Mr. and Mrs. Larry White of North Loup are second place winners in the Farm Bureau Federation's "Outstanding Young Farmer and Rancher Award Couple of 1978."

Announcement of their selection was made Sunday evening, Dec. 3 at the Family Night program which was an opening day feature of Nebraska's Farm Bureau's 60th annual meeting and convention (December 3-5) in Lincoln.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry White operate a unit of 980 acres west of North Loup. White began farming with his father, the late Randall White, immediately after graduation from high school in 1966. The 320 acres where their home is located was given to him by his parents in 1970.

Since then, they have purchased another 340 acres. They put down an irrigation well three years ago and use gravity flow to irrigate corn ground and some pasture. The Whites have developed an 80 cow beef herd and carry the calves over as yearlings, taking them to up to around 800 pounds. They also have a farrow-to-finish hog operation, marketing 300 to 350 head of hogs per year.

White received the FFA State Farmer degree in 1966 and American Farmer degree in 1969. He served as president of Valley County Farm Bureau from 1975-77 and continues active in its leadership. Mrs. White was president of Mid-State Porkettes in 1973. Both hold leadership positions in their church and other community organizations.

They have two daughters, Chastity, 3, and Charity, born in October. Mrs. White is the former Karen Klingsmith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Klingsmith of St. Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Wegele of Rt. 1, Jansen have been named as the Farm Bureau's "Outstand-

Mulligan Says Cable Franchise Selection Was Poorly Handled

An unhappy Eldon Mulligan charged the city council deviated from their original plan in deciding the recipient of the city's cable TV franchise.

Mulligan, owner of Mulligan's Music in Ord, was one of two men seeking the franchise. In their last council meeting, November 27, city dads awarded the cable TV contract to Richard Klimek, owner of Klimek TV Service here.

In a Quiz interview Friday, Mulligan contended councilmen said they would review both proposed contracts (from Mulligan and Klimek) and then meet with each of the two men, individually.

"The way I understand it, they were going to put them (the proposals) together like Mulligan said. This, he stated, didn't happen."

"Nobody even contacted me about that last council meeting," he bitterly recalled. "My feeling is that the committee completely ignored me."

The committee mentioned was to look into the cable TV contracts.

"I think," Mulligan continued, "people should know that in my proposal the committee did not take into consideration the quality of the system."

His was to be installed by Ron Cotten, an engineer with RCCA of Denver. RCCA's clients include some of the largest installations in the cable TV industry, according to Mulligan.

At the November 27 council meeting Mulligan requested changes be made in his proposal submitted earlier. These changes included hiking from two to three percent the gross from cable operations going to the city.

"I'm surprised at the emphasis put on that," he commented. "Many cities our size waived that (a percentage of the franchise going to the city) just to get cable TV."

Other changes he proposed were:

—Bringing nine, instead of six, channels to Ord plus a time-temperature channel and a community billboard. "It would be used by schools and other groups for public service broadcasts," Mulligan explained. Included in these nine channels were stations KTVU from Oakland, CA and WGN from Chicago.

Klimek will bring in six channels under his franchise agreement approved by the council.

Both Klimek and Mulligan offered the Home Box Office option, offering first run movies. Mulligan's charges were an extra $8 a month; Klimek offered HBO for a monthly charge of $10.

Mulligan's installation fee was $25 to Klimek's $20. Mulligan pegged his monthly charges at $9. Klimek charged $8.

The council listened to Mulligan's proposed changes at their last meeting but took no action.

Mulligan pledged, during the interview, to build a tower (antenna) at a location picked by the cable TV engineer, as being that best situated to use the old REA tower located 1.8 miles south of Ord. He has purchased the structure.

"How do they (the council) know that is the best place?" Mulligan asked.

"I'm amazed," he said, "that they handled such an important thing like this so poorly." Asked what happened, Mulligan replied, "I know, but I can't say in such a short time. It seems as though their decision was already made before the meeting."

Ord Digs Out Of Near Foot Of Snow

Ord spent most of the weekend digging out from an estimated 11 inches of snow that fell on Valley County Friday and Saturday. A low centered over the Rocky Mountains and an arctic cold front combined to bring travel to a halt.

The National Weather Service issued heavy snow warnings Saturday for most of the state, including Valley County. These were later followed by travelers advisories Sunday.

Both were timely messages. Activities in and around Ord had come to a near standstill. Athletic events, fraternal meetings, and other items were canceled or rescheduled.

Ord Police provided emergency transportation. Early Saturday morning their car was one of the few vehicles making regular trips in town. According to Ord Police Chief John Young, the department answered about six emergency transportation calls, over the weekend.

The Ord boys and girls varsity basketball team made it back from Crete around 5 a.m. Saturday morning after four hours on the road. Driver Walt Smith navigated slippery highways, peering through an ice covered windshield.

Adding to Smith's troubles was a flat tire near Cotesfield. Around 3 a.m. the Ord athletes heard a bumping noise. Smith got out to investigate.

Ord girls' coach, Max Murray, caught a ride into Scotia with a passing cattle truck. Phoning Kiesel Dockhorn, he made arrangements for repairs and a relief bus to take coaches and athletes home.

While waiting for it to arrive, Smith tried restarting the bus engine to keep the vehicle warm. The engine didn't work. Neither did the radio linking them with the Region 26 communications center in Taylor.

Leaving early Friday afternoon, the busload of athletes arrived home at 5 a.m. Saturday. It was quite a night — and a morning too.

Other vehicles on the road late Friday night and early Saturday were few and far between. The players and their coaches saw many trucks and cars pulled off to the side of the road; others were in the ditch.

Freezing sleet Friday put a slick surface under the three inches of snow that accumulated around Grand Island by late Saturday morning, according to Grand Island Police.

Later that day and the next persons with power snow blowers and lads with snow shovels were doing a land office business. Hardier souls did their own walks finding the task can be quite a chore.

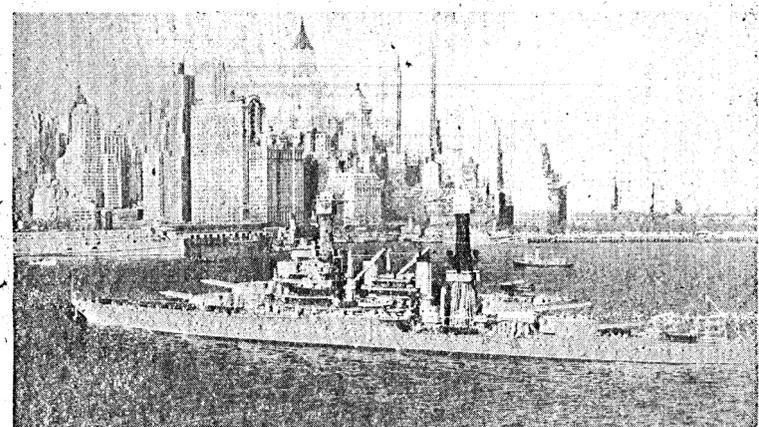

City crews started a similar job Sunday morning with half a crew. Monday, they were at full force removing snow.

Tuesday City Street Commissioner Emil Penas said the main part of downtown Ord had been cleared, but that there was still a lot left to be done in residential districts.

He estimated snow removal was about half completed, and speculated the job would be finished Thursday or Friday.

Ord wasn't alone in digging out of the snowfall. The Omaha World Herald reported Ericson had six inches.

Other accumulations around the state included Sidney with 11 inches and Kimball with nine.

John Paddock Recalls Pearl Harbor

Dates. They are funny things. Most people need a string around their finger to recall a specific event, or perhaps a notation on a calendar to jog their memory for most dates.

Other dates are different. Take December 7, 1941. Older Americans know immediately what happened then. On that quiet Sunday the Japanese launched a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor sinking or severely damaging 18 ships, bringing the United States in to the Second World War.

Young Seaman Paddock Mothers' Day 1942

Most residents learned of the air raid through breathless radio bulletins or from newspapers the following day.

Others had a direct involvement. John Paddock was one of these. He was there.

Then a Second Class Gunners Mate, he was on the battleship California enjoying a cup of coffee when the attack came.

"Usually half the fleet was in and the other half out of Pearl," John explained. That Sunday, the entire fleet was in, tied up on what was called battleship row.

John and his shipmates were enjoying a leisurely morning when "we heard a lot of noise of guns going off," he said. Running on deck he saw machine gun bullets dancing around his gun turret. A bomb crashed through decks killing men hand passing ammunition to the California's guns.

The California began to sink and orders were given to abandon ship.

While swimming away from the sinking battleship, John grabbed onto an accommodation ladder hanging over the side of a passing cruiser, the Helena. Taken on board, he spent two weeks at sea.

The ship wasn't allowed to break radio silence. No one outside the Helena knew where John was.

His mother, Daisy Paddock of Ord, received word her son was missing in action. It wasn't until after December 30 she knew otherwise. A terse postcard from John said, "I am well." It was a welcome message.

"We couldn't put anything else on the card," John recalled. To insure this, the government had the message printed. All John was allowed to do was to sign his name at the bottom of the prepared script.

On Mother's Day 1942, John sent Daisy a picture of himself. A Quiz clipping of June 4 that year was headlined, "Johnnie Paddock Reported Killed At Pearl Harbor Sends Photo To Prove Report Exaggerated."

While the Navy was recovering from the attack John ended his two weeks on the Helena. He was assigned to Pearl. Having a specialty of a Master Diver, his job was removing bodies and ammunition from sunken ships.

"It was all hard-hats and weights," John recalled. Light weight Scuba diving gear didn't exist then.

Some shells from those sunken vessels weighed 2,700 pounds according to John, and had a range of 20 miles or more. He and other divers lived in tents on that assignment. They were later boarded at the posh Royal Hawaiian Hotel when the government took it over.

His stint at diving over, John received a series of assignments that took him to places sounding like a roll call of major engagements in the Pacific Theatre. There was Iwo Jima, the Coral Sea, Midway, Truk, the Philippines and a lot of other places "I don't remember," he said.

During his travels he saw the U.S.S. Smith go down. "The reason I remember it, is because Paul Carlsen was on it," John recalled. Ord natives John and Paul had shared liberties together.

"We lost a lot of Ord guys during that war," Paddock sadly stated.

It ended with the Japanese surrendering on the decks of the Missouri in Tokyo Bay. Assigned to the ship as part of "Bull" Halsey's staff, John looked on as the Japanese signed the surrender document September 2, 1945.

Joining the Navy in 1938, when he was 20, John retired in 1968 as a Lieutenant Commander. "I didn't go to school," John stated. "I came up through the ranks."

Jaycees Learn Drug Problem Closer To Home Than Expected

Ord Jaycees learned the drug problem is a lot closer and more serious than most people suspect during a drug seminar here Wednesday. Valley County Sheriff Martin Sonnenfeld told so-called "Hard Drugs" have been in the area and displayed drug-related equipment confiscated in Valley County.

The meeting, in the First National Bank, opened with a film describing Omaha's drug scene as a "leak" in the system.

He then told of an informant claiming coke-cocaine was available in Ord. A core preparation kit reportedly obtained from a girl's purse was shown.

Asked the age span involved in drug use and trafficking, Sonnenfeld said one Ord seventh grader boasted he would bring cocaine to school. Later he told of an area farmer—presumably an adult—being approached to take part in importing drugs from Mexico. The last proposed plan would gain the farmer several thousand dollars, according to the sheriff.

Drug sales are apparently profitable according to Sonnenfeld, one pound of Mexican marijuana brings the native grower $1 a pound. On Denver streets one kilogram of the same weed (one kilogram equals 2,205 pounds) brings $10, Sonnenfeld said.

He concluded his talk by saying he didn't encourage parents to go through their kid's possessions, or create an atmosphere of distrust. Rather he suggested parents be watchful for changes in their children. These changes, as he listed them, included:

- Changes in their emotional state.
- Changes in their friends.
- Changes in their children's grades.
- Changes in behavior.
- Changes in appetite or eating patterns.

Sonnenfeld contended his remarks weren't aimed at one group or age bracket. "I don't think Ord has a drug problem any worse than anywhere else," he said. "It's all over."

Ord Jaycees invited scouts to hear the drug seminar presentation. It concluded with a brief question and answer session.

Appraisal Owner: Likely Tax Hike Overrated

Bill Thornburgh, Midwest Appraisal owner, said taxes will likely increase in Valley County, but not nearly as much as people believe. In an interview Friday, Thornburgh maintained some tax hike predictions being bandied about are grossly exaggerated.

"Many people believe because their property valuation has gone up substantially, their taxes will increase a like amount," he told the Quiz. "This isn't correct," he said. "Mill levies for this assessment won't be determined until September 1979."

Dividing total budget requirements by the total assessed value of Valley County determines that levy, Thornburgh explained. As an example he said the mill levy for Ord City division is 1.644 now. The valuation of $5,705,205 for that district and budget needs of $100,776 determined that.

"The total assessed value of a given area having increased substantially, the mill levy should decrease in a like amount if there are no substantial increases in budgets," Thornburgh said.

"That if," he smiled, "that's the key."

He acknowledged budgets don't usually stay the same. Inflation pushes them up. "But they won't double like some people think they will," he was quick to add.

Thornburgh and other Midwest personnel have been holding informal hearings on new revaluations last week. State law required state-wide property revaluations.

Over 80 of these informal sessions have been held in the County Assessor's office at the courthouse since a week ago Monday. Most people leave the office feeling they have received fair treatment, according to Thornburgh. He contended the revaluation, started earlier this year, is coming along "just fine," in his words.

Doing Just Fine "If it weren't," he said, "people would be lined up in the hallway outside the office."

Most property owners wouldn't trade their property for its assessed valuation, the official stated.

State Tables Lake Acquisition Plans

The State Game and Parks Commission voted Friday to table for further discussion a proposal to acquire Lake Ericson.

Bill Bailey, assistant director of the G and P Commission, explained commission members believe more study was needed at this time. An opinion by the state attorney general raised several questions, he said, that remain unsolved.

In an earlier interview Bailey had stated some land titles to real estate surrounding the lake were flawed. According to the official, reservations on some titles, dating back to the 1930s, grant certain perpetual rights to one property owner. Other titles have not been completely cleared, Bailey maintained. He said other legal complications make acquisition of Lake Ericson more than what he called a matter of dealing with property owners.

Howard Watson, chairman of a group called "Save Lake Ericson," said the 1930 pact, concerning the G and P Commission is, to his knowledge, cleared. An agreement when it was drawn up with Western Public Power District granted perpetual use of the lake to the Conger family.

However, that title was apparently cleared with probate of the Conger estate many years ago, Watson said.

Bailey said the commission plans to meet with Loup Valley officials in the near future to reach an agreement. Watson was quoted as saying that should the power district be unable to pass ownership of the lake to the G and P Commission, landowners probably will incorporate to jointly purchase the property.

tract for the erection of the building was let to Silver & Son, for $123,150. . . soon afterwards the troubles which followed the University for so many years began. Even the Brownville Advertiser, a good friend of the University, thought the policy of letting a contract for $28,450 more than the appropriation, unwise. The State Journal came to the defense of the regents, arguing that it was better policy to begin the erection of a building of sufficient size and well suited to its uses.

"The corner stone was laid on September 23, 1869; two days later a glowing account of the ceremonies appeared in the State Journal. The exercises were in the hands of the Masons with Major D. H. Wheeler as master of ceremonies. A brass band from Omaha, imported for the occasion, headed the procession. In the evening a grand banquet was given. Governor (David) Butler made a few remarks, and Mr. Wheeler a short speech. Then Attorney General Seth Robinson gave an address on "Popular Education," but most of it concerned Greece and Rome, and very little of it related to Nebraska.

"The banquet — thanks to the good ladies of Lincoln — was enjoyed by fully a thousand people, dancing being indulged in from 10 till 4 o'clock. This was the beginning, but the end was not yet, as Lincoln people well know.

"The regents visited the building, and after inspection, approved the plans and construction, on January 6, 1871, but before a student had ever entered its doors, the city was raised that it was insecure. Repairs were made, and September 6, the University was opened with an enrollment of about ninety students the first week.

"However the rumor of the insecurity of the building would not do. After a report from another set of architects, a new foundation was ordered to be put under the chapel (1873). The foundation walls, as they were torn out, were examined by an architect under the direction of the attorney general, General R. Webster, who reported that the foundation had not been built, in accordance with the contract. . . (In 1877) four architects were employed, one from Omaha, one from Nebraska City, and two from Lincoln. On the strength of the report, the regents resolved, July 6, 1877, to tear down the building and to erect a new one at a cost of $60,000. $10,000 of this amount to be raised by Lincoln.

The citizens of Lincoln were not satisfied, so they sent to Chicago and to Dubuque for architects, who examined the building and pronounced it easily repaired. . . A new foundation with some other repairs was ordered, and the bill of $6,012, was paid by Lincoln.

"At the same time, the roof was repaired at an expense of $1,625; but the water still found its way through, till finally in 1883 a slate roof was put on and this leak stopped. Just after the reconsideration of the resolution to tear down the building, a committee came from Nebraska City to present a bid for the relocation of the University at that point. This was the last public scare, although several thousand dollars have since been spent in replacing the inner foundation walls and in making other necessary repairs.

"A. R. Benton was elected (chancellor) at $5,000 per annum; a year later the reduction of salaries began. . . A motion was carried to fix the Chancellor's salary at $4,000, and the professors at $2,000 a year. The first faculty was elected April 4, 1871: Ancient Languages, A. H. Manley; Mathematics, H. E. Hitchcock; English Literature, O. C. Dake; the Sciences, H. W. Kuhne. Mr. Kuhne declined and a committee of Rev. Samuel Aughey who was unanimously elected at the June meeting.

June 13, 1871, G. E. Church was elected tutor at a salary of $1,000. The first faculty was completed, September 6, 1871, by the election of S. R. Thompson to the chair of agriculture. At the same time a 1,000-pound bell was ordered; perhaps it ought to be included in the list of the faculty, for it has performed functions not much less important, and has had many a prank played upon it that entitles it to recognition. . . Chancellor Benton on June 23, 1874, offered to pay $500 toward securing an instructor in the sciences provided the regents would pay a like amount. The arrangement was made and G. E. Bailey was chosen for the position."

CAROL'S CORNER

by carol leggett

INCLUDE LOVE — "Will you help me wrap up some love, Mommy?" asked the little girl. "That's what I'm going to give Daddy and Grandma and Grandpa for Christmas."

Giving love certainly did not sound corny to a five-year-old whose monetary wealth consists of a quarter and a few pennies hidden in a doll purse.

When the mother helped the little girl write a note of love on a simple card it made her realize that this was a very important gift . . . the most wonderful gift of all.

Wouldn't it be something to gift-wrap love for your family . . . gift-wrap the gratitude you feel toward people who are so much a part of your life, of you . . .

Giving the gift of love is the most expensive, the most precious present there is. Anyone with a heart can give it. Yet few will give love because it is so much easier to buy a present and Christmas wrap it with red and green ribbons.

It takes constant effort, this gift of love . . . for it must be renewed every so often. Because if you give the gift of love you give of yourself . . . your thoughts . . . your sympathy . . . your smiles . . . your understanding.

In addition to giving the bright store gifts this Christmas-time, try tucking in some love. Try a simple kiss on the cheek of each member of your family with a few words that express your love.

Sure . . . it may seem corny, but it is the one true gift of Christmas as it was given to the world.

Can you give less to your family?

COFFEE CUP PHILOSOPHY: It's what you do, when you have nothing to do that tells the real you.

Goff of Papillion, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Terry Copple of Aurora, sister-in-law of the groom. # Ord Gals Edge Crete Cards 42-38 In Season Opener

Julie Scheideler (35) has the ball in a jump situation Friday.

Charity shots, tenacity and skill gave Ord girls a 42-38 win over host Crete Friday night.

Ord drew first blood in the contest. Barb Kittle pumped two more points seconds later. Not until 3:30 in the first quarter did Crete gal Cardinals score.

At the end of that period Ord was in front 12-8. The gal Chants were really scrapping under the basket, grabbing rebounds and sealing the ball.

This mixture of skill and tenacity boosted Ord to a 16-9 lead 6:30 in the second period. A foul on Vickie Mason with 6:17 left in the period gave Ord a bonus.

It didn't go in, but Mason snared the ball on rebounding. That set off a chain of events ending with Crete's Kristen Petersen getting the front half of a one-and-one free throw combination.

Ord came right back, and Barb Kittle sank a basket making the score 18-10.

Ord kept picking away at the Crete Cards, constantly probing their defense. The gal Chants stole the ball time after time and were outbounding Crete.

Vickie Mason swiped the ball near mid-court, for example, when a foul by Crete sent Shelly Blaha to the free throw line. She connected on one shot, boosting Ord's lead to 19-11. Fast scoring pace continued and with 1:18 left in the first half Ord pulled away 25-13.

The tempo slowed as the half dribbled down to the final seconds. Ord kept the ball, playing a slow, deliberate game. The gal Chants worked the ball near midcourt.

Crete responded by coming out from under the basket. The Chant's game plan almost backfired. Crete did manage to steal the ball, but couldn't sink it.

The teams went to their locker rooms with a 25-13 lead for Ord.

Second Half

When they came out, there was a definite shift in Crete's strategy. The cagey Cards were more consistent, more precise, more accurate. They started bugging Ord with steals.

A basket by Gogan gave Ord a 27-17 lead. That 10 point edge didn't last long. A traveling call gave Cardinal Shelly Blaha the ball. She slugged Ord's 10 point margin to 8 in short order.

Barb Kittle went to the bench with four fouls, and Julie Scheideler went into the game.

An effective Crete press kept Ord outside and away from the basket. Undeterred, Nancy Gogan sank a basket from the outside, giving Ord a 29-20 edge.

A long three-quarter court pass to Shelly Blaha niked this even further. She dunked one, and Ord jumped to a 31-20 margin with 2:30 left in the third quarter.

An attempted basket by Blaha resulted in three back-to-back jump ball calls. Gogan got the ball on the third jump. Unsuccessful at a basket attempt, she got two charity shots. Both went in.

The score read 32-20.

It stayed the same until less than a minute remained in the third quarter. Two successful free throws by Petersen narrowed Ord's lead to 11 points.

Fourth Period

A basket by Gogan opened the final quarter 35-22. Crete came right back with free throws and pulled within 11 points of Ord.

The Cards kept up the pressure of their improved game, snaring Ord's missed shots. A nagging Card defense gave Ord everything but what they wanted: space near the basket.

The tempo increased as the game went down to the final four minutes. Ord was straining to keep their seven point lead 37-30. Crete was striving for a last minute victory.

A cardinal basket with 2:55 in the game shaved Ord's lead 37-32.

A charity shot by Roxanne Hatch of Crete and Ord's safety margin narrowed even further, and they tied at three points.

Vickie Mason (23) appears to have the ball in first quarter play at Crete Friday.

With 2:50 left in the game, a call gave Crete the ball. In the following scramble, Gogan and Lynn Jacobs had a jump ball. Vickie Mason took the tap and passed to Blaha.

She was fouled. One of two free throws went in, giving Ord a 38-34 lead.

The second bounced off the rim. Crete got the rebound.

Ord swiped it, just in time to have Smith fouled. Her successful free throw boosted Ord to a 39-34 edge. Vickie Mason padded this with a shot of her own. Ord crept ahead 41-34.

With 1:41 left in the game Kittle was fouled. One of two charity shots went in and Ord inched to an eight point lead.

Crete replied with a basket. With 16 seconds left in the game Crete scored again, and Ord had a slim four point edge in the contest.

Ord's coach Max Murray was on his feet pleading, "Hang on to the ball, don't get careless."

The final seconds ticked away with Ord gals taking his advice, playing a conservative game, and winning 42-38.

The next play at Adams Central Saturday. Game time is 6:15 for the reserves and 8 p.m. for the varsity squad.

Arnold Nudges Arcadia 56-54

Arcadia gal cagers lost a heartbreaker season opening game to guest Arnold Thursday night, 56-54. Coach Wilbur Cushman contended foul problems cost them the game.

With three minutes left in the match, he had three starters on the bench. Tagged with five fouls each were Denise Luedtke, Chris Holcomb, and Terina Trotter.

His other headache was superchick Judy Davenport. She stands well over six feet tall and pumped in a whopping 24 points for Arnold.

"There's no way around it," Cushman reflected. "She really hurt us."

Her nearest competitor on the Arcadia team was Smith, with 17 points. Close, but not close enough.

"There are 11 girls out for the varsity basketball squad," the Arcadia coach revealed. "And hopefully we'll get one more".

He added, "That extra someone is Carol VanSlyke. She hurt her knee the first night of practice."

A physicians approval - and Cushman's high hopes - were pending as of Tuesday morning. Carol stands around 6'1". The coach said, and would be a real asset to the team. She lettered in basketball last year.

Tuesday the Arcadia cagers, whatever their number, were to take on Spalding. Then Thursday, they are scheduled to clash with Cedar Rapids.

Arcadia Gals Nix Spalding

Arcadia girls pulled away from a slim first quarter lead to down guest Spalding Academy 76-38 Tuesday night. Host Arcadia was ahead by one slim point at the end of the first quarter.

Rallying, they took over the second quarter using a fast break and beaded up rebounding ending the half 34-18. Arcadia coach Wilbur Cushman lauded the girls for improved rebounding and scoring. "We went from 54 points scored to 76", he proudly stated.

Next up, Thursday, is a match at Cedar Rapids. "No question about it," the coach said, "it will be a tough match."

Ord Seventh and Eighth Grade Girls Turn It Around - Win Two in a Row

The Ord girls seventh and eighth grade team turned it around. Last week they won two in a row, making their season record 2-2 with wins over O'Neill and Central City.

They had previously lost two consecutive games.

Tuesday, November 28, they whipped guest O'Neill 15-11. Ord had a comfortable 9-4 lead at the half. During the third period, this almost vanished. O'Neill crept within one point of Ord, 10-9.

The girls rallied and pulled it out of the fire 15-11 in fourth period play. Ord coach Richard Cecetka credited six quick points for the win. They came with four free throws and a basket.

Mentioned was Pauline Penas with five points and six rebounds. "She really kept the game going inside", Cecetka said.

Thursday, they went to Central City, and probably played the best game of the year," Cecetka told the Quiz. "We tied or broke three team records."

These included:

- Having 38 rebounds.
- Making five free throws out of 11.
- Holding the other team to six points.

While shattering records, the girls picked up a 17-6 win.

But the game wasn't the walk-away win it seems at first glance. Ord had a rough start at the end of the first quarter. They widened this 7-4 at the half and ended third quarter play with a 9-6 edge.

In the last quarter they put it away. Their shots started dropping in for us", Cecetka recalled.

Karla Rysavy was cited for a good job of rebounding. Kim Cook, the coach noted, handled the ball well and scored four points. Pauline Penas had a minor injury in her performance with O'Neill. On both occasions she scored five points and had six rebounds.

The girls were scheduled for Albion Tuesday night.

Ord Grapplers Bow To St. Paul, 55-10

Ord High grapplers bowed to guest St. Paul 55-10 last week. The match Thursday was their first of the season.

Ord grappler coach Al Rubesh readily agreed that two forfeit forfeits gave St. Paul 12 points, and made a big difference in Ord's scoring. Ord, having no wrestlers to fill two weight divisions, gave St. Paul the 12 bonus points.

One of those brackets, the 130 pound division, is usually filled by Jeff Wolf. He is out with some mending broken bones. Rubesh didn't know when - or if - he would be back this season. There is no one to take his place.

Other changes included the rescheduling of the Broken Bow tournament. To be last Saturday, it fell victim to a snow storm. The meet has been rescheduled for December 22.

Next up on the grappler schedule is Cozad here this Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

Complete results of the St. Paul meet are as follows:

98 lbs. Doug Conner, Ord, tie, Don Barleen, St. Paul 2-2.

105 lbs. Brian Potter, St. Paul, def. Doug Zulkoski, Ord, pin.

112 lbs. Dan Barleen, St. Paul def. open, Ord.

119 lbs. Jerry Augustyn, Ord, tie, Don Poss, St. Paul, 6-6.

126 lbs. Bryon Burman, St. Paul, def. Kirk Lehecka, Ord, pin.

132 lbs. Jim Potter, St. Paul, def. Byron Stevens, Ord, pin.

138 lbs. Russ Dzingale, St. Paul, def. Keven Sich, Ord, 4-2.

145 lbs. Dave Conner, Ord, def. Bill Hall, St. Paul, pin.

155 lbs. Jack Heigal, St. Paul, def. Greg Petska, Ord, pin.

167 lbs. Dan Goerl, St. Paul, def. Paul Bredthauer, Ord, pin.

188 lbs. Cullen Ludemann, St. Paul, def. open, Ord.

197 lbs. Mike Stepanek, St. Paul, def. Vic Burrows, Ord, pin.

Nine Gals Out For Ord Reserves

Nine girls are out for the reserve squad, according to coach Tom Rhodes. The nine are Robyn Upham, Julie Scheideler, Jean Dubas, Marcia Mason, Lori Rainforth, Peg Kramer, Rhonda Pargman, Ute Haverkamp, and Michelle Nelson.

The first five, all juniors, will start against Adams Central in Hastings this Saturday. "We'll have to win on an aggressive defense," Rhodes said, "because we're short on height."

By playing the aggressive game, Rhodes hopes to force more turnovers and hopefully more baskets. "By aggressive", he explained, "I mean a man-to-man defense." He plans to mix this with a 2-3 zone defense and some press.

Just how successful this will be can be seen this Saturday. Game time is 6:15 p.m.

Freethrow Contest Has Been Rescheduled

Knights of Columbus, Council 2292, have rescheduled their freethrow contest for December 9, Saturday. Youths ages 11-14 should report to the Ord High gym at 10 a.m.

Entry forms will be available at the school from Joe Wadas. They must be signed by a parent or guardian.

The contest was to take place Dec. 2, last Saturday. The heavy snowfall forced the rescheduling.

Broken Bow an Uncertainty with Cudly's Ninth Grade Game Plan

The game schedule is all drawn up for Al Cudly's ninth graders. The big question mark facing the team is Broken Bow. They will face his boys here Thursday.

Last year, Ord whipped the Indians by 20 some points. This was an unusual occurrence, according to the Ord coach.

"Usually", he elaborated, "the two teams are pretty even."

This year could be a return to that pattern, but Cudly isn't certain. He doesn't know their height, and didn't play them as eighth graders last year, he said.

This year, there are eight boys out for the Ord ninth grade team. They have been working out in practice sessions started Nov. 6.

"Fundamentally we aren't bad", he said. "We're weak defensively and don't have speed."

He will use the team's height and resulting rebounds to compensate, so he said. Two squad members stand six feet or over. "But from there we drop to 5'4" or 5'3", Cudly stated.

This game plan will first be tested Thursday when Broken Bow visit Ord. Game time is 7:15.

Crete Blasts Boy Cagers In Season Opening Game

Bill Wadas (51) swipes the ball from Crete's Kevin Henning (22).

later Crete pumped in two more points. That half-time lead by Crete combined with sure shooting and rebounding was more than Ord could handle.

The Chants had the frustrating situation of doing their best and scoring when they could only realize it wasn't enough to carry the game. Playing catchup ball on a strange court with a new coach and season opening jitters is a tough assignment in anyone's book.

It was a long night. Crete Scoring by Quarters: Ord 14 13 15 18 65; Crete 6 8 15 8 37.

Individual Scoring: Crete — Kevin Henning 18, Erickson 12, Jirovec 10, Burhman 8, Kent Henning 3, Johnson 2, Allen 2, Marcelino 2, Morton 2, Murray 1. Ord — Witherwax 12, Kremke 8, Smith 4, Dworak 4, Welniak 3, Wadas 2, Beran 2, David 2.

Central Edges Ord Young Grapplers

Ord seventh and eighth grade grapplers were mixed by Central City 23-14 according to Coach Jim Blessen. Central uses eighth grade boys, Blessen explained while Ord uses both seventh and eighth graders in their program. The loss brings their season record to 1-4. Earlier matches included those with O'Neill, Loup City, and Burwell. Ord won over the Burwell wrestlers 20-14.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Ord varsity boy cagers were blasted 65-37 by host Crete in a season opener Friday.

It was one of those nights when nothing went right. The Chants were out-scored, out-played, and out-rebounded. To make things worse, the bus broke down on the trip home. Mused one player, "I guess we met a better team." Crete scored first and quickly built a 14-6 lead by the opening quarter's end.

A basket seconds after the second period started and the Cardinals were ahead 18-6. Jim Smith got the ball, but couldn't sink it.

Crete went up for the rebound, got it and two points, 20-6.

A call on Cardinal Kevin Henning and Ord got the ball. Dan Martin had passed to Barry Witherwax when a foul by Crete's Scott Johnson gave Witherwax two free throws. Both went in.

In the following scramble, Crete got the ball and boosted their lead 22-8.

Witherwax slowly worked the ball down court, taking his time, plotting every move. He had just moved it within basket range when Crete swiped the ball. Seconds later the score jumped again 24-8.

It was this deadly rebounding and stealing that killed the Ord Chants. Wax went to the free throw line, didn't score, and Crete went up for — and got — the ball. The score changed again 26-8.

Kremke sank a basket from five feet out, closing the gap 26-10. At 6:22 he is one of the tallest players on the Ord team. In all, Ord has two players his height.

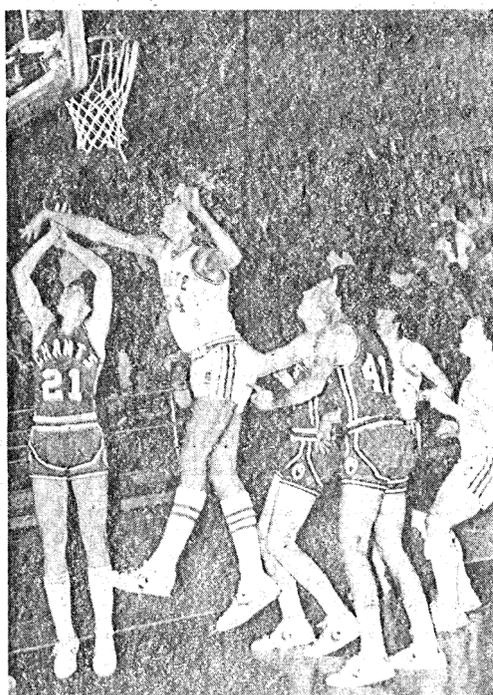

Four boys stand over six feet tall or better on the Chant squad. Crete's varsity roster lists eight boys standing six foot, or taller. Two of these, Brian Murray and John Burhman, are an impressive 6'7".

They end their teammates gave Crete a 32-14 half time lead.

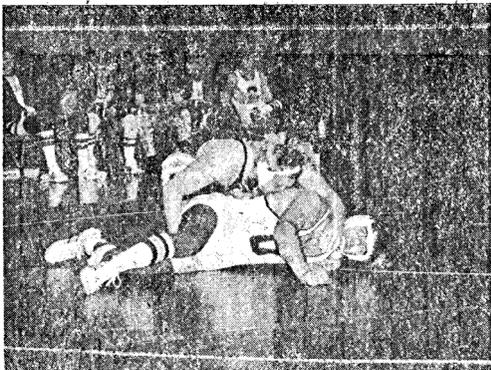

The second half opened with 6:27, Burhman jumping with 6:27, Kurt Kremke. Crete got the ball and a whistle. Ord gained ball possession but lost it to Crete.

A foul call on Ord, and Crete got two free throws. Both were good, hiking their lead 24-14. Two free throws by Joe Dworak helped narrow the gap 34-16, but they weren't enough. Seconds

Barry Witherwax (21) strains for the rebound during the Crete-Ord game Friday.

Paul B. Antiquier rolls out from under a potential pin in the Ord-St. Paul wrestling meet.

Weber Rates This Year's Team One Of The Tallest

Jan Weber rated this year's ninth grade girls team as one of the taller groups she's handled. One girl on the squad stands 5'10" and two more are 5'9". A few girls standing 5'7" round out the group.

They will face Broken Bow this Thursday. Asked about the visiting team, Weber declined comment saying she has received no information on them.

She did, however, comment briefly on possible Ord defensive strategy. This will likely include a man-to-man and zone defense, with emphasis on the zone. "It's early in the season, and we still have learning to do to reach the point where we feel confident in the man-to-man defense," she said.

Her girls have likely had some experience in the man-to-man play plan, but this has been limited, in her estimation. "They've mostly used zone defense in the past," she said, "because high school girls' teams haven't had super outside shooters."

The girls' ability is developing now, hence the gradual emphasis on man-to-man defense, Weber contended.

She rated this year's 9th grade team as one of the more talented groups she has worked with. Eleven girls are out this season. Most, according to their coach, show good playing techniques.

"Of course playing in a game and practice are two different things," she admitted. The latter will stop and the former begin this Thursday when the girls play host to Broken Bow. Game time is 6:15 p.m. at Ord High.

Monday they go to Grand Island Northwest.

Doug Peterson is one of seven Kearney State College players named to the Central States Intercollegiate Conference All-Star Football Team by the coaches. Peterson was voted the middle guard position.

Mrs. Merle Moody and Mrs. Ralph Porter visited Ralph Porter at the Valley County Hospital Monday afternoon.

Deer Success Improves

Nebraska's firearm deer hunters had a better season this year than in 1977, according to check station figures tabulated by Game and Parks Commission wildlife biologists.

This year, despite a reduction in either-sex permits, 47 percent of the permit holders bagged deer. In 1977, 43 percent were successful.

Ken Johnson, chief of game management for the Game and Parks Commission explained that the deer population in many parts of the state is below normal and still recovering losses from a disease outbreak in 1976. Restrictive deer seasons, with very few permits valid for antlerless deer, allows the herd to increase in number by keeping does in the breeding population. Such regulations have been enacted by the Commission the past two years. Johnson pointed out that 12 of the state's 17 deer management units reported success better than last year's.

Mrs. Lola Owens hosted a noon luncheon for the Two Table Pinochle club Tuesday. The afternoon was spent playing cards and closed with a Christmas gift exchange.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike King and Scott spent the weekend skiing in Colorado.

"Running Water In Every Home" Nebraska Woman's Goal In 1927"

"Running Water, in Every Home" — the housewife as she is commonly known — if all she had to do was to turn a faucet. "Men and women who live in steamheated apartments and homes in the cities probably do not appreciate just exactly what this means to the great number of homes in our state where running water is unknown. To the city dweller, running water is commonplace and an accepted necessary convenience. Little thought is given to what they would do if all of a sudden there was no more running water and they had to lift the water bucket and begin their trudge to the water pump.

"Science has made it possible for the water pump and other backbreaking drudgeries to be eliminated from the daily tasks of the home-makers of our state. It is now up to the women to demand those conveniences not only for the pleasure (able) hours it will bring them, but because it will permit them to spend their extra time in developing better home environment and happier homes.

"Nebraska towns of under 1,000 population are more frequently supplied with public water systems than are the towns of the same size throughout the nation. More than three-fourths of the towns of under 1,000 population have a public water supply. That gives us a marvelous foundation on which to build our program of 'running water in every Nebraska home!'

"What extent are the available public water systems in the towns and cities of Nebraska being used? What can be done toward encouraging the use of electricity and gas engines in bringing running water into the homes on the farms?

"The recent 'Better Equipped Homes' survey carried by the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs, showed that more than two-fifths of the houses in towns of 2,000 to 5,000 population and one-fifth of the houses in towns of 500 to 2,000 population reporting no running water. Even in Omaha there are 3,000 dwellings without this first essential to good housekeeping. This means that houses that do not have running water in the kitchen seldom have stationary basins or bath tubs with running water. Also many houses having kitchen sinks do not have running water elsewhere in the home. According to the survey, it is interesting to note that in towns of under 1,000 population two-thirds of the houses are without stationary basins and one-fourth of the houses in towns of 5,000 to 25,000 population are without stationary basins.

"Why this sudden interest in kitchen sinks and running water? Some may ask. In answer to this question Mrs. Minier cites statistics indicating that introduction of running water into the home reduces the infant death rate and raises the general health level of the householder and his family. She concludes that evidence then (1927) available "should satisfy anyone who doubts that modern sanitary household conveniences in the home make for health.

"To obtain these conveniences it will take more than the mere desire on the part of the women of our state. The men of our state, we feel confident, have a desire to see home life raised to a higher plane and 'home-making' made more pleasant and easier for the 'home-makers' — their wives, mothers and sisters. We are depending upon the interest and the energy of the men to help create public sentiment for energy-saving and health conserving home conveniences, and we are depending upon the men for their introduction into Nebraska's homes.

"Electricity, gas and the telephone have made great progress in our state because of the interest of the menfolk. Ninety-eight per cent of Nebraska towns under 1,000 population have central station electricity. Nebraska is an outstanding state from the standpoint of both gas and electrical conveniences. Now that electricity is being rushed to the farmer's door, there is an additional inducement to the farm to bring running water into the kitchen as well as many other conveniences made possible by the great master-servant, electricity."

meaker — the housewife as she is commonly known — if all she had to do was to turn a faucet. "Men and women who live in steamheated apartments and homes in the cities probably do not appreciate just exactly what this means to the great number of homes in our state where running water is unknown. To the city dweller, running water is commonplace and an accepted necessary convenience. Little thought is given to what they would do if all of a sudden there was no more running water and they had to lift the water bucket and begin their trudge to the water pump.

"Science has made it possible for the water pump and other backbreaking drudgeries to be eliminated from the daily tasks of the home-makers of our state. It is now up to the women to demand those conveniences not only for the pleasure (able) hours it will bring them, but because it will permit them to spend their extra time in developing better home environment and happier homes.

"Nebraska towns of under 1,000 population are more frequently supplied with public water systems than are the towns of the same size throughout the nation. More than three-fourths of the towns of under 1,000 population have a public water supply. That gives us a marvelous foundation on which to build our program of 'running water in every Nebraska home!'

"What extent are the available public water systems in the towns and cities of Nebraska being used? What can be done toward encouraging the use of electricity and gas engines in bringing running water into the homes on the farms?

"The recent 'Better Equipped Homes' survey carried by the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs, showed that more than two-fifths of the houses in towns of 2,000 to 5,000 population and one-fifth of the houses in towns of 500 to 2,000 population reporting no running water. Even in Omaha there are 3,000 dwellings without this first essential to good housekeeping. This means that houses that do not have running water in the kitchen seldom have stationary basins or bath tubs with running water. Also many houses having kitchen sinks do not have running water elsewhere in the home. According to the survey, it is interesting to note that in towns of under 1,000 population two-thirds of the houses are without stationary basins and one-fourth of the houses in towns of 5,000 to 25,000 population are without stationary basins.

"Why this sudden interest in kitchen sinks and running water? Some may ask. In answer to this question Mrs. Minier cites statistics indicating that introduction of running water into the home reduces the infant death rate and raises the general health level of the householder and his family. She concludes that evidence then (1927) available "should satisfy anyone who doubts that modern sanitary household conveniences in the home make for health.

"To obtain these conveniences it will take more than the mere desire on the part of the women of our state. The men of our state, we feel confident, have a desire to see home life raised to a higher plane and 'home-making' made more pleasant and easier for the 'home-makers' — their wives, mothers and sisters. We are depending upon the interest and the energy of the men to help create public sentiment for energy-saving and health conserving home conveniences, and we are depending upon the men for their introduction into Nebraska's homes.

Reserves-Swedes To Open Season

Lon Bartholomew's reserve squad will tangle with Gothenburg here Friday in their season opening game. Seventeen boys are out for the reserve squad, he said.

Practice sessions started early last month. Asked how the boys are doing, Lon commented, "We'll find out Friday, I guess."

He does have one true youngster, 6'3", part of the spillover from the varsity squad. He rated their game experience and that of other players as his biggest asset. Some juniors seeing action last season are back this year.

Pending plans for the '78-'79 season included mixing his defenses. "I'd like to play man-to-man if we can," he said, "because you can't play a good zone defense unless you've learned the man-to-man fundamentals."

Just which one he will use against Gothenburg Friday remains to be seen. Asked for predictions about the understudy Swedes, he commented, "I won't know what I'll do until I see them." That will be at 6:15 Friday at Ord High.

Saturday, the reserves go to David City.

Arcadia Huskies Win a Cliffhanger

Arcadia boys pulled away from a third quarter deficit to win their season opener over Ansley 51-49 Friday. Going into the last period, host Arcadia trailed 41-33.

Ansley tried to stall the last period. It didn't work. Arcadia's press and man-to-man defense broke it up, and paved the way for a spectacular finish.

The Huskies led by six points with two minutes left in the game. With one second on the clock, Arcadia had a slim two-point edge. Ansley tried a long half-court shot that bounced off the rim, just as the buzzer sounded.

Arcadia coach, Clifford Jorgensen, said, "I think they made a mistake in trying to stall." In a phone interview Tuesday, "There was too much time left on the clock. Our press worked well and we stole the ball a couple of times."

He had no predictions going into the game. It's his first year at Arcadia, he explained, and he wasn't familiar with Ansley. "But the boys did all right for their first ball game," he proudly stated.

This year there are 18 players out for the team. He has three of the leading scorers back from last year. They are John Cox, Kevin Holcomb, and Mick Anderson.

John was the leading scorer Friday with 21 points, and Holcomb had 12. Mick, the coach said, had an off night. "His shots just wouldn't fall for him," Jorgensen summed it up.

Mick and other Huskies will play Spalding at Spalding next Friday. Game times are 6:30 for reserves and 8:00 for varsity squads.

Nebraska's Honey Creek Coal Mine

Some early settlers in Nebraska, faced with a shortage of timber, seized upon coal as a possible alternate source of fuel. Reports of coal discoveries in the state were circulated at various times during the 1800s and 1870s. By 1872 coal mining operations had been or were being conducted near Plattsmouth, Pawnee City, Brownville, Aspenwall, and Otoe City. In 1874 strikes were reported near Ponca and Dakota City. None of these reported "finds" contained coal of sufficient quality in enough quantity to make commercial exploitation profitable.

The only mine ever discovered in Nebraska which "proved out" was the Honey Creek mine near Peru, Nemaha County, opened in 1906. Research workers of the Federal Writers' Project reported in the 1930s that coal outcroppings on the creek bank had been noted for years by area residents but no attempts had been made to exploit them. In 1906 a bed of coal averaging 34 inches in thickness was exposed and it was noted that the coal seam thickened as it went deeper into the hill. The February 23, 1906, Peru Pointer, on file at the Nebraska State Historical Society, reported the find:

"The report was current on our streets all last week that coal had been discovered near Peru. On Saturday A. M. Borst and P. M. Bates brought samples to this office showing what the vein consisted of at the opening. At first the vein was but about eight inches thick and the coal of a brown color, decidedly water or air slacked, of a quality that would burn readily, though giving little heat. After going into the bank the distance of four feet, the vein was found to be almost three feet in thickness, of an almost black color, much harder than at first and with a decided lustre. It burned better and gave more heat. Mr. Bates, who has spent ten years in the mines of Iowa, said that he never saw a more promising outlook than he found here at that depth. The vein dipped down, grew thicker, and was covered by the layer of shale which marks all good coal beds.

"By Wednesday evening the workmen had reached a point 19 feet from the opening, and a still better product was being found, although it seemed still to be likely to air slack. The vein is located on the farm of A. M.

defensive player of the year by both the Omaha World Herald and Lincoln Star.

The 6-3, 230-pound player is majoring in agri-business and minoring in economics and business administration.

Peterson is the second Antelope to be named to the Kodak All-American team. Mitch Johnson was a 1976 defensive back selection.

Brian Byers, Pittsburg State, offensive tackle, was also named to the first team.

City, Harlan County. About six to eight miners were employed. Work at the site continued for about 12 years, at which time the vein began to thin, making further working of the mine unprofitable.

Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Prickett returned home Sunday evening after a Thanksgiving vacation. They spent Thanksgiving Day with a daughter and family, Mrs. Vicki Seals at Cheyenne, WY, then flew to Sunnyvale, CA where they visited their son, Jim, for five days.

WAYS TO CONSERVE ENERGY

It has been estimated that your utilities will cost you several times what they do today in a matter of 8-10 years. It would be well to clip this ad out and post it for any interested person to read.

- There are hundreds of ways each of us can save energy. Here are some. Can you think of others?
1. Don't "oven peep" . . . you lose 25 degrees.
2. Broil foods rather than fry or bake.
3. Turn off the roast 30 minutes before serving time . . . it can cook on retained heat.
4. Bake and roast more than one item at a time.
5. Match the correct pot size to the size of the burner.
6. Eat by candlelight for a little romance.
7. Thaw frozen foods before cooking.
8. Use a kettle instead of a pan to heat water.

Forced Entry in North Loup Bar

There was an attempted break-in at Buzzy's Tavern in North Loup some time over the weekend according to Valley County Sheriff Martin Sonnenfeld. Entry was gained through a storeroom in the back. It isn't known if anything was taken, at this time. Sonnenfeld said the tavern owner claimed to be the target of harassment recently. He has had over 60 flat tires, oil and antifreeze have been drained from equipment, he reportedly told the sheriff.

A stolen bike was recovered on the edge of North Loup Monday. The bike, belonging to Tim Ingerham, was taken some time after Thanksgiving.

Sheriff Sonnenfeld reminded residents snowmobiles must be licensed if used on land owned by the vehicle owner. The mobiles may be driven in ditches and not on the regular road surface. Licenses are available in the County Clerk's office.

Vox Pop

Dear Editor, In response to the "Football Fan" of last week's Vox Pop, what is winning? Is it only the won, lost seasonal record or do you take into consideration the character, respect, and courage this team displayed for its coach, school and community?

Writers to the editor have been known to voice their opinion about different groups, which is fine, but to single out one individual to me is in poor taste.

I too am an Ord football fan who sees more than the final record as the important outcome of a successful football season.

Young Farmers and Ranchers

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M. M. Van Kirk, Director of Information

Young farm and ranch couples in Nebraska and in other states are successfully establishing and operating their own farming and ranching enterprises contrary to some misconceptions that are often advanced that it is impossible now for young people to enter the farming and ranching field.

It is true that the large capital investments and credit resources required by modern farm and ranch operations are a major obstacle and discourage many young people who actually have the opportunity from taking advantage of it. The word "impossible" gets into the picture if one thinks in terms of starting "from absolute scratch" and with little more than desire and hard work. But that has been and continues to be true with virtually every profession.

Few news reporters or advertising salesmen can ever hope to own the newspaper, radio station or television station that they work for, or even a part interest in it. There is just too much money involved. The same thing is true with the young pharmacist starting out, or the employee in the supermarket, or the worker for a construction company. But a farmer or rancher has traditionally been expected to own and manage his operation and acquire ownership of at least part of the land involved. That's both a strength and weakness of farming and ranching as a career occupation.

Farming and ranching is a business like any other and has to deal in the same realities for success or failure. A set of guidelines based on the records of young people who are achieving farming and ranching success would include the following:

1. Grow up on a farm or ranch. There is no substitute for such a background. The old idea that "anyone can farm" was never so apt and certainly is not true now.

2. Through inheritance or marriage or in some way "get a start." The pattern of most young farmers and ranchers is to start in association with parents, sharing "dad's" equipment to begin with in return for work performed, later buying out the parents' share of equipment and livestock, and leasing more land to expand overall operations. After a good start, buy some land to establish a "home place." Acquisition of parents' land comes through inheritance or purchase by contract when the parents retire.

3. There are many variations to the "start" formula. The initial help and consideration can come from other relatives or in rare cases from an interested and well-to-do friend.

4. Demonstrated farming and ranching ability and a reasonable chance for success are prerequisites for obtaining credit from all reputable credit sources including government agencies. Good business sense and dependability in meeting obligations are vital to maintaining good credit relations. Bankers have demonstrated that they will go a long way to help capable farmers and ranchers with their credit problems.

5. Most successful farm and ranch operations are developed over a period of years as finances and opportunities present themselves. Most failures can be traced to over-expansion and unwise decisions in purchase of equipment, livestock and land.

6. The most stable operations during good times and bad are those which are diversified. For example, many young farmers who had both cattle and hog production in recent years survived when the cattle market was in the doldrums.

7. Most young farmers and ranchers develop their mechanical and construction skills to save thousands of dollars by their "do it myself" abilities.

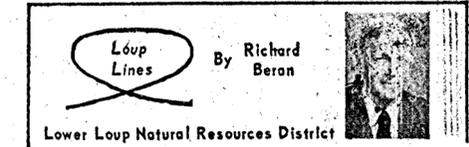

8. Off-season jobs in business or industry has helped many young farmers supplement their farm income and there are many "working wives" holding salaried positions.

Young farm and ranch couples are proving every year that farming and ranching still offer great opportunities for "the good life" for them and their families.

Couples Return After Two Week Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Krcelik and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Grabowski returned Thursday from a two week vacation on the West Coast. On the way, they toured the Lake Mead and Grand Canyon area in Arizona. Two days were spent in the Las Vegas area which included a tour through Hoover Dam. From there, they went to Bakersfield, CA where they were house guests of Joe's cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gibson. The Krcelik's had Thanksgiving dinner with the Gibsons and Grabowski's had Thanksgiving with their friends, the Ernie Jones family at Visalia. While in California, they visited Universal Studio, Knotts Berry Farm, Disneyland, the San Diego Zoo, and Sea World, plus a harbor excursion in the San Diego-Coronado Bay.

Manganese
Water samples from 348 wells in Nebraska have been analyzed for manganese. Manganese concentrations ranged from 0 to 3.5 parts per million (ppm) and averaged 1.8 ppm.

Manganese is similar to iron in many respects in that its concentration in solution is regulated both by the presence of a source of manganese and by the chemical environment within the aquifer. Manganese in the reduced state is quite soluble. In the oxidized state it tends to form stable precipitates of manganese dioxide and during precipitation is a very efficient scavenger of other metal ions. The precipitates, usually dark brown and slightly gelatinous, generally form in castings, pipes and valves when water comes in contact with oxygen.

Data on manganese concentrations in groundwater are available for areas comprising about three-fourths of Nebraska. Throughout nearly all the sampled western half of the state and much of the sampled eastern part such concentrations generally were less than .05 ppm. The aquifers in these areas of low manganese concentrations are unconsolidated Quaternary fluvial deposits containing little or no organic material and not resting on Pierre Shale, the Ogallala Formation, or older Tertiary rocks. Dissolution of manganese from galvanized casings probably accounts for the higher concentrations in water samples from a few wells in the areas where concentrations generally are less than .05 ppm.

Except for the southwest Nebraska area of manganese concentrations greater than .4 ppm, all areas of concentrations greater than .05 ppm are in the eastern half of the state. In many of these areas the principal aquifer consists of unconsolidated Quaternary fluvial deposits that are underlain by the Pierre Shale, the Dakota Group, or the Ogallala Formation; that are associated with till; or that contain significant amounts of organic material.

Concentrations of organic carbon in water occupying pore space in the Pierre Shale probably lower the oxidation potential to a level that allows manganese to exist in its soluble reduced form, thus accounting for the high concentrations of manganese in water that has come into contact with the top of the Pierre. Concentrations of manganese exceeding 4 ppm in Hall, Adams, Webster, and Franklin counties may be representative of these conditions. Water found in pore spaces in till also may have high concentrations of organic carbon and may similarly lower the oxidation potential of ground water coming into contact with it. Concentrations of manganese between .06 and 4 ppm in groundwater at some locations in valley areas — specifically along the lower reaches of the North Loup, Cedar, and Loup rivers, and in groundwater from deposits in the Platte River valley in eastern Merrick County — may be due to the dissolution of organically bound manganese from decaying leaves and other organic residues trapped in fine textured alluvial sediments. Release of soluble manganese from such sediments would be slow.

Manganese in water is objectionable because concentrations as low as .2 ppm may cause dark-brown or black stains on fabrics and porcelain fixtures. Pipes can become clogged with scale resulting from deposition of manganese. The U.S. Public Health Service drinking water standards include a recommended upper limit of 0.5 ppm for manganese. Environmental Protection Agency primary regulations do not include a manganese standard but secondary regulations now under study would, for aesthetic considerations, retain the 0.50 ppm standard.

Ag Tips from the County Agent

The Nebraska cattle feeders had a record 1.81 million cattle on feed on November 1, according to state statisticians. This is about 12 percent above last year's number and breaks the previous record set earlier this year by 6 percent. Marketing of cattle also set a record during the month of October. There were 471,700 cattle slaughtered in Nebraska during October, up 27 percent from a year ago. The average live weight was 1079 pounds, up 45 pounds from the 1034 average last October. October hog slaughter in Nebraska totaled 355,700 head, down 2 percent from last year.

Winter Damage Of Evergreen Trees and Shrubs
Weather injury is the biggest enemy of evergreen trees and shrubs in Nebraska. Nebraska evergreens are particularly susceptible to winter drying.

Winter drying usually occurs in late winter or early spring before new growth starts. During winter days, especially if low humidity and dry, windy conditions exist, evergreen trees lose water through the foliage, sometimes at a rate which exceeds the amount of water the roots can get from the ground. Drying of the foliage results because the tree is unable to replace the moisture lost through transpiration. The tree may put on a flush of new growth, using up what reserves it has in the roots, then begin to decline. Injured trees may only have dead branch tips or entire branches will turn brown, depending on the severity of the injury. The side of the tree facing the prevailing wind is most susceptible to winter injury. This type of injury usually is temporary and most evergreens recover quickly as the growing season progresses. It's necessary to prune out dead branches, as they will not recover. In some cases the entire tree will turn brown and die.

Another type of winter injury which may be more injurious to the tree is low temperature injury. This occurs due to rapid drop in temperature and the stage of hardness of maturity of the plant tissues at the time of the temperature drop. This is most likely to occur when a mild fall is followed by a sudden drop in temperature while the trees are still growing.

Evergreen tree and shrub losses in farm windbreaks and home landscape planting can be very costly, not only in monetary terms but in intangible values such as the protection values of a windbreak or the aesthetic values of a specimen tree.

To avoid winter injury losses, here are some tips:

1. For already established trees, water them thoroughly in the fall before it freezes and water during the winter when the ground thaws and water can be

Ord Rotarians Study Habitat

Dick Beran, manager of the Lower Loup Natural Resources District was guest speaker at Rotary Monday evening.

Mr. Beran explained a number of facts about NRD's Habitat Program including the monies that are available to farmers and how an application is processed. Locally, Dale Zadina and Ken Patsko are on the district habitat committee.

In other Rotary news, the club voted to reprint its Circle Tours Brochures and seek financial assistance from the Chamber of Commerce and City Council.

2. Mulch around the trees to prevent deep freezing. Wood chips or sawdust are good mulch materials.

3. Maintain a fertile, well-aerated soil to encourage deep root growth. For evergreen trees and shrubs, apply two to four pounds of fertilizer or commercially prepared tree food per inch of tree diameter. Spread it uniformly around the tree and into the branches, but not next to the trunk.

Wood as Fuel — There Has Been Renewal

There has been renewed interest in using firewood as fuel in recent years. Due to increasing costs and shortages of other fuels, wood has become economically attractive.

In much of the world, wood is used as fuel and there is a scarcity, but the situation in the United States is entirely the opposite.

Trees are a renewable resource. Unlike fossil fuels, continual crops of wood can be grown. Using wood as a fuel gives a personal sense of satisfaction and independence. In efficient heater, wood may not be as costly or limited as fossil fuels, especially if the consumer has his own woodland and the wood is cut by the owner or the family. Wood as fuel contributes little to water and air pollution, as it is a clean burning fuel. In using wood as fuel, there is a potential to improve woodlands for other purposes such as timber, wildlife habitat and recreation.

Even though it has many strong points, wood as fuel does have a few disadvantages. It is bulky and requires storage space and it does take hard work to prepare a supply. The wood must be seasoned (dried), which takes time. A fire requires attention and cannot be adjusted by a thermostat. There also is a potential fire hazard.

When buying firewood, consumers should look for dry wood which has been seasoned for six to 12 months to reach 20 percent moisture content. A factor should also be wood density. A dense wood is one that is hard and heavy. These give more heat per unit, burn slowly, have low uniform flames and produce more and longer lasting coals. Light, soft woods burn quickly, produce less heat per unit and have larger flames.

The best woods to burn are hickory, black locust, ash and oak. Hickory produces 24.6 million BTU per cord; elm, soft maple (the medium woods) produce about 18 million BTU per cord; an the worst woods — cottonwood, pine and basswood — produce about 12 million BTU per cord. The lighter woods are good for starting the fire however.

The Valley County Extension Office has purchased a handbook entitled "Prevention and Control of Wildlife Damage". The Great Plains Agricultural Council has adapted this book to the ten Great Plains States which includes Nebraska. Wildlife specialists, especially from Cooperative Extension Agencies, but including other agency personnel, worked for over one year to renew and update the present handbook. You are invited to stop by the office and make use of this book.

The deadline for identifying market beef calves which will exhibit at the State Fair and Ak-Sar-Ben has been moved up to February 1 this year instead of March 1 as last year. We are anticipating an earlier weighing and tagging date for Valley County. More information will be available on this date after our rate-o-gain committee meeting on Thursday, December 7.

Voc-Ag District Livestock Judging Contests Scheduled

The 1978-79 Nebraska District Vocational Agriculture Livestock Judging Contests will be held in late December and early January, with qualifying teams advancing to the state contest to be held in the spring.

Three Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources staff members will supervise the event. Keith E. Gilster, University of Nebraska-Lincoln associate professor of animal science, will serve as superintendent. Assistant superintendents will be R. B. Warren, UNL professor of animal science, and Leon Wissmann, UNL assistant instructor of agricultural education.

Contests for Districts 2, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 will begin at 8 a.m. District 1 contestants will begin competition at 7:30 a.m. and District 3 competitors will register at 9:30 a.m. The latter two schedules are necessary because the UNL Livestock Judging Pavilion, where the contests are held, is not large enough for both groups to judge at the same time.

The contest will be divided into junior and senior divisions, with each group judging classes of cattle, swine and sheep, answering questions and evaluating market steers and pigs.

Dates for the contests are:
— Dec. 30, District 2 and 6, Fanner Park, Grand Island.
— Jan. 3, Districts 7 and 8, Keith County Fairgrounds, Ogallala.

— Jan. 4, Districts 4 and 5, Howard Pitzer Ranch, three-and-a-half miles northwest of Ericson.
— Jan. 8, Districts 1 and 3, Livestock Judging Pavilion, UNL East Campus, Lincoln.

Mike VanNordheim Receives Commission

Marine Second Lieutenant Michael L. Van Nordheim, son of Dave and Carol Van Nordheim of Ord, was commissioned in his present rank upon graduation from Officer Candidate School.

The 10-week school was conducted at the Marine Corps Development and Education Command in Quantico, VA. The course is designed to screen and train personnel for commissioning as Marine Corps officers by providing instruction in leadership and basic military subjects and emphasizing esprit de corps and self-discipline. A demanding physical conditioning program complements the students' course of study.

Van Nordheim will now attend the 21-week officer's Basic School, also at Quantico.

A 1974 graduate of Ord High School, and a 1978 graduate of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, with a Bachelor of Science degree, he joined the Marine Corps in May 1978.

Dye From Morning Glories?

The morning glory may provide a satisfactory substitute coloring for two dyes (red #2 and #4) banned from use in foods and beverages by the Food and Drug Administration. The natural pigment from "Heavenly Blue" morning glory variety is one of a group of common plant pigments called anthocyanins that help give color to flowers and fruits. Because most people eat anthocyanins daily in fruits and vegetables, commercial use of the "Heavenly Blue" pigment as a food coloring may avoid the carcinogenic problems associated with the banned synthetic red dyes. It would be especially applicable for colors imitating cherry, strawberry, raspberry and purple grapes. FDA has not yet given its approval.

Think It Through

Whenever we see the media being "had" we do a slow burn. Case in point is the story of you Jessica Katz.

The 13 month old daughter of a Russian couple was the center of national attention recently. The youngster had a digestive disorder. During the last six months — or longer — stories of Jessica's plight stirred the nation. Stories indicated she was at death's door, underweight, and in danger from the grim reaper.

American Jewish organizations reportedly used these sad tales in promoting the Katz family's emigration to the United States. The child had to be saved, they said, and saved at once. Her illness was causing her to waste away.

On arriving in Boston last Friday, Jessica appeared healthy and well. It was then reporters learned that while accounts of the child's supposed struggle for life were being circulated, Jessica was receiving a special formula from American tourists, and thriving.

Those promoting Jessica's plight can chalk up a victory. Their tactics worked. The Katz family is out of Russia. If this took some misrepresentation, so be it. The means apparently justified the end, in their book.

Yet we wonder if in scoring their triumph, they didn't lose some ground. We suspect more than one journalist viewed that from there on he would regard their stories with more skepticism than had been used in the past.

Come to think of it, a little healthy skepticism might not be a bad idea for all of us. The next time any organized group, of whatever stripe, tries to "sell" you on a story or an ideology, step back a few paces and think it through.

In winning their victory, Jessica's proponents likely lost some credibility and played into the hands of the Soviets, the people they set out to defeat.

Something Different

Different Eating

I am perfectly delighted with the variety of fresh foods and vegetables I find in San Diego. Not all of them are new to me but plenty of them are. I don't know how to spell them, how to say them, how to use them, but I'm going to learn.

— Zucchini I have liked for years, but I find new recipes for it here. So scallop it; slice (don't peel) four zucchini and par-boil for five minutes, drain and put in casserole. Mix together one cup of small curd cottage cheese, one cup shredded cheddar cheese, two slightly beaten eggs, one can of chopped green chilis, and if you like three green onions, chopped, also three slices of bacon fried crisp and then crumbled; pour this mixture over zucchini and sprinkle more cheese on if desired. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. It will serve eight!

— Would you like pumpkin au gratin? It's that time of year. Peel — cut up and cook two pounds pumpkin until tender. Mash if you wish. Layer it in the baking dish with cream sauce to which you've added two eggs, four tablespoons grated Swiss or Parmesan cheese and seasonings. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes.

— For pumpkin soup use one quart of chicken broth, two pounds of peeled and cut up pumpkin, one can of golden corn, two tablespoons of butter or oil, three tablespoons chopped pimentos, one chopped onion, one clove of garlic and season, adding chili pepper, sugar and salt to your taste.

— For very fancy bananas peel four firm ones, split lengthwise, cook in four tablespoons of butter about one minute. Turn and brown second side, sprinkle with four tablespoons of brown sugar, two teaspoons cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg. Spoon over bananas to glaze and caramelize. Take off the heat, add one-third cup dark rum and carefully ignite. Serve the bananas on individual plates topping with sauce. For four.

— Kiwi fruit is a newcomer that's tasty with its limegreen flesh flecked with edible seeds. It tastes like strawberry, pineapple and papaya all at once. When it is slightly soft it is ripe. Cut crosswise in slices and serve as an hors d'oeuvre, or peel off the brown shell and serve with raspberry sherbet.

(They are also called Chinese gooseberries — I've seen them in Carson's) — To make green pepper strips preheat oven to 450 degrees, bake the three washed peppers on a rack for 12 to 15 minutes. Remove and wrap at once in a damp towel, for ten minutes. Use a small knife to strip away the skin, seeds, stem, etc. Cut the peppers into one-fourth inch strips about an inch and a half long. Combine two tablespoons of white vinegar, one teaspoon sugar, one teaspoon salt, and pepper in a small bowl. Add peppers and toss, cover and refrigerate two hours or overnight, then drain and serve with mayonnaise, either as salad or a relish with meats.

— This is fish country and I see so many excellent recipes for using them, like this clam chowder bake which begins with two cups of crushed crackers and two cups of milk. Beat in four eggs, add one can of New England style clam chowder, condensed, and one can of clams, with their juice. Stir well and pour into a one quart casserole to bake for 325 degrees for one hour.

— Yes, they get clams, abalone, crab, lobster, shrimp and dozens of kinds of fish and oysters near here. Most of it is canned

Pohlenz Named As Thone Appointee

CAPITOL NEWS

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association Lincoln — Dean Pohlenz of Omaha, a former long-time aide of former Sen. Roman Hruska and a friend for many years of Gov. Jay S. Byrd, has been named as the new governor's administrative assistant during the first two months of the upcoming administration.

Pohlenz, research director for an Omaha law firm, will take a leave of absence to help Thone establish office policies and procedures and then continue as his administrative assistant during January and February.

Thone said there is no possibility Pohlenz will remain on a permanent basis.

Pohlenz joined Hruska's staff in 1961, resigned in 1971 to be an assistant administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration then returned to Hruska's staff in 1974 and remained for another three years.

Twenty-five years ago, Pohlenz was the statehouse reporter for The Lincoln Journal and it was during that time he became acquainted with Thone.

Thone said the temporary administrative aide may help him in forming his administration but added, "I will put together our team."

At this writing, no decision had been made on who the new tax commissioner will be, but Thone has made it clear he considers the commissioner's job one of the most important in state government "at least until we get a statewide property tax equalization squared away."

The incumbent commissioner, William Peters, said recently two

Band Together

The nine persons who will be sworn in as state senators for the first time Jan. 3 have decided to form a caucus so they can be more effective during their first year on the job.

Following the first orientation session for the new lawmakers, seven of them remained to organize a caucus. The seven were Harold Sieck of Pleasant Dale, Tom Vickers of Farnham, Peter Hoagland, Vard Johnson and Carol McBride, Pusch of Omaha and Chris Beutler and Dave Landis of Lincoln.

Don Wesley of Lincoln, another new senator, said he agreed with the idea of the caucus but wasn't at the organizational session. Rex Haberman of Imperial was also absent.

Those caucusing agreed they could be more effective if they cooperated with each other by exchanging information on legislation before their committees.

The new lawmakers held a three-day orientation session recently.

Petition Drive

The executive secretary of the Nebraska Council of School Administrators said recently some educators are thinking about a petition drive that would be directed at encouraging the consolidation of school districts.

Loren Brakenhoff said the petition would propose elimination of six classifications of districts but would really be directed at abolishing many small districts.

Nebraska with about 1,200 school districts has more than any other state. About 900 of the state's districts are Class 1 — those that operate elementary schools only.

According to Brakenhoff, putting all districts into one class would clarify administration and financing.

Consolidation of districts is such an emotional issue it could not be steered through the Legislature, Brakenhoff said. "Maybe it's time to give the people a chance to vote on whether they want a large number of school districts," he said.

Brakenhoff said his organization would feel out the thinking of other education groups before becoming involved in any kind of campaign.

In the past, he said, education leaders have been too defensive in reacting to moves by the leadership of the Nebraska School Improvement Association.

Brakenhoff said he doubts a majority of Nebraskans, if they could vote on the matter, would support the NSIA's position, which favors a large number of elementary districts.

On another matter, Brakenhoff said the thin margin of victory in the recent defeat of the proposed 5 percent annual increase in local governments' spending should serve as a warning that educators cannot ignore the public's earnest wish for wise spending of tax dollars.

Dear Editor and Football Fan:

In regard to your statements last week, we students from Ord High are very sorry that you feel the way you do. It is too bad you don't really know Jim Blessen. We know him well and think he is an excellent teacher and although he may not have led his team to astounding victories, he taught us much more about leadership and sportsmanship. The people in this town need to realize that winning isn't everything and that O.H.S. has some extremely good teachers who care, but will probably quit not only because of public sentiment and bad feeling, but because there are towns where teachers are appreciated!

We are proud to sign our names, unlike some individuals, while only looking at the numbers, not the real story behind the numbers. As for us, we'll take our peanut butter and jelly on white bread from Mr. Blessen or any other teacher any day.

As for teacher salaries they shouldn't merit any complaints from taxpayers, because let's face it, they aren't exactly wealthy. The benefits students receive from teachers can't be measured in dollars alone!

Geranium Joe

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

I recollect some years back this fellow told the judge he ought not to be found guilty of drunk driving on account he was too drunk when he was arrested to decide whether to agree to blow in a machine that would tell how drunk he was. That must of been him they picked up the other day on a list of breaking, entering and stealing charges. He complained that the police was falling down on their job. He said if they were doing what they are paid to do they would of caught him sooner and he wouldn't be in so much trouble. What's really crazy is that the poor devil makes a kind of sense the more you think about his position.

I noticed that item about the same time I saw where Billie Sol Estes, the wheeler dealer that stored make-believe fertilizer in make-believe tanks all over Texas, has been hauled in again for selling make-believe stock or some such. I'm waiting now for Billie Sol to tell the court that it ain't his fault, cause if they'd kept him in jail all this wouldn't of happened. It don't pay to think too long on this either, Billie Sol might say he was saving that fertilizer for crops the Government pays farmers not to grow, and he could make a solid case for his service of offering a fake stock writeoff for folks that don't want to lose any more than they would if they played the real market.

The Billie Sol rerun come up at the session at the country store Saturday night, cause all the fellers like to think there is somepup to the line about a purp chile feeding the fire. You would think, declared Frank Maly that a feller with the bee on him wouldn't go right back to the hive. And Jim Meese said he agreed as far as he was able to understand, Jim went on to note where just last month the Small Business Administration had come up with a slight $13 million shortfall by sticking a finger to the same hot stove. The SBA loaned money to industries to get started, an after making arrangements for them to make items for the military services it advanced them the selling price so the plants could pay their help to make the stuff. The idea was that when the services paid the plants would return the SBA advance, except they didn't. They kept the advance and the pay, and there don't seem to be nothing the SBA can do about it. You might as well be spraying fertilizer that don't exist on fields that don't exist, Jim said.

Practical speaking, broke in Ed Novak, the best example of reverse thinking lately was President Carter's idea about spending $2 billion to draw up plans to get everybody out of big cities in case of nuclear attack. Ed recalled we spent $8 million on "survival biscuits" in the early sixties to stock fallout shelters we never built. But we got more for our $8 million than we'd get for Carter's $2 billion. Ed said a plan to move all city folks into the country is worst than useless without knowing what to do with 'em there. Spend the money on fallout shelters in the cities. Ed said, we already got the biscuits.

Yours truly,

KERRY ON

— glowing memories —

Certain that I now had it started, I drew the screens across the fireplace and settled back in a comfortable overstuffed chair to contemplate the flames and listen to the cracking of the logs.

Nothing is more restful and meditative than a warmly glowing fireplace in the dead of a winter's night. It was snowing outside and a blanket of white had already covered the landscape.

Snowfall seems to muffle the usual worldly sounds and I'd marvelled at the peacefulness, earlier when I stepped outside to check on the weather. The red and green lights of Christmas were starting to show in windows around the neighborhood and I thought of the decorating to be done in the days ahead.

But any ambition toward decorating faded in the glowing fireplace and my thoughts turned, instead, to thoughts of Christmas past and the memories lingering through the years.

I remembered not the gifts that probably seemed so all-important . . . that cost the most . . . that myself, or someone else, had worked so hard to get. Nor did I even remember the family gifts — that one big item the whole family could enjoy.

My memory returned, once again, to the days of my youth when a gift of food to a needy family had taught me the realization of giving. I recalled the caroling the caroling parties. Staring into the flickering flames of the fireplace, I could see the faces of friends bundled up in ear muffs and scarves standing in the gently falling snow and singing for the joy of warming other hearts.

I remembered not the chocolates and fancy foods of today, but the apples and oranges and popcorn that were our treats — healthful and nourishing and as appreciated as any box of candy would be today.

I longed for the return of those Christmas with their simplicity and happiness. It was the feeling I so desperately wanted to recapture. It was what you take from Christmas and try to restore, each year.

Getting another log and opening the screen, I placed it carefully on the fire — hoping my dreams of other years would last as long as the embers continued to glow.

READ JOHN 7:37-41
 "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." (John 7:37)

A tired and weary salesman stood before a water fountain in the lobby of a fashionable hotel. The sign over the water fountain said, "Stoop and drink." But he could find no place to turn on the water. There was no button to push, no handle, and nothing to step on. But finally, looking around to make certain no one was watching, he dared to do just what the sign said. As he stooped to drink, a photoelectric cell caused the cold, refreshing water to flow across his lips; and his thirst was quenched.

God's promises come to us like that sign. We read them, but we do not always understand how anything can happen. We want to understand first and then believe and act. But then we make up our mind to try it and see. And lo, it works! The waters of blessing flow into our lives.

One of the first discoveries we make is a realization of what we have been missing for so long. We must first stoop. The proud will die of thirst. The waters will not flow into lives too proud to stoop, or too busy to worship, or too greedy to share. But when we stoop, we drink.

PRAYER: Our Father, thank You for Your grace so freely given when we respond in obedience to Your will. In Christ's name. Amen.

Summonses Issued In Paving Lawsuit

A hearing Wednesday afternoon in District Court here will decide if street improvements will or will not be made in Street Improvement District 19-8-3 in Ord. Several residents of that district, covering six blocks in southeast Ord, filed suit last Wednesday seeking to halt planned street paving there. They have filed a request for a temporary injunction.

Members of the City Council, Ord Mayor Gaylord Boilesen, City Clerk Wilma Kroeger along with City Attorney Greg Jensen were served summonses by Valley County Sheriff Sonnenfeld Wednesday afternoon, December 13.

Plaintiffs in the suit are Ray and Lucille Shorkoski, Donald and Madia Long and Nadine and Dan Klimek. The petitioners or plaintiffs claim they were denied due process of law when the paving district was formed last October. They contend, according to City Attorney Greg Jensen, that by not receiving personal written notice they were denied due process of law.

That district, and others were formed at a council meeting early in October. At a public hearing held October 9, there was little fanfare and no controversy about the districts at a one-hour hearing in City Hall. Eight persons attended the session, asked a few questions, and left early.

October 23, city dads faced a packed chamber during their meeting in that same building. An estimated 30 to 40 persons told councilmen they were caught unaware when city dads passed paving districts October 9.

Spokesman for the group, Ord lawyer J. Marvin Weems, contended people hadn't been properly notified when the districts were formed. He suggested the council rescind districts 19-8-3 and 19-8-9.

The lawyer suggested people should have been sent letters advising them of the pending districts.

City Attorney Greg Jensen countered by reminding Weems state law requires persons owning property in a pending paving district, but living outside Valley County, be sent letters notifying them of the planned district.

Those living in the county are notified by a legal notice published in a newspaper of general circulation in the area, Jensen stated. Such a legal notice was carried in the Ord Quiz.

"We are saying," Jensen told the Quiz last Thursday, "that proper procedures were followed."

When bids on streets and storm sewer improvements were opened Friday, December 15, Jensen announced the lawsuit had been filed but said he didn't think much would come of it.

Whether that will or will not be the case will be decided by the time readers get this issue of the Quiz. A hearing in District Court in Ord will be underway. Judge James R. Kelly will preside.

James A. Kelly of Grand Island will represent the plaintiffs in the case.

Judge Kelly, of Broken Bow, can issue the temporary injunction sought by plaintiffs or deny it.

County Judge John Icenogle of Kearney rescheduled the court appearance for January 18 in the courthouse at Loup City. He will take the place of Judge Bass.

Kaminski Case Is Rescheduled

The arraignment of Sherman County sheriff-elect Virgil Kaminski was rescheduled for January 18. Eldon Bass, Associate County Judge in Sherman County, disqualified himself from the case. He was to preside at a court session December 14 in Loup City.

In a letter dated November 29, Bass reportedly removed himself from the case on grounds of his close association with Sherman County.

County Judge John Icenogle of Kearney rescheduled the court appearance for January 18 in the courthouse at Loup City. He will take the place of Judge Bass.

Firemen Tell "Why" of Fund Drive

In last week's Quiz, Ord Firemen announced starting a fund drive for what Ord Fire Chief Ivan Sorenson termed "a vitally needed project" — the purchase of a new rescue unit.

Ord Firemen started the fund drive with a $2,500 donation of their own. Funds from memorials, rescue calls and fire calls were deposited in a savings account, earmarked for a new rescue unit. Believing the old unit has reached the limit of its usefulness, firemen tapped those funds to start their solicitation drive.

The present rescue unit looks good and runs fine, according to Ord Firemen. Unfortunately, they added, the usefulness of a rescue unit can't be measured by its condition.

A department spokesman explained it this way: "During the past several years, members of the department have taken Emergency Medical Training and a continually renewing and improving their skills. We have, over this time, added equipment to the present unit as needed to meet the skills of department personnel. Now we find the present rescue unit just cannot accommodate the needed supplies, equipment, and personnel for what we need.

Hence the need for a new unit. Firemen estimated a new adequate unit will cost $35,000. They defined adequate as meaning equipped to take full advantage of their present training and personnel, plus having room to handle new and improved equipment.

Said one fireman, "We realize $35,000 is a lot of money and that it is difficult to find extra money for donating, but they, nothing worthwhile ever comes easy."

Firemen will be helping the fund drive by their initial donation plus adding profits from the annual Firemen's Ball to the cause. Their efforts plus public donations will form the body of the fund raising drive.

Donations may be sent to either of the Ord banks or given to any Ord Fireman. Donations made before December 31 this year may be deducted from 1978 income taxes.

A list of donors will be printed from time to time in this paper, keeping the public informed of the drive's progress.

The North Loup Lions held their kids Christmas party Saturday in the town community hall. Santa showed up with treats for all North Loup's smaller citizens. Doug Babcock, six years old, whispered in Santa's ear, telling the jolly old man his wish list for Christmas this year. Doug is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Babcock.

Lawson Seizing Airborne Hunters

Sheriffs from Valley and Greeley Counties were chasing airborne coyote hunters Tuesday. They, along with Ross Oestman, Game Conservation Officer, were looking for a light colored helicopter around six miles north of Scotia.

Oestman said Kenneth Jorgensen, North Loup town marshal, was told of the illegal hunters. He contacted the Greeley County Sheriff, Martin Sonnenfeld joined the search. (Continued on page 8)

Melvin Shoemaker - The Wildcats' Pied Piper

Some folks have started calling Melvin Shoemaker the Pied Piper. As speech teacher at North Loup-Scotia High, he has an estimated one-third of the student body dancing to his tune of forensic activities. These include speech classes and frequent wins at contests around the state.

Shoemaker joined the North

Loup-Scotia teaching staff in 1968, fresh from Kearney State College. Returning to his alma mater, he earned his Masters Degree in speech in 1977.

Shoemaker has headed the speech program at North Loup-Scotia for the last nine years.

During his stay, his students have brought home a flock of awards and trophies from speech contests around the state. The most recent of these came at the Grand Island Invitational last week. There, the teacher's protégés got two first place trophies and came within one point of beating the Sweepstakes winners in over-all competition.

Only Lincoln East, from the

City Dads Open Bids On Street- Sewer Projects

City Dads opened bids on street and storm sewer improvements Friday at City Hall, and then referred all bids to Great Plains Engineering of Kearney, project supervisors. Representing Great Plains were engineers David Mead and Bill Raleigh.

The project includes Street Improvement Districts 1978-2 thru 1978-5 inclusive and 1978-7 thru 1978-11 inclusive along with Storm Water Sewer Districts 1978-1 and 1978-2.

Before bids were opened City Attorney Greg Jensen told those present a temporary injunction has been filed in connection with Paving District 1978-3. "But I feel," he said, "there is no merit to it."

With that, Ord Mayor Gaylord Boilesen started opening bids. They were:

Metro Pavers Inc. of Lincoln, $880,996.40.

Central Sand and Gravel of Columbus, $851,701.73.

Missouri Valley Construction of Grand Island, $949,116.90.

Midwest Bridge of Norfolk, $839,615.37.

William Anderson Co. of Kearney, $843,990.34.

Paulsen Supply of Cozad, $837,739.20.

Dobson Bro. of Lincoln, $955,092.75.

National Construction of Lincoln, $858,655.00.

Charles Kemery of Great Plains had estimated cost of the street and storm sewer project at $972,235 at an earlier city council meeting.

Boilesen's Biggest Disappointment! Public's Involvement in Government

Gaylord Boilesen

With the words, "So help me God" spoken Monday night Ord had a new mayor, Richard Rowbal replaced Gaylord Boilesen in ceremonies at City Hall.

In a Quiz interview held prior to Monday ceremonies, Boilesen said his biggest disappointment during his four year term of office was the lack of public involvement. No one attends budget hearings he noted, and mentioned few people want to run for municipal elective offices.

Seeing the need for long-range planning, Boilesen ran for office in 1974. They weren't planning for down the road," he said of officials then in office. "They just planned day-to-day."

Asked if long-range city planning has improved, Boilesen replied, "Yes, I think so." He cited more stringent requirements for housing developments, and a revised code of city ordinances. These, in Boilesen's estimation, are stronger than they were before being up-dated during his four-year term.

"And I think they need to be closely followed," he said, adding, "I think the ordinances are there for a reason."

Should city regulations not be followed, headaches usually follow, Boilesen maintained.

Another planning tool mentioned was zoning, with Ord's former mayor suggesting people should adhere to these regulations. "It is getting to the point," he said, "where people have to know that they can't put a business in a residential district without the city's permission."

Ord was growing and expanding during Boilesen's term of office. "And the city council had to address themselves to some of the hardest questions there are," he said. These included the issue of street paving, an issue Boilesen rated "the most controversial. Still is," he added. Boilesen and other city officials were served papers relating to a lawsuit stemming from paving improvements he helped initiate.

Although perhaps not the most controversial, perhaps the longest running project in Boilesen's administration was the city swimming pool. City officials had talked about the pool, Boilesen admitted, "But then one day we got a nice little piece of paper from the State Health Department that pretty much told us our pool was outdated."

Built in 1947, it had become a municipal problem. Corroded shower stalls and cracked cement work showed the structure had passed its prime. Voters approved a $240,000 bond issue in the November 1976 election, for a new pool.

Construction started the fall of 1977. It was completed this summer.

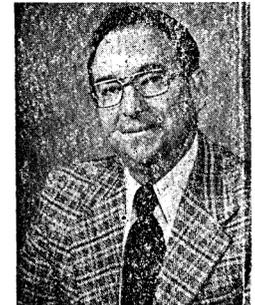

"It took four years from the time we first started planning to the time we opened the pool," Boilesen noted.

Working on this and other city matters takes an estimated 1 1/2 to two days a week, according to Boilesen. This doesn't include the hours spent attending council sessions and other formal meetings.

"It is," he said, "a demanding job."

Job Service Schedule

The Nebraska Job Service representative will be in the Valley County Courthouse, in Ord, every other Thursday starting January 4. Arriving at 10 a.m. he will be located in his ground floor office.

Wagner a State Senate Possibility

Don Wagner of Ord is being considered as a replacement for State Senator Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia. Wagner told the Quiz Wednesday that "I threw my hat into the ring" but declined further comment saying it would be inappropriate at this time.

Wagner was a major supporter of Charles Thone during the last election. Thone upset Whelan for the Nebraska governor's post. State Sen. Rasmussen handed in his resignation earlier this month, effective the first part of January.

City Council Passes Special Assessments

Councilmen passed special assessments on Sanitary Sewer 1977-1 at a special hearing Thursday night in City Hall. No one appeared in favor or in opposition to the measure.

The special assessments will help pay for the newly installed sewer line running along Highway 11 in west Ord. The Leo Wolfe residence, Hillcrest Motel and the West Ord Acres development being constructed by Jim Clement will be served by the line.

Shotgun Claims Minnesota Native

Gary Lee Worthington, 29, died of an apparent self-inflicted wound earlier this month. The St. Paul, MN man checked into an Ericson, NE motel December 6, according to Wheeler County Sheriff Jim Woodward, and likely died there that night.

The body was discovered sitting in a car parked near the motel December 8 by cleaning crews. They notified Sheriff Woodward.

Woodward declined comment on whether or not a note was discovered, but verified finding a map showing his route to Ericson from St. Paul. It is believed Worthington was in Omaha enroute.

A shotgun shell with a slug was evidently used.

CAROL'S CORNER by carol leggett

Feelings... Christmas is such a wonderful time. So much beauty and color. It is seen in the fellowship, good will, store decorations, happy faces of children.

It means all this and more. Christmas, it seems, sort of marks the end of another year and the beginning of a new one. It seems to be a time when we reassess our accomplishments and set our sights on next year's goal.

A feeling of good will and the warm glow of friendliness is particularly stressed during the holiday season. That is good, this feeling of love. Wouldn't it be great if it would go on, with the same excitement and enthusiasm, all year long?

Then as we enter the New Year we will continue to meet new challenges in our lives and through our work. The personal reflection is determined by how much we put into it.

Right now it is time for us to be happy as we ready ourselves for the festive holiday celebrations. I hope we can experience the warm feeling that comes from having realized the true meaning of Christmas — not only this month, but during the entire year.

As this year is about to end, I'd like to thank each and everyone of you for what you have done for me. Please accept my sincerest wishes for a Merry Christmas and a bright New Year.

Vox Pop

Vox Pop Ord, Nebr. Dear Sirs:

I noticed in the last Quiz Dr. Gogan's list of all the things that could be cut from the budget, fine but before the article ended Dr. Gogan proposed a NEW COURSE that could be added, gun safety. This is probably a good course but why do away with something we already have to make way for a new course? It also amuses me that in Aug. the school board and Dr. Gogan decided that the grade school music would be taught by Mr. Johnson and the music teachers at the high school. What happened to that fine idea? By Sept. or Oct. a teacher had been hired for part time music at the grade school. She has now resigned and Mrs. Bruy has been hired to teach grade school music. What is her salary to be? I'm surprised that when 6 or 7 people made a decision — that the music would be taught by teachers already hired — that they didn't stick to that decision.

Gal Chants In Runza Tournament

RUNZA-LADY BUSKER BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

December 28-30, 1978

The Ord Lady Chants will be playing with some fast company in the Runza-Lady basketball tournament December 28-30 in Lincoln. Metropolitan powerhouse including Lincoln Northeast, Southeast, Lincoln High and Omaha Mercy are entered in the contest along with York. All class A and B super-teams, they will provide some dynamic games, but some wonder just how well Ord will fare.

Ord Coach Max Murray admitted there are some tough squads in the tournament but suggested Ord could hold their own.

All games will be in the Bob Devaney sports complex in Lincoln.

Central Outplays Gal Chants 42-31

Host Grand Island Central Catholic outplayed Ord 42-31 Thursday night. Ord shot and passed poorly, easing Central's win.

Asked why the off night, Ord Coach Max Murray could only reply "Who knows. Maybe," he speculated, "we spent too much time getting ready for York. The girls shot 20 percent (at Grand Island) and that didn't help our game."

Ord was 9 for 41 shots, according to Murray.

He credited freethrows with keeping Ord in the game the first half. They sank 10 of 13.

The second half, this percentage slipped with Ord scoring on 3 of 12 charity shots. Included were six missed one-and-one setups during the fourth quarter. "And that finished our comeback effort," Murray told the Quiz.

He termed Ord's playing Thursday the opposite of what it was against York here Saturday.

Bob Hruby Named to NAIA Division Team

Three members of the 1978 Peru State football team were named to the NAIA Division Two Honorable Mention All-American football team.

Seniors Bob Hruby and Ken Denning and sophomore Alvin Holder were named in an announcement made public Friday, Dec. 15.

The three were standouts on Peru State's first winning team in 16 years. All-American selections are made by NAIA football coaches throughout the nation. Division Two includes 105 small colleges across the United States.

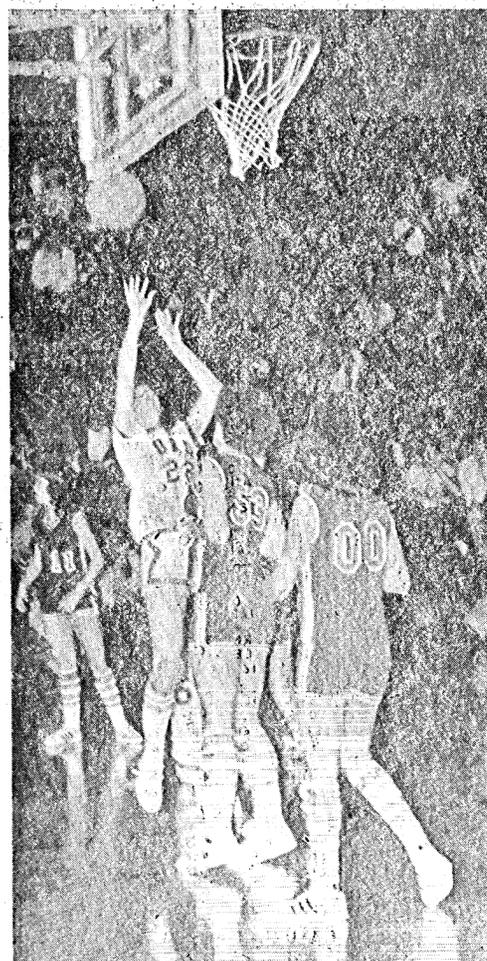

Hruby, a co-captain this season, hails from Comstock, Nebraska. He is a 1968 graduate of Ord High School. A physical education major, Bob is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hruby of Comstock.

Bob was a four-year starter for Peru State. He played primarily at offensive guard his first three seasons at Peru, but was switched to defensive tackle this season where he earned a starting role. After injuries thinned the Peru State offensive line, Hruby returned to offensive guard, the position he earned All-American honors for.

Last Minute Errors Cost Gal Chants Win Over York

Murray and his Chant gal players call a quick time out during the last minutes of the game, fighting for a last minute win.

Vickie Mason (22) lobs one in for Ord during first quarter play.

Last minute errors cost Ord Lady Chants a win over guest York Dukes Saturday, intrusions by both teams during the last five minutes of the game kept spectators on their feet and gave York a 49-44 win.

The last five minutes of play decided the game, and what a period it was. Ord, lagging 38-30, came within a whisper of winning the game.

Scrappy Nancy Gogan, Ord High sophomore, sparked most of the action. It was Gogan rebounding, swiping the ball, guiding Ord gals to a potential upset.

York, some said, was going into the game Saturday, as the dominant team. They came to Ord with a 3-0 record. Their past accomplishments include going to state last year. This year they were rated second in pre-season prep polls, Class B.

Future events this year remain to be seen, but past performances indicate they are a Class B power to be reckoned with.

Ord came into the game with a 2-1 record. Thursday they bowed to host G.I. Central Catholic 42-31. Some attribute the loss to the girls having a proverbial "off night."

If that was true Thursday, it wasn't the case Saturday. The gal chants were up and ready for York. The two teams battled it out 13 all in the first quarter.

Nancy Gogan tied it up with a basket in the last seconds of that period.

Marilyn Kusek jumped for Ord, opening the second quarter. There was lots of activity but no scoring until 7:25 in the game. Smith took a rebound from York and Ord was the beneficiary of a foul. Gogan went to the charity lane and Ord moved ahead 14-13.

It was Gogan again at 6:44 pushing Ord to a 16-13 lead, just before a time out.

York switched from a zone to a man to man defense, briefly, and then returned to their original game plan. By then, York was in front 18-17 and fighting to hold their one point lead.

Doing this, they opted for the

Seventh-Eighth Girls End Season

Seventh-Eighth 18 V. Bold ... Ord seventh and eighth grade girls ended their athletic year with competition at the Grand Island Northwest tournament Monday and Tuesday, December 11 and 12.

The tournament opened with Ord losing to Northwest 33-11. Ord Coach Rich Cecetka rated them "easily the best team of the five in the tournament." Other teams there included Ord, Albion, Aurora, and Central City.

He compared Northwest to St. Paul. Both were tall, he said, forcing Ord to scramble for all points scored. Ord stayed with Northwest 6-4 the first quarter. Then Northwest pulled away 19-6 at the half.

Ord went against Aurora December 12, Tuesday, for third place. "It was a really good game" Cecetka recalled, "but we came up a little short." Three points short, to be specific. Ord was edged 19-16.

A bad second quarter combined with cold freethrow shooting cost Ord the game. Ord made two out of nineteen freethrows, way below their usual average.

The loss closed out their season, December 12, with a 2-5 record, including tournament play. "I'm pleased with the season overall," Cecetka said. "A few breaks here and there, and it might have turned out differently."

During this season, the gals shattered four individual records and tied two team bench marks. Individual records bettered include:

The most freethrows in a game. The old record was 2. Deb Mason boosted that to 3.

The best season freethrow percentage. Ellen Green raised the freethrow record from 67 percent to 70 percent.

Carla Rysavy broke the remaining two individual records. She had ten rebounds in a single game, bettering the old record of 8. Carla had a total of 43 rebounds this season, up from the old record of 34.

Team records tied include those for: - Holding a team to 6 points, Gaining the most team rebounds in a game, was 38.

Gal Reserves Split a Pair

Ord gal Reserves split a pair with York and Central Catholic recently. The two games opened with Ord being edged by Central 33-31, Thursday at Grand Island.

Leading scorers for the Chants were Lori Rainforth with 8, Peg Kramer with 7, and Diane Dwork with 6. Jang Bosworth was leading rebounder with 6.

Coach Tom Rhodes credited the team with being much improved since meeting Hastings Adams in their season opener, earlier this month. Rhodes said their ball handling is better and there have been fewer turnovers.

Frequent defense shifts caused Ord problems with Central. The host team shifted from a man-to-man to a zone defense, or from one zone plan to another every few minutes.

Saturday, Ord downed visiting York Reserves 31-29. The Dukes played an aggressive man-to-man defense the entire game. Ord reacted well, they got into the wing and drove into the basket, challenging York.

York reacted, and Ord scored points off freethrows generated by fouls.

York was a quick team, according to Rhodes, and Ord did well in containing them.

Areas needing improvement included checking off the boards and freethrows. Ord was 13 of 33 at the charity lane. Not bad for a reserve team, Rhodes admitted, but it could be better.

Leading scorers against York were Amy Gibbons with 6, Julie Brass with 6. Leading rebounders were Julie Brass with 7, Jane Bosworth with 6, and Ute Havenkamp with 5.

Cozad Haymakers Nip Chants 53-49

Ord Chants put together their best four quarters this season here Friday, but they weren't enough to edge Cozad Haymakers. The Haymakers nixed Ord 53-49.

The Chants came alive Friday, shooting more often and more accurately than they had earlier this season. Along with that, they did a good job of guarding Cozad. That wasn't an easy job. Kurt Kremke, at 6'2" is Ord's tallest player. Next tallest is Jeff Welniak at 6'1". Average height on the Ord team is somewhere around 5'11".

Program notes show 9 of the 12 Cozad players listed stand 6 foot or better. Mark McKeone at 6'5" is Cozad's tallest cager. Friday, he was also their leading scorer with 23 points.

Ord Chants did an excellent job of containing these giants, dogging their footsteps, forcing them to work and work hard for each point.

At the end of the first quarter,

Barry Witherwax (21) fights off Cozad Haymakers, while trying to make a basket.

Cozad was in front, but only by two points 14-12. Cozad pulled away to a 22-14 lead in opening minutes of the second period. Ord came back with 2 baskets by Welniak, boosting Ord's score to 18. Cozad had 24.

Using their height advantage, Cozad moved ahead 31-25 at the end of the first half. Cozad got an added bonus after the buzzer when a technical foul, called on Ord Smith, gave Haymakers two free throws. One went in.

Second half
The second half opened with Ord taking the tip-off and padded their edge 33-25. Free throws by Dworak gave Ord two points. A determined Chant crew outscored Cozad 8-5 in the third quarter. Chants came within one point of Cozad scoring during the fourth period. That was when Haymakers scored 16 points and Ord 15.

Although quite impressive, the Chant's display of hustle and determination wasn't enough to upset Cozad. The Haymakers went home with a 53-49 victory.

The win gives Cozad a 3-2 record. Ord at 0-4, is still looking for win number one this season.

Opinion
From the looks of things, that may not be long in coming. The Chant crew is consistently improving. Friday, they gave Cozad all they could handle. A team with a better record and a height advantage, Cozad came close to being upset in the game at Ord.

Had hustle and determination lagged, the Chants likely would have been swamped. That didn't happen.

Golden Glove Boxers came away from matches at Newman Grove Friday with three out of five matches. Wins came in the 112 pound, 165 and 170 pound divisions.

Scott Spady lost a tough one to Billy Pelster of Petersburg. Mark Dugan was edged in the 155 pound main event. Dugan lost a split decision to Lee McNickles of Omaha.

Ord Reserves Stack Cozad Haymakers 42-34
Ord boy reserve cagers pulled away from a close first half, winning over guest Cozad 52-34, Friday. The Chants were ahead one slim point, 15-14 at the end of the first quarter.

The neck and neck race continued into the second period. Ord ended the half ahead 29-25. The evenly matched teams gave the crowd few highlights.

Not until the final moments of the second quarter did Ord begin to pull away. This sudden spurt came after Nel Carson went to the charity line. His success there moved Ord ahead 24-19.

During the second half, Chant understudies exploded, scoring 23 points to Cozad's 9. In an interview after the game, Ord coach Lon Bartholomew said few game plan changes were made during the halftime break. Pleased for an explanation, he quipped, "I guess the boys got some instant energy. Things started going our way."

Gaining momentum from their half-time lead, the Ord lads pulled ahead 43-41 at the end of the third quarter and put the game away 52-34.

Ninth Boys Edge Central 47-45

The ninth grade boys were boosted to a win over guest G.I. Central Catholic by a second quarter strategy shift. The change gave Ord a 47-45 win over Central Saturday.

Ord Coach Al Cudly explained Central had two outstanding players Ord wanted to shut off. Tom Schuen and F. Wray, both stand six feet tall and are good shooters. Experimenting with defenses, Ord found the winning combination.

That combination was a 2-1-2 along with a box and one. Starting out with a man-to-man plan in the first quarter, Ord scored 6 points to Central's 12. Towards the end of the first quarter Cudly made the change giving the way for a second quarter explosion.

With the zone set-up working Ord was more patient with their offense and took more time with their shots. These factors, along with a strong defense paid off. Ord scored 16 points to Central's 4 in the second quarter.

The plan continued to work until Ord started getting in foul trouble. Initiating the box and one, Ord pulled the game away by two points. The win gives Ord a 2-1 record for the season.

Cudly said Williams, Upah, and Cetak continue to score well, but the team needs balanced scoring. The ninth grade boys next go against Ainsworth January 8.

High scorer for Ord was Monica Nelson with 27 points. Ord will play in their league

His first year at North Loup-Scotia, the school entered one speech contest. This year 11 are on Shoemaker's calendar.

As he sees things, his triumphs are nothing original. "Scotia has always been involved in contests," he said. "People here realize the value of them," he added.

The teacher admitted his success at speech contests has gained the attention of other schools. There have been job offers. "But we're happy where we are," he said, adding, "Maybe this is the greener pasture right here."

He, his wife, and three children make their home in Scotia. Mel lists his hobbies as community activities.

Ninth Gals Blast Central Catholic

Ord ninth grade girls blasted visiting Grand Island Central Catholic Saturday 42-20. Ord used a solid first and third quarter performance to win the game. Taking advantage of the man-to-man defense Central used, Ord players drove hard for the basket and zipped around Central players. Ord often uses a zone defense, according to ninth grade coach Jan Weber. Ord used a series of good inside moves over coming this supposedly sophisticated game plan. Weber used her entire bench during the contest Saturday. It was one of those beautiful days when nothing could go wrong. Ord 12 6 18 6 42 Central 4 6 16 20. Leading scorers: Amy Gibbons, 11 points; Tammy Sears, 7 points; Jane Bosworth, 4 points; Sue Penas, 4 points; Diane Dworak, 4 points. Freethrows 4 of 17 for 23.5 percent. MPPD Lawsuit To Challenge School Payments Legislation

A lawsuit that could have far-reaching effects on the Ord-Comstock area, challenging the constitutionality of LB 508 passed by the 1978 Nebraska Legislature, has been filed in Lincoln County District Court at North Platte.

The Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) has filed the petition for declaratory judgment listing as defendants school districts at Hershey, North Platte, Ogallala, Paxton, Sutherland and Wallace. An NPPD press release, dated December 12 termed the legal action "a cooperative lawsuit."

LB 508 provides for certain payments to school districts by public power districts, municipalities, electric cooperatives, electric membership corporations, or other entities constituting power generation facilities the when construction of the power plant causes an increase in school enrollment.

"This is a friendly lawsuit filed with the cooperation and agreement of the school districts," said D. W. Hill, NPPD general manager. "It certainly should not be misconstrued that NPPD is opposed to the principle of the legislation."

Hill emphasized that NPPD representatives appeared at the legislative hearing where LB 508 was considered and testified in favor of the philosophy of the bill. He said NPPD drafted an amendment which was thought to address several of the problem areas but the amendment was never incorporated into the final version of the bill.

Voluntary court appearances will be made as part of the agreement which led up to the "friendly" suit.

The six school districts named as defendants are in the area of the construction of NPPD's Gerald Gentleman Power Station at Sutherland Reservoir. "We are concerned about the propriety of the District's Board of Directors approving payments to school districts under terms of the bill when there appear to be constitutional defects in the bill," Hill said.

Among the issues cited in the lawsuit are: Relationship of LB 508 to Article 8 of the Nebraska Constitution which provides for in-lieu-of-tax payments and seemingly prohibits any other type of taxes on public power districts.

Possible defects in the title of the bill which does not properly describe the contents of the entire bill.

The formula set forth for the computation of the operating expenses of the school district is vague and ambiguous and is not subject to reasonable interpretation.

"For example," Hill said, "NPPD feels that there is no provision in the formula for capital improvements if such should become necessary due to the impact caused by power plant construction. This is an issue that should be of serious concern to the school districts."

One item of disagreement between the school districts and NPPD is the issue of retroactive payments which is not covered in the bill.

The petition requests the court, if it should find the law constitutional, to determine the appropriate formula for computation of school district operating expenses and determine an effective date of the law. NPPD plans to construct a coal-

Valley County 4-H Market Beef has been set for January 13 at the Ord Animal Clinic from 1:00 P.M. to 3:00 P.M. An alternate date of January 20 has been set as a bad weather date.

Pigs Get Flu Too:
When there are cold nights and sunny days, the flu virus invades pig populations just like it does in human groups.

About all a swine producer can do is to give them tender loving care along with an antibiotic or sulfa drug to keep down the secondary bacterial infections and an expectorant to keep the lungs clear.

There is no vaccine available and if the sulfa keeps them from having pneumonia, swine flu generally will have run its course in a week to 10 days. Telltale signs of swine flu include a pig resting on its chest trying to catch its breath, a temperature, sniffles and the animal going off feed.

Once swine flu hits, from 90 to 100 percent of the herd is affected; in the past, mortality was low — about one percent.

One way to cut down on the possible complications from a secondary infection is to have a good worming program. That's because the common roundworm migrates through the lungs of a pig and causes some damage to the lung tissues. Flu will stress that lung situation even more.

Any type of viral disease can be a threat to the pregnant sow and flu is a virus. Swine flu may cause mummified fetuses. Reproductive problems are of most concern to pork producers.

However, recent reports from practicing veterinarians indicate that a more severe type of flu with higher than normal death loss is being observed. This may indicate that there has been a change in the flu virus. Another possibility is that the leaner, modern meat-type swine are more susceptible to secondary bacterial pneumonia because they have lost the insulation effect of the fat cover.

The pregnant sow and her new litter might be protected by using straw or some other bedding to keep them nestled away from drafts. On slatted floors where this is impossible, keep the building warm and as draft-free as possible during the flu season.

How Soon and A What Levels Can Urea Be Fed to Calves Just Going On Feed?

According to Paul Guyer, Extension Beef Specialist IANR, two factors affect the use of urea in a feeding program for calves — the age and weight of the calf and the energy level of the ration being fed.

Where the energy level of the ration is low enough that one pound or less gain is expected, urea seldom can be used profitably. Where rate of gain is expected to be approximately 1.5 pounds or more, then urea can be substituted for plant proteins after the calves are started on their rations and reach 400-500 pounds live weight. Rate of gain usually will be reduced by 2 to 3 pound daily and may be equally expensive during the growing period. However, compensatory gains following growing should make the total cost of growing and finishing more economical.

Last Minute Christmas Safety Reminders:

The use of safe practices regarding Christmas trees, decorations, and lights can help make this a fire safe Christmas in your home. Some practices worth considering are:

1. Buy lights and cord that carry the safety seal of the Underwriters Laboratory. Lights that do not have the seal may be dangerous.

2. Check your lights to see if the metal part of the bulb socket sticks out far enough to come in contact with the tinsel on the tree. If so people touching the Imported Animals Bring Brucellosis!

Rober Sandman, Nebraska Director of Agriculture and Dr. N. W. Kruse, State Veterinarian, express concerns regarding the possibility of brucellosis exposed animals being imported into Nebraska. Drought conditions in the high incidence areas for brucellosis (southern and southeastern United States) have caused a terrific increase in the numbers of cows and feeder heifers that have been imported into Nebraska from those areas.

Nebraska import regulations require a negative test for brucellosis on breeding cattle within 30 days prior to importation into Nebraska. Sandman and Kruse fear that some of these cattle may be exposed or incubating the disease at the time of testing. They would be negative to the test at that time but truly be infected and later cause abortion, retained placentas, and breeding problems.

Because of this, it is strongly recommended that the purchased cattle be isolated from other cattle and be retested approximately 45 days after arrival. The disease is contagious and it is important that an infection, if present, be found prior to calving time as this is the time that the disease is most likely to spread through the herd.

Brucellosis is infectious to humans causing Undulant Fever. Man is one of the most common carriers of the infected animal and her calf or aborted fetus, or from consuming raw milk from an infected cow.

tinsel may get a shock.

3. The switch for turning on the lights should be away from the tree. Never use an outlet that is under the tree. People should not play under the tree or run electric trains around the base.

4. Artificial trees can be dangerous Christmas decorations. Do not put lights on a metal tree. A short in the lights would electrify the tree and seriously injure anyone touching it. Illuminate this type of tree with "off-the-tree" colored spotlights.

5. Do not use net or gauze-like fabric for dresses, costumes, or children's clothes. Loosely woven fabrics easily catch fire. If clothes catch fire, don't run. Throw the victim to the floor and wrap him in a rug or blanket. Make sure the cover is snug around the victim's neck so as to keep the toxic fumes of combustion from the victim. If no blanket is available, roll the victim on the floor. Get him to a doctor or hospital as soon as possible. Use a wool blanket, not a rayon one.

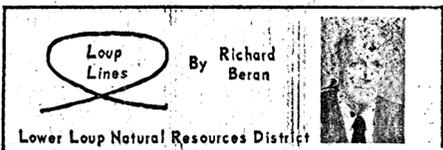

6. If a person is in contact with a shorted electric wire, either stop the current by unplugging the cord or pull the person from the wire with a dry stick or rope. Artificial respiration may be necessary if breathing has stopped.

7. Bubbling tree lights contain methylene chloride, which is slightly poisonous if swallowed. Caution children of this danger.

8. Berries on holly and mistletoe contain unknown poisons that produce severe vomiting. Keep these away from children.

The Valley County Extension Office wishes you a Safe and Merry Christmas.

rocks also contain substantial amounts of boron. Boron is quite volatile and may escape into the atmosphere as a result of volcanic activity. From there it is returned by rainfall to the land surface, where it can enter both surface water and groundwater. The predominant form of boron in water probably is undissociated orthoboric acid.
The highest concentrations of boron is groundwater generally occur where dissolved solids concentrations are highest. Such is the case in eastern Nebraska, where boron concentrations generally are very low in samples of groundwater from Nebraska. Concentrations were less than 33 parts per million (ppm) in water from 92 percent of the 1,272 sampled wells. The several small areas where concentrations great-

Better To Be Uninformed!

A surprising percentage of farmers and ranchers are opposed to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Statistical Reporting Service and its issuance of crop and livestock estimates and projections.

Main argument against them is the claim they are inaccurate and misleading and have an adverse effect on the market and thus should not be issued. These contentions have been going on for at least 25 years but they ebb and flow in proportion to the prevailing economic conditions of the agricultural producers.

It is true that the market does react to the information contained in the reports and makes adjustments. Right now for example, feeder cattle prices reflect the fact that the nation's total cattle inventory is at a low point and feeder cattle numbers are going to remain on the short side for a considerable period of time.

At the same time, slaughter cattle prices are influenced by the fact that placements of cattle in feedlots in the 7 major cattle feeding states have been heavy this summer and fall and feedlot numbers are at record highs. This means that a great deal of grain-fed-beef is going to market in the immediate future and probably extending up to the mid-point of next year.

Those who argue against government agricultural statistical reports seem to feel that if such information isn't reported, then the market would be more stable and everybody would be better off. In other words, "What we don't know won't hurt us."

Reality says however, that this country had high and low grain and livestock prices long before the government got into the statistical reporting business. Older farmers and ranchers can remember the 1930's when corn prices got down to as little as 13c per bushel and cattle and hog prices were as low as $4.75 and $5 per cwt. and there were no government monthly supply estimates to blame them on.

Actually the government crop and livestock estimates on average over an extended period prove very accurate and are getting more so because the reporting service is using many different methods including aerial and satellite surveys to supplement their more conventional methods of gathering the information. No other nation in the world comes close to providing the complete and accurate farm production information that is available without direct cost to U.S. farmers and ranchers.

Those who argue that such reports have a damaging effect seem to assume that if the government didn't provide this information then everyone, including the meat packers and the grain traders and processors, would be equally uninformed. Surely they don't really believe this.

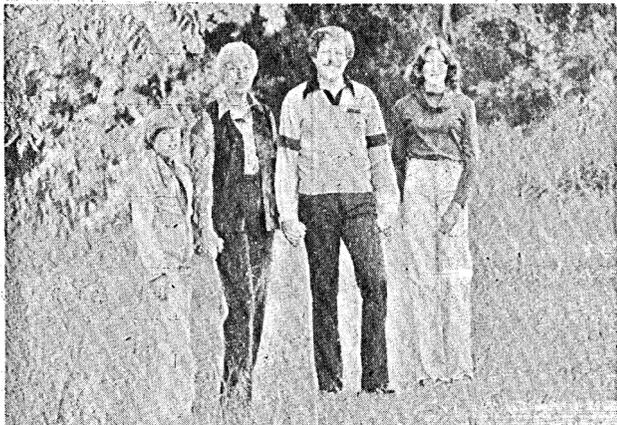

People in the meat business and grain trade already have their own sources of information. There is an abundance of private statistical reporting services and there is no evidence that their reports are any more accurate than those supplied by the government. From a practical standpoint, the only people who wouldn't have all the information would be the smaller operators who might not wish to subscribe to a private service.

Any knowledgeable agricultural observer driving around Nebraska last July and August could predict that the state was going to have a tremendous corn crop. And it doesn't take a professional packer buyer to notice whether feedlots are a third, half or completely full of cattle.

It is better to base decisions on information which is almost pinpoint in its accuracy and available to everyone who is interested, or to attempt to limit such information to a chosen few with the resources to get it by their own means? Surely there can be only one answer to such a question.

er than .33 ppm occur in groundwater are in the western and eastern parts of the state. Wells in each of these areas tap either bedrock aquifers or unconsolidated deposits in large measure by return flow from irrigation.

Certain igneous and some chemically resistant sedimentary rocks are principal sources of boron in water. Some evaporate near Lincoln, where water samples from sandstones of the Dakota Group have a concentration of .55 ppm boron. Other significant areas of boron concentration occur along the Missouri River in northeast Nebraska, where sandstones of the Dakota Group are topped by wells, and in southeast Nebraska and the Omaha area, where wells that tap Paleozoic aquifers yield highly mineralized groundwater. Boron is probably solubilized from shale beds in these aquifers.

Other areas where boron concentrations exceed .33 ppm are the valleys of the North Platte and South Platte rivers. Most of the water used for irrigation upstream from and within these areas is obtained from the rivers, but a large part of streamflow during the irrigation season is seepage from lands irrigated with diverted river water. Such use and reuse of river water for irrigation has resulted in a downstream increase in the concentration of dissolved constituents, including boron, in both the river water and the groundwater in these valleys.

Boron, in the quantities occurring in groundwater, is not known to have toxic effects on humans. For this reason, the Environmental Protection Agency has recommended no limit for the concentration of boron in drinking water. Boron in small quantities is an essential nutrient for all crops, but even a slight excess over the essential amount is toxic to some. Boron concentrations of less than .33 ppm in water are safe for all crops, even the most sensitive. Because boron concentrations exceed .33 ppm in only 8 percent

Yes, Virginia, There Is A Santa Claus

From an editorial in the New York Sun, Sept. 21, 1897. We take pleasure in answering at once and thus predominantly the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of The Sun:

Dear Editor:
I am eight years old.
Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus.
Papa says, "If you see it in The Sun, it's so." Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?

Virginia O'Hanlon
115 West 95th Street
New York City

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except what they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus!

No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

It's Been a Good Ride

The late Rosalind Russell opened her biography with the line "I've had a good ride." While members of the City Council, their terms just completed Monday, may not have her fame, the lites apply equally well to them.

"We grew up together," so to speak, they and I. I was fresh from an academic disaster four years ago when coming on board the Quiz. Failing a graduate program in Library Science, I opted for the less sedate field of journalism.

No doubt there are Quiz readers wishing I were still dwelling in bibliographic fields. Just as there are those who swear retiring councilmen did little to better Ord.

As in journalism, you don't take a council seat to win friends and seek popular acclaim. You go after it to get things done. And get things done you did!

During your tenure in office, you built a new swimming pool, signed up an interconnect station, paved streets, and saw to it the town had some over-due new municipal ordinances.

These things didn't come easy. Getting that needed pool required a lot of leg work and endless hours devoted to filling out government forms. C. J. Klimek gets a special thanks here. He did a great job of ramrodding paperwork on this project.

While he did that, other councilmen were busy meeting with residents, convincing them constructing a new pool was the logical course of action. Your line of logic must have been persuasive. Voters gave their approval to the project.

And those streets! Boy do I recall not too distant council meetings where heat inside City Hall neared the 100 degree mark. Accusations flew thick and fast. Temps flared.

Though your terms of office are ended, this issue is still around, and likely will be for some months to come. And its all your fault — supposedly — that people didn't attend council sessions or read of proposed improvements in The Ord Quiz.

No, yours wasn't a tranquil term of office. Not by any standards. You guys, both departing and those still serving on the council, got things done. Eschewing the easy out, the placid middle course, yours was a dynamic term of office, and by our yardstick a successful one.

Like the new Mayor said Monday, he'll have a tough act to follow. Given a little time Hizoner will learn the basics of city government and, we hope, follow in your footsteps. You old hands on the council can help him through the first few weeks.

To you, and to those councilmen leaving the board, thanks. It's been a good ride.

— W.M.

Education Committee Hearing Pulls Standing Room Only Crowd

CAPITOL NEWS
By Marvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association LINCOLN — A regular meeting of the Legislature's Education and Revenue committees attracted a crowd into one of the hearing rooms at the Capitol.

The committees were meeting in accordance with a legislative resolution calling for an interim study into alternate means of financing local education.

The leadoff witness was Adams Sen. George "Bill" Burrows who made another strong pitch for consideration of his bill, which proposes replacement of the property tax as the primary source of finance of the public schools with an adjusted gross income tax.

According to Burrows, it's the taxing system, not spending per se, that has triggered protests from so many.

He insisted, as he did during the past session of the Legislature, that ownership of property cannot be equated with ability to pay taxes. He also noted the property tax base has been eroded through a series of legislatively authorized exemptions. The result of that "fragmentation," he said, has been imposition of an even heavier burden on owners of real property.

Burrows told the committees that "income, rather than property, is the most stable base of revenue for education."

Burrows' bill came within a few votes of passage in this year's session. And he promised he will re-submit the legislation in the 1979 session.

Burrows and Dr. Bert Evans of the University of Nebraska, who worked closely with the Adams lawmaker in writing the bill, said the measure should have a minimum of deductions of the adjusted gross income tax, which would amount to about 3.5 to 5 percent.

Passage of his bill, Burrows said, would make it easier for young persons to buy homes, would diminish problems stemming from unequal assessments across the state, and provide relief for low income people who are saddled with high property taxes.

Financing of the public schools could be a major issue of the next legislative session because voters rejected increased state aid and because of the continuing problem of achieving property tax equalization.

Sen. Neil Simon of Omaha told the committees he is preparing a bill that will propose allowing local school districts to impose a local 2 percent income tax, if a majority of the district's voters approved.

Guard Bonus Announced
The holidays were brightened for Adj. Gen. Edward Binder by news that a new federal enlistment bonus plan has been made available to the state's 67th Infantry Brigade.

Under the program, high school graduates or seniors without previous military experience who enlist for six years can choose between a $1,500 cash bonus or up to $2,000 in educational assistance benefits.

Participants, however, would not be eligible for the state's $300 enlistment bonus but could receive the Nebraska Guard's 75 percent tuition waiver at any state-supported school.

The state bonus can be received by anyone who signs up in certain units for at least three years.

The guard has been having trouble keeping its ranks filled. Binder believes the new program should help considerably in that regard.

He said the bonus would be paid at the rate of $750 upon the enlistee's completion of basic and advanced training, $200 at the conclusion of the second and third years of the enlistment and $350 following completion of the fourth year.

If a person failed to serve out the six years, he would have to repay some of the bonus money, Binder said.

He said the $2,000 in educational benefits would cover costs of books, labs, supplies and up to half the tuition costs.

Committee Discusses Bingo
Nebraska's revised bingo law isn't working out as well as some persons had hoped.

This year's Legislature made a number of changes in the law, including one which raised from $1,500 to $3,500 the amount that can be paid out during one bingo session.

One of the reasons for that change was that operators of comparatively small games in Omaha said it was difficult to compete for customers when neighboring Iowa had no limit on the amount that could be paid out. Many Omahans were crossing the Missouri River to participate in Iowa games, according to testimony given to the Legislature's Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee.

Some of the witnesses said the new law is fine, but there were many who said it would help if the amount of the allowable prize money were cut back to what it formerly was.

Other witnesses suggested not all games are conducted by volunteers for the license holder, as the law provides. This has led to "hired" workers in some of the bingo parlors, several witnesses said, adding that it might be difficult to obtain the evidence to prove the point.

Rasmussen Resigns
Sen. Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia has advised Gov.-elect Charles Thorne he will resign from the Legislature on Jan. 5 or 6.

Rasmussen, in the middle of a four-year term from the 1st District, said economic reasons prompted him to give up his legislative post.

The Scotia lawmaker, who has spent the past several years on the Health and Welfare Committee, said he will become a lobbyist for medical and health care organizations.

Rasmussen was a candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor in the May primary, which was won by Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln.

His resignation had been expected, and aides to Thorne have already begun a search for a replacement.

Expect Good Relationship
Most of the state senators contacted during a pre-session poll believe they will have at least a good working relationship with Gov.-elect Charles Thorne. Some of them think the relationship will be excellent.

During his campaign for governor, Thorne said he would seek to develop rapport with the lawmakers so they could address the problems of the state in a harmonious manner.

During the past eight years, some harsh rhetoric has been exchanged between Gov. J. James Exon and the legislators. Many of Exon's strong statements accused the senators of losing their sense of fiscal responsibility — a charge that was hotly denied by some of the lawmakers.

Several of the senators said it is easy for a governor elect to preach harmony but that it may prove difficult, at least on certain occasions, for Thorne to maintain cordial relationships with the Legislature.

MISTER EDITOR:

I don't want to speak to hard of her, Mister Editor, cause she looks at this little piece on in a while. But ever year at this time my old lady gets more like a general without a battle. She's done all her Christmas shopping, and she says it's way to early to start baking, so she's between wars. She ain't said, but I bet she regrets deciding to quit sending Christmas cards. It kept her busy, but she said she rather call or visit than worry if she left somebody off her list.

Now what she's got is nothing to do, while all around her women are in a panic. I think what bothers her as much as not being in the Christmas rush is not getting me in it. So, fer onct, I got the jump on her I showed her this ad in the paper where one of them discount places was bragging about before-Christmas specials. Christmas specials, and told her she ought to check em out. She actual perked up at the idea, and she rounded up a carload of what men for the shopping trip. They went Saturday night, which give me a chance to take in the session at the country store without worrying about her moping around the house.

The trip helped her and the discussion helped me. The feller's general was in a lively mood, and it turned out most of em was catching some of the same static at home. After the situation was talked up one side and down the other, it was agreed that the older folks git the more they look on the play side of Christmas. We used to think it was the other way around, that this holy day is fer children. It is, but it means more than ever to the older folks that have come to a deeper understanding of why it is.

The fellers come around to the thinking that women feel even stronger than men about doing fer others because they've been doing fer us 40 to 50 year. When they can't do they feel left out.

After we talked about that for a while, there was the feller front down the line who comes to town to visit his kin now and then to congratulate whoever is in charge of moving all holidays to Monday. Now we got Christmas in a long weekend, he said, we ought to ask why we bust up the week with Thanksgiving. Working folks would be just as thankful fer a Monday off. Then we can fix the calendar so New Year's Day allus falls on Monday, and we got the four-day week all set. While he was talking he called fer a few Tuesdays to be held in reserve in case of rainy Monday holidays that would be wasted on folks that wanted to git outside.

The fellers who knowed this feller knew he was just carrying on. Fer one thing, Venard Collins noted, this feller don't do nothing any day, so he needn't git worked up about more days to do it in. What he better work on Venard allowed, is this movement to let folks hold jobs as long as they want to work. The excuse this feller has used fer laziness the past 15 year is that he is retired. If they do away with retirement, he'll be reclassified as a loafer by choice, was Venard's words.

General speaking, Mister Editor, there was more counting of blessings that wisecracking at the session. And let me wish the patrol student standing right there asking, be indication, that the driver not use that street and a big, red cone with black capital letters that spell, "NO!"

Ord, Nebraska 68662

Dear Editor:

The December 14 incident south of the Ord High School when the little girl got hit by a car after school has prompted me to share some angry feelings with the public that I should have done before this. These feelings are not against the driver of the car involved in the incident. That driver was on a street where he had a perfect legal right to be. He also was obviously driving very carefully because, when the little girl ran from the bus to get in her mother's waiting car and got bumped by the other car, she received only a bruise or two. Had the driver not been properly operating his vehicle, the girl's injuries would undoubtedly have been much more serious. Nor is the school to blame. The class the girl was in had a lecture on bus safety just that day. The little girl is not responsible either because at her age, children simply forget sometimes.

Besides, they feel very secure in the knowledge that the adults will look after them and their safety.

Therein lies my anger. It is directed at some operators of vehicles that pick up children at the elementary school after the 3:00 p.m. dismissal time. In spite of knowing the traffic pattern of driving up to school on 17th Street, picking up their children circling around the island and exiting out 17th Street, they still occasionally insist on exiting out 16th Street where we request that only walkers and bike riders go after school.

The purpose of the traffic pattern is to separate the cars from the children that walk or ride bikes to eliminate the possibility of the child darting in front of a car or the bike rider swerving. True, there is absolutely no legal basis for this traffic pattern. But it seems to me that the moral obligation for the safety of young children would be a stronger force than any legal steps that could be taken. Unfortunately, this is not always the case. Though a huge majority of drivers faithfully follow the traffic pattern as a matter of moral obligation, there are still some who appear to not want to put up with occasional personal inconveniences for the safety of children. There have even been drivers who have actually nudged their vehicle into 16th Street in spite of a safety patrol student standing right there asking, be indication, that the driver not use that street and a big, red cone with black capital letters that spell, "NO!"

Outrageous? You'd better believe it!

Dear Editor,
This is a word contrary to the many remarks made about teenagers being troublesome. Last week our daughter, Kris and some other girls, had a Xmas dance here at our house with about 40 to 50 Ord High students present. They were well behaved, polite, and friendly. We would like them and their parents to know how pleased and proud we were to have them as our guests.

KERRY ON

— Merry Christmas —

Wondering what I could possibly write, for a Christmas column, I stepped into the brisk night air.

The sky was overcast, reflecting the warm glow of lights throughout the city. Most neighborhood windows glimmered with lights. Bells flashed gaily from the corner post of a Parkview Village unit.

Dejected over my own lack of gladness, I turned up my collar and lowered my head to the chill breeze. Parkview News would be awaiting me — as was the need for a column for this paper.

Parkview correspondent Emma Zabloudil stepped out of her door to ask, "What about next week?"

"It's a bit tight," I said, remembering that Monday was Christmas Day — and the day I always picked up the Parkview news items Emma had written for the week.

"I'm having a Christmas eve supper," Emma added, "so it won't be so bad for me. But others will be hard to get hold of."

Though my mind wasn't really on the conversation, I agreed with Emma to pick up next week's news on Tuesday noon.

Forgetting, even, to wish her "Merry Christmas," I walked back down into the darkness. I was ashamed at my lack of friendliness and warm words, when all the world was preparing for the most joyful season of the year.

For some reason I hadn't been able to get with it, this year. Placing the blame on things outside myself, I knew — though I hated to admit it — it was me.

The lights and festive shoppers were as plentiful as ever. Christmas music filled the air. I even had most of my shopping patrol student standing right there asking, be indication, that the driver not use that street and a big, red cone with black capital letters that spell, "NO!"

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 21 1978
Read Acts 20:32-35
"It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20:35)

The preparations at our home one Christmas were assuming gigantic proportions. The two older children were home from college and were caught in the feverish hustle of last-minute shopping. Our younger son was the only one who was calm. He smiled and assured us his gift was a big surprise. Since he loves to play tricks, we wondered about his surprise gift.

When Christmas Eve arrived, love and laughter surrounded the family as we opened many extravagant gifts. Soon the room was strewn with the remains of the gift exchange. During a pause in the festivities, our younger son reminded us of his surprise.

We became silent as he opened his Bible and removed five new bills — one for each member of our family. These he had been saving for several months. He explained his gift to us by saying: "I knew that we would have a big Christmas. I want to capture the meaning of Christmas by choosing a special place for this money to help someone who needs help. My wish for each of us is to feel Christ's love."

PRAYER: Father, we thank You for this Christmas season that reminds us of the opportunities we have to show love to others. May we remember that the love we give brings happiness into our own lives as well. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY:
The most special Christmas is the one where we remember those in need.

Gravity Gracefully and Quietly Defeated

Editors note: A woman sports writer is a rare thing. One that's airborne is likely even rarer. Colleen Ahern, sister of Dee Ahern Vodehnal of Ord, qualifies on both counts.

Her story about ballooning appeared in the September 1978 issue of "Spree" a Denver based newspaper. Along with writing Colleen is an artist and designer of some talent, according to her sister.

The balloon mentioned belongs to Dee's uncle who lives near Lakewood, CO, a suburb of Denver.

Herewith, Colleen's story on ballooning.)

Sunday, it's six o'clock in the morning. The sunrise is happening, air warming. There's the smell of country and space is everywhere blue sky. This is the setting for the balloonist. The characters in this production all have their parts to play — unpacking the rip-stop nylon balloon — checking velcro seams — fasten balloon to basket — hook up propane gas tanks. The expedition is a process for the balloonist and his crew.

Preparation for the flight is as much a part of the fun as flying. So I found out when I helped crew for Pat and Cathy Mawe and their family. Even the youngest child had something to do, bring helmets from the car to the balloon for flight.

Watching the balloon fill and slowly rise from the ground made me feel like we were the first balloonist defying the laws of gravity. I wondered who had thought to build the first balloon — what materials were used — how did it inflate.

It's France, 1783, the Montgolfier brothers (paper makers) place a large balloon made of paper and linen over a fire. The balloon inflated from the hot air it began to rise slowly.

It's August 27, 1783 — a French physicist unveiled a 13 ft. in diameter balloon — filled it with hydrogen — crowd laughed — balloon rose — crowd cheered.

It's November 21, 1783 two men are first aerostats, de Rozier and Marquis, to travel in the air above the earth.

It's December 1, 1783 — Professor J. A. G. Charles and Jean Robert ascend in a balloon made of rubberized cloth, filled with hydrogen — complete with sand bags (to be removed for ascension) and a valve for letting gas escape (descending). They also carry a barometer.

Man continued his exploration of flight in the balloon, changing the balloon's fabric to plastic,

Future of Family Farm Raises Touchy Issues and Questions

What is the future of the family farm in Nebraska? Some issues can be identified and some insights provided, but family farms are not easy to define and this in itself is an issue, according to Dr. Glen Vollmar, head of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Department of Agricultural Economics.

"Most agree that the family farm is of modest size, uses about two man-years of full-time labor input, and is a unit from which most of the sales are made in the market as contrasted to contract sale," Vollmar states.

There is no doubt that the family farm concept is deeply imbedded in our society, both farm and nonfarm. Vollmar concedes, "Family farms are looked upon as one of the pillars of a democratic society and a competitive market economy."

Because issues related to the family farm question are very emotional and politically sensitive, policy makers tend to "side-step" some of them, the agricultural economist points out.

Trends show that many family farms are moving away from what one might ideally visualize or define as a family farm. Vollmar says. An increasing number of farms are becoming large operations and many smaller operations depend on off-farm employment for added income. "Agricultural production is becoming more concentrated, with six percent of the largest farms in the U.S. accounting for 50 percent of all the marketings," Vollmar reports.

"One of the problems in policy-making is that most policies which favor either family farms or large industrialized farms will show benefits to one group and not the other," he observes. Policy discussion is favored which divides farmers from non-farmers or U.S. farmers from foreign investors in farms.

Discussion pointing out that large farms, including large family farms, challenge the family farm concept is not popular because it pits farmers against farmers, he stresses.

The future of the family farm depends on several factors and policy actions, Vollmar predicts, including tax laws, access to resources such as land, energy and irrigation water; access to financial resources and to markets.

Access to markets is a vital element in accessing forces that have an impact on the future of the family farm, Vollmar analyzes. History has shown that contract production, such as broilers and turkeys, does not fit with the modest-sized family farm concept. "The disappearance of open markets could move Nebraska, and the U.S. away from the family farm in a few years," he concluded.

Select Chorus Sings Monday, Dec. 11, a Select Chorus of fifth and sixth grade students from the Ord Elementary School presented a Christmas program for the C-Wing of the Valley County Hospital. ### Lyman Completes Basic Training Navy Fireman Apprentice Lyman L. Taylor, son of William P. and Vera E. Taylor, Burwell, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Diego.

During the eight-week training cycle, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in his studies were seamanship, close-order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in Physical Education and Hygiene.

A 1978 graduate of Burwell High School, he joined the Navy in September 1978.

Free Food Stamps

Starting January 1, 1979, Food Stamp households will not have to pay for their food stamps. In the past, most households had to pay some of their own money to get food stamps. For example, a household might pay $70 to get $100 worth of stamps, giving them $30 in bonus stamps. Under the new rules, households will not have to pay for any of their stamps. But they will only receive their bonus stamps.

If you are now paying for your stamps, this means you will be getting few stamps after January 1, because you will not be getting the stamps you used to pay for. You will only get your bonus stamps. Instead of using your money to buy food stamps, you will use — along with your stamps — to buy food at the grocery store. If you are already getting your stamps at no cost, there will be no change in the amount of stamps you receive.

If you have any questions about this change, contact your local food stamp office, or call this toll-free number: 800-742-7630.

Beran Warns Ground Water Gains Could Be Temporary

Richard Beran of the Lower Loup Natural Resources District office in Ord was cautiously optimistic over recent reported ground water level gains in Nebraska, but warned these could be temporary. In a Quiz interview Friday, the Lower Loup manager said, "I would say the increase shown in 1977 could be temporary due to rainfall and decreased pumping."

Richard Beran

Recent articles in Omaha and Grand Island papers have supported his views. Both were based on a report titled "Ground Water Levels in Nebraska, 1977" by Mike Ellis of the U.S. Geological Survey and Darryl T. Pederson of the Conservation and Survey Division of the University of Nebraska.

The Omaha World Herald Article, in the December 21 issue of that paper, stated Valley and surrounding counties have had what it called an "average water level rise" in 1977 as did 73 of Nebraska's 93 counties. It defined an average gain in ground water levels as up one foot in a year.

The Lower Loup has recording wells in each of Valley Counties' 16 townships. They are checked on a regular basis. "Actually," Beran corrected, "we have 17 wells." All 17 showed an increase.

The difference between Beran's data and that used in the report is that Lower Loup figures start in 1975. Those used in the report likely go back further, Beran stated.

Beran's data shows the county's ground water level rose an average of 1.2 feet from the spring of 1977 to the spring of 1978. Ellis's report shows a 2.8 foot average ground water level rise statewide in 1977.

Regardless of the amount of the higher level, the gain is likely a temporary one, according to both Beran and Ellis. Beran urged steps be taken to insure what he has called "the state's greatest liquid asset, our water."

Grant To Help Halt Wife Beating - A National And Local Problem

The Nebraska Task Force on Domestic Violence has been awarded a $25,000 grant to be used for providing education and information to domestic violence programs in a four-state area.

The 12 month grant is from the National Technical Assistance Center on Family Violence in Ann Arbor, MI sponsored through the federal government's ACTION agency. Nebraska's grant was ranked first out of 106 grant applications made according to Kathleen Foktik, director on family violence.

"What we want to do is train volunteers and agencies out there so they can go out and do the advocacy work," explained Shirley Kahle of Lincoln, vice president of the Nebraska task force. That state-wide task force is an umbrella for 35 local task forces in Nebraska, according to Pat Andersen of Burwell, a local task force director. One of 35 state wide, this task force is headquartered at Burwell. It takes in Garfield and Loup counties, she said.

"What we're talking about is an immediate problem," Pat explained. Mental health counselor Iva Jo McKinney agreed, adding that domestic violence, often called wife beating, frequently leaves the victim feeling alone and afraid. "Police are reluctant to get involved," she said, "because it is usually considered a private thing, a family matter." A recent study, according to McKinney, shows society's attitude toward wife beating. In the study, three sets of people staged a fight on a street corner.

One of these groups was a man beating another man. The second group had two women fighting. In the third, a man was beating up on a woman. "In the first two groups, passerby called police," McKinney recalled. "But in the third group, no one got involved. It was considered a private matter between a man and his wife, you see."

"And besides," Andersen interjected, "the public often has the attitude of 'she had it coming.' Or maybe she loves the guy." "Let's face it, she said, we're dealing with human beings." Helping these people to a long-lasting solution is the task force's goal. Steps towards this end may include counseling and providing a temporary shelter.

let wife beating victims know they aren't alone and that they care about them. Recently, the state-wide task force received the $25,000 federal grant. It came after spouse abuse (wife beating) legislation was passed by the Unicameral last March. A series of legislative hearings held prior to passage of the laws were flooded with witnesses and interested persons, according to Andersen.

She agreed with McKinney's statement that officials are often reluctant to get involved with a spouse abuse situation. "Oh yes," she said, "most think wife beating is a family problem - a matter between a man and his wife." "And I'll go you one better," Andersen added. "Most people don't want to get involved because they think of a wife as a man's property."

Both Andersen and McKinney concurred this reluctance isn't limited to law enforcement officials alone. Doctors and others often shy away from what has been classed as a family matter. "But even if a battered wife does get help," Jo McKinney continued, "she still has problems. If she sends her husband to jail, there is the prospect of no paycheck. Women often lack skills demanded in the job market. No job, no man, no paycheck."

"Or if he does go to prison or jail, what happens when he is released?" McKinney asked. Many battered wives fear their jailed spouses getting even when they exit prison. After that initial retaliation, husbands often return to roles they had before entering prison. Little or nothing gained by their lock-up, the prison term is often a hardship on the wife, an insult to the man, and frequently does little good, both Andersen and McKinney stated.

Faced with a damned if you do and damned if you don't situation, battered women often feel frustrated and alone. Many suspect, according to McKinney, they just can't win. "Asked what they CAN do, she listed options open to them. These include temporary refuge houses, hot lines for information, and emergency homes where the spouse can go in a crisis. Helping these women are people like Pat Andersen at Burwell. As a member of the task force, she feels, she said, with an estimated five calls a month from women in the Burwell area.

Asked the number of cases she had seen in her three years with the task force, she could only state "There are a lot more than most people realize or are willing to discuss. Peer pressures in a small town keep many battered wives from talking."

Asked if this wasn't being over-dramatic, Andersen told of women having broken jaws, cracked ribs, chunks of hair pulled out of their scalps, and welt marks from beatings with a belt on their back. All were from the Garfield-Loup County area, she maintained.

Wife beaters have no special characteristics, according to Andersen. The problem crosses all economic and social classes, involving even those husbands and wives known as "the perfect couple."

About the only common denominator spouse abusers may have, according to Andersen, is that they were likely abused (beaten) as children. They grow up, marry and transfer these feelings to their wives. If they have children, the child can grow up observing and learning these feelings, perhaps later starting the cycle again when

NPPD Directors Approve Environment Study Cost

The Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) board of directors has approved an environmental contract for studies at a proposed generating station site in eastern Custer County and has approved a contract amended from a previous proposal to reflect recent changes in the study area.

Approved was an agreement with F. M. Fox and Associates, Inc., of Denver, for $274,602 to conduct hydrology and geotechnical studies in the Comstock and Sargent areas. The main purpose of the hydrological studies is the determination of a source of water needed for operations of a 650,000 kilowatt coal-fired generating plant in the area, with primary emphasis on a well field. The geotechnical aspects of the study are to be limited to a recently proposed alternate site for the plant - which is nearer Sargent. The scope for the geotechnical studies will be of the same type previously obtained for the original site - which is just west of Comstock. The contract, approved by the board, was with Hazleton Environmental Sciences of Northbrook, IL (formerly Nalco) for a water quality, hydrology, aquatic and terrestrial ecology monitoring program at the site. The original proposal was approved in March of 1978, at a fixed cost not to exceed $187,936, but was not consummated due to pending changes.

However, a final decision selecting the Comstock area as the site for the power plant was delayed by the board until September of 1978. In the interim, the District determined that a well field to supply the power plant water needs was feasible - subject to confirmation by hydrology studies whereas, previously, plans included a reservoir or similar water impoundment. Also, during that period, a decision was made to investigate an alternate site closer to Sargent which is approximately five miles from the original Comstock site. Hazleton was requested to amend its proposal to reflect the increased scope of work due to a second site and the proposed installation of a well field. The amended one year of field monitoring data is to begin in February, 1979. Under the contract amendment approved by the board of directors, Hazleton would be paid a fixed cost not to exceed $384,031 if no decision is made during the year of monitoring to exclude any of the alternate considerations as to specific site and water needs and the firm would be paid a fixed cost not to exceed $309,907 for the monitoring program if a decision is made in June of 1979 on a preferred site and the well-field concept.

Another Matter On another environmental matter, the board amended another contract with Nalco for an environmental radiation monitoring program at the District's Cooper Nuclear Station at Brownville, in compliance with requirements of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). The contract expires Dec. 31, 1978. The amendment will increase the contract price by $20,000 from the original fixed contract cost of $63,855. The $20,000 approved by the board is considerably less than what had been requested by Nalco. The amendment was approved due to the additional scope of radiation monitoring required under NRC regulations during the two-year contract period.

Pelts Lead the Authorities To Aerial Hunt Suspect

One of three men believed involved in an aerial coyote hunting ring was arrested near Scotia Thursday. Booked on suspicion of grand larceny - possession of stolen furs - he was later released when pelts in his possession were accounted for.

Gordon Harmes of David City was stopped by State Patrolman Phil Quinn near Scotia Thursday. Blood was seen dripping from the one-ton Ford truck Harmes was driving on Highway 11.

The Ford was registered to Jerome Bair of York. The rear of the truck contained 85 to 87 coyotes with the front portion of the rear box having tanks holding what was believed to be aviation fuel.

Helicopter Bair, or his father Don, both of York, reportedly own a light colored helicopter. Game Conservation Officer Ross Oestmann, Valley County Sheriff Martin Sonnenfeld, and others were chasing a similar craft in and around Valley County last week. It was believed involved in illegal coyote hunting operations.

The helicopter checked at the York Airport may have something to do with the truck stopped at Scotia. Those coyotes found on the truck Thursday were taken to Ord. Saturday the 80 plus dead animals were unloaded. Their rear feet tied by wire to overhead racks, the animals hung snout down.

Federal Authorities Federal officials were contacted to handle the case further. It is against the law to hunt coyote from the air, according to Conservation Officer Oestmann.

He said demand for coyote pelts is high, spurring many people to hunt the animal, once considered a lowly predator and little else. Sold to fur buyers, pelts make their way into the fashion market as fur coats, etc. Local fur buyer Ken Petska said coyote pelts can bring between $30 to $80 a pelt, depending on the condition of the pelt and other variables. Petska said it would be safe to say the seized shipment unloaded here was worth $5,000 or more.

An article in the Sunday Lincoln Journal-Star said three men were arrested in Cherry County for hunting coyotes from the air. Other sources, however, state the trio were questioned - but not arrested - by law enforcement officials. Cherry County Sheriff Jim Ward wasn't available for comment Sunday on whether the two cases were linked.

Loaded into a pick-up truck, the animals were skinned and the evidence retained for authorities involved in the case.

Banks Boost Rescue Unit Drive

Ord banks gave the rescue unit drive a shot last week. Both the First National Bank and Nebraska State Bank gave checks of $1,000 each. # Merchants Finish Yule With Smiles and Sales

A Quiz survey of area merchants showed most finished the Christmas holiday with smiles and increased sales. Of the six merchants contacted in downtown Ord, five said sales were better than last year.

McDonald's Store said this holiday season was the best ever, better than last year by 15 percent. "And that," he noted, "was itself a record year." There was no change in the way Knotts Berry Farm jams and jellies sold, according to Moyer. Customers picked the shelves clean of the popular item. One switch were sales of warm items - i.e. robes, slippers, and the like. Last year they were slow sellers. This year they sold poorly, Moyer stated. Don Walker of Walker Drug termed sales this Christmas as "great." Exact percentages weren't yet available, according to the ord druggist. Sales at L and W were up 20 (Continued on page 6)

Injunction Plea Denied Wednesday

District Court Judge James R. Kelly denied a request for a temporary injunction here Wednesday. Opponents of a planned paving district, 1978-8, sought to have pending work in southeast Ord halted. According to City Attorney Greg Jensen, Kelly denied the request on grounds it was too general. No specific act was alleged improper and requested to be stopped, Jensen told the Quiz. Judge Kelly told paving district opponents they could file an amended temporary injunction within 20 days. Paving District 1978-8 covers an estimated six blocks.

Hospital Room Rates Will Rise

Valley County Hospital room rates will be raised four dollars a day starting the first of the year. Valley County Hospital administrator Ron Edwards said increasing medical costs and higher maintenance charges regulations have forced the change. Present rates are $51 a day for semiprivate and $55 for a private room. These will be changed to $55 a day for a semiprivate room and $59 for a private. The last room rate increase was April 1, 1977, according to Edwards.

HAPPY NEW CHEER . . . 1979! It looks strange. It sounds strange. That's because it's new. Soon, it will be here.

We hope, the '79 days will be happy ones filled with the good things and joys that make up all the individual elements of happiness.

As we look to the future, we should, too, review the past. 1978 was also a new year began?

All too quickly, this year — 1978 — has become history. The new year now gives a fresh opportunity to begin again — to turn over that new leaf — to make another set of resolutions — another list of promises.

Actually, the resolutions and promises for 1979 are based on the failings of 1978. Fail to improve during this new year and you fail to progress as a human being. Succeed . . . and you add personal growth to build on.

It's simple but not always easy to do.

How can you improve yourself to make 1979 a better year? Decide on your plan of action . . . then, begin.

RESOLVED . . . One person insists that if at first you don't succeed, try, try again.

That's two tries after the first failure . . . and that's enough, says he. After all there's no sense being ridiculous!

COFFEE CUP PHILOSOPHY: Build character. Face the music even if you don't like the tune.

Regina Rogers Places Second at Districts

Regina . . . places again

Regina Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carson Rogers, recently placed second in the Voice of Democracy Contest. Regina qualified for district by placing first in the local contest.

Regina is a junior at Ord High School. Her activities include Student Council where she is treasurer, 77-78 S.A.S.A. treasurer, vice president of FCA and she is active in band and speech.

Below is Regina's broadcast script: "Why I Care About America."

I don't care! I don't want to get involved! This seems to be the cry of Americans today. No one wants to sacrifice any part of themselves for someone else. Well, I for one do not feel that way. I care about America because America is my country. If I don't care who will? It's up to me to care and to turn that care into action.

People always look at the negative aspects of America today. The rising numbers of crimes and murders, the growing problem of pollution. People say these things happen because no one cares what happens to their fellow man. No one cares. But what about the neighborhood safety groups, the halfway houses, and all the other people who do care and are showing it by offering their help and time?

What about the anti-pollution groups who spend their weekends cleaning out the roadside ditches? Another often-publicized subject in the news shows yet another side of the story. A government study done showed that if the United States were to go to war tomorrow, it would take 30 days to assemble enough troops from the defense of our country. This, people say, shows that no one cares. But what of the Twelve Days of Christmas? The Twelve Days of Christmas was presented by Peg Sajevic, Vivian Rowland, Shirley Stephens, Norma Remington, Garnett Williams and Linda Detak. Peg Sajevic also sang accompanied by Shirley Karre. Inez Eberhart talked about the Christmas scenes she visited while in the Holy Land. Afterward, she presented each lady with a card with dried flowers from the Holy Land. # Nebraskans Awaiting Shoot Out

Big Red fans are getting ready for Shootout Number Nine January 1. That is when Tom Osborne's Nebraska Cornhuskers, ranked number six in the country with a 9-2 overall mark, meet Barry Switzer's Oklahoma Sooners, the number four team in the country, with a 10-1 record. The two teams, tied for the Big Eight title with identical 6-1 conference marks, will meet January 1 in the Orange Bowl.

Jimmy the Greek has predicted a one-sided game in favor of Oklahoma. But don't you go telling that to Gib Babcock, As equipment handler with Big Red for 11 years, he has opinions backed up by experience and first-hand observation. It was his job seeing that the Big Red machine was well supplied from 1965-76.

About Jimmy's prediction, Gib just said, "Well, maybe the figures we were lucky to beat them last time." Gib speculated the Greek could be thinking about Heisman Trophy Winner Bill Sims or maybe Outland Trophy Winner Greg Roberts, both of Oklahoma.

Both are worth quite a few points and can wrack up lots of yardage, Gib admitted. Yet he maintained Nebraska could win the game. "Our kids can do it," he stated, "but they will have to play hard."

Included in those "kids" are quarterback Tom Sorely, linebacker Rick Berns and 200 pound J. M. Hipp. Hipp, Gib revealed, will have to play a good game at the bowl if Nebraska wants to win. "The Sooners," Gib warned, "will concentrate on Berns."

With Berns covered, Hipp will have to work overtime, in Gib's estimation. It was Berns, Nebraska's offensive star, that scored big statistics November 11 in Lincoln, when the Sooners and Cornhuskers clashed in regular season play. Running back Berns scampered 13 yards on 25 carries and scored once that day.

Gib termed the Berns "a real, sincere, honest kid", and recalled meeting him many times while working for Big Red in Lincoln. He speculated NU coach Tom Osborne will allow time for fun at the bowl, but will remind his players they are there for the game.

Gib knows both Osborne and his predecessor, Bob Devaney. While serving the smiling Irishman, he saw the now famous Shoot Out Number One in 1971. That opened with the Huskers traveling to Norman, OK for what is now called "The Game of the Century". In that contest Nebraska was 10-0 and ranked number one. Oklahoma was 9-0 and ranked the nation's number two team. The game lived up to its shootout billing, with the Huskers staging a furious fourth quarter rally defeating OU 35-31.

Near NU immortals such as Johnny Rogers, Jerry Tagge were on board that day. They and their teammates gave spectators at home watching television and those in the stands what one sportswriter called, "The best game I've ever seen."

That was then. About the coming bowl game, shootout number nine, Gib said, "There isn't so much at stake now as there was in 1971. It's not quick to add that although the stakes may not be as high now as back then, the Cornhusker-Sooners battle January 1 will be a good one."

The University of Nebraska Sports Information Office quoted Osborne saying the following about the Sooners:

"I don't see any big problems right now about playing Oklahoma. I think the statements made right after Missouri came out of surprise more than anything else. Oklahoma was entirely foreign to everyone's thinking at the time. We're looking forward to playing Oklahoma. Nobody's down in the dumps. I think we'll go to the Orange Bowl and play well. We know that historically when two teams are even, the psychological edge goes to the team that lost the first game. We're just trying to approach things in a common sense way. If I knew how to approach things psychologically perfect, we would have beaten Missouri. We're not trying to whip our guys up psychologically, especially right now. They're intelligent people. We have their attention in practice. I'm sure we'll have it in Miami, too. In the first game, I feel we out-dugged, out-warded and outscored them. Obviously they had some bad breaks, but since Billy Sims was in on the last one, it seems to stand out the most in people's minds. People tend to forget that we fumbled on our 13, had a pass intercepted on our 25, should have had a fumble recovery on their 11 and didn't get a couple possible clipping calls on two big turnovers, but the breaks were fairly even. I think I can say very honestly that if things had gone differently, that last fumble everyone seems to remember wouldn't have made any difference."

Team Stats
Both Nebraska and Oklahoma are rated at the top of most national offensive stats. NU is first in total offense with an average of 501.4 yards a game. Oklahoma is number two with a 489.3 average. In rushing offense OU is number one with an average of 427.5 and Nebraska is number two with a 337.7 mark. Both teams are ranked in the Big Eight. The New Year's Day clash will begin immediately after the Rose Bowl and can be seen on national NBC-TV. A sellout crowd is expected to fill the Orange Bowl to see the Big Eight power battle once again.

Asked for further predictions on the game, Gib hedged, stating, "This is one bowl game where I'm sure a Big Eight Team will win."

Boxing Bouts to Be January 5th

The Ord Boxing Club is scheduling 18 Golden Glove boxing bouts in Ord Friday, January 5. Mark Dugan, Tim Christensen, Stan Holon, Larry Hoshaw and Vic Pelster will compete for wins.

That last name, Pelster, should ring a bell with ring fans. The Pelster brothers are no strangers to the fight scene. From Petersburg, the brothers have maintained a reputation for winning in Golden Glove competition. Other boxers scheduled for appearances include Dwaine Vasicek, Dwaine Sonnenfeld, Roger Williams, Craig Markwick, Bob Rasmussen, and Scott Spady. Although a relative newcomer to the area fight scene, Spady has established himself as a man to be reckoned with.

Ord's Dwaine Sonnenfeld is continuing a family tradition. His brother, Martin, now Valley County Sheriff, was also quite a fighter in his day. Martin advanced from the local level to state competition, according to recollections of some Ord residents.

Junior exhibitions will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Saint Mary's auditorium with Golden Glove bouts starting at 8. Weigh-ins will be at 6 and 7:30 p.m.

The bouts are sponsored by the Ord Boxing Club and Ord Optimists.

Doug Peterson Named To All-American Team

Doug Peterson, Ord middle guard for Kearney State, has been named to the NAIA All-American defensive team.

Peterson, a senior on the Antelope grid team, was an Honorable Mention selection in 1977.

Peterson, a linebacker as a sophomore and junior, was all NAIA District 11 three years, all Central States Conference as a junior and senior, and was named to the Kodak All-America team by the Football Coaches Association earlier this month.

The 22-year-old graduate from Ord High School was a football and basketball standout. He played on Ord's state tourney team three years.

Chants Seek Win One At Holiday Tourney

Ord boy cagers will be looking for win number one when they tip off Thursday against Grand Island Central Catholic at 6:30. All opening games will be at G.I. Northwest's new gym.

Host Central is 3-1 for the season. Their lone loss was to Cozad. Ord is 0-4.

Ord coach Fred Williams noted Central is Ord's near equivalent in height. Both teams have players standing 6'2" and down.

Height has been a major problem for Ord this season. Starting with Crete in the season opener, Ord has faced teams with players towering over the Chants.

Likely the tallest played so far have been Cozad's Haymakers. Their players checked in at a 6'6", 6'3" and 6'4".

Tallest player on Central Catholic's team is Curtis, 6'2". He and Beecham (5'11") account for an estimated two-thirds of the

Murray Optimistic Over Ord-Lincoln High Game

Lincoln Southeast, only to be knocked off by Lincoln East.

This year Lincoln High is facing the Ord girls. With a 4-0 season record, the Links were ranked fourth in a preseason Class A pole by prep sports writers. The oldest or one of the oldest schools in Lincoln, the Links have long had a reputation for athletic excellence. This year is no exception.

Ord is entering the tournament with a 2-2 record.

Admitting the class and size differences Murray concluded the interview by saying, "I don't think we'll feel embarrassed. I honestly think we can play against them."

For a full tournament schedule see last week's Ord Quiz. Ord and Lincoln High tip off at noon Thursday in the Bob Devaney sports complex in Lincoln.

Suddenly the death penalty is very popular. So many people are asking for it, one state is putting in an electric couch.

Height-Shooting Nix Arcadia Girls

Hot shooting and a height advantage enabled gal varsity players from Sargent to edge host Arcadia 53-43 Thursday. Tallest gal on the Arcadia varsity cage squad stands 5'9". Sargent had two or three players passing the six foot mark.

"We weren't getting enough shots", Arcadia coach Wilbur Cushman recalled. But those Arcadia did get were good. The gal Huskies connected on 48 percent of their tries from the field.

They were 33 percent on free throws he said. Not good, but not bad.

Tuesday, Arcadia had a chance to redeem themselves when they played Ansley. After a Christmas break, Arcadia girls are to play Callaway at Arcadia January 4.

The loss to Sargent leaves Arcadia girls with a 1-3 record. Ansley was 1-3 going into Tuesday's game.

Quail Season Changes Told

A new twist will greet quail hunters in Nebraska on New Year's Day, with the advent of a 4 p.m. Central Standard Time daily closure during the month of January, says Ken Johnson, chief of the Wildlife Division of the Game and Parks Commission.

The change was made to allow broken coveys to re-group before sundown during cold weather. According to Johnson, quail protect themselves from freezing in below-zero temperatures by bunching together in tight coveys, and coveys flushed before sundown often don't have enough time to re-group before dark and may freeze.

Not that it was a walkaway piece of cake. Jorgensen told how those Sargent Bulldogs were within three points (64-61) during the last quarter. Arcadia rallied and outscored them 15-2 in the final three minutes of the game.

The win leaves them facing Merma next month. So far, that squad has a 6-0 record, with three teams scheduled for them before they meet Arcadia.

"They'll be a tough team", Jorgensen said, "the toughest one we've met to date."

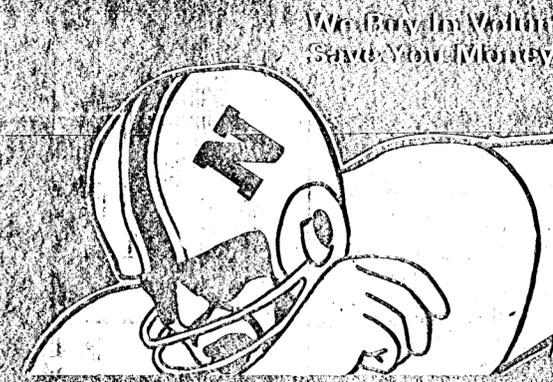

Arcadia cage coach Cliff Jorgensen got his Christmas present a little early this year. His squad of varsity boys gave him a 79-63 win over guest

New Fishing Regulations Are Effective on January 1st

Nebraska anglers will have several new regulations facing them on January 1 when the 1979 fishing regulations go into effect, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

One of the regulations deals with a change in number of hooks permitted for ice fishing on waters east of Highway 281. The change restricts the number of lines to a maximum of five with two hooks per line. Elsewhere ice anglers will still be able to use a maximum of five hooks per line or 15 hooks total with a maximum of 15 lines.

Another change has to do with fishing tournaments or contests held on state-owned or controlled waters. The new regulation requires organizers of the event to provide written notification to the Game and Parks Commission at least 30 days prior to the tournament or contest date. Such notification must include a list of the contest rules, location, and the dates of the contest.

For more information, anglers should obtain a copy of the 1979 Nebraska Fishing Guide, available at permit vendors and Game and Parks Commission offices across the state.

Wildcats Stage Fourth Quarter Rally-Nix Host Ravenna 72-62

North Loup-Scotia boys came back from a blah third quarter and nailed host Ravenna 72-62 Friday. The varsity boys led by 17 points at half time. Then came that third quarter.

Ravenna then outscored the Wildcats 23-13. North Loup-Scotia coach Brent Moerer could only guess why the scoring slump.

The why isn't as important as the fact that they got their act together and overcame their problem. A solid fourth quarter sparked a comeback and a win. At one point in the last period, Wildcats were ahead 14 points.

Cold shooting from the free throw line continues to bug the boys. They sank 18 of 38 shots in the charity aisle. Ironically, they are hitting better from the field. About 50 percent by Moerer's estimations.

Asked about Lyndon Beebe's hand, Moerer speculated it might be out of the cast some time after Christmas. Beebe, an all-

Shorter Census Forms

NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
By M. M. Van Kirk, Director of Information

There's good news for the nation's farmers and ranchers who will be filling out the farm census forms that they will be receiving in early January. Farm Census questionnaires have been reduced to 4 or 5 pages as compared to 22 pages 4 years ago.

About 80 percent of the nation's agricultural producers will receive by mail a 4-page questionnaire; the remainder will get a 5-page questionnaire to obtain a sample of information not asked for in the shorter form.

The coming census has been advanced one year to put it in phase with the 10-year cycle of other economic censuses starting in 1982. Since 1920, the Farm Census has been taken every 5 years. From 1840 to 1920, it was taken every 10 years.

The big difference in the 1978 census questionnaire is that items to be asked of all farms are limited to the basic subjects of land ownership and land use, crops, poultry and livestock, total value of products sold, and operator and farm management characteristics.

Additional needed county-level information will be obtained through the 5-page questionnaire going to 20 percent of the farms. This form asks data on land values, production expenses, equipment, labor, fertilizer, pesticides, fuel consumption and storage capacity.

A Farm Census spokesman has explained why it is important that farmers and ranchers respond to the questionnaires as accurately as possible:

"First of all," he said, "farmers need a common starting point and an accurate yardstick with which to measure their efforts. You might call the censuses 'snapshots' of the nation's farmers, showing how they are doing at the moment."

"Second, many national and state programs affecting agriculture are designed or allocated on the basis of census data, including funds for Extension Services, research, soil conservation work, and other agricultural services."

"Third, farm organizations, cooperations, commodity associations and agribusiness corporations use the statistics to provide a more effective production and distribution system, as well as to effectively make points in dealing with key issues and problems facing the farm community."

As in earlier censuses, the all-farm and 20-percent sample data from the 5-page questionnaires will be published for each of the more than 3,000 counties with agricultural operations, for each state and the entire nation.

In a second phase of the census, additional sample surveys will be made in 1980 for the year 1979. Subjects under consideration for these 10,000 to 50,000 farm samples include farm energy uses, corporate structure, horticulture, on-farm irrigation, farm labor and farm finance.

In endeavoring to monitor trends in domestic ownership and control of land, a new census question is: "Was any of the land in this place held under foreign ownership in 1978?" Answers to this question will enable the Farm Census to measure any increase in farmland ownership by foreign interests.

The information obtained from the census is used to plan for the future of agriculture. Developed since 1840, the U.S. Farm Census has by far a better agri-census system than any other nation and the available information is used not only by farmers, but by the business people who supply them with what they need and those who market their products.

This will be the third farm census conducted by mail. The Bureau of Census has found that the reports that farmers fill out by themselves tend to be better than ones obtained through personal interviews, and the farmer is more able to complete the form at his convenience. Farmers and ranchers in their best interests will provide accurate information.

AG TIPS FROM OUR COUNTY AGENT

The 1979 edition of the Farmers Tax Guide has arrived, and is available for distribution. Stop by the Extension office or your local bank for your copy.

Check the condition of your farm stored grain

It is important that we check stored grain regularly for moisture, heat, mold, insects, or off odors. Sample grain every four to six weeks in the winter if no previous problems have been encountered. As temperatures warm in the spring, sample every two to four weeks. During cold weather insects will congregate near the center of the grain mass where it is warmest, so sample this area thoroughly. Deep bin probes should be used for obtaining samples. A bin thermometer is also a good investment to monitor temperatures. Readings in a number of places are desirable, but are particularly important in the center of the bin at a depth of not less than five feet. The presence of live insects means fumigation must be considered.

Grain that is no longer storable must be utilized before deteriorating more. Feeding is the most practical use at the present time, but caution must be used in making sure the grain is not harmful to animals. Bleeding with good grain will dilute the mixture, thus minimizing the effects of feeding lower quality grain alone.

Be careful when walking on grain surfaces that grain isn't "bridged" because of previous removal of grain from the bin.

Windbreaks Blunt Winter's Force

Every Nebraskan knows about the bone-chilling winter winds and the deep drifts which must be shoveled in this season. A good windbreak can cut down on both.

An excellent variety of trees and shrubs is being offered again this year through the Clarke-McNary Tree Distribution Program.

These trees are available to Nebraska landowners for conservation purposes — windbreaks, woodlots and wildlife habitat, Christmas trees and erosion control. Local Soil Conservation Service offices or the district extension forester can help plan the planting.

Order the trees now while there's still a good selection available. For more information, contact the county extension agent, Soil Conservation Service, Natural Resources District or District Extension Forester.

Snow can damage Trees and shrubs

A heavy accumulation of snow can break limbs from trees and shrubs. If drifting has not buried the plant, you can relieve the situation by shaking branches vigorously to remove snow. Brushing the snow off with a broom or by hand is also helpful. If the tree or shrub is buried in snow, damage probably will occur when the snow mass begins to settle. This is especially true on spreading shrubs or junipers. In this situation, remove the snow if possible and at least break the snow crust around the plant. This relieves the branches from much of the settling pressures of the snow mass.

Use cold winter nights To plan spring garden

When the thought of winter becomes depressing and the wind is blowing gusts outdoors, why not sit down and start to plan your spring garden? A fruit garden doesn't become productive overnight — some planning must take place long before trees, vines and bushes are set into the ground.

A plant site evaluation should be included in early plans. Deciding what to plant and lining up a supplier to assure early delivery are other important considerations.

If you had success with different kinds of plants in a given area, fruit plants probably will grow there too. Just try to avoid low-lying areas where water is slow to drain off the surface or out of the root zone. Another reason for avoiding depressed areas is that spring frosts might injure developing fruit since cold air moves from higher to lower elevations.

Dwarf fruit trees are popular because they can be planted rather densely, requiring only 60 to 75 square feet per tree. A grape plant requires 40 square feet. Allot six to eight square feet per plant for strawberry plants where runners develop.

Average yields per plant, vine or tree at maturity are one to three pints for strawberries, 15 pounds for grapes and two to five bushels for peaches, apples and pears. Currants and gooseberries yield eight to 10 pints and raspberries yield three to six pints.

Ordering a fruit plant from a nursery months in advance of planting helps the chances of getting what you order when you want it.

Lower Loup Natural Resources District

Nebraska's groundwater is characterized by a wide range of iron concentrations. Water from 635 wells scattered throughout the state had iron concentrations ranging from below detectable limits of .001 parts per million (ppm) to a maximum observed concentration of 4.9 ppm. The mean iron concentration of all samples was .319 ppm.

Sources of iron in groundwater include minerals such as pyrozone, amphibole, and olivine in igneous rocks and iron oxides and iron sulfides in sedimentary rocks. The amount of iron dissolved in groundwater depends on its availability in both the saturated and unsaturated zones and on the chemical environment within the saturated zone. Iron occurs in two principal oxidation states, ferrous and ferric. When oxygen is not present, ferrous iron is soluble in water but ferric iron is not. Since such an environment exists in many confined aquifers, the occurrence of as much as .01 ppm of dissolved iron is common if an iron source is present. Where oxidizing conditions exist, as they do in some unconfined aquifers, ferrous iron is oxidized to ferric iron, which precipitates as iron hydroxide. Consequently, quantities of iron exceeding .01 ppm are seldom observed in water from these aquifers.

Iron concentrations higher than .1 ppm characterize water from wells in several eastern Nebraska areas and in scattered areas elsewhere in the state. These higher concentrations can be attributed to available iron minerals in combination with the lack of oxygen in the zone of saturation.

Dissolution of iron sulfides such as pyrite probably accounts for the higher concentrations of iron in water from many wells, particularly those tapping aquifers associated with till or directly overlying the Pierre Shale. Water from wells tapping the Brule Formation, the Codell Sandstone Member of the Carlile Shale, the Dakota Group, or aquifers in rocks of Paleozoic age are also likely to be high in iron for the same reason.

Although reducing conditions commonly characterize confined aquifers, they also can consist partly of organic-rich sediments deposited in a swampy environment. The rotten-egg odor of hydrogen sulfide gas (H<sub>2</sub>S) coming from a well is indicative of reducing conditions and this, provided a source of iron exists in the aquifer, can also be indicative of a high concentration of iron in the water.

Some water is high in iron because of reactions occurring within the well casing, water storage tanks, or distribution lines. Samples of this water do not serve as accurate indicators of high iron concentrations in water still in the aquifer. Therefore, even in areas where groundwater is low in iron, water from a given well or water system may contain an anomalously high concentration of iron.

Iron is an objectionable constituent both in domestic and in industrial water supplies. When

The Compliment

Sandwiched in between the Christmas holiday and the New Year is a temporary lull. News is generally at a low ebb during this period, forcing journalists to scramble harder for their stories.

On the state and national level, the Christmas period is a break from the usual concerns of murder, rape, and political maneuverings. Most people, so it seems, take time out to be at peace with the world and count their blessings.

With the way headlines have been running lately, this is just as well. Tales of a mass cult suicide, lead by an ecclesiastical piper, came just before mid-east peace talks bogged down. And so it goes.

While headlines on the national level and international, too, may look pretty grim, the local scene is another picture. Just how different was illustrated by a recent experience.

Wanting to brighten someone's Christmas season, I and my wife vowed to have someone over for Christmas dinner. Approaching one couple from out-of-state, we were told they were having friends in for Christmas. Another acquaintance, just starting back to normalcy after a bout with the bottle, was going to someone's house for the holiday.

Everywhere we turned, so it seemed, someone else had beat us to the punch. Everyone had somewhere to go, either in their own family or to the house of a thoughtful acquaintance.

What a compliment this is to Ord area residents.

— W.M.

Something Different

Someone's Dream

Now about this Christmas business. There are so many ways to note it, to celebrate.

I remember one Ord lady of Czechoslovakian descent, a well-known person whom we all enjoyed. She told me that her family had been comfortably well off but that they did not believe in elaborate gifts at Christmas time.

"Do you know what I usually got for Christmas? — An orange, that's what. No, we never had a tree."

"And so nowadays I string my Christmas out. I do it by opening one present per day, one small celebration each day in December. That way I can enjoy it to the fullest!"

Recently I saw illustrations of big panels that an art class out here on the west coast had created, some 50 years ago. Each of the oil paintings was to portray an original idea about the Christmas season, whatever the artist felt most appropriate. They were quite appealing I thought, even though shown after all this time. One would be of Mary, one of Jesus, one of the lambs and the shepherd, one of the manger and so on. They were fairly large, say six feet tall.

And that made me think of Hemingford, Ne., and Editor Arnie Kuhn and his happy little wife Dorrie. They have for years worked at presenting a colorful Christmas panorama.

It is done by means of large billboard-size panels, each showing some aspect of the Christmas scene in our day, or the Nativity or Biblical scenes. They are brightly lighted and mounted in a row. They have become fairly famous and not only to western Nebraska, either. People drive from quite far places to exhibit their assemblage to their children, their visitors.

It doesn't have the touch of the old masters, but it is strangely satisfying. And each year new panels are created and given a place in the by-now lengthy array, mounted north of Hemingford.

Arnie is sort of the director and arranger of this seasonal show that pleases so many.

If you are going up Highway No. 2 to Alliance, take a side tour 15 or 20 miles to the north and see this display.

It shows what a lively small town with a persuasive editor can accomplish with a little drum-beating.

What Christmas visions do you have in your head? Do you do anything about them? You could, you know. That could be your New Year's project!

Do you want a trip to Niagara Falls?

Do you want to learn to sew?

Are you aching to teach your child to swim? To play the piano?

How about learning to make pickles? Or sauerkraut? Or feathery rolls — "from scratch?"

Or writing a book?

We are never so happy as we are when pursuing a dream, are we? Here's to yours.

— Irma

Geranium Joe Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

Stanley Bruha told the fellers huddled around the stove at the country store Saturday night that the older and wiser he gets the more he wonders which come first, the Congress or the column writers. He said he allus views with alarm what the papers say Congressmen are working on between sessions and fixing to spring on us the first chancy they git.

Actual, Stanley went on, he can't make up his mind whether the column writers are doing the thinking for the old and new lawmakers, or the Congressmen are doing the writing for the papers. He said he was reminded of Ernest Hemingway, that wrote books, when he tries to figger who's setting the course for the next Congress. Hemingway said onct that he never knowed the deep meaning of his writing, but all the reviewers that couldn't write books got done telling him. He said all he was doing was telling a story. Stanley said he gits the idee that some Congressmen don't know which way to sail until they find out what way their favorite column writer's hot air is blowing.

Fer instant, he went on, he had saw a few weeks back where one of these syndicated fellers that grind out what you folks call think pieces had done some thinking on guaranteed income. What it is, the column writer said, is better than straight out welfare, but he said his case fell apart when he got to explaining how. At any rate, ever day or so now some freshman Congressman is having his say about welfare reform in general and guaranteed income in particular. Fer his money, Stanley declared, a onion is an onion no matter how you slice it, and giving folks money fer doing nothing still is a giveaway. You can go through your list of issues expected to make news during the 96th Congress, he said, and you'll have the same trouble waggering who got in print first with the most.

General speaking, the fellers was of a mind that Stanley had some good thinking behind his subject, but Ed Hulinsky, fer one, said he had picked a bad example with guaranteed income. Ed allowed that Stanley ought to know that some folks git as far as they want to go quiet in life, cause he is one of em, and guaranteed income is made to order fer them. You set a income level, Ed said, and give them what they need over the present income to reach that level. What happens, the more guarantee they git the less they do on their own, cause where they are is where they want to be. Everbody don't have high aims, Ed said, and it don't do much good fer Government to set their sights fer em.

"You would think, went on Ed, that even a blind hog would find a acorn onct in a while, but Government operates the way Secretary of Defense Harold Brown feels about misfired test firings of that cruise missile. He said "failure in the past increases the probability of success in the future. In other words, Ed said, if you keep doing wrong long enough it'll come out right. If this is official policy we're in worse trouble than we thought, was Ed's words.

Yours truly,
Geranium Joe

Here comes another New Year... and we're right on the dot with loads of good wishes to you and yours.

Harrison said he did not want the public excluded from offering ideas and added he was not satisfied natural resources districts would assure sufficient public involvement.

Predicts Possible Delay
State Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood told delegates to the recent Nebraska Agricultural Council meeting the Legislature may delay property tax relief laws scheduled to go into effect during the next two years.

Schmit noted there are nine new state senators and he did not know how they will vote. "But I feel sure we have lost some of the support for property tax relief that we once had," he said.

The Legislature has exempted farm equipment from personal property taxes starting in 1978-79, business inventories in 1979-80 and livestock in 1980-81.

Schmit told the delegates he favors shifting the cost of government to the sales and income taxes "whenever possible so that everyone contributes to the cost of government."

Advices Delay
Gov. J. James Exon has cautioned governors in four nearby states, which with Nebraska make up the Old West Regional Commission, not to proceed on plans for a school of veterinary medicine until after it has been determined that Governor-elect Charles Thone and the 1979 Legislature do.

Exon said he believes the proposal to establish a regional school, which probably would be in Lincoln, is sound. If the proposal is not good for Nebraska, "then it certainly is not good for our sister states."

Water Debate Continues
How to go about updating Nebraska's water plan continues to provoke debate, some of which was aired recently during a hearing conducted by members of the Legislature's Public Works and Appropriations committees.

A blueprint for a plan devised by representatives of various state agencies was criticized by some of those testifying.

Several questioned the advisability of creating a council representing eight state agencies to help in coordination of the planning. Others wondered about the need of a citizens advisory committee, arguing the 24 natural resources districts should be in position to offer all the data needed for water planning.

There were, however, others who testified they favor a joint approach to planning but that the blueprint should have defined in more detail how each of the state agencies would be involved.

A representative of the Wildlife Management Institute, Keith Harmon of Firth, said the blueprint should have wider dissemination and up to 60 days ready for introduction in the Unicameral this year.

The continuation of the disagreement between those favoring and opposing bottle bill legislation concerns Drain. He noted very strong feelings are involved. The polarity between those groups is still as far apart as ever, if not farther apart than before the task group was formed," Drain said.

One task force member, Gerald Grauner, an engineer with the state Roads Department, said the litter problem must be defined before a solution can be found. He said the department spent more than $370,000 on litter collection on the state highway system during the 1978 budget year.

The task force asked Drain to conduct a sampling of litter so the group would have a better idea of the scope of the trash problem.

KERRY ON

— reach out —

The coffee was hot and poured a cup pacing — one more — through the darkened and quiet business office wondering what I could possibly use for a column this Christmas night.

The Holiday had passed, leaving within me a sadness and disappointment. For many years Christmas was a time of excitement. But the warmth I'd felt, other years, simply failed to reach within me this year.

I'd written the cards I always write. I'd listened to the music I've always enjoyed. I made the visits and delivered the gifts I always deliver. I even made some phone calls I hadn't made other years.

The Christmas stories I've made a habit of reading, over the years, had all been pulled from the shelves and reread.

Though I hadn't prepared a Christmas box, this year, for a needy family, I had given a couple of charitable gifts I don't normally give. Neither had given me the warm glow of satisfaction I'd experienced other times and other years.

For that simple reason, I didn't particularly want to write a column this week. And I especially didn't want to admit the things I've just admitted. Yet I'm sure that others have probably gone through what I have, this year, and are finding it very difficult for themselves.

On the other hand, possibly it's a sign of our times that we're alone in a world surrounding us with about anything a person could ever want. Yet we seem to have trouble finding the things we need.

A couple of friends of mine were trying to get at the heart of their problem, Christmas eve, as I sat and listened. Both of them seemed to understand my own admission and bewilderment. One extended their arms, closed their eyes, and expressed the desire for closeness... for love... for understanding. "That's what I want and need," they said, pleadingly.

Through the rest of the evening and through Christmas Day, itself, I've thought of those arms reaching out in desperate need for something so sadly lacking in our society today.

"My hands are warm, because I've held them so long, myself," said a friend of mine.

Maybe 1979 would be a good year to risk holding hands with another.

The Old Rural Phone Service — She Ain't What She Used To Be

The old rural phone service, she ain't what she used to be. Thank God. Or maybe Jack Romans. Since Romans has been on the Nebraska Public Service Commission, there have been many rural telephone service improvements in his fifth district.

This area includes 45 counties, virtually the entire western half of the state. On the P.S.C. four years ago, he has two years left in his current term of office.

Many of these improvements could have been sparked by Romans' investigations into phone conditions in rural Nebraska. When he first started looking into things four years ago, he found many outstate phone subscribers had four and ten households on a party line. One farmer over by Eustis, the commissioner recalled, shared his phone line with 11 other phone service subscribers.

Jack Romans

These conditions and others, aroused irate rural phone service customers in Ord and elsewhere around the state. During one informal meeting in 1975, dissatisfied customers lambasted General Telephone and Electronics, Ord's phone company, for everything from shoddy service to long distance rates, Romans recalled, in a Quiz interview Friday.

The possibility of taking GTE to court was mentioned. Romans intervened, suggesting representatives from GTE and the dissatisfied customers meet, sit down and talk things out. They did, and service has improved.

Romans showed statistics during the interview Friday indicating GTE has spent $2,931,000 in his fifth district, over the last four years. About one-third of this, an estimated $930,000 has gone to Valley and Greeley Counties according to his calculations.

Romans stated GTE will make private lines available to all rural subscribers in the two counties by the end of 1979. These improvements, he contended, came about because the two opposing sides sat down and worked things out in a friendly or peaceful at least-manner.

He is a great believer in informal problem solving sessions. As a Public Service Commissioner, he has made many trips into the area he represents. His title, he admits, carries a certain amount of clout. This plus his attitude of "well, let's just sit down and talk about this," have accomplished a great deal in his estimation.

Often his out-state trips end in Elwood, where he has his home. Some major newspapers have contended trips ending there have "been for fishing and not business", in Romans words. This, he stoutly maintains, just isn't so.

If he didn't stay in his home he pointed out, the state would have to pay for his room and board. Staying in his home, they doubt, he said.

He put the controversy of his travels this way: "Because of investigations, I could see both sides of the problem. Through co-operation rather than court actions, we have worked things out to a most satisfactory condition."

"If asked if these (investigations) involved an unusual amount of driving, I'd say yet it did. In three years, I've driven state vehicles 52,000 miles.

"If I didn't drive a state car, it would have been driven by a state inspector doing the same thing. Then the state would have not only the expense of the car but also of the inspector."

Whatever the cost, Romans believes his trips have helped improve phone service in his district, and around the state. Rural phone service will be boosted to the point where private lines will be available to all rural customers in Nebraska by 1982.

"Let's face it," Jack said, "no one likes to be a whipping boy. If you treat them (the phone companies) nice they'll try to get along with you."

Come To Church

READ MATTHEW 1:18-25

"The virgin will be with child and will give birth to a son, and they will call him Immanuel" — which means, "God with us." (Matthew 1:23 NIV)

Shah Abbas, ancient king of Persia, once disguised himself as a peasant in order to move freely among his people. It was Christmas-time, and he had decided to find one special person to whom he could give whatever gift that person might desire.

So the king set out. He stopped at a public bath and walked about for a while. Soon he wandered into the boiler room and stopped to talk with the keeper of fires. The workman offered to share his lunch, not knowing who this peasant really was.

The king came back to see the man several times and each time felt the affection between them growing. Finally the king told the workman who he was and asked him what special gift he would like for Christmas. The workman replied, "I don't want any riches. Give me just what you've been giving to me. Come back and sit down and talk to me."

The great joy of Christmas is God coming to us, living among us, loving us — then dying for us. When we ponder this gift, our hearts have nothing more to ask.

PRAYER: Father, thank You for the gift of Yourself — Your peace, Your presence, Your love. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR DAY
Christ is God's great gift of hope.
