jutting the tube into the free air stream at a 90-degree angle, cutting the vent at a 45-degree angle facing the air flow or bending the tube to face the stream.

The first arrangement, the sensor aero engineering major noted, caused a negative pressure "sometimes strong enough to suck fuel from the tank."

Gailey, an active and veteran member of the Texas A&M Model Airplane club, ran wind tunnel tests on the three basic vent types, varying the position of the vent relative to the propeller arc and wash and from the aircraft fuselage.

Later tests were run with a powered prop to simulate wash.

"Tests with the powered propeller proved these vents were gaining only one to 10 per cent increase in pressure from prop wash," the young experimenter commented. Most of the problem, he felt, was location of the vent too close to the fuselage and propeller hub where there was too much turbulence and too little prop wash.

His experimentation led to a better location that utilizes the full potential of the propeller and the forward velocity of the plane.

Gailey's results showed that the maximum pressure gradient for a Top Flight 9-inch diameter prop is 50 to 70 per cent of the prop radius. He placed the experimental vent on the left of the fuselage and 2.7 inches or 60 per cent radius from the prop hub center.

"This represents the best vent location," he stated in a course report to Dr. Charles A. Rodenberger. "Some model aircraft are flown without landing gear. These at times make inverted landings. A vent positioned either above or below the fuselage would be damaged."

"Wind tunnel tests showed," Gailey concluded, "an average 100 per cent pressure gradient increase developed by the new system over older vent systems."

President Nixon Pays Tribute To Farmers for Productivity

The recent Salute to Agriculture Day in Washington, D. C., was one of the biggest and most successful efforts our nation has seen to call attention in a positive way to the problems and accomplishments of American agriculture, Robert Timmerman, Chairman of the Valley County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said this week.

President Nixon launched the Salute with a nationwide radio address calling on all Americans to join him in a bi-partisan tribute to the farmers of this country.

"I have high hopes for the new farm programs which are in effect this year," the President told the nation. "They remove some of the old restraints in a way which gives every farmer a chance to make more of his own decisions about the kind of farming that suits him best."

Timmerman spotlighted other major goals which can help farmers improve their income stated in the President's address:

—Increase agricultural exports from the $7.4 billion this year to an annual $10 billion figure.

—Continue the battle against inflation.

—Increase the level of operating loans insured by the Farmers Home Administration.

—Support applied research for controlling agricultural pests.

—Increase grants for small watershed projects.

—Increase funding for technical assistance on conservation projects.

—Increase funds for insured loans for water and sewer systems in rural areas.

—Work with farm organizations and Congress on such problems as farm labor, and farm bargaining legislation.

In a special tribute at the White House, Chairman Timmerman said, the President climaxed a day of recognition by Cabinet Members and other high government officials with a reception and dinner for several outstanding farmers and farm leaders and their wives. On the White House lawn, farm machinery exhibits and purebred livestock were on display for the Washington public.

Calling attention to the productivity of American agriculture, the President noted that in the last 20 years American industry has increased its productivity per man-hour by 150 percent, a great achievement. But in that same period agriculture has increased its productivity per man-hour by 300 percent — twice as much.

Nebraskans attending the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Haven N. Smith, Chappell, and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Brethauer, President National Livestock Feeders Association, Omaha.

akker's powerful role in farm policy decisions at the White House. He quotes Houthakker as saying the Agriculture Department's assignment is eliminating human resources from agriculture, that this must be done through low farm prices, and that corporations will take over ownership of agriculture and supply its management.

"I suggest you bring Dr. Houthakker with you (to the debate)," Pfingsten told Martin in the wire.

"I will have with me the witnesses who were present when Dr. Houthakker made his statements concerning agriculture which I have accurately quoted over the country."

Debate conditions proposed in Pfingsten's wire included giving Martin the choice of time and place — provided people in the district are given five days notice. He also proposed a 40-minute presentation for each, followed by an unlimited period for questions and answers.

Pfingsten said he had a busy schedule and realized that Martin did, too.

"But since you raised the issue I will cancel any of my speaking engagements to meet you and I know that your constituents will expect you to do the same," he said, "because low farm income is of great concern to the farmers and rural businessmen in your district."

Snacktime, Down South (With "Calorie-Control" in Mind)

It's time for touring an ol' southern mansion, time for viewing a cotton field, time for enjoying the Ol' South filled with gracious manners, crispy fried chicken, and vases aplenty of fresh flowers.

The South's worth a visit — if only for a snack break in the midst of a hurried day. For instance, this Creole Cup, made from condensed Chicken Gumbo, brings the flavors of the South into your home — all in one can. Team it with Louisiana Krisps, tasty snacks made from Rye Crackers 'n flavored with ketchup and chili powder.

Then, enjoy the tastin' break . . . for you needn't count calories closely this day. One serving of the Creole snack-break counts only 107 calories. (That's 7 ounces of soup plus 2 whole crackers.)

Take a break south of the Mason-Dixon line soon!

How a minus on your paycheck can be a plus in your future.

Sound confusing? It isn't, really. When you join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, an amount you designate will be set aside automatically from each paycheck. That's the "minus."

That amount will then be invested in U.S. Savings Bonds. That's where the "plus" comes in. Because you're automatically saving for your future, with one of the safest investments there are: U.S. Savings Bonds.

And, by deducting a little at a time from each paycheck, you don't feel the pinch financially. Before you know it, you'll have quite a tidy sum tucked away.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Put a little "plus" in your future. Join the Payroll Savings Plan.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a good way to save.

Take stock in America.
Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

Lucy Koelling was a good friend and neighbor. We cherish her memory.

Patricia Miller and her six month old daughter Deena visited me Thursday afternoon. Since George wasn't here then we called on them at the George Bell home in the evening. While we were at the Bells our son Ken and grandson Tom came out and after some deducting found their way to the Bells too. They wanted to wish George a happy birthday. He still has them. Patricia, Willie and little Deena are moving from Lincoln to Denver next we

Our grandosn Rex, a sixth grader at Kearney had a part in a school play last week, which to my regret we missed seeing.

Our son Don, Theresa, Edwin and Rex and their neighbor boy Mark Ackerman came up from Kearney Sunday afternoon. They are looking forward to vacation. Theresa as a senior had only two days of actual school left.

Leading Tree Farmer of Nebraska Creates Oasis In The Sandhills; Given High Honor by Governor

Herman Jungck, who live in the heart of the Pineridge near Hay Springs, Sheridan County, has been named "Nebraska Tree farmer - of - the - Year," accord- to E. H. Benson, acting state forester.

He was congratulated for his achievements in forestry by Gov. James J. Exon at an awards ceremony held in the Pineridge Pavilion Conservation Center May 11.

As the first recipient of the annual forestry award, Jungck received a power chain saw from the McCulloch corporation and a copy of the book, The Secret Life of the Forest, from the St. Regis Paper company.

Benson, chairman of the Nebraska Tree Farm committee, said that the program gives public recognition to landowners who have demonstrated an outstanding ability to manage their woodlands and shelterbelts.

The Nebraska program is affiliated with American Forest Institute, national sponsor of the American Tree Farm system. The tree farm movement is active in 48 states and now lists 33,071 certified Tree Farms consisting of 72,129,859 acres of managed forest land.

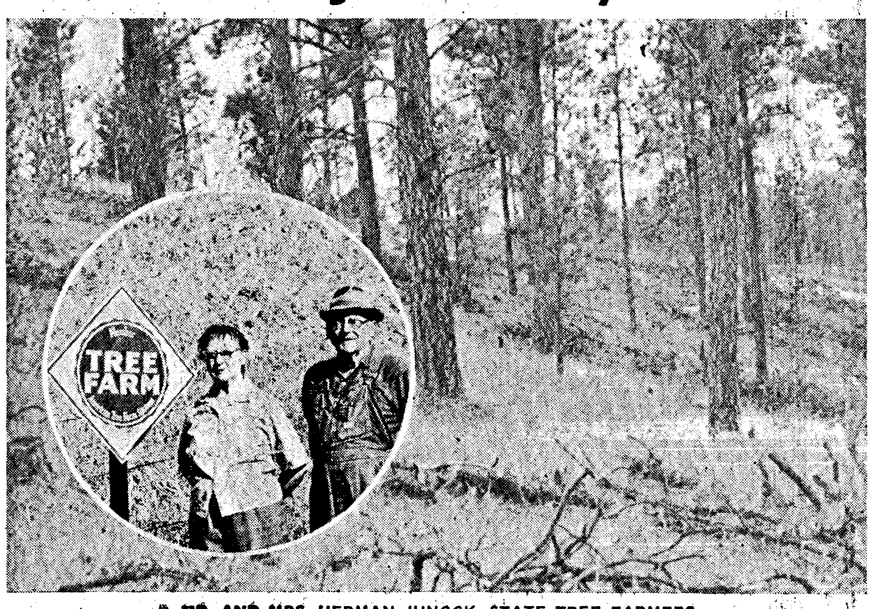
In the early 1880's, Herman Jungck's grandparents planted one of the first windbreaks in the area to tame the land and improve the environment. Remnants of that planting exist today, still protecting the homestead.

His parents took up farming in the 1890's. They also recognized the importance of trees, travelling from 30 to 50 miles by wagon to dig pine and cedar from the Pineridge to the north, and pull the broadleaf seedlings from the stream banks to the south.

As Herman took on farming and ranching on his own, he applied his youthful forestry experience to the land. Today, four farms have directly benefited from his "green thumb."

Jerry Mohler, extension forester at Chadron, said, "One of Herman's more outstanding efforts was the hand planting and successful establishment of a 10-row, one-mile-long, windbreak between 1938 and 1940."

"Another remarkable planting effort involved a blowout," he said. "In 1951, Herman fenced the cattle out of a four-acre area and planted it to pine and cedar to stabilize the sandy soil. Today the area appears as an oasis in the sandhills."



MR. AND MRS. HERMAN JUNGCK, STATE TREE FARMERS

In recent years, about 750,000 board feet of lumber, pulpwood, post and pole products have been cut from the Jungck Tree Farm. Much of the lumber was processed in his own sawmill.

The tree farm has a greater volume of growing timber than ever before, and it is growing faster and under more favorable conditions due to management.

The Jungck tree farm offers more than just a sustained source of high quality wood products. It is good habitat for wildlife and a favorite site for those wishing to cut a Christmas tree.

To Mr. and Mrs. Herman Jungck, however, the beauty of the trees and the protection they offer from the summer heat and winter cold are the most satisfying advantages gained from their forestry.

"If all private forest land were cared for like the Jungck properties, we could all be less concerned about the future of the nation's timber supply," Jerry Mohler said.

KERNELS & HUSKS

Valley County Agent

Early this month a hearing was held in the U.S. Senate to discuss drug residue in meat. Enforcement policies of both the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Food and Drug Administration came under close scrutiny at this hearing.

Each of you, in the livestock industry, producer and feeder alike, have a high stake in maintaining proper usage of feed additives and drugs in livestock feeding. Improper usage can cause financial hardship for livestock people. All slaughter animals are subject to inspection for residues. Violators can be prosecuted under the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, which carries penalties up to $10,000 fine and three years in jail.

More serious for the feeding industry, however, would be the removal of stilbestrol from the market because of excessive violations. Stilbestrol has saved feeders in excess of two billion dollars in feed costs since it was first cleared for use in 1954.

The most serious consequence of non-compliance and the resulting unfavorable publicity is that it could cause a reduced demand for meat products.

It is paramont that the livestock industry assure the consuming public that all meat products are safe and wholesome.

If recommended withdrawal periods are followed, there will be no stilbestrol or other drug residues in meat. To insure the consumer of a safe product, the U.S.D.A. has indicated that the rate of sampling of beef for stilbestrol residue will be stepped up in 1971.

A new voluntary program, sponsored by the National Animal Drug Certification committee, is another method of assuring consumers that the meat they eat is safe and wholesome.

This voluntary program enables feeders to certify in writing, when marketing their animals, that they have followed recommended procedures concerning FDA and USDA required withdrawal periods. Most packers are asked to request certification forms at the time of purchase on animals destined for immediate slaughter.

The Food and Drug Administration endorses the voluntary program as a perferred alternations governing the use of feed additives and drugs.

The best method of speeding up decay of tree stumps is to drill holes directly in the stump. Fill these holes with ammonium nitrate. The ammonium nitrate will furnish the nitrogen for bacteria and will thus hasten the decaying action.

Farm Collective Bargaining Bill

Senator Carl T. Curtis has joined with Senator John Tunney in sponsoring a proposed collective bargaining system for agriculture because "the greatest economic need of our entire country is a substantial raise in farm prices."

The Tunney-Curtis bill, would establish machinery for associations of farmers to bargain with buyers for a fair price for products grown by farmer members.

An association of farmers could obtain a certificate designating it as the bargaining agent, and the "handler" or buyer of farm products would be required to bargain in good faith as to prices to be paid for the products. Handlers would include such firms as flour, milk and meat packing plants.

The proposal would prohibit handlers from negotiating with any person or group other than the certified bargaining agent for a particular product.

The system could be used for determining the price of grain, sugar beets, milk, fruits, vegetables and even livestock. In the case of hogs, for example, collective bargaining by farmers for a fair and adequate price would be carried out prior to the breeding season.

15% of Corn Now Planted in Valley

Corn planting resumed in Valley county last Thursday and with warmer weather has been progressing well, according to the weekly crop report of John M. Schade, county agent.

Additional seedbed preparation, applying of fertilizer, spraying weeds, rebuilding fences, and hauling manure has been the other main farm work of the past week.

No evidence of early planted corn coming up was noted during the past week. Soil temperatures were favorable for planting. Light frost early in the week ending May 14th occurred, but no reported damage to crops was made.

Most of the cattle have been turned out to grass. Some supplemental feeding still continues on a few farms. Calf scours are cleared up. Background cattle are continuing to move to market.

Rainfall during the past week was 1.25 inches, with surface moisture adequate; and subsoil moisture in short supply. Winter wheat is excellent, alfalfa is rated good, and wild hay in fair condition. 15% of the corn is now planted, but no planting for sorghums or soybeans have yet taken place.

Pasture and range feeds are rated below average.

Personal Property Exemption is Major Issue of '71 Legislature

By Melvin Paul, NPA
Statehouse Correspondent

By the time this reaches print, one of the most hotly-contested issues of the 1971 legislative session should be decided.

Last week, Gov. J. James Exon sent the lawmakers his veto of LB 573 — a bill to implement a system of personal property tax exemptions for busi- and agriculture. An attempt to override that veto was scheduled for Tuesday of this week.

With the session in its final days, the outcome of the override motion was expected to be the end of a battle over personal property taxation which has extended over the full course of the 1971 meeting.

Exon has fought the exemption plan all the way and in his veto message he called LB 573 "unfair legislation under any reasonable standards."

He argued that the senators should sustain his veto and consider next session an alternative plan he said would be "fairer and more workable."

Here's the way Exon describes his alternative:

"A bill that could forgive over a reasonable period of time, up to one-half of the amount paid in personal property taxes, with a limit of up to, say, $1,000.

"This could be conveniently implemented as a credit against the income tax or a refund if no income tax was paid. This would give relief where it is needed most — to the average farmer and small businessman — without losing the revenue that would be lost as a tax break bonanza to the largest business and the largest farm operations, as would be the case under LB 573."

Under the Exon paln, a farmer or businessman whose personal property tax bill was $500 would have half of it exempted. He would pay $250. The state would make up the difference to the local governments relying on property tax revenue.

If the individual's personal property tax bill were $2,000 or more, he would pay $1,000. The limit would be $1,000.

Another idea was broached late in the session. This one from Papillion Sen. Orval Keyes. He suggested a system which would reduce gradually the percentage of actual value used for taxation.

Presently, assessed value — the amount against which mill levies are applied — is 35 per cent of actual value. Keyes proposed lowering this by 2 per cent a year until it reaches 25 per cent. The Keyes proposal would affect all kinds of property — not just personal property.

The revenue losses to the local governments would be — as with the other plans — made up through sales and income taxes.

The sponsor, Sen. Jules Burbach of Crofton, took issue with Exon's contention that the bill offered relief only to those who needed it the least at the expense of the average Nebraskan.

"This bill doesn't offer tax relief to only a tiny segment of our population," Burbach said. "It would affect thousands and thousands of our citizens directly, and nearly every one of us indirectly. Also, it provides relief for nearly as many urban people as it does rural people."

As to comments from opponents that the exemption schedule should have been more gradual — under the bill it would start at 35 per cent exemption and reach 90 per cent by 1978 — Burbach said:

"I don't know how much slower we could go and still claim to be accomplishing anything. Taking the long-range approach to arriving at a broad-based, equitable tax situation sometimes takes courage, and always takes patience."

The governor's veto message was brief. It read: "Lengthy discussion in this message will serve no useful purpose. You are aware of my opposition to this measure.

"We all recognize that there are legitimate concerns in some areas with regard to local taxes on business and agricultural inventory. Myself and others have suggested alternative proposals that should be considered in future sessions.

"Equality in taxation will not allow raising the sales and/or income taxes on the average citizen of this state in order to benefit, for the most part, a select group.

"I simply ask that you sustain my action because LB 573 is unfair under any reasonable standards."

Burbach has contended the exemptions proposed under LB 573 constituted the "third leg" of a tax reform program inaugurated in 1967.

He has said the first leg was the repeal of the household goods, head and intangible taxes. The second leg was the establishment of the sales and income tax program, and the repeal of the state property taxes.

Exemptions from portions of the personal property tax had to await the adoption of a constitutional amendment. In 1968, the voters rejected such an amendment, but it passed last fall.

That was Amendment 10, which allowed the lawmakers to divide personal property into classes and exempt any it wished entirely or in part.

4-H Bicycle Club Starting in Ord

A meeting was held Wednesday, May 19 to organize a 4-H bicycle club. This meeting was in the Valley County Extension Office starting at 7:30 p.m. This information comes from John Schade, Valley County Extension Agent.

The beginning bicycle project is designed to give members an understanding of the proper care and maintenance of their bicycles as well as an understanding of the safe rules and attitudes leading to proper bicycle driving behavior.

Membership in this group is open to boys age 9-11. Mr. Schade asked that parents, one or both, accompany the prospective member to this meeting.

So boys, find out where the action will be this summer, Mr. Schade says.

Some straight talk about kitchen ranges: Gas vs. Electric
Today's new kitchen range, whether it's gas or electric, is a gleaming assortment of some pretty fantastic equipment. For instance, what housewife 10 years ago ever dreamed that someday her oven would clean itself? Or 20 years ago, who'd have believed that a range could literally cook its own goose with the advent of programmed cooking?
Today, of course, both of these breakthroughs are standard equipment on almost every range. In fact, pound for pound, feature for feature, new ranges are quite similar. And either kind can make life a lot easier for busy mothers.
But there is one very important advantage of the gas range. It offers instant and precise temperature control that the other couldn't match with all the modern equipment in the world. And if you've ever ruined a roast or botched a cake because your oven stayed too hot too long, you know why instant on and off heat is so important. You also know why 9 out of 10 professional chefs prefer to cook with gas. Now, for some straight talk about how easy it is to own a beautiful new gas range, come see us.

TWO MILLION FOLLOW ORGANIC FARMING

By Bill Holman, Ord

Minimum tillage is widely used in Valley county to retain valuable moisture, according to John Schade. Yet, minimum tillage is just a microscopic part of the philosophy of organic farming, now followed by about 2 million farmers in the United States.

First, natural fertilizers only are used, so as to enhance the vitality of the crops. In this way, they are said to better withstand virus and bacteria diseases, just as healthy humans have more resistance to illnesses than those who are not well.

Rodale Farms, at Emmaus, Pa., is the center of the movement in America and issues "Organic Gardening and Farming" every month to 670,000 subscribers. It has also sold 210,000 copies of "Encyclopedia of Organic Farming."

Second, organic farmers say even the healthiest crops are subject to insect predators, and so every farmer should buildup his flocks of birds, both domestic and wild.

Turkeys will eat grasshoppers by the hundreds. Diet of the nighthawk consists of insects from the largest moths and dragonflies, to the smallest gnats and mosquitoes, as per Nebraska Conservation department, May 1971. It has been found that a house wren feeds 500 spiders and caterpillars to its young during one summer afternoon, a brown thrasher can eat 6,000 insects a day; a swallow devous 1,000 leaf hoppers in 12 hours; flickers eat thousands of ants. Toads, frogs and turtles also help. The ladybug or ladybird beetle eats aphids, mealy bugs, whiteflies, spidermites, insect eggs, larvae and scale, according to Christian Science Monitor, April 26, 1971.

Just as cats keep down rats which would otherwise spoil tons of grain, so organic farmers welcome flocks of healthy birds, to keep down crop insects.

Third, organic farmers stress feeding farm animals and humans, too, on healthy food and without insecticides or antibiotics (this means, they say, "anti-life.")

The reason why organic farmers avoid disinfectants in foods for farm animals is that worms and other microscopic forms of life extract food value from animal droppings. And the droppings become odor-free almost instantly.

For instance, Rodale farms have their chickens over a droppings pit, which has, among other things, good, rich earth with billions of active soil organisms. Believe it or not, there is no chicken odor at all in the building.

Illinois Research farms, McHenry, Illinois, who sell small animals, have found rabbit droppings a perfect food for earthworms. and they, too, secure an odor free building.

When animals are given too many disinfectants or antibiotics these elements are eliminated and concentrated and eventually kill all the earth bacteria. Then you have an odor you can't stand. And this material in rivers and lakes, tends tokill fish and trees.

Fourth, organic farming ends the need for aerial spraying unless the farmers wants to give extra fertilizer to specific crop areas.

2,4-D, widely used in Vietnam for killing foliage, is said by organic farmers as being able to kill foliage in this country, too. One observor at the Ord Golf club house said last summer, one spray plane killed all the buds in the top 25% of a tree. Weakening of the ability of the trees to withstand disease is believed the cause for the death of hundreds of Nebraska elm trees, organic farmers would aver.

Fifth, deformed children have been caused by thalidomide, a nerve sedative originally said to have no after effect. But DDT, as per National Enquirer for April 25, 1971 causes the bones in chickens to develop to only half size. Sir Bernard Katz, 1970 Nobel prize winner, found calcium to be the main essential of good nerves. Calcium also tends to avoid cramps, poor teeth, poor heart action and a whole spectrum of disease symptoms.

Hence, it can be seen that organic farmers believe indiscriminate aerial spraying, farm pesticides, and antibiotics could be indirectly tied to deformed or retarded children. For if DDT weakens the calcium reserves of the body, the developing child obviously cannot have proper nerves and proper development. Doctors in Italy and Sweden have also banned all hormone-treated American poultry and beef as too harmful to their youth, citing they believe it causes sterility, as per the same issue of National Enquirer.

Parathion, used instead of DDT is just as bad, as per Jack Anderson, national news commentator. Thirty-two persons already have been killed. Unlike DDT, which builds up for 10 years, parathion kills instantly, with the victim nauseated. Atropine is the only antidote.

Organic farming, adherents state, could thus save us from these many hazards. Is it the biggest advance in farming in 4,000 years?

Old-Fashioned Marriage Might Still Be Fashionable

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

Do you recollect the report a few years back where this cotton mill in North Carolina give 200,000 dipers to this African country, and the men over there used em fer head turbons? The way things is gitting turned around, Mister Editor, switching ends with them dipers wouldn't git a line in the papers now.

Not to long back, the wimmen set at home and welcomed their men back from hunting and fishing, cause what the men brung home was what the family had to eat. Now I see by the paper where a bunch of wimmen is calling theirselfs Friends of Animals, and they want to do away with hunting complete. That is, they want to stop men from hunting animals and start hunting wimmen more.

Before everthing got switched around, wimmen that wanted the men to pay some mind to em could think of a lot better things to do than carry signs around on a stick inviting the men to prove their manhood. And while one bunch of wimmen is trying to stop hunting, more of em is trying to git laws passed to make three-year marriage contracts legal. It looks like the wimmen want the men around the house, but not fer long.

A salesman stopped by the country store Saturday night, and he got into a discussion the fellers was having about how old is old enuff to vote. The salesman, that looked to be about 40 year old, said he was fer raising the voting age to 40. Farthermore, he said, the worst mistake ever made in trying to run a Guvernment by the people and fer the people was when the men give the wimmen the right to vote.

Mister Editor, I won't go that fer, cause I know if we got the wimmen really riled they could vote men plum out of the country. But it does look like wimmen has got this disease of turning everthing around and looking at it from the back side. And I think we ought to worry when the wimmen that interduced a bill making marrying a three-year contract said they knowed the idee would go over with the 18-year-old voters.

Actual, it ain't the short-term marrying that's switched around, it's the understanding of what marriage is in the first place. Maybe I'm wrong, but I allus had the idee that gitting married is a serius business, and that picking a mate was a fer cry from buying a car that you can turn in as soon as the next model comes out.

But general speaking, Mister Editor, the more some things gits turned around, the more they wind up like they was. Fer instant, I take all this stuff about free love and "commune" living with a big grain of salt. All these folks is trying to do is git the family idee catching on again. The old fashion family, pa, ma and the younguns, may come back in style if we keep switching around.

Yours truly,
GERANIUM JOE

New Third district census data has been released by Congressman Dave Martin. The report shows the state population at 1,483,791, and the Third District at 494,361, or 33.3% of the state total.

The Third District has the highest median age, 31.5 years; the higehst rural population, 289,422 or 58.5%; and the highest number of housing units. Third District population is 8.4 per square mile, compared to a state average of 19.4 persons; and the lowest number per household, 2.74.

The Third District is 99.2% white, with only 764 Negro and 2,949 other races. Women outnumber men by 252,247 to 242,114, and urban population is 204,939 or 41.5% compared to the 289,422 rural. There were 190,789 persons under age 21, less than 40%, and 303,572 persons age 21 or over. The highest federal outlays were again in Agriculture at $244 million, representing 40 percent of the district total. Second highest was again in Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), with $126 million or 20 percent of the district total.

WASHINGTON REPORT

China Seeks Billion Dollars Worth of Planes

BY PAUL SCOTT
Former Greeley Resident

Communist China is dangling some tempting bait before the Western world. Her diplomats have put out feelers to purchase an estimated billion dollars worth of commercial jet airliners from private companies in the U.S., France, Great Britain, or a combination of these nations, and Russia.

The long-range, high speed aircraft would be used by Peking to open up passenger air service to all corners of the globe including direct air service to cities in Canada, Mexico, and the U.S.

There are unconfirmed reports that the Chinese Communists want at least one of these super-jet aircraft to fly its diplomats to the United Nations next year should membership be granted that communist government.

The government owned and run airline of the Chinese Reds now has only the limited capability of flying to bordering nations such as Afghanistan, Burma, Mongolia, North Korea, North Vietnam, and Irkutsk, a Siberian city in the Soviet Union.

To extend this air service further, Peking needs the longer-range and more modern jet aircraft such as the Boeing 707, 727, 747, or the Douglas DC-8 and DC-10 — types of jets that the Chinese diplomats have indicated that their government would like to purchase from private U. S. companies or through third parties.

Communist China is now producing some military jets, patterned on Soviet models, but none of these are large, intercontinental passenger jets capable of spanning the Pacific and Atlantic oceans and other continents.

The "Red Dragon" feelers are being carefully examined by the staff of the National Security Council, the government's highest policy making body, as part of an overall review of U.S. policy toward Mainland China. The review is expected to determine the position of President Nixon toward the admission of Red China to the U.N. next year.

Specifically under study are reports that Peking wants to purchase from 75 to 125 aircraft depending on the size and make of the aircraft, and what kind of a deal can be negotiated. It is believed here that any deal with Red China would require the sale of the jets through third parties and include easy terms for the communists.

How Red China could pay for the aircraft is the big mystery since that nation is now using nearly all of its foreign currency to pay for grain purchases from Canada and Australia to feed its teeming millions. These purchases are known to have taken that country's foreign currency reserves.

While no decision has been made on whether U.S. aircraft companies should be permitted to make the aircraft sales to Peking directly or indirectly, there has been a lot of backstage discussions on a possible "trade off" being arranged.

For instance, one proposal is for the U.S. to agree to the sale in exchange for an understanding from Peking to cut back its military forces and reduction of shipments of military supplies to North Vietnam and North Korea.

Members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff are convinced that anyone supporting such a proposal is whistling in the dark. They say Peking would never agree to such an arrangement. The President's military advisers are against the sale although they have not yet been formally asked to present their views.

In informal talks with White House staff members, the President's military advisers have taken the position that the sale of the aircraft to Peking would be against the security of this country. It would permit that nation to obtain jets that could be used for military as well as non-military purposes.

The military version of the 707, which Red China wants, is the KC-135 tanker, which carries at least 50,000 pounds of jet fuel. It has long range, and can refuel other aircraft in midair. This is the type of plane that the Chinese Communists would like to have to beef-up the range of its medium range bombers. The 707 also could easily be turned into a troop carrying aircraft.

Administration insiders say that business friends and campaign supporters of President Nixon are actively urging him to approve the sale of jet aircraft to Communist China.

Their argument is that these sales will help the financially-distressed aircraft industry. These "friends of the President" are in the banking industry with huge investments in the aircraft industry or in commercial airlines.

The Nixon Administration already has approved trade with Red China by such American companies as General Motors, American Optical, Sperry Rand, Commins Engine, and such a giant chemical firm as Monsanto, and Hercules. Using a third party (the Italians), General Motors recently sold $680,000 in truck engines and parts to Red China, and another $100,000 in earth moving equipment.

Records of the Commerce Department show that thus far less than a half dozen license applications for shipment of American equipment and products to Communist China have been turned down. As of now, Boeing 707s and Douglas DC-8s are not among the licensed exports. However, this can be changed by a stroke of President Nixon's pen.

A great many world airlines use the American 707s and DC-8s and to some extent foreign lines, like our own, will soon be replacing them with jumbo jets of greater range and capacity. There is no doubt that these airlines would like to sell Mao.

KERRY ON

By Kerry Leggett

—early starts—

If you happen to be the only male in the household — like myself — you'll know there's little necessity of Women's Lib.

With all the school activities of the final weeks, I'm lucky if I get the bathroom at all. Even with a half-bath in the basement, seldom can I find one or the other vacant.

Knowing the hecticness of school's closing functions (prom, cheerleader try-outs, class night, dances, etc.) I decided it MAY be easier for me to change MY habits.

First I must explain that I'm a late-sleeper and usually it takes six cups of coffee and a dozen cigarettes before I can remember what day it is. So I'm not the easiest in the world to awaken. Then it takes some doing for me to get my bearings and the morning bathroom ritual is usually by chance — and not by choice.

Adding to the confusion of the bathroom are the modern packaging methods of today — and the ever-changing brand names. Tooth paste always came in tubes — when I was young — or a powder, and the container was recognizable even under the half-awake condition I operate in the mornings.

Deciding that it might be easier if I got up a little bit before everyone else and finished in the bathroom, I tried to readjust my habits for the feverish closing days of school. I'm thinking — now — it might be easier to get a room at the motel and just take my meals at home.

Half-awake, I wandered into the bathroom the other morning and without washing my face, first, I decided I'd COMPLETELY change the routine and brush my teeth. So I put the electric toothbrush together, which is a job in itself. The girls are considerate enough to hang my brush upside down so I don't get it mixed up with their's.

Grabbing what I thought was tooth powder, I suddenly realized it didn't taste up to par. Opening one eye a little further, I noted the brand name "Quest" on the side of the container. I didn't recall that brand of tooth powder, so I closely read the side of the little plastic container and realized I was using a deodorant powder for sanitary napkins!

Before I was fully awake and to my senses, I had sprayed my hair with feminine deodorant spray (FDS) and was having trouble getting my arms loose from my armpits, mistaking "Climatress Hair Spray" for the underarm deodorant I usually use.

So now I've conceded to the fact that I'm going to await the early-morning bathroom activity and take 'last round.' I may be a bit late for work, but I'm sure I'll at least smell like a man and be able to raise my arms without feeling like someone put paste in my armpits.

If I can still smile, you can bet it will be that "Pepsodent smile," and not something out of the 'Impossible Dream.'

Something Different

As Bad As the Robins

Spring is truly nesting time, and not only for the silly robins who are foolishly fluttering about in my Russian olive trees, next door to numbers of little black cats, little "Meese" cats.

I hope the robins settle in one of my trees but I think they're inviting disaster, for these cats are good hunters and often rob nests in the wild grasses of the hilltop across the street from me.

But don't all of us go a little stir crazy come spring? Is it the result of being shut in the house all winter?

Flower catalogs look so inviting I want to order everything in there even though I'm overplanted now. The first blossoms are cherished, one by one as they burst out. It's great fun to tour Ord streets and spy the tulips, the daffodils, the ground covers in their glory.

It isn't yard and garden work only which are intriguing.

When I walk in a fabric shop I can see a dozen pretty bolts or prints that I want to buy anl begin sewing up into a something or other. I can hardly resist. Sometimes I don't.

The yarns, the knits, the patterns, all of them are eye-catching and entice me too much.

The same with cleaning up the house, I desire to shift the china cups from here to there. I desire new shelf paper, I want new paint, new colors, new arrangements of furniture. An irresistable wish to change overwhelms me. I'm as bad as the robins.

And it's picnic time once more. Don't we all bounce outside and begin toasting weiners, shake out the potato chips, try to anchor the tablecloth in spite of the breezes. It's chicken frying time, it's potato salad time, it's time to make rhubarb pie and strawberry shortcake.

A better time to start over than New Year's ever thought of being.

By Dena Sintek

Mayor Don Waller, in cooperation with the Citizens for Improvement Committee, has proclaimed May 23rd to 29th as Clean-up, Fix-up, Paint-up week for the North Loup Village.

The committee is sponsoring a window decorating contest to honor returning North Loup Alumni. A prize will be given for the best window decoration. The word "alumni" must be used in the window. On Thursday evening May 27th the residents and businessmen on the north side of Main Street will be in competition with those on the south side of the street to see who can get the windows, streets, and steps on their side of the street the cleanest. The firemen will be on hand to help with the street washing and a prize will be offered to the person who can keep the driest and for the one who gets the wettest (while working). Bring your brooms and rags for a family fun night to get our town ready for the alumni banquet and Memorial Day.

This work Mary Ann carried on five evenings each week for several years till she came to North Loup to make her home with her mother. Approve Natural Gas Company For Big Construction Project

The Federal Power commission has approved the application filed by Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas company in December, to construct about $9.2 million in new facilities in Nebraska and Wyoming this year. The firm serves Ord and Valley County.

Thomas Creigh, Jr., president, said the company's heavy construction program for 1971 is largely a result of major new quantities of natural gas from the prolific Hilight Field north of Douglas, Wyoming. He said the construction of major new pipelines and compressor facilities is necessary to handle the increasing quantities of gas being produced in Wyoming.

"This new gas supply will enhance our capability to deliver greater amounts of natural gas to our customers," Creigh said. "However, this construction will be costly and the new gas supplies which we have purchased are substantially higher than those gas purchases we've made in the past."

Creigh also added that K-N's current natural gas reserves constitute an approximate 18 year supply based on 1970 system demand. He pointed out that past publicity about a critical nationwide gas shortage does not effect K-N customers.

An order issued this week by the Federal Power commission approved the settlement of a rate application filed by Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Company in August. The settlement allows K-N to increase its rates by 25 percent to nine wholesale customers for resale in 65 towns in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado.

K-N's primary reason for requesting the rate increase was a sharp increase in field costs of new gas supplies being secured by the company. The company's application also cited increased costs in material, labor and financing as justification for its increase.

This Week's Meditation

Read II Corinthians 1:3-7

To me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. (Philippians 1:21, RSV)

At a youth rally an ex-movie star turned minister told the young people that their newfound love of Christ might cause them to be ostracized by some of their friends. He told them that they might face enmity from teachers and other adults. Then he smiled and said, "I guess you've just got to expect that; for when you take up that rough cross, you're bound to get some splinters in your back."

We need to realize that God has not promised Christians an easy life, only a satisfying life, a life full of service and love. We recall that Paul was beaten, shipwrecked and imprisoned; yet he could say, "As we share abundantly in Christ's sufferings, so through Christ we share abundantly in comfort too."

Some young people are frustrated and angry because they cannot seem to change a world they did not make. Many more finding that by taking up Christ's splintery cross they are doing the one thing that really changes lives. And changing lives through love that radiates from cross-bearing Christians is moving in the direction of changing the world.

PRAYER: Thank You, dear Lord, for letting me take up a cross to serve You this day. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY:

One life motivated by Christian love is a move toward a better world.

— Kenneth M. Claar (Camarillo, Calif.)

This aerial picture of Fort Hartsuff shows the general arrangement of the historic park. Present road comes in from the left, between the small building in center of field and then cuts across the field and up toward the top of the picture and then swings to the right, and back down in front of buildings located among trees at right and at bottom. The guard house is the small building in center of field and this is being modernized. Office building is at lower left; hospital building is near upper right, and officer quarters is near lower right. Picture by Dr. Glen Auble.

$43,500 Allocated for Fort Hartsuff Upgrading

Fort Hartsuff appropriations totalling $43,500 have been approved by the Nebraska legislature and work is already underway on improvements for the historic park, north of Ord, according to Dr. Glen Auble, donor of the land to the state.

Heating plants will be installed in four buildings at the site, built in 1874. The hospital building, officer quarters, guard house and office building are the ones.

After this is done, wall board and plaster will be installed, and work done to provide for displays. Many of these will be provided by the Nebraska Historical Society, but local mementos of interest will also be provided.

A major new advance for the park is the upgrading of the Elyria - Fort Hartsuff road, which has been completely surveyed. The road then will be regraded, widened, corners made smoother, hard-surfaced and finally oiled. This road work will take up to two months to complete, it has been estimated.

Visitors to the Park have been frequent, according to Park Superintendent Victor Leonard. Some cars come in every day, and quite a few weekends. Several school groups already have gone through the park, and after the buildings are in reasonable shape, many more are expected.

Fort Hartsuff is one of only five historic parks in the entire state of Nebraska, others being Ash Hollow, Arbor Lodge, Buffalo Bill ranch, and Fort Kearny. The Fort was established by General E. O. C. Ord, after whom the city of Ord was named.

Improvements in Administration of Justice Backed by County Attorney

"Law Reform" was the topic of J. Marvin Weems, County attorney, who gave the chief address at the tenth annual awards banquet of the Ord Jaycees Saturday in Veterans Club.

Kerry Leggett, publisher of the Ord Quiz, was master of ceremonies and Mrs. Leggett and Mrs. Weems were honored with corsages.

"The jam in the courts and delays in the administration of fair justice has come about because of the growth in multiple trials and appeals, more thorough and detailed cross-examinations, more care to protect the rights of the accused, the increase in autos — chief cause or lawsuits, and increase in population," he said.

"Yet, the basic function of government is to protect the citizen from those who cannot live properly. But this cannot be done when cases, in some cases, continue for ten yars, allowing for appeals; or when trials are not held promptly. Innocent persons may have to spend many months in jail, if they cannot raise bond,

Opening and program concluding remarks will be made by Commander Alvin Moudry. Auxiliaries of the Legion and V.F.W. will conduct a floral wreath ceremony, and introduction of the speaker will be by Commander Moudry. A salute to the dead will be given by a firing squad of veterans.

"We have spent the past 13 years in preparation for Life after graduation. We have studied science and agriculture and mathematics so we can understand the complexities of our environment and make applications to them. We have studied history and English and other humanities to more fully understand the human race and to to be able to communicate with one another.

"And with the belief that the mind functions better with a strong and healthy body, we have participated in physical education and athletics.

Status of Paving Alleys in Ord is Topic of June 3 Chamber Meeting

Members of the Ord city council street committee will be specially invited to the June 3 noon meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in the Elks club to explain what can be done relative to paving downtown alleys in Ord, it was decided at the Retail Trades committee meeting May 19.

Park development status was explained by Dr. Glen Auble, as two-fold. First, six acres north of the athletic field set aside for recreation is being worked on, and grass is being seeded. A camp for travel trailers is palnned with some lots set up for water, lights and sewer connections. No commercial buildings will be put up in the area, except for refreshment stands.

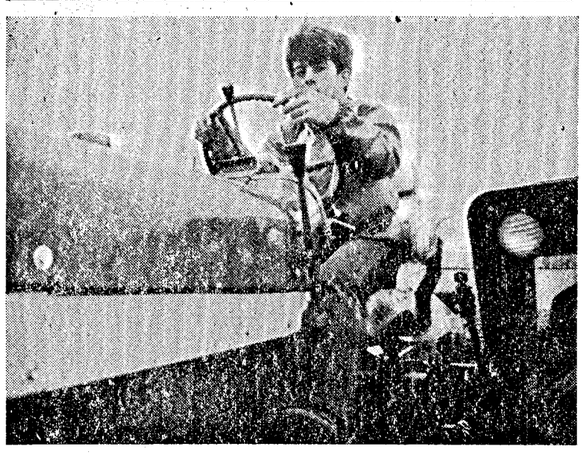
A second project has been sought since 1968. This would include two golf bridges at the Ord Golf course, two lighted tennis courts, canopy over shuffleboard court, and one water display system at old wading pool.

According to Dr. Auble, this has been tentatively approved for by both state and federal tax disbursing agencies for construction in 1972. Half the costs would come from federal bureaus.

Discussion of Rotary club plans for a fire works display July 4th took place. Also, it was reported by Don Blaha, president of First National bank, that two commercial properties have been bought in Ord by the bank, and may be developed. These are the old Texaco station and Shade-Lite Marquee building on 14th and M.

An auction night will take place June 24. Two items will be sold at auction in front of each store which faces courthouse square. Eldon Buoy will be auctioneer and the action will start in front of John's Jewelry. Mike Spear is chairman and Del Lonowski is co-chairman.

A Father's day promotion prior to June 20th was studied. Also, more data on program for dedication of Ord's airport June 20 runway was divulged. The Chamber of Commerce and Mrs. Jaycees will each have a concession stands at the airport that day.



41 to Earn Safe Driving Permits

Ed Smith of Ericson as shown taking the Extension Service safe tractor training course which was conducted during recent Saturdays in Ord. He was one of 41 who took the course from Loup, Valley, Wheeler, Garfield, Greeley and Sherman counties. When he finished the course, he was qualified to be certified to operate farm power machines.

The course Saturday had driver tests at the Valley County fairgrounds and classroom sessions at Ord high school. Vo-ag instructors at Ord, Frank Andreesen; at North Loup-Scotia, Roland Essman; at Burwell, Don Phillips, and at Bartlett, Ernest Erxleben, were in charge at the fairgrounds, while John Schade, county agent for Valley county, conducted the school classes.

Other teachers were Lee Nielson, Greeley county agent, Dean Robinson, Garfield-Loup-Wheeler counties agent, and Lawrence Lang, Sherman county.

In addition to handling tractors, farm safety was taught in the use of combines, mowers, balers, hay conditioners, field grinders, power unloading feeder wagon, fork lifts, stalk shredders and forage choppers.

Under Nebraska law, driving permits must be secured for 13 or 14 year olds who wish to use power equipment. 130 boys have been so certified during the years the course has been given in this region.

About 3,000 have been certified throughout the state.

John Schade's "Kernels and Husks" Column Best in State

"A good job of work!" was the verdict of judges in giving John Schade, County Agent, a 96 point rating out of a possible 100 and first place in the entire state for his news column regularly carried on Section two, Page one of the Quiz.

The University of Nebraska extension service rated 31 county agents on their public information efforts the past year and found Mr. Schade doing the best job of all in his news column.

Winners were also named for best radio program, single news photo, colored slides, direct mail piece, and best feature story.

Robert A. Woolman, county agent at Papillion, in charge, said "Nice job — keep up the good work," Mr. Schade's column will be enetered in a regional competition and local friends trust he will win there also.

He won perfect rating in personalized approach, appearance of copy, and obeying entry regulations. He was only two points off in interesting and timely news, one point shy on readability, and one point short on originality.

YOUR DOLLAR BUYES MORE AT LEE'S STORE IN ORD

CAROL'S CORNER by carol leggett

A lot of things have been said of Happiness. One husband claims that Happiness is losing an argument to your wife only to find out later she was really wrong after all!

Another vows it is having your wife try on a dress they can't afford and finding out it doesn't fit her anyway!

Happiness for a wife might be learning that the gorgeous young blonde examining the empty house next door is only the real estate agent!

It might also be getting a nasty letter about an unpaid bill when you've just gotten back your cancelled check. Or learning the kid who thinks your child is stupid has to go to summer school, too.

Happiness can surely be finding out your high-school sweetheart looks 20 years older, too.

One gal says Happiness is finding your glasses soon enough that you can remember what you wanted them for.

—O—

Just before the end of May, in the little town of Ford City, Pa., candles are distributed to every home in the foothill community. At exactly 10:14 p.m. on the evening before Memorial Day the bells in the churches begin to ring for one minute. Then the lights of every home, store, and automobile are turned off. All traffic even the night freight trains stops its clanging. Stillness and darkness are evident. Then the people step out on their front lawns, light the candles and sing the Lord's Prayer. Over a loudspeaker comes a short address by a clergyman, then a rifle salute followed by taps. The candles are extinguished. The lights go on again. Cars begin to move. But for ten minutes everyone has remembered the boys who died for their country.

This Old Favorite Casserole recipe might be one to keep in mind for use on your next extra busy day. You may even want to double it, so there'll be plenty to refrigerate — then reheat in a day or two.

The needed ingredients are: 1 lb. ground beef; 1 small onion; 1 can mixed vegetables; 1 can peas; 1 can Mushroom soup; 1 can Chicken Rice soup and 1 can Chinese noodles.

Brown ground beef and onion together, put in casserole and add vegetables, peas and soups. Mix and bake for 45 minutes. Remove from oven and add Chinese noodles stir, then continue to bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes longer.

Ord Athletes, Both Boys and Girls, in Action

Tracy Johnson of Ord won the 12 year old Pitch, Hit and Throw contest on the Valley county courthouse lawn Saturday. He had to run from the left, pick up a baseball and throw at a target 120 feet away, without stepping over the white line. Other picture shows another Ord athlete, Rita Waldmann, taking fourth in the long jump event in the recent girl's state track meet at Grand Island. She also won third in the 100 yard dash.

Pitch, Hit, Throw Contest Champs

Many Players at Ord Golf Course

Ord golf course has been open several weeks, and play is increasing as more and more members are stroking the fairways and putting greens evenings after work, as well as Saturdays and Sundays.

Fred Williams, track coach at Ord high, has been one of the leaders in summer play, scoring a 37 recently. On the par four ninth hole, he drilled a scorching drive over halfway to the pin, then dropped a high arching approach shot within three feet. One putt gave him an eagle three.

An eastern golf pro, Stuart Murray of Natick, Mass., with 40 years of teaching golf, now says the way to drive is to direct power, by sense of feeling to the clubhead. Have a natural swing, he recommends, and forget distortion of limbs, body or twists of the wrist. He says, "Feel the clubhead swinging, pulling on the fingers, and forget everything else."

His complete article is in May 11 issue of Christian Science Monitor.

$1,000 to Fairs, Ak-Sar-Ben Offer

For the 18th straight year, Ak-Sar-Ben is offering matching grants to the county fairs of Nebraska, General Manager Tom Brock announced this week. Valley Paying More U.S. Taxes Than Federal Grants Amount To

In the distribution of Federal funds to communities across the country, via the various grants-in-aid programs, how has Valley County been making out?

What portion of the grants made during the past year, totaling $23.5 billion, went to the local area?

Judging from state-by-state figures compiled by the Tax Foundation, a national non-profit organization that watches government taxation and spending, Valley County's allotment was relatively small.

During the past fiscal year, an estimated $508,000 was awarded for local purposes under a number of aid programs.

Throughout the State of Nebraska as a whole, the grants totaled $130,000,000, the Tax Foundation reports, based upon figures it obtained from the Treasury Department.

The grants were made to help the state and its communities with such needs as urban renewal, roads, school construction, child welfare, health facilities and education.

The amounts, it is explained, refer only to grants-in-aid and do not cover other Federal spending in local areas, such as for goods and services.

On the other side of the ledger is the cost of these benefits to the local communities. They are paid for out of Federal income and excise taxes that are collected from local residents and allocated to the aid programs.

Valley County's contribution for such purposes in the past fiscal year was approximately $589,000, a breakdown of the foundation's figures shows. The statewide total came to $151,000,000.

In most parts of the country, the grants and the costs do not balance out equally. There is no attempt to make them balance. The determining factor in awarding grants, it is explained, is each community's needs and requirements, weighed against the needs of other localities.

As a result, in some areas the contributions to the aid programs far exceed the return in the form of grants. In others the reverse is true.

The extent to which the grants have multiplied in size in recent years is indicated by the Treasury Department's figures which show that they have climbed from nearly $7 billion in 1960 to $23.5 billion last year.

Dave Martin Explains Social Security, Welfare Provisions

Congressman David Martin's weekly newsletter contains the following:

The House Ways and Means Committee last week reported out amendments to the Social Security and Welfare Acts. The main provisions of the Social Security Amendments are as follows:

1) An increase in benefits of 5% effective June 30, 1972 (this is in addition to the 10% increase voted this year retroactive to January 1, 1971.

2) The Social Security tax rate will be increased from 5.2% to 5.4% effective January 1, 1972 to be paid by both employee and employer.

3) Increase the maximum yearly earnings on which Social Security taxes must be paid from the current $7800 to $10,200 per year effective January 1, 1972. This increases the maximum tax from $405.60 to $550.80 each for employees and employers.

4) The bill calls for an automatic increase in Social Security benefits and taxes in any year when the Consumer Price Index rises by at least 3%. The size of the automatic increase will be tied to the size of the increase in the cost of living.

Welfare Reform:

This legislation amends the present Federal welfare laws as follows:

1) All able-bodied persons on welfare will have to work if jobs are available or they would be dropped from the welfare rolls (this provision should have been included in the welfare law for many years)

2) A Federal guarantee of a minimum of $2400 income for a family of four (I am completely opposed to this provision)

3) Cost to the states of welfare programs would be guaranteed not to exceed that which was paid out during calendar year 1971.

4) The above guarantee, however, would increase current Federal welfare costs by approximately $5.5 billion per year over and above the present $9 billion per year which is being expended at the Federal level.

5) Current Federal - state programs of aid to the aged, blind and disabled will be replaced by a total Federal program gradually over a three-year period.

This legislation is expected to be considered on the floor of the House about the middle of June.

$1,600 in Scholarships Open For 4-H Club Members in State

1971 is the 50th anniversary of the National 4-H Congress and the National 4-H Service Committee. It is appropriate that the Edwin T. Meredith Foundation once again is providing two scholarships of $800 each to present or former 4-H members.

The late E. T. Meredith, interested in rural youth, served as the first president of the National Committee. The Foundation, named for him, carries on his interest in youth by providing these grants for the tenth consecutive year.

Candidates applying for the scholarships must plan to enroll as freshmen at an accredited college or university in the fall of 1971. They also must reside in one of 15 states: Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Wisconsin. And candidates must have completed at least three years of 4-H work.

A special scholarship application form is available from the state 4-H leader or county extension office. The completed form, a transcript of high school grades and a statement of the applicants interest and desire to enroll in college will be reviewed by an Extension Service committee in selecting the winners. Deadline for submitting applications are established in the respective states.

and criminals are benefitted, if witnesses move away, or die, or if evidence is lost.

"Changes which may be worthy of considering include the European one of not allowing multiple appeals, having trials promptly, and more useful vocational training in prisons.

"After conviction, we especially should follow the California method of emphasizing reform and probation, and so lead the prisoner back to useful life in society. Emphasis should be on rehabilitation, and not punishment, for at the present time, two-thirds of all prisoners become repeaters.

"Valley county's method of using volunteer laymen to act as probationers is an excellent one and is one way, a citizen can help. Another way a citizen can help maintain law and order is to report all crimes promptly, and not to expect others to do so.

Mr. Weems also discussed preventive measures, such as annual psychiatrist examiniations to detect unstable personalities, such as the killers of Sharon Tate. However he said such measures would have to have safeguards to protect the citizen's Constitutional rights.

Highest award of the evening went to Gaylord Boilesen, who was given the Gold Key, which has only been given once before in the ten-year history of the chapter. He was given it for outstanding service within the chapter and to the community.

Two Spoke awards, for attaining important Jaycee goals, went to Mr. Kriewald and Dan Schram.

Sparkplug awards went to six individuals Richard Elsberry, Dale Zadina, Allen Cetak, Mr. Boilesen, Jerry Bauer, and Emanuel Sich. Also, the award will be given Ron Rice, who was inadvertently not recognized at the meeting.

Outstanding chairman of the year was Mr. Schram. Certificates of appreciation went to KLNV radio station, Ord Quiz, Marvin Weems, and President Sich recognized the work of the Mrs. Jaycees with a hand-crafted gift to each.

Mr. Sich was given a past president's plaque.

Mrs. Jaycee awards went to Mrs. Iris Mulligan, as J-Cette of the year. Key women award went to Kathy Boilesen; sparkette awards went to Dorrita Petska, Kathy Boilesen, and Sharon Blaha. tive citizenship will never become outmoded or obsolete, for there will always be countless poblems lacking solutions, and in every field known to man. In order to solve them, however, we must continue our learning process, and find better ways and discover more successful techniques," he concluded.

Janice Williams Gives Salutatorian Address

This is the complete text of the Salutatory given at graduation exercises at North Loup-Scotia high school last Thursday. Janice is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Udell Williams, of North Loup.

We have departed from the classrooms and we have closed our textbooks. We may never write another English essay, or solve another math problem, or do another chemistry experiment. But it was fun. And there will be more.

Our teachers have kept in mind, as they must ever do, that not scholarship, but character, is the end of education; character that will use scholarship for the betterment of mankind. Their highest function consists not so much in imparting knowledge as in stimulating the pupil in its love and pursuit.

David Hume made the statement, "The sweetest path of life leads through the avenues of learning, and whoever can open up the way for another, ought, so far, to be esteemed a benefactor to mankind."

One of the most precious things which new graduates are likely to miss is the thrill of continued learning. True, we will soon walk across the stage to claim a piece of paper symbolic of a commendable achievement. But school, for us, is not over. Seniors, do not close the doors of your mind against the new ideas that will be about you through all the days of your years.

On the day when we neglect to embrace some challenging new thought, life will have lost 90 per cent of its zest and thrill. We have finished the academic curriculum and have attained a notable milestone, and are now enrolled as a full-time pupil in the school of life, with all its opportunities. Make the most of it! Get as much knowledge as you can. Lord Chesterfield told his son there was no place where he may not gain knowledge if he wants; almost everybody knows some one thing, and is glad to talk about that one thing.

Here is a story that tells about an educated man:

"There is a certain man to whom many point as 'just a plugger.' He has never had the advantage of what the world calls an education, but those who know him best call him an educated man.

"Why do they call this un-schooled man educated? He keeps his appointments to the minute. He knows how to make friends and keep them. He believes in looking after his business and making his family happy. But let trouble come to any of his friends, he finds plenty of time to lend a hand.

"He finds a welcome wherever he goes. He knows the value of the other man's time. A wave of his hand, and his hearty 'Good morning, neighbor,' puts something into the day's work that feels like faith and courage. And he knows nothing except the good about people.

"He can look into a wayside puddle and see something besides mud, and he can look into the face of the most forlorn mortal and see something beyond sin. And amid the meaner drudgeries of life, he carries in his heart a bit of song. He is a truly educated man."

Education is a companion which no misfortune can decrease, no crime destroy, no enemy alienate, no despotism enslave; at home and in solitude, a friend; in society, an ornament. Education may cost financial sacrifice and mental pain, but in both money and life values it will repay cost one hundred-fold. According to what man believes, he will achieve.

The essentials of life never change. Honesty, diligence, kindliness, courtesy, sincerity, and other virtues remain the same throughout the ages. But new conditions, new responsibilities, and new opportunities compel us, if we would make progress, to keep up to date in our thinking, and in the conduct of our daily lives.

I heard a statement, "So tragically often truth is an excuse for becoming bitter, and bitterness cannot draw anyone to truth. It only drives one away." When one person cheats — during a test in school or anytime — and does real well, it makes the other person bitter because he worked hard and tried to do his best honestly, and he still came out at the bottom. Those people who were honest may feel like they want to cheat, too, so they will be do better. But we have to stick to the truth and to our values. We'll learn to not let it be an excuse to become bitter, and in the end, we'll find that honesty is the easist way out.

Every day we wait, we lose. We plan and hope and think and dream and loiter and wait. All our lives, we get ready to do something worthwhile. We wait until the time is almost spent.

But there are so many things in life to enjoy. Nothing is to be gained by going around with a long face. We must stop grumbling, see the good in the world, and keep the bad to ourselves.

Happiness comes from having something to do, something to love, and something to hope for. We can have the gift of making friends. It involves the power of going out of one's self, and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another. Laugh at difficulties, and find them disappearing. Attempt heavy responsibilities; they will grow lighter. Do an honest day's work, and find it the most rewarding. Believe men honest; they will live up to expectations.

What makes men great is their ability to decide what is important, and then focus their attention on it. With energy and determination, they do more than ordinary people. Each one of the Seniors is now making important decisions in planning for tomorrow. We will be going our own ways — to colleges, to technical schools, to the service of our country, or into a job, which all will begin at some time. We must adapt ourselves to our work, plan it and change our methods. We will need the right attitude; think our work will be pleasant. It will keep improving.

Schweitzer said the only ones who will be really happy are those who will have sought and found how to serve. The unselfish service we give to others often wins their respect and affection. We don't strive to guide or influence those whom we serve and cherish, yet at times we realize that responsive ideals have been awakened far beyond our imagination, hope, or vision.

With our jobs in various fields, we will become a part of a community and our country. Every right we gain will imply a responsibility; every opportunity an obligation; every possession a duty. Each person must continue to add something to the material, intellectual, and moral well-being of the place in which he lives.

Like an orange tree, bearing simultaneously blossoms and ripening fruit, good citizens must strive to be continuously useful. Our diverse talents, however small, all have their value.

To be reluctant to learn better ways of living and new angles of our daily jobs can have tragic consequences. So don't be afraid of change. Keep alert, keep alive, and insure flexibility and adaptability by the habit of learning something new every day. And remember that change is inevitable and usually synonymous with progress. Anticipate change; and instead of just looking on, we'll continue to be the architects and builders ourselves.

Our interest is in the future, because we are going to spend the rest of our lives there. We are faced with a world full of hate, crime, racial problems, and demonstrations for peace in the midst of war. But the future is not in the stars, as some think, it is in the hearts of men.

The following is a quote from Thomas Dewey: "We need not be afraid of the future, for the future will be in our own hands. We shall need courage, energy, and determination; but above all, we shall need faith — faith in ourselves, in our communities, and in our country."

William Allen White said, "I do not fear tomorrow. For I remember yesterday and I love today."

"A Dream Itself Is But a Shadow" is our class motto. Our visions are the blueprints from which our worlds are built. Faith makes our visions; persistence is the builder. We will work very hard to make something more than a shadow.

Willsie Martin wrote "Use It . . . Now!"

"The gates of yesterday are closed behind us and the fields of the other years we shall till no more. We gather no harvests from the acres of Tomorrow. But Today is ours to use and to enjoy. Are there heights to be climbed, are there wrongs to be righted, are there deeds to be accomplished? Then let us attempt to do them now.

"This is our hour for labor, for liberality, for service. Today is our day for worship, for friendship, and for love. Let us make the most of it while it is ours."

KERNELS & HUSKS

Valley County Agent

Elmer Brockman, Valley County Weed Superintendent, has just completed a check of the Musk Thistle infestation of pasture and rangeland in the county. His observations indicate that the thistles are not as thick as last year, the total number of infested acres are about the same. However, he said, the job of troublesome weed eradication in the county has just begun.

Elmer points out that he has found a number of areas that are heavily infested with Leafy Spurge in the county.

Leafy Spurge is another of the primary noxious weeds found in meadows, pastures, roadways, cultivated fields and waste places. Although not as prevalent as Musk Thistle, Leafy Spurge, presents as great a problem to agriculture.

The plant spreads both by seed and creeping underground root stocks. The roots may deplete the soil of moisture to a great depth. The shoots grow one to two feet high and by their abundant leaf growth shade the ground and crowd out any other plants in the area.

Leafy Spurge is a very abundant seeder and should never be allowed to go to seed. Areas infested with it may be taken out of production and put under clean cultivation until the plants are killed. Leafy Spurge is moderately resistant to 2,4-D but is somewhat susceptible to emulsifiable formulations of 2,4-D and other chemicals.

For further information on the control of this troublesome weed pick up the publication entitled "Know and Control Leafy Spurge in Nebraska". Ask for EC 69-186 at your Extension Office.

Profitable sheep production often depends upon your effective control of worm parasites. Your ability to select the right treatment drug is the key to that control.

The University of Arkansas has recently conducted studies that indicate that the new drug — Tramisol Leramisol Hydropcholordie — is more than 90 percent effective against larval and adult worms in sheep.

According to the USDA figures, worm parasites cost sheep producers $45 million annually in lost production. Worm parasitism is probably more accutely distructive in sheep than in any other domestic animal.

Farm people are realizing only about one third as much return on their investments of capital and labor as other segments of the economy.

Green Thumb Tips:

Wondering what tomato to plant? "Super Sue" has been found to be very favorable in the Nebraska climate. Other good varieties are "Rushmore", "Spring Giant", "Surprise", and "Avalanche". A recommended early variety is "Galaxy".

Those irregular shaped patches dying out in your lawn are caused by a fungus disease known as Melting Out Disease. This can be controlled with one or two applications of Panogen Turf Funacide.

Sod webworms are active in the eastern part of the state. Be on the look out for irregular chewed off patches in your lawn. We have a publication in the office — EC 71-1527. This gives you a discription of the insect, its damage and their control.

ORD SCHOOL TRIES TO MEET CHANGING NEEDS

By William O. Dobler, Lincoln Star

Judging from reports, patrons of the Ord Elementary school like the innovations given them by Superintendent Dr. William Gogan. He has given them an open space, highly individualized system of education that is not really so new nationally as it is for Nebraska.

What Gogan has done is to realize, with his experience as an educator, that the educational process needs to change as much as anything else, perhaps more. Education has changed, of course, but not to the degree that you might think.

Elementary and secondary education are still very much the same today as they were 50 years ago in terms of their structure. It is their curriculums that have changed, along with the addition of visual aids and other mechanical devices.

What has remained about the same is the concept of learning and it is this that Gogan seeks to change and has changed in Ord. That concept is that the learning process is one of the teacher teaching and the child learning.

Now, that may sound only logical to you but it has a major pitfall. The teacher today has to do more than offer his or her knowledge in a classroom filled with young people. The teacher, rather, has to be concerned with learning, not just with teaching.

What Gogan has tried to do is to create an environment that is favorable to the learning process. He has discarded the idea that it is enough to throw knowledge up for grabs among the pupils, with some of them getting it and some of them not. He has tried to concern himself with the problem of why some youngsters do not progress in the normal classroom situation.

His plan features an open space learning area for all grades, centered around a media "library" which makes learning available to students via film, educational television, stereo, radio, filmstrips and tape recorders as well as the printed page. This system allows for greater individual attention to each student and incorporates a process of learning at different rates.

Each child moves ahead in school according to his or her own ability. To date, the plan has had nothing but success, with characteristic slow learners making good progress and the more gifted children moving ahead well, also.

According to Gogan, the system even proves that the learning process can be an enjoyable one.

We doubt that there will ever be a perfect educational system but it is encouraging that men like Gogan continue to strive for that goal. When young people fail and end up as drop-outs or at a level of achievement far below their potential, we should recognize that our system has failed them.

People, young and old, are human and can also fail themselves but those should be the only failures among us. And if we start things out right in the beginning, we might anticipate that there will be many who fail themselves.

It is a human characteristic also to want to succeed and deliberate or indifferent failure can generally be traced to some fault beyond the control of the individual involved. It may well be the fault of parents but it may also be the fault of the school.

It is unrealistic to think that the educational process today will continue the same as it has. We recognize the necessity for change in the constant improvements of standards.

Teachers today are better trained than they were in the past, we are better organized and have improved physical plants. Certainly, we are spending a great deal more on education now than we ever have in the past, even considering the impact of inflation.

But there is no room for complacency. Without an education, the young person cannot hope to reach his full potential as an individual and this means a multiplicity of other problems for society.

The approach at Ord may not be the answer for every school system in the state but it has produced good results and does offer us an example of innovation. That kind of thing is what we need more of if we are to really meet the challenges of the future.

Everything Switching So Much We Don't Know Nothing

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

I made the mistake of bringing up to the fellers at the country store Saturday night how everthing is gitting switched around these days, and the subject caught on like striking a match to see how much gas is in the jug. The feller that runs the store final said he was going to have to switch to sleeping days and working nights if we didn't wrap up the ball of yarn and go home.

This out of town feller got the floor and kept it longer than anybody wanted him to, and the rest of us went home with a handful newspaper clippings we didn't even git to persent as evidence. This feller was lit up about these claims lately of how worthless is all the medicines folks use.

This piece he has saw said Americans spend $1.8 billion a year on pain killer, mouthwash, laxitives and mouthwash that ain't worth a dime. He was wondering if copper bracelets fer rumatism and deodorunts was put in the same class and if buying all this stuff can be wrote off as a tax loss.

Actual, this feller allowed, it probable could be proved that whatever a man thinks helps him does. He recollected a while back where this scientist said vitimin C would keep you from having colds and everbody made a run on the stuff. But since the permotion die down, he said, people probable have gone back to whatever cold remedy they think might do the job. He said he hopes nobody says a pint of carbolic took at the first sneeze will pervent a cold, cause sure enuff somebody would try it.

Science has switched so many thing around, he allowed, til we can't be shore what is real and what ain't. Ever now and then we git reports where they is coming up with a pill that will take the place of eating, but this feller was of the mind that switch won't work. They is to many folks that live to eat instead of eat to live was he words.

Ed Psota final got to report where he had saw 20 per cent of the barbershops in this country was closing. He didn't git to go through his clippings on this matter, but he said it looked like more advertising fer the papers. Some years back, Ed recalled, this big outfit that makes farm equipment quit running ads and invited barbers to their plant onct a year for a feed and tour. The company figgered barbers talking about their equipment was worth more than newspaper ads, but now they'll have to switch back to ads to git the word out.

Personal, Mister Editor, in all this turning around I ain't shore the busiest feller allus is to be admired. The bee and the musquiter is busy, but we praise one an and swat the other. I recall hearing that a fanatic is one that loses sight of his objective and redoubles his effort.

Yours truly,
GERANIUM JOE

Wedding Memories

And along with spring comes June, famous month most brides choose for wedding plans. If you've gone through any weddings at your house, you know how demanding, how engrossing, what fun, what work, what MONEY they can entail. Especially what fun, everyone wants everything to be fun and it is, except for the rush, the pressure.

I watched one bride make her own white satin gown with some 200 little white buttons sewed down the front. The satin was so heavy the gown almost weighed her down, but it was a beautiful dress all inset with lace, complete with an elaborate court train. That means it drags out behind you more than somewhat.

It is easy to make the delicate headdresses worn by the bride and also by her attendants. I once helped my little nurse at Methodist Hospital of Omaha make her bridal turban. We sewed on squares of net.

You know it used to be that only millionaire's daughters had these large weddings with a dozen bridesmaids: in these times they are almost the custom whether it leaves Father with a dollar or the groom with enough for cigarets. Weddings cost a pile, and don't you forget it.

But I have met a few girls who didn't want a large, showy diamond, they really preferred an antique ring with a small stone, to the embarrassment of their well-heeled parents with their status conscious outlook.

A niece and her groom, out in Denver, had lots of education but little money but that fact never bothered them. They chose to be married up in the Rockies at a tiny chapel which had been refurbished with shiny white painted walls and much red velvet for curtains and matching pads for the seats. The entire doll-sized building wouldn't house more than 30 or so. So that's about how many were invited, and it was a story-book sort of affair. The guests stayed at a ski lodge the night before, breakfast was delightfully served at a famous old mountainside inn, the after-the-ceremony affair was also a mountain type buffet and very easy and good.

When Harold Holoun and his pretty little Mary were married they too went to the Colorado mountains and were married very simply but charmingly in garb of the 1880's, like a long high-necked gown for Mary and a severe almost Edwardian suit for Harold, the artist. I had to miss that wedding and I continue to grieve about that. A flowery meadow was the setting and what could possibly be more delightful?

Then there was the capable young neighbor, who wanted a Christmas wedding and not only made her own gown but also those of all her bridesmaids and the little flower girl and the ring bearer too. It was carried out in red velvet and green velvet and white and red poinsettias and was charming, and colorful. A home ec. grad from the U. of N., she loved doing her thing and did it so well.

What an impression an elaborate wedding makes on a little girl, I remember when my Sunday school teacher was married, she was the pretty brunette daughter of the Episcopal rector and all was done in yellow and white.

But most unusual, the bride and her charming attendants wore long curls hanging over their shoulders, tied back.

A summer wedding in a garden was one of the first I attended in Ord and it was beautiful. A noteworthy point was that the bride wore wrist-length white gloves . . . because she had athlete's foot on her hands!

KERRY ON

By Kerry Leggett

—why worry—

Often we are tempted to feel sorry for those people that are always on the go, that seem to be so busy they have no time for themselves or outside interests.

But have you ever seen an unhappy busybody?

There is a lesson we can learn from these people, that, to us, are overworked. These people never worry.

The simple solution to their problem of overwork causes others much worry. But the busybody is usually working for a cause far more important than themselves. This knowledge satisfies their super-ego and makes self-punishment prohibitive in their own minds.

The worrier hasn't experienced this immense interest outside of self that usurps all selfish thoughts. They are much like the old Irish mother who knew her son would have to cross a swollen stream on his way home at night and said to him, "Tell me exactly when you expect to cross, so that I'll know when to worry."

Cast off that shell of worry and you'll find a new world of pleasure so filled with excitement that you begin wondering how you ever had the time to worry.

Learn to worry in the right way, and it can be helpful. Worry isn't entirely absent from those people that busy themselves with outside interests. But they have learned to use worry much as you use gears in your car. To them worry is the slight pause before moving into a higher gear. They use their problems as a prod and not as a probe.

Those who let worry rob their time are losing those precious moments that are the riches of life. Our time is a fixed income — though the medical profession is adding interest compounded annually — and as with any income the real problem facing most of us is how to live best within our daily allotment.

We can't afford to spend so much time with worry! If you do, perhaps you're standing too close to your own life. Back off and let yourself go — you'll find new sparkle to every minute of every hour of every day.

Parents Alarmed Over U.S. Attack on Their Control of Children

BY PAUL SCOTT
Former Greeley Resident

Concerned parents should be on the alert for a new nation-wide drive to curb their authority over their children.

The well financed and organized attack against parental authority has been launched by Alan F. Guttmacher, President the Planned Parenthood-World Population organization. The highly influencial Guttmacher group is now advocating federal financed abortions and sterilization for everyone who wants them including teenagers.

The carefully planned move to widen the generation gap and drive a wedge between parents and their children was launched by Guttmacher when he testified before the President's Commission on Population Growth and American Future.

Guttmacher, whose trips to Communist Cuba in recent years have attracted the attention of American Security officials, called on the blue-ribbon panel to recommend that all states amend their laws so teenagers can obtain all kinds of birth control devices and abortions from doctors and other medical personnel without parental consent.

This family-splitting legislation is needed, Guttmacher indicated, to help break down the opposition of doctors to giving contraceptives to teenagers. He stressed that support by the Commission would help create a new attitude toward teenagers use of contraceptives.

A study sponsored by the Ortho Pharmaceutical Corporation, a large manufacturer of birth control pills and other contraceptive devices, and cited to the Commission by Guttmacher, shows that even with parental consent only 40 percent of the general practitioners and 54 percent of gynecologists will give contraceptive information to teenagers ranging from 15 to 17.

In most states, the laws and regulations governing medical treatment of minors are now construed to prohibit the provision of contraceptives or abortions without prior consent of parents. This is the way of life that an overwhelming majority of the people of the U.S. apparently want.

Guttmacher and his Planned Parenthood groups plan to change this moral and legal attitude. As part of their campaign, they have drafted legislation for introduction in state legislatures that would repeal laws protecting parents rights.

Several states already have adopted the Guttmacher proposal with little or no debate since the majority of parents were unaware that the controversial legislation was under consideration.

In nearby Maryland, the Guttmacher proposal was slipped through both houses of the legislature during the closing days of the session. Once details of the legislation became known, strong grass-roots opposition to it developed, forcing Maryland's Governor Marvin Mandel to hold a public hearing to determine whether the bill should be signed or vetoed. The Governor's decision is expected later this month.

Opposition now beginning to take shape here and in several state legislatures to the Guttmacher proposal is based on the contention that the legislation is part of an over-all attack on the family unit.

Most objectionable part of the legislation is that it permits teenages to use the law to disregard normal parental authority on a highly controversial moral and medical issue. Parent groups opposing the Guttmacher proposal claim most teenagers are still too immature to make sound judgements at that age.

Other opponents argue that the Guttmacher proposal takes away from parents their God-given rights over their young children. They point out that the Guttmacher proposal permits teenagers to receive mental health and drug treatments without the knowledge or consent of parents.

Under legislative proposals developed from the Guttmacher plan, teenagers can have themselves committed into mental institutions without the consent of parents. The legislation protects doctors advising the children fro being sued by parents objecting to this new life style treatment.

In testimony before the Presidential Commission, Guttmacher took the position that this new grant of freedom for today's youth would help "control unwanted fertility and substantially reduce population growth". He stated that "birth control methods must be provided to sexually active teenagers" regardless of their parents wishes.

Guttmacher also called on the Commission to recommend "the withdrawal of all federal funds from public and private hospitals" that bar or greatly limit abortions or sterilization to the poor or teenagers.

The Guttmacher proposal is tied closely to legislation proposing a National Child Advocacy system now being pushed in Congress by Senator Abraham Ribicoff (D. Conn.), former Secretary of Department of Health, Education and Welfare during the Kennedy Administration.

Rolland Hansen Suffers Injury In Tractor Mishap, Thursday

By Wilma Baldwin

Rolland Hansen received a broken leg Thursday evening when he fell or was thrown off a tractor that was being driven by his hired man. The two men were going to pull another tractor out that was stuck in a nearby field. Rolland was riding on the drawbar hanging onto the tractor with one hand and had the chain they were going to use in the other hand. In some way the chain was caught by the rear wheel pulling Rollie from the tractor. The quick thinking and acting by the hired man saved Rollie from being run over by the tractor. Rollie is in the Valley County hospital with a compound fracture of the leg and is in traction at this time.

Come to Church

This Week's Meditation

God is at work in you, both to will and to work for his good pleasure. (Philippians 2:13, RSV)

As an aspiring writer, I had spent weeks researching and finally completing a highly technical article for a company magazine, only to have a third-level supervisor turn "thumbs-down" on its publication. I was hurt! I was furious! I had spent so much time and effort learning about the company, and this was the thanks I got.

Still stinging from my rebuff, I sat down at my typewriter and wrote a sizzling story about my unhappy experience. I prepared to submit it to our union magazine to tell the whole world about our ungrateful executive. The story was never mailed.

That night I read the second chapter of Paul's Letter to the Philippians. The words fairly leaped from the printed page — each one a dart aimed straight at my ego. Thoroughly deflated, I had to decide then and there if I were going to have my willful way or if I was going to let God have His.

Perhaps technical writing is not what God wills for me. I will let Him direct me.

PRAYER: O God, save me from trying to build myself up by putting someone else down. Grant me wisdom to place my talents into Your hands and let You direct my paths. Amen.

THE THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

We often discover God's will for our lives by the route of humility.

Announcing the Gas Home-Improvement Kit.

A gas light and grill are two beautiful ways to improve your home this summer. Put them in your back yard or on your patio or terrace. In fact, anywhere you want to enjoy your home's outdoor area.

The gas light offers several improvements. It provides a soft, welcoming glow for evening entertaining. Beautifies, brightens . . . yet doesn't attract insects. And when the party's over your gas light helps guard your home till morning.

The gas grill offers several more improvements of its own. Like easy starting. Even heat distribution. Dial-a-temperature control. And all without the muss or fuss of charcoal or starter fluid. Plus the same char-broiled flavor of old-fashioned outdoor cooking.

We have many attractive styles in both lights and grills. And we're always ready to install them for you. Just call us. Low monthly payments with your gas bill if you prefer.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Legislature Voted, Last Session Day On Personal Property Exemption

By Melvin Paul, NPA
Statehouse Correspondent

It was almost like a serialized soap opera.

Each week during the 1971 Legislature there seemed to be a new episode in the continuing drama of the personal property tax. As is appropriate for a thriller, the final outcome was unknown right up to the last minute.

Wednesday — May 26 — was scheduled as the finale of the 90-day session. That's also the day the final vote was scheduled on the latest of a series of personal property exemption plans.

No problem — except Gov. J. James Exon had promised to veto the bill and unless he rushed the veto into the chamber before the senators adjourned for good they wouldn't have an opportunity to see if they could override him.

And, as this was being prepared for publication, the governor said he wasn't sure whether he would give the lawmakers the opportunity.

Under the Constitution, the governor has five days to decide what he wants to do with a bill. So he wouldn't have to act before adjournment. If he waited even one day, it would take a special session to give the senators a crack at his veto.

Throughout the 1971 meeting, Exon has made it clear he opposed any plan for personal property tax exemption which would result in increased state sales and income taxes.

All the plans — and there were four of them — would have required the state to increase its sales and income levies to reimburse local governments for the revenue they would lose in property taxes.

Beginnings in 1967

The trail to the end-of-the-session climax actually began in 1967. That was the year the Legislature adopted the sales and income tax system.

With the adoption of the new tax package, the lawmakers repealed the state property tax. They also outlined a series of other changes. One they were able to implement on the spot. That was the repeal of the household goods, intangible and head taxes. They did it.

They also said they wanted to provide exemptions for farm and business inventories and equipment. But they couldn't do that until the State Constitution was amended to allow it.

An amendment was put on the 1968 ballot. The voters rejected it.

The 1969 Legislature put the same amendment on the 1970 ballot. This time — as Amendment 10 — it was adopted.

Sen. J. W. Burbach of Crofton, who had been active in reshaping the state's tax structure in earlier sessions, put together what became LB 573 of the 1971 session.

As he proposed it, business and agricultural equipment and inventories would have half of their actual value excused from taxation in 1972 and, by 1978, 90 per cent would be exempted.

That started the drama in this year's session. At the hearing before the Revenue Committee, Exon said he would accept a 10 per cent exemption — but flatly opposed Burbach's 50 per cent. It was there it started to change. An amendment calling for 35 per cent in 1972 and 1973, climbing to 90 per cent by 1978 was adopted.

The bill was passed 32-15 with those provisions. Exon, as he said he would, vetoed it.

The governor waited the full five days the Constitution allowed him before sending in the pockets" of the average Nebraskans to rally behind him. The bill, he said, would "pick the pockets" of the average Nebaskan through higher sales and income taxes so large businesses and farmers could get a tax break.

Burbach delayed an override attempt until the last minute so he could be sure all his supporters would be in the chamber. The showdown came early last week.

Burbach needed 30 votes to neutralize the veto. The tally was 8-20. LB 573 was dead.

New Plans Arise

The override failure, however, wasn't the end of the trail. Scottsbluff Sen. Terry Carpenter had maneuvered another bill to second reading so it would be available as a vehicle for another personal property tax exemption plan if the veto were sustained.

Carpenter unveiled his plan and got it attached to the new bill, LB 256. Under his proposal, the state would pay half of a businessman's or farmer's personal property tax bill up to $1,000.

Exon said he would veto that, so the next day that plan was scrapped and replaced with still another version of LB 573. This one called for a 20 per cent exemption the first year, 40 per cent the second and 50 the third. It stopped at 50 per cent, instead of climbing to 90 per cent as the earlier versions had.

That was the plan awaiting last-day passage and the veto the senators might not have a chance to try to override.

Winter Wheat Is Doing Well Here

Winter wheat and alfalfa is looking good in Valley county, with wild hay in fair condition, the weekly crop report of John Schade, county agent, indicates.

50 percent of the corn is now planted, but no sorghums or soybeans are in. Rainfall during the week ending May 21 was .35 inches, and surface moisture and subsoil water levels are rated adequate.

Planting corn, spraying weeds, and preparing seedbeds for milo and beans is the chief farm work now.

Early planted corn is coming up, and needs to break crust in some fields. Also, wheat is starting to send out shoots. Warm season grasses are slow in starting.

Livestock news indicates most cows have moved to pasture, and most of the wintered calves have been moved to market.

More than 1,500 pounds of flour, cereal products, sugar, potatoes, fats, oils and eggs are consumed annually by the average American family of four.
